From Scarborough to Liverpool

When the labor party conference opens today in Liverpool the whole world will be watching, looking for the answer to the question, "Will Liverpool follow Scarborough?"

It was a terrible shock to the frayed nerves of the bourgeoisie and their agents, when the Trades Union Congress at Scarborough adopted a Bolshevist resolution against the empire, declaring for self-determination even to the point of separation of all colonial peoples, when it gave an ovation to Michael Tomsky, representative of the Russian Unions, when it approved of the Anglo-Russian Unity Commission, and when it approved of the project of world unity. A howl of terror went up all over the world, from capitalists, from preachers, and from "labor leaders." Ramsay MacDonald cut short his visit with the king in order to try to stem the tide, but without avail. All the big bugs of the former "labor cabinet" (except Wheatley) have been doing their bit to stop the leftward drive, but they have failed as MacDonald failed. And now they are all gathering at Liverpool at the labor party conference. It will be a showdown between MacDonaldism and the life interests of the British workers.

It is unfortunate that the left wing in the labor party is still so weak ideologically. There is danger that it will not make its stand sufficiently definite and uncompromising when faced with the necessity to break cleanly with MacDonaldism. They are profoundly tainted with christian pacifism and with fear of struggle. But even Lansbury's Labor Weekly in its current issue declares in large bold face type:

> The immediate task before us is to bring the labor party conference to as plain and unequivocal a declaration of left wing policy as the trade unions have made.

These left wingers are most of them not Communists. But they have lost their fear of Communism, and recognize in the Communists the most essential elements for a militant struggle against capitalism. Lansbury says, for example: "It is true that the labor party at present foolishly excludes the Communists; but that is a small matter, easily and soon, we believe, to be put right."

It is amusing to see "our own" New York Times rush to the rescue of MacDonald. It quotes approvingly his words against the Communists, pointing out, however, that even MacDonald is not quite drastic enough and deploring the weakness of some of his words. And the capitalist lackeys inside the labor movement are even more panic-stricken about the leftward movement in Britain. Chester M. Wright, notorious for such services, rushes into print to assure the bourgeoisie that the British labor movement is "no longer a trade union institution in any sense of the word," and that the A. F. of L. will fight it to the bitter end. And the Labor World, a prostitute sheet of Pittsburgh, subsidised by the steel trust and approved by the A. F. of L. bureaucracy, closes its wail about the British congress by exclaiming: "How fortunate it is that organized labor is a conservative rather than a revolutionary force in the United States."

But just as the revolutionary program of struggle against and overthrow of capitalism will march triumphantly from one end of Britain and the empire to the other, so also will it become ever more powerful in the United States, until it carries the American Federation of Labor as the British reds carried Scarborough. And it looks very much as tho at Liverpool, this week, another advance will be made.

Help China!

The international committee of the Workers' International Relief has cabled an urgent call to its American section asking that everything possible should be done to raise funds for the relief of the Chinese masses who are destitute owing to the long struggle carried on by them against foreign imperialism, with the inevitable dislocation of productive forces that such a struggle involves.

The international headquarters of the W. I. R. was spurred to renewed activity in its Chinese campaign on receipt of a cable from Dr. Koumangyu, rector of the National University of Pekin, who points out that the foreign imperialists are mobilizing their forces for a crushing attack on the Canton government, the center of resistance to all imperialist attacks, and the spiritual headquarters of the movement for the unification of China.

The need is urgent. British and American bankers are pouring millions into China to back up their agents, among whom are some of the Chinese business elements and reactionary generals. The industrial proletariat and peasant masses are unanimously against the foreign imperialists.

The workers of all countries are responding splendidly to the call for Chinese relief. The German workers raised over one million gold mark in four weeks. The South American workers sent several substantial contributions.

Western imperialism has its back to the wall in China today. It is facing either its Marne or its Waterloo. Which it will be depends a good deal on the help given by the workers of the world to the Chinese workers and peasants who are fighting the battle of labor everywhere as they fight the robber barons of capitalism in China.

The American workers and famers will not turn an unwilling ear to the plea of their comrades on the other side of the world.

Another United States warship has come to grief. This time it is a submarine. Hard luck! U. S. airplanes sometimes refuse to go up in the air, but U. S. submarines hardly ever fail to go down—and stay down.

The interparliamentary union meets in Washington this week. The funny part of it is that this conference intends to discuss the abolition of war. And appropriately, the only honest opponent of capitalist wars, Comrade Saklatvala, was barred.

CAILLAUX DEBT PARLEY DEALT RAP BY BORAH

Demands Mellon Stop Bond Sale

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28—A monkey-wrench has been thrown into the French debt negotiations of Caillaux, representative of the French imperialists and Mellon, a big banker by Senator Borah. Borah asks Mellon at what interest is the two billions of dollars in loans that are being made to France and other nations, being loaned.

France is attempting to raise $400,000,000 in America. Most of these bonds are to be sold to the small investors in the attempt to keep France's head above water.

Unable to Pay Interest.

Borah points out that France will be unable to pay even the interest on these bonds as she is bankrupt and that it is up to Mellon to stop the sale of those bonds in America. Mellon, Coolidge and Caillaux do not know how to take this affront.

Caillaux realizes that failure to get satisfactory debt settlement and a loan in America means the end of French imperialism.

Drown Disappointments.

The disappointments of Caillaux will be temporarily drowned in choice Bordeaux and Burgundy vintages, as prominent vine growers in France have sent a number of cases of champagne to the French delegation in America. The mission is allowed to have all the liquor it wants without the interference of the prohibition agents as diplomatic immunity gives them that privilege.

SECURITY PACT TO BE ADOPTED MEANS NEW WAR

Secret Diplomacy Busy Pending Oct. 5 Meet

LONDON, Sept. 28—The conference between Britain, Germany and France to formally settle the alleged "security pact" is announced by Austen Chamberlain as set for October 5, at probably, Locarno, in Italian Switzerland.

While outwardly official diplomacy prepares formally for the conference, private conversations are going on behind the backs of the European peoples concerned. And these deal with graver issues than the superficial questions thrown out to the public to distract attention from what is going on back of the curtains.

Publicly, the matters yet under dispute are the forms and methods of arbitration and the question of what problems shall be subject to arbitration.

France Brot to Terms.

For a long time France held out against the security pact because Germany's demands were not only a big American loan and some modification of the Dawes' plan to save her from an impending crisis, but evacuation of the Rhineland as well as Cologne and the recovery of territory, ultimately, on the eastern frontier taken from her by the Versailles treaties, and made into part of France's puppet nations between Germany and Russia. The implied threat was if Germany didn't get aid from the west she would "turn toward the east," i. e. make a rapprochement with Soviet Russia.

By combined British and American financial pressure upon bankrupt France, particularly the demand of America for funding of the $4,200,000,000 debt, France was made to listen to "reason." Evacuation of Cologne is arranged under the cover of the sudden discovery by the French that "German defaults in disarmament are merely technical and can easily be overlooked."

Build Anti-Soviet Alliance.

America can furnish Germany money to stave off the collapse of the Dawes' plan. Evacuation of the Rhineland, tho provided by the Versailles treaty to last ten years will it is reported, nevertheless be arranged in order to trade off this concession to Germany for her agreement to sign guarantee treaties with Poland and Czecho-Slovakia in which she gives up her claims for revision of Germany's eastern frontiers.

But this settlement, tho it be featured as a "security pact" to guarantee peace in "western Europe," is a guarantee of hostility and probably war against Soviet Russia. Every time that a group of imperialist powers make a "peace agreement" between them, it is at the same time an alliance for war against some other nation or group of nations. At the present time the fact is inescapable that the present "peace in the west" means a new alliance against Soviet Russia.

That worker next door to you may not have anything to do tonight. Hand him this copy of the DAILY WORKER.

BRITISH COAL OWNERS BREAK WAGE PROMISE

Armed Attack on Labor Planned by Fascisti

LONDON, Sept. 28.—War is again brewing between the Miners' Federation and the coal operators backed by the Baldwin government as the miners claim that the operators, with the consent of the Baldwin cabinet, is violating the agreement not to cut wages during the term of the "armistice" agreement. Baldwin is denounced for breaking his promise, and A. J. Cook, secretary of the federation says the miners "feel very strongly about it."

They claim that the owners are tempering with the basic rates on wages, which they agreed not to touch. Baldwin, in conference with the miners' leaders, tried to excuse the owners by claiming that what he meant when he promised there would not be touching of wages was that the 1924 agreement was to continue, but since the base rates on that were variable, they were variable during the truce.

Miners Meet October 9

While the miners threaten no immediate strike, they have called an emergency meeting for October 9th and have laid down a boycott on the recently appointed coal commission which is supposed to be examining conditions in view to final agreement.

A new and unofficial organization of strikebreakers and armed fascisti is in preparation by the capitalist class to crush any new strike movement with force of arms if necessary is rapidly forming.

Capitalists Plan Bloodshed for Labor

The management of this organization is vested in a president, vice-president and council. Lord Hardinge of Penhurst in president and the council consists of many prominent men, including Major General the Earl of Scarborqugh, the Earl of Ranfurly, Admiral Jelicoe of Jutland fame and Viscount Falkland. Four categories of recruits are proposed: First, for the armed struggle against the workers under the euphemism of "special constables"; second, operatives of railway transport; third, drivers of motor vans and lorries; fourth, messengers in the event of strikes in the telegraph, postal and communication service.

While the movement is supposedly "non-political" and makes much of this claim and its "non-partisan" front, its whole campaign is opposition to the Communists and the Communist Party. Great precaution is taken in recruiting to prevent any Communist from entering the ranks of the organization.

Secret Backing of Government

The organization is also not "officially" military, but there is a veritable blare of trumpets and beating of drums about it thruout the British bourgeoisie as the shock troops against the workers. In addition, its secretary explains that although it is not a government scheme, the government is perfectly aware of its actions and it is common knowledge that the recent report of the home secretary, Sir William Joynson-Hicks, has decided in favor of the raid recruitment of "special constabulary." In case of "trouble" say its officers, the government will be offered the services of the organization and its members will be backed by government authority.

While this measure of white guard dictatorship looms menacingly over Britain and is incensing labor unionists with its open threat of violent suppression, labor is forced to consider the proposal more seriously which John Wheatley, member of parliament and prominent labor leader recently made for the organization of a "Workers' Defense Corps" to defend labor against class violence of capitalists. Wheatley asked for 10,000,000 men.

LAUNCH SMITH PRESIDENTIAL DRIVE IN CHI

Rock Island President Attends Meeting

A drive to capture the 1928 presidential nomination of the democratic party for Al Smith, governor of New York, was started in Chicago. At a conference of leading democrats, at which James Gorman, president of the Rock Island railroad was present, the plans were laid and arrangements are being made to raise a slush fund to propagandize the democrats before the convention convenes to select candidates for the 1928 election.

The conference was held behind closed doors in the Blackstone Hotel following a demonstration in the forest preserve in which the "Sidewalks of New York," and the song "Tammany" were the big features. George Brennan arranged this opportunity for Al Smith to show what little he knows about the political and industrial situation of America.

ACTIVE UNION MINER KILLED NEAR HIS HOME

"Can It Be Klan Job?" Question Miners

(Special to The Daily Worker)

HERRIN, Ill., Sept. 28.—Otis Clark, a union coal miner, and the first worker to be indicted by a special grand jury in the Herrin mine killing in 1922, was shot and killed near his home. There were three bullets lodged in his body.

Clark was arrested August 31, 1922, in connection with the killing of Superintendent C. F. McDowell and other scabs in the Lester strip mine.

While the authorities are trying to blame the shooting on a moonshine feud, many union men suspect that it may have been klansmen that did the job, as he is one of those who bitterly opposed the formation of the klan in Herrin.

"ADMIT COMMUNISTS!" LABOR PARTY ISSUE

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

THINGS are not going too well with M. Caillaux's debt funding mission. The best way to test a financial or other "genius" is to put him to the test. When that test is made under unfavorable conditions, there is an awful splash, and another reputation hits the bottom. Some writers get a great kick out of giving the whole sole and true account of what Caillaux came here to do, how he is going to do it and what will be the result of his efforts. But this is something where we can only make a decent guess at the outcome. If the capitalists, who are now running things outside of Russia knew what was going to happen in the near future, their problems would be considerably simplified.

NO writer, least of all, a revolutionary writer, should lose sight of the fact that the interests of the capitalist powers are so conflicting that any kind of a lasting peace between them is impossible. Let us take the financial controversy between the United States and France for instance. France owes this country over four billions of dollars, money loaned by this country to France to help save democracy, by the way. Well, democracy was saved, and this country was the principal gainer. But this country wants its money along with the victory of democracy.

THE two principal debtors to the United States are England and France. England has already settled her indebtedness, that is she has begun to make payments. This places England at a disadvantage over France, so England brings pressure to bear on the United States to make France fork up. France dodges the issue and instead of turning to Washington, goes to Moscow and begins negotiations to collect the money she loaned to the czar some years ago. Things are getting along nicely when they suddenly stop and we hear that the security pact, a frame-up against Soviet Russia, sponsored by England had been [illegible] by the British, French and German foreign offices.

FRANCE then comes to Washington. It is rumored that France's tentative adhesion to the security pact has no worthier motive than a ruse to get better terms from the United States. The theory is that the United States wants peace in Europe and favors an alliance of the West European powers against Soviet Russia. No doubt this is true. One of the excuses

Mosul is the bone of contention between the rising national Angora government of Turkey and imperialist Great Britain. Turkey demands the return of Mosul, which was taken away from her by the League of Nations and handed to Great Britain. Great Britain sees too much oil in this region to accede to the demands of the Turks. This disputed territory may cause a new war as the Union Jack always follows the pound sign and there are many pounds to be drawn out of the oil fields around Mosul.

WORKERS REFUSE TO SCAB DURING TAILOR STRIKE

Struck Shop Has Still Another Walkout

The attempt of the International Tailoring company of New York City to turn out the struck work was given a serious setback by a walkout of these employed in the plant, according to a prominent Chicago joint board official of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, who has just returned from a trip to New York. About eighty per cent of those employed in the shop since the strike of the tailors has started walked out refusing to turn out the struck work.

Bosses Sent Riot Call

As the workers were leaving the shop, thousands of garment workers in the district began to gather around the shop. The bosses sent in a riot call. Inside of a half hour there were over 300 police in the district with riot guns, trying to break up the demonstration of over 6,000 workers that jammed the streets. One of the bosses, in his anger, struck a worker that had come to watch the demonstration. The newspapers tried to make this the basis of a riot story saying that the boss had been slugged by one of the union pickets. Upon investigation it was found that the lad was not a member of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

Workers Join Union

The bosses admit that 50 per cent of the workers left the shop, while the other half is still scabbing. The union claims that 80 per cent have walked out. Over 100 German cutters have applied in the New York union for membership.

The German workers claim that because they were Germans and the bosses were Germans they were promised to be well taken care of. They said the bosses had misrepresented the facts to them, and upon learning the truth that a strike was on they refused to work in the plant.

The attempt of the International Tailoring Co., to operate a scab shop has received such a setback that the bosses do not know what to do.

GREEN MAKING SECRET DICKER TO JOIN A. F. OF L. TO AMSTERDAM

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 29.—The leaders of the American Federation of Labor are in private conversation today with the large delegation of reformist trade union leaders of Germany which arrived recently supposedly to "study labor conditions in the United States."

Observers are of the opinion that the reactionary leadership of the A. F. of L. plan not only to establish closer relations with the Germans in order to get their occasional assistance in fighting against international trade union unity, but that steps may be taken to affiliate the A. F. of L. to the International Federation of Trade Unions (Amsterdam).

This does not mean, however, that the A. F. of L. is to advance toward international trade union unity. On the contrary it is to block the progress of such movement, now led by the powerful British unions inside the Amsterdam International, and in the same manner as America is offering inducements to Germ [illegible] enter the anti-Soviet alliance known as the "security pact," to furni [illegible] reactionary bloc of the A. Demonstrate at Piers in New York for Saklatvala

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—The issue of Shapurji Saklatvala, excluded Communist member of the British parliament, was again raised in New York by a demonstration of workers, and members and sympathizers of the Workers (Communist) Party, upon the arrival of the steamship Coronia, at the Cunard box at the foot of West Fourteenth street, which brot in the British delegation headed by Sir Park Goff and the Hungarian delegation headed by George Lukas.

Many hundreds of workers marched before the pier, carrying placards which demanded the entrance of Saklatvala and denounced the Hungarian representatives as murderers of the Hungarian workers and called for the release of the political prisoners from Horthy's dungeons.

Other placards read that "An American Labor Party will be a mighty shield." "The British delegation are enemies of organized labor." "The British Empire rests upon the oppression of 400,000,000 Hindu Workers." "Demand the Freedom of India, Ireland, the Philippines and all oppressed nationalities."

The demonstration continued until dispersed by the police who were present in overwhelming numbers.

The state department provided extraordinary welcome to the delegates in the form of army escorts, emergency service containing tear gas bombs and other chemicals. In preparation for the demonstration and following the one held yesterday against the Italian fascisti in which over 5,000 workers participated, the government had the open spaces before the piers lined with army trucks and innumerable reserves outside as well as inside on the pier. The demonstrators, after the first dispersal, re-formed their groups and attempted again to parade, until the New York mounted police forcibly dispersed the crowds.

A further demonstration in Union Square on the question of the exclusion of Saklatvala, the arrest of 100 Communists in Budapest and the threatened execution of Mathias Rakoski will be held by the International Labor Defense Monday evening, Oct. 5, at 6 p. m. The Workers Party will participate.

CUTS FRENCH DEBT FOR WAR ON SOVIETS

Security Pact Deal Behind Reduction

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29—That American imperialism is willing to pay a high price for an anti-Soviet alliance among the western European powers is seen in the practical surrender of the American debt funding commission to the demands of Caillaux's commission from the French government.

While the Americans started off haughtily, and flatly refused the first French offer of payments beginning at $30,000,000 a year, when the French came back yesterday to elaborate but to stick by this offer, Mellon did not wait even until the advanced their arguments, but at once made a proposal for payments to begin at $40,000,000, a terrific drop from the minimum of $100,000,000 unofficially advanced as the American demand.

"Quite Agreeable."

There was no surprise, therefore, when Caillaux jumped up and said, "That is quite agreeable, gentlemen." While there is the little matter of $10,000,000 separating the two proposals, no doubt the outward semblance of a fight being made on who shall give way, yet the American proposal is the basis of discussion and the real agrement — concerning France's attitude toward the so-called "security pact" with Germany and England—in a new alliance against Soviet Russia, seems to be assured.

After Americas first refusal to accept the $30,000,000 offer of Caillaux, capitalist observers thot that France would have to raise her offer to at least $75,000,000, as in accordance with the principles of Caillaux's tentative understanding with the British chancellor of the exchequer, Winston Churchill. But the Americans, headed by Mellon, granted the unexpected reduction.

Will Cut Claim According to Reparations.

In addition, when asked if the payments by France depended upon whether France got as much from the Dawes reparations as she would have to pay, a leading American commissioner said:

"We have taken no cognizance of that stipulation. We are not searching for what contingencies might possibly arise eventually to hinder or prevent payments. Of course, if something should arise, France would always be entitled to re-raise the entire question and have her claims heard."

Textile Unionists Go to Poor Place for Any Fighting Assistance

NEW YORK, Sept. 29—According to Thomas G. McMahon, president of the United Textile Workers, the entire question of textile wages will be brot before the A. F. of L. convention at Atlantic City next month, together with the question of the tariff on wool. The federation is threatening to bring all its political influence to bear in the next congress to have the woolen tariffs reduced or wiped out, as a retaliation against the coolie standard of wages in the textile trades. What "influence" labor has in the capitalist congress can, however, be put in McMahon's eye

FINDING OF BODY IN S-51 BLASTS LAST HOPE FOR SURVIVORS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW LONDON, Conn., Sept. 29.—The finding of the bodies of John L. Gibson, engineman, and seaman William C. Taschamacher in the battery compartment of the S-51 blasted the last hope that any of the crew of 33 in the sunken ship would be brought out alive. Reports are that the battery room of the doomed vessel is flooded and this makes it almost an impossibility for any of the crew to have remained alive. It was in the battery room that the salvagers hoped to find survivors. It is probable that other bodies have been brought to the surface but have not yet been identified.

TOOHEY JAILED IN ANTHRACITE STRIKE REGION

Cappellini Urges Violence by Authorities

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Sept. 29.—Reports from the anthracite region state that Pat Toohey, outstanding leader of the progressive miners on strike in the hard coal fields, was arrested last night. Details are lacking, but everything indicates a reign of terror in the region where the progressive element is active.

This follows a statement by Rinaldo Cappellini, district president of the United Mine Workers and one of the most unscrupulous lieutenants of the Lewis machine approving of the attack by capitalist authorities on members of the Workers (Communist) Party. Cappellini, in an interview with the capitalist press last Friday said:

Urges Officials to Violate Constitution

"Authorities of Swoyersville and Exeter are to be commended for their action in preventing meetings scheduled for last night under the auspices of the Workers (Communist) Party. If allowed to meet they will eventually cause trouble."

The capitalist press says Cappellini 'appealed to the authorities of cities and towns in the Scranton-Wilkes Barre district to prevent gatherings of the 'reds.'" The same press reports that federal government agents have been dispatched into the district to "check up on the activity of the Workers (Communist) Party."

Decrease of Railroad Traffic Shows Power of Anthracite Strike

NEW YORK, Sept. 29—The success of the anthracite miners in their strike for a wage increase and adjustment of wages of men doing equal work is indicated by the loss of traffic of the anthracite railroads. The roads report a loss of 700 cars a day out of their normal carrying capacity of 1,000 cars of anthracite coal. The 300 cars a day they carry come from stored coal.

CHICAGO MEET VOICES PROTEST FOR SAKLATVALA

"We Want Saklatvala," Meeting Demands

"We want Saklatvala," was the accepted slogan and the spirit of a resolution of protest unanimously passed at an inspiring and enthusiastic demonstration held in Chicago against the barring of Shapurji Saklatvala, Communist member of the British parliament.

The meeting was addressed by A. J. Marjai, Hindu, Lovett Fort-Whiteman, Negro, Manuel Gomez, secretary of the Anti-Imperialist League and both editors of the DAILY WORKER, J. Louis Engdahl as chairman and Comrade William F. Dunne, as the principal speaker.

Fear Lone Communist

In opening the meeting Engdahl said there was an important lesson in the barring of Saklatvala, the only Communist representative sent to the inter-parliamentary union meeting in Washington. If they were afraid of the influence that one Communist can bring to bear just think what the influence of hundreds of Communists would mean?

He then introduced Manuel Gomez, secretary of the All-America Anti-Imperialist League.

Barred at British Request

Gomez said there must be no mistake about the fact that Saklatvala was barred at the request of the British government. "Saklatvala is a Communist, and a Hindu Communist. The fact that he is an Indian is very significant. India is the backbone of the British empire. Britain realizes that without India the British government must fall. The British imperialists are trembling very noticeably today. And why? Because everywhere we can see signs of the disintegration of imperialism.

"Especially is this true of England. The radicalism of the British workers has manifested itself in numerous ways today. We have a demonstration of it in the recent activities of the trade unions of Scarborough and also in the cooperation of the British workers with Soviet Russia. The British workers have taken a position for unity with the exploited workers in other countries.

Imperialist Unity

"In the barring of Saklatvala we can see the unity of interests between American imperialism and British imperialism. We can see the united front for the continuation of the exploitation of the yellow races.

"Here is an example how other countries return these favors. In Cuba, deportation of the comrades because they talked against American imperialism. Every foreigner in Panama deported for attacking the United States government. The truth of the matter is we have imperialist domain in Central America."

BERLIN, Sept. 29.—Importation into the United States of 250,000 tons of Ruhr coal, valued at $3,000,000, in order to break the coal miners' strike is said to be planned by a big coal company of New York, Sanders Wertheim, president of the company, is quoted as saying

DEMONSTRATION ADOPTS RESOLUTION DEMANDING SAKLATVALA ADMISSION

The following resolution was unanimously adopted by a demonstration of Chicago workers against the exclusion and for the entrance of Shapurji Saklatvala, Communist member of the British house of commons:

"This meeting of Chicago workers of all shades of political opinion, condemns the exclusion of Saklatvala, Communist member of the British house of commons, at the request of the British foreign office as a blow struck by British and American imperialists at the British and American working class the working class of all the world and especially the 380.000,000 of Indian workers and peasants who groan under the rule of imperialism.

"We further declare that this joint action of British and American imperialism is further evidenced by the unity of the world's ruling class against the world's working class.

"We declare that the action it dictated by the fear of the rising power of the working class in the capitalist nations and the increasing strength of the Soviet Union, whose workers' and peasants' government has solved with proletarian clarity the racial and national questions within its boundaries.

"We demand the lifting of the ban against this representative of the British and Indian workers and we call upon all working class organizations to unite in protest against his exclusion.

"'This meeting further resolves that copies of this resolution be sent to the secretary of state at Washington."

ALLIES ATTEMPT RUSSO-GERMAN SPLIT BY PACT

Tchitcherin Exposes British Aim

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WARSAW, Sept. 29.—At a demonstration of Polish workers upon his arrival at Warsaw, George Tchitcherin, commissar of foreign affairs of the Union of Soviet Republics, scored the attempt of the allied powers to separate Germany and Russia by means of the security pact to be discussed at Locarno, Switzerland.

"Documents published in America prove that England is offering the security pact to Germany only for the purpose of separating Germany and Russia," declared Tchitcherin.

The allied powers fear the visit that Tchitcherin is making to Berlin, where he will confer with his doctor. may throw a wrench into the security pact conference. The capitalist press of America and England are carrying on a propaganda against Soviet Russia and undoubtedly many concessions will be made at Locarno to Germany so as to separate the two nations as much as possible.

CRAMP OPENS WITH TALK FULL OF USUAL BUNK

Against War on Any Class, He Says

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Sept. 29.—The reports from Liverpool where the British labor party opened its sessions this afternoon, indicates that the biggest fight will come on the admission of Communists.

On a technical question of referring back to the standing order committee the committee's report, including an anti-Communist resolution, the vote was 2,954,000 votes not to refer and 321,000 to refer. This, however, was not a fair reflection of the proportion between right and left wings.

C. T. Cramp, in his opening address, waddled thru such twaddle as that "labor's task was not to wage war against any class, but against circumstances."

Communist Present

Though not present as Communists, Communists are present. They are "forbidden" membership in the labor party, both as individuals and as delegates from Communist Party sections, and the labor party has officially denied the Communist Party the right to affiliate. But the local labor parties scornfully ignored the provision forbidding membership to Communists, they belong to labor unions, and come into the labor party congress both from local labor party sections who ignore the rule, and from trade unions, who take no cognizance of individual political opinions, the right wing has been unable so far to exclude the Communists.

It must not be thought, however, that the Communists attend in numbers. Probably only a comparatively small group, in proportion to the number of delegates, will be Communist Party members. But their influence is far and away larger. The tremendous swing to the left of British labor, as shown at the Trade Union Congress at Scarborough, has sent the Communist Party of Britain into the foreground of political factors in western Europe.

Right Wing Threatens Split

That the right wing, led by Ramsay MacDonald, Arthur Henderson, C. T. Gramp, John R. Clynes, Phillip Snowden and Frank Hodges will do its utmost to exclude the Communists is known from their savage attacks already printed in the capitalist press against the Communists and coupled with a threat to split the labor party if it does not effectively oust the Communists now participating in its councils.

An amusing angle of the labor party congress, and one which gives a picture of its character, is the attendance

MITCHELL TALKS FREELY OF FUTURE WARS WITH ENGLAND AND JAPAN AT AIR INQUIRY

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—Colonel William Mitchell appearing before the board of naval inquiry foreshadowed impending military conflicts on both coasts of the United States, thus making an excellent witness for American jingoism.

"Japan is intent upon the policy of holding Asia and the far east for the Asiatics," he said. "We are the only ones who can hold the Pacific for the white race."

Then shifting his testimony to the east coast, he declared, "No naval fleet can exist under an air attack. Our navy is inferior to Great Britain's and I say that 1,000 planes could be rushed across the ocean from England and operate against us within eight or ten days after their arrival in Canada."

Mitchell is the leading figure of a group of young aviation officers who are demanding a separate air force

CHICAGO CLOTHING WORKERS PROTEST AGAINST EXCLUSION OF SAKLATVALA BY KELLOGG

At the last meeting of the Chicago Joint Board of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, a motion was unanimously passed condemning the action of Secretary of State Kellogg in barring Shapurji Saklatvala, Communist member of the British House of Commons, from attending the sessions of the interparliamentary union congress at Washington, D. N. Y. LEFT WING MOVES CENTRAL BODY TO ACTION

Force Protest Against Saklatvala Exclusion

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—As a result of the introduction of a resolution by delegate Harry Karp of Carpenters' Local No. 376 on the question of the exclusion of Saklatvala, in the last meeting of the Central Trades and Labor Council of New York City, that body has issued a lengthy statement condemning the action of Secretary of State Kellogg in the last issue of its Chronicle. The statement reads in part as follows: "'Admitting Saklatvala to the parliamentary congress could do no great harm." Weak as this admission is, it is a good example of the influence being exerted by the left wing even on such a reactionary organization as the Central Trades and Labor Council.

Another feature of the meeting was the introduction of a clause in the preamble to the effect that workers and employers should have an equal share in the fruits of production. This was to take the place of an old clause which pointed out the antagonism between capital and labor. The labor fakers of the Central Trades and Labor Council were out to introduce this amendment in order to lay the basis for their present and future policy of class collaboration. Again the left wing stepped into the breach. Delegate Rosen of the Carpenters' Union entered into an emphatic condemnation of the proposed preamble. He pointed out that anybody who claims that the interests of the workers and the employer are alike is an enemy of the working class.

KAILAIN MINERS STRIKE TO FREE UNION LEADERS

Chang Tso-Lin Guards British Mines

PEKIN, Sept. 29.—A strike of 10,000 miners has been declared in the Kailain region as a protest against the arrest of union leaders. There are over 40,000 miners employed in this region.

After the outbreak in Shanghai, the workers in the mines began to organize. Chang Tso-Lin, tool of British imperialism, arrested the leaders of the miners' union and placed them on trial before a military court. The miners then refused to work the mines.

The strikers demand immediate release of their leaders, recognition of their union, an increase in wages and the abolishing of corporal punishment.

The strike is spreading thruout the region, in spite of the armed troops of Chang Tso-Lin. This company made a profit of over $10,000,000 on its workers last year.

at Liverpool of Lady Cynthia Mosley, daughter of the unlamented Lord Curzon, as a new recruit to the affiliated British socialist party. Says the capitalist press, which seems strangely unconcerned at this daughter of the idle and wealthy rich being admitted to the labor party at the same time it is urging that the Communists be thrown out, "The clever, beautiful adherent to socialism is certain to receive an ovation when she takes her seat."

Mac Won't Care About "My Lady"

Ramsay MacDonald, whose attacks on Communists have degenerated into a howling phobia, is not expected to object to Lady Cynthia nor any other of the noble tribe of parasites hanging on the fringe of the British labor politics, but MacDonald is expected and in fact promises to open a vitriolic war to unseat the Communists.

Lady Cynthia got her start, so she boasts, in the strange world of "work," by a job in the intelligence department of the British war office. Being an industrious British spy for the war office doing domestic duty, seems to be fair training for the socialists.

WINDOW WASHERS UNION PREPARING FIGHT ON BOSSES

Ask Raise Against the Bosses' Asking Cut

By H. FEINSTEIN.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 29—The agreement of the Window Cleaners' Protective Union with the bosses' association expires Sept. 30.

The union has presented demands for a minimum scale of wages, $40 a week and 44 hours' work. The previous scale of wages was $38 and 45 hours.

The object of the union in the present demands is to standardize the wages as much as possible.

Negotiation of the union and the association is going on. Several conferences were held, but the bosses have flatly refused to grant any demands.

The bosses as usual say that they cannot afford to give any increase, and were contemplating making a cut in the wages, and to their surprise the union has presented demands for an increase.

The representatives of the bosses' association have proposed to go before an arbitrator, but the union has flatly refused to accept such proposal, having experience from the past, that outside interference cannot be tolerated. A well attended meeting was held Sept. 24, where over 800 members present, decided unanimously to reject all the bosses' proposals, and to stand pat by the demands. It was also unanimously passed that, if the demands are not granted on the eve of September 30, a general strike of all the window cleaners of Brooklyn and New York shall be called on October 1.

A general meeting will be held on Wednesday, Sept 30, at 64 E. Fourth St., where the last decision will be discussed.

Sulphur Trust Gets Free Advertising at Government Expense

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29—Another "educational" film has been completed by the U. S. bureau of mines, in its campaign of free advertising of the operations of basic industrial trusts. Oil and steel and lumber have had their movies, prepared and circulated by the federal government. Now the sulphur is obtained, by piping the sulphpr is obtained, by piping super-heated steam down to the mineral beds 1,000 feet below the surface, in the Louisiana-Texas gulf field, and how the pure melted product is gathered at the top of the well, and shipped in trainloads to enter into the making of fertilizer, paper, fumigation mixtures, pickling of steel, petroleum refining, rubber, textiles, etc., is shown.

Capitalism, a Court, a Boss, Some Strikers; Result—an Injunction

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Sept. 28—Judge Montgomery issued a sweeping injunction restraining the officers and members and their sympathizers of the Cap Makers' Union of the Twin Cities, from picketing the Alco Cap company, on request of the boss.

The Cap Makers' Union has been striking against this firm for over a month, as a result of a lockout of union cap makers. A picket line doing effective work, caused the boss to ask for the injunction which Judge Montgomery readily granted.

dience stood and applauded for several minutes. Marjai began his speech by saying that it is the business of the workers of this country to demand to know why Saklatvala was barred from this country. "You American workers," he said, "are so oblivious to what is happening to the people of India, Asia and Africa.

"The working people of this country will have to realize that their fate is linked up with the suffering of the peoples of these countries. You will very soon realize that it is one of your most important business.

"See only Capitalist View"

"The American working class are educated but I think they are not educated as the working class should be educated. The schools give you all sorts of elegant views about other countries but it is not the sources where you ought to get the information. In this country the capitalists try to make the workers see things from their point of view and they have succeeded so far. Will the time come when you workers will see things from your own point of view? Will the time come when American workers will see their own interests?

"But the people of India are different. They are awaking. And the same is true of the Chinese and the people of Egypt.

"The DAILY WORKER the source from which the workers can get information does not have half the support that the Communist papers have in other countries."

Lovett Fort-Whiteman, representative of the American Labor Negro Congress, was the next speaker. Whiteman said that in a short time we will witness in Chicago a Negro congress which will for the first time draw in our own colonial people here under American imperialism.

Liberation of Colonial Peoples

"But it will not be only the Negro workers but all the workers, the Hindus, Chinese and others of colonial peoples suffering the same humiliations. We are extending to them an invitation to attend and serve in the liberation of the colonial peoples of the world."

Comrade Dunne was the last speaker. Dunne said it must be seen that it is significant that the individual American imperialists chose to exclude from this country was the representative: First, of the Communist International, second of the English exploited masses and third for the 330 million exploited Indian peoples.

Another significant factor in this is that A. A. Purcell, the representative of the British workers to the American Federation of Labor convention to be held next week at Atlantic City will be here. "There is such a thing as laying it on too thick, even in a capitalist country where capitalism is as stable as in the United States."

The visit of Saklatvala and his exclusion are of great importance and have become of international significance because of the critical condition of British imperialism. Coupled with the visit of Purcell, it is more than the two great imperialist nations can stomach.

British imperialism has begged and secured from its most powerful enemy in the capitalist world the favor of having excluded a spokesman of the toiling millions in that colony which a famous Englishman described as "the brightest jewel in the imperial diadem." This signifies the unity of imperialism against the world's working class.

There is no Indian immigrant population in America. American workers know little of the struggles of the Indian masses and we are grateful to our state department for bringing the problems of the Indian workers and peasants so forcibly to the attention of the American working class. This will extend the front against imperialism and it is exactly that which the British imperialists feared would result from Saklatvala's visit.

It s hard for American workers to realize the fear with which the British imperialists look upon anything that tends to bring the attention of the workers to the struggles of the Indian workers and peasants. It is also hard for us to realize the thousand-fold increase of this fear since the Russian revolution. The British rulers long before the Russian revolution had nightmares in which they saw Russian hordes pouring thru the Khyber pass to take India from them.

But czarism offered the Indian masses nothing but a change of rulers. The Soviet Union offers them a chance to rule themselves. And over the northern border the Indian masses now hear the pledge of aid from the land in which the workers and peasants have solved all national and colonial questions with proletarian clarity. British imperialists sleep less soundly than ever before.

The visit of Saklatvala and the loud outcries of the American and British governments against this lone revolutionary worker gives us an opportunity to estimate the severe crisis in which world imperialism is now enmeshed.

We must use such issues as the exclusion of Saklatvala to drive home to the American workers the international nature of the class struggle. We must give real aid to the colonial peoples who hold the fate of capitalism in their hands jointly with the working class of the imperialist nations.

To give real aid we need to concentrate on our daily tasks in the trade unions and all mass organizations of the workers. We carry on our revolutionary work in a country where the great mass of workers do not as yet feel greatly the need for relentless struggle. Our task is therefore that much harder and greater is the need for the humble, everyday work of preparing the basis for a revolutionary labor movement which will join with the exploited of all the world under the leadership of the real enemy of world imperialism at which the exclusion of Saklatvala was designed to strike at the Communist International.

No Rainy Seasons in the Class War Being Fought In American Industry

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the American slang phrase, "It never rains, but it pours," applies to the Franco-Spanish outlook in North Africa. If the increasing armies, directed from Paris and Madrid, have been unable to make any progress worthy of mention against the Riffs in fair weather, it is inconceivable that they should do any better, now that the rainy season has set in.

Reports from the Riff indicate that when it rains, it pours in North Africa, making it impossible going for tanks, big guns and other heavy military equipment, the only advantage in addition to their airplane fleets that the imperialist allies have had over the native defenders.

• • • •

The last gasp of French propaganda proudly paraded the fond hope that now the rainy season had set in, the Riffian farmers would put aside their guns, and go home to do the plowing and the planting, making it possible for the imperialists armies to overrun the country. But this is only a pious wish. Farmers have often before carried a gun in one hand and directed a plow with the other, as oppressors have learned before now. The British experience with the American colonists 150 years ago, for instance.

Thus the New York Times sadly laments:

> "Exactly where and when it can do the greatest damage to French plans, rain torrents have begun falling in the Riff, and the proposed French offensive has had to be definitely postponed."

Since this is supposed to be a war of "christian civilization" against the "African barbarians," who need the uplifting influences of European capitalism, it would seem that god on high has made a mistake and thrown his influence on the wrong side. Increasing injury has been heaped upon the French invaders thru the fact that the heaviest rains are falling in usually the driest territory.

Some heathen peoples usually had special gods to take care of the weather, no doubt concluding that they would thus be more successful. The so-called christian religion, never provided for weather gods, which the propaganda experts may use to account for the predicament of the French and the Spaniards. In fact, this same New York Times correspondent declares:

> "To Abd-el-Krim's followers, it may seem like a special dispensation of Allah and certainly for Marshal Petain (French) it is a stroke of bad luck on which he didn't reckon!"

But whatever faith they may have in Allah, the Riffs also believe in keeping their powder dry, and speed each bullet with their hatred of and opposition to the imperialist powers of Europe. The airplane casualties, for instance, in Africa have hit the French and Spanish forces harder than were the casualties in the world war.

• • • •

The quick succession with which powder magazines of discontent are exploding among oppressed peoples—in Morocco, in Syria, and in China, with rumblings from India—merely furnishes the thunder that presages a bad season ahead for the international bandits in all parts of the world, not only during the rainy season in the Riff.

• • • •

Every American worker must critically eye the sessions of the American Federation of Labor at Atlantic City next week to study what is offered to promote the solidarity of the American working class with these struggles in other lands. If these great problems are ignored, or shelved with the usual parliamentary tricks, then the American workers must realize where they have not yet done so, that they have the wrong kind of officials at the head of their economic organization. The official regime, headed by Green, may place its faith in the ghost of Gompers, but the working masses, like the Riffian tribesmen on the African war front, know that they have a class enemy to face in the shops, the mills, the mines and the factories, and that no inch of contest ground is won without a bitter struggle. And it is a class struggle in which there are no rainy seasons.

When that argument begins at lunch time in your shop tomorrow—show them what the DAILY WORKER says about it.

BRUTAL RAID BY POLICE ROUSES STRONG PROTEST

Cleveland, O., Workers Condemn Action

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Sept. 29.—A raid in which 800 Chinese workers, students, and merchants were arrested and thrown into jail has caused great excitement in Cleveland. Following a tong killing, the police heads raided the homes of as many Chinese as they could find, loaded them into patrol wagons and then dumped them into dirty cells. None of those arrested were guilty of the crime committed and had to be released.

"Chinese were herded into cells like cattle. For two days my husband had nothing to eat. When I asked permission to bring him food I was told to stay at home and mind my own business," relates one of the wives whose husband was arrested and thrown into jail because he was Chinese.

Mistreat Women.

"One woman that was in the same cell with me, was thrown into the cell with two children clinging to her skirts. One child was six years old and the other two. The woman expects another child soon. Doctors say they do not know what the effects of this brutal treatment will have on her health," related one of the women that were taken out of their home and thrown into a cell that was so crowded that they had to remain standing in the cell all night.

Solving a Murder!

Hundreds of doors were smashed. Windows were broken. Heads were clubbed. Eight hundred Chinese kept incommmunicado for days. This is the way the police solve an unsolved murder in Cleveland—when it involves Chinese workers.

There were over 20 murders that were committed during the year that the police has made no effort to solve.

FRANCE STARTS NEW OFFENSIVE AGAINST DRUSE

Tanks and Airplanes Fight Syrians

BAGDAD, Iraq, Sept. 29. — The French have thrown 20,000 troops, 44 tanks, 32 armored cars and 140 airplanes in an offensive against the Druse tribesmen in Syria in an attempt to crush the revolt.

The French, under the leadership of General Gamelin, were able to get relief to the garrison at Sueida. The members of the garrison have been sent back to France for the duration of the war as they were in no condition to remain in the country after the siege. Most of them were sick. Water and food was furnished these men in small quantities by airplanes during the siege.

Great demonstrations are being held in different parts of Syria against French domination.

If you want to thoroughly understand Communism—study it.

In Revolt!

For the first time in the history of international class solidarity, we hear the voice of the Chinese workers calling to the workers of other countries for a helping hand.

For the first time in the history of proletarian revolts in China, we find the Chinese workers awakening to the spirit of international proletarianism.

For the first time in history the Chinese workers are beginning to understand the true meaning of capitalism, militarism, and exploitation.

THEY ARE AWAKENING!

In all the principal cities of China today, the workers are rising in revolt against their oppressors, feeling the breath of freedom that comes to them from the workers' government of Soviet Russia, they too, want to be free.

The iron hand of international imperialism is pressing harder and harder upon their throats in an effort to starve them and keep them in submission, abject slavery and servitude.

The success of international capitalism spells starvation, exploitation, imprisonment and death for the workers of all countries.

MUST THEY STARVE?

THE CHINESE WORKERS ARE WAGING A BATTLE FOR LIFE AND FREEDOM.

THEIR VICTORY WILL BE OUR VICTORY.

A LIBERATED CHINESE WORKER, MEANS A LIBERATED WORKER EVERYWHERE.

THEY NEED OUR HELP—MORALLY AND FINANCIALLY.

WE MUST RALLY TO THEIR SUPPORT AND HELP FEED THEM.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Sept. 29.—The convention of the Minnesota State Federation of Labor which has just closed its sessions at Austin, was the smallest in a long time. Some 244 delegates were present. It was also the most reactionary from every standpoint, as it turned its face toward the capitalist class.

It lacked enthusiasm and proletarian ambition. It was a melange of chaos and confusion, save only when the clarifying words of the left wing were spoken. Then consternation seized the labor lieutenants of the master class, who have made it unlawful for the "reds" of all shades, to sit as delegates in future conventions.

Priest a Feature.

Apart from the 24 left wing delegates, who sponsored progress and the class struggle, the feature of the convention was a catholic priest of Minneapolis, the Rev. Havington, whose "radicalism' made the two sinecures, Hall and Lawson, look like office boys of the Minneapolis chamber of commerce.

This priest informed the delegates that the great Roman orator, Cicero, was nothing more nor less than a paid tool of the patrician class. He gave all the credit for the abolition of chattel slavery and serfdom to the holy Roman catholic church.

This sentiment was strongly applauded by all the peanut politicians present, as only a small fraction of the delegates were actual rank and file wage workers.

The bulk of them were the old guard petty politicians, scattered about the state, who volunteer to attend the convention "free of charge" to the local union.

Hall Reports.

Pres. Hall made his annual report to the convention, on the state of labor affairs. He admitted that the condition of the unions was not good. However, he stated that this was due to the "indifference of the membership." He was ready to act if the membership would wake up, What puzzled him, as the leader of the federation, was why the membership did not do something.

His analysis of the low pulse of the federation, would do justice to a real estate shark, who complained about the fact that he had plenty of land to sell, but no customers. Otherwise, his report was as clear as mud. He deserves another notice in the society column of the Tribune, where his social movements are quite often recorded.

Clear About Communists.

But while the portly Mr. Hall was at sea concerning the weakness of the federation, his report was quite clear in regard to the Communists. In the fashion of a real leader, he declared:

"At the last convention, I, as an official, went considerably out of my way to call to the attention of delegates the biggest problem that the labor movement had to contend with; that of the Associated Employes under the guise of the American plan or the Citizens' Alliance, which aims to destroy our organizations, as well as those groups within our organizations, who are perpetual calamity howlers termed as I. W. W.'s, One Big Unionists or Communists. They are all in the same class."

We see then, according to Mr. Hall, that the reds are in the same class with the bosses. Proof! Hall's own words!

Furthermore, Hall joins hands with the capitalists to war on the reds. This shows how much Hall fights the capitalists, when he adopts their program of war on the progressives.

As a matter of fact, Hall is in direct alliance with the employers. Proof? Yes, plenty of it.

Let any worker get a copy of the official year book of the federation. It is crammed from cover to covet, with ads from all the big open shoppers of Minnesota. All the capitalists who support the Citizens' Alliance of the state, feature their ads in that disgraceful book.

How does that come about? Because Hall and Lawson, as leaders of the federation, sabotage the work of the labor movement with reference to organization policies and activities, with regard to making the federation function as a genuine working class organization.

For Value Received.

Or, are we to assume that the open shoppers pay big money to Hall and Lawson for the publication of these ads in the year book, because they desire to help the federation in its work?

The Citizens' Alliance certainly knows its men, when it feeds them corruption taffy, in the form of "ads." Hall and Lawson have organized nothing and nobody. And they don't intend to.

Hall's report was a clumsy assemblage of platitudes; there was a complete lack of any kind of policy formulated to meet the needs of the decaying organization.

The convention amended the federation constitution to read as follows:

"No person shall be permitted to sit as a delegate at conventions who is a member of the Communist (Workers) Party, or a sympathizer or teacher of that organization."

It passed with 24 left wing delegates voting against it. Had the vote been a secret one, it is claimed that about 80 delegates would have voted against it. Nevertheless, there were 24 delegates whom the red baiters and witch hunters could not bluff nor terrorise. This amendment provoked the only debate of the convention.

Mahoney Speaks for Reaction.

Old man Mahoney of St. Paul, speaking for it, said:

"I believe that the members of that party should be excluded for the safety of the movement." What Mahoney apparently forgot, was that if the present class collaboration policies of himself and his friends are not stopped, there will be no movement for Mahoney to worry about, in the sense that the old man understands "movement."

Delegate Walter Frank of the lathers of Minneapolis, stigmatized the move. He declared: "This convention is drifting into the dark ages. History shows that progress is due to the radicals. When you bar those who have the courage and the ability to fight for the workers, you are taking a step backward and become traitors to the labor movement."

Emme on the Floor.

Delegate Emme of the Machinists of St. Paul, said:

"The blind prejudice of this organization is going to bar me as a delegate, but I am going to still be in the movement and working for it."

Mr. Spielman made the prize asinine argument against the reds. He spouted: "The Third International has told its emissaries to go in and disrupt this movement." According to Spielman, the Comintern is financed by Wall Street!

Little Rats Grown Up.

Spielman began in the labor movement as an anarchist. Emma Goldman used to refer to him as "the little rat," before she became one herself. He was expelled from the I. W. W. here in 1913, for betraying the street car strike.

He later organized a syndicalist league. Since 1917, his political degeneration has shocked every honest worker in Minneapolis. When it comes to disruption, several local unions, now defunct, can testify to Spielman's expert methods in that line.

The amendment is broad enuf to unseat any delegate whom the fakers regard as a dangerous critic of their policies. It is calculated to gag all opposition to fakerdom. But there is one very serious defect which it contains: It won't work.

The 24 left wing delegates fought valiantly for progress. They introduced resolutions on amalgamation, organization, unemployment, for a labor party, recognition of Soviet Russia and Saklatvala, for world trade union unity and on the striking anthracite miners.

Practically all of these resolutions were killed by the machine in the committee. The resolution on Saklatvala was referred to the executive council, on the theory that they needed more information about the matter.

"Non-Partisan" Politics Endorsed.

The convention endorsed the A. F. of L. policy of "non-partisan" political action. In this connection the farmer-labor association was endorsed. This association was organized last March by a hand-picked group of discredited politicians, whose only aim in politics is jobs for themselves. They are merely anti-republicans. Old man Mahoney, who is the political pet of the corrupt democratic machine of St. Paul, is their spiritual director. The farmer-labor federation was too working class for these political porch climbers.

This association is a medium thru which the petty bourgeoisie is going to operate to destroy the farmer-labor party; as a vehicle for the farmers and workers. It is going to be attempted under the guise of following the policies of the A. F. of L.

But the A. F. of L. had absolutely no hand in the organization of the farmer-labor party. Therefore, the process of smashing the farmer-labor party will be introduced, under cover of following the "non-partisan" policies of the A. F. of L. That means that the farmer-labor party is regarded by the officialdom of the federation, in the same light that the capitalist parties are looked upon: Where "good men" may be endorsed.

As a positive indication of this tendency to gut the farmer-labor party the propaganda of the farmer-labor association stresses the fact that it is purely "non-partisan." Without having any following at all, it seeks to implant the dilapidated "non-partisan" ideology among the workers and farmers. If it does this in the green tree, what will it do in the ripe?

Moreover, in the last municipal elections of Minneapolis, the farmer-labor party was abandoned by the labor fakers who stand for the F. L. A. and they endorsed a republican for mayor, who is as progressive as a snail, under the capitalistic banners of the still-born F. L. A., the farmers and workers would be led back into the capitalist parties.

Between this black treachery and the rank and file, stands the bold champion of the working class, the Workers (Communist) Party.

Fraternal Delegates Speak.

Several fraternal delegates addressed the convention. Pres. J. C. Lewis of the Iowa Federation of Labor spoke. He urged "non-partisan" political action and a strong adherence to the present policies of the A. F. of L. He also stated the open shop drive in his state hurt business, so that now the business men of Iowa are "strong for organization."

Pres. Handley of the Wisconsin Federation, made a very interesting and constructive speech. He made no reference to red baiting and declared that something more was needed in the labor movement than mere craft vision. He pleaded for a broad social vision. His speech was a marked contrast to the ones of the red baiters.

Hall and Lawson were re-elected to their jobs of president and secretary respectively.

JERSEY LABOR FEDERATION IN VERY TAME ROLE

Nothing of Importance Given a Hearing

NEWARK, N. J. Sept. 29.—(FP)—The ban on all night work for women and the right to peaceful picketing under all circumstances are measures which will be fought for by the New Jersey Federation of Labor. The state labor convention also went on record for modification of the Volstead act in favor of light wines and beer and took the stand that tolls should be collected on the new Delaware River bridge to Philadelphia for the purpose of liquidating bonds.

Prison made goods were condemned, the federation demanding the prohibition of all prison contract labor and George H. Carter, head of the government printing office at Washington, recently denounced at the convention of the International Typographical Union, was pronounced as "incompetent and un-American: he has established a spy and stool pigeon system; impaired the efficiency and morale of the printing department and should be removed as speedily as possible."

Employers Violate Law.

The attack on night work for women was initiated by the Waiters, Cooks and Waitresses' Union at Atlantic City, who introduced the resolution that passed to amend the no-night-work-for-women law fixing a fine of $25 upon the employer for every violation and providing that women shall be employed at nothing but housework in their own homes after nine p. m.

The violation of the present law against women's night work has been an open scandal, the lack of proper penalties and enforcement provisions assisting the employers in setting it aside. Passaic wollen mills have been leading violators.

The fight for the right to picket is stressed by New Jersey labor because this state has a bad record for injunctions against strikers. A law providing for jury trials in injunctions recently passed has proved insufficient to prevent judges from temporarily and at critical periods in a strike harrassing and causing the arrests of pickets. Jury trial does not at best give relief till too late in the strike, and labor demands freedom from any interferences in picketing.

Three hundred and eighty-three delegates attended the convention, members of the standard organized trades. The manufacturing industries especially the chemical industries in which New Jersey is a leader, have little organization. Support for a machinists strike against Whitehead & Hoag in Newark was voted and the menace of the big open shop bakeries to the bakers' union was stressed in discussion.

Arthur A. Quinn was elected federation president for the coming year; William Umstadter, vice-president; Thomas Eames, second vice-president; Henry Hilfers, secretary and Jeremiah J. Buckley, treasurer.

MILLSTEIN OF FUR WORKERS IN ROLE OF THUG

Breaks Up Meeting of Local Union

Jack Millstein, business agent of Local 45, of the Fur Workers' Union and leading agent of the Kaufman machine in Chicago, broke up a meeting of the union here last Friday night when Brother Israelson, pointedly asked for information that would expose the union representative who voted with the manufacturers to discharge a member from his job, at a conference held on the previous Wednesday evening between four union representatives and four manufacturers. The vote was 5 to 3 to fire the brother and one of the union men at the conference voted with the bosses.

The boss discharged the brother on the ground that he was not a good mechanic. The contract between the union and the employers provides that no member of the union can be discharged after he is employed for two weeks or more, except for good cause. If the worker is inefficient, the boss will certainly find out that fact at the end of two weeks. The discharged member of Local 45 had worked six weeks and is a capable workman.

When the question was asked on the floor of the union meeting, which one of the labor representatives voted with the bosses, the Millstein spokesman replied that it was a secret and the indentity of the individual could not be divulged. There is a general suspicion that the individual is Millstein.

Threatened Israelson.

Israelson ran for business agent on the progressive ticket in opposition to Millstein, so when Israelson took the floor to discuss the treachery of union representatives voting with the employers to take the bread and butter out of the mouth of a brother, Millstein went wild. He advanced towards Brother Israelson and said: "You dirty skunk, you said all you are going to say here" and appeared to be ready to strike.

He withdrew however, when members of the progressive group showed fight. He succeeded in smashing up the meeting, however.

Early in the meeting Millstein's brother objected to having the minutes of the executive board acted on seriatum. Usually they are voted on a whole without the membership having a chance to discuss anything. But the objection of Millstein's brother was not sustained by the vice-president, who was in the chair. The vice-president of Local 45 is a supporter of the progressive group. He declared that the progressives were not going to stand for any more "railroading."

The real reason for the discharge of the union member with the support of one of the members of the conference committee, is that the boss wanted to employ a friend of Millstein's. The furriers are wondering who is the stool pigeon in the union who is giving the bosses the names of employes who are Communists. Recently, a boss told one of his employes who is a member of the Workers Party that he did not want any Communists around here. He also told him that Communists were not wanted in the union and he would be better off if he left the union before he got thrown out.

After a recent conference between Millstein, a few other union representatives and a group of manufacturers, Millstein invited the crowd to supper. One of the bosses asked who was going to pay for the supper and Millstein declared: "We will." The members are wondering where did Millstein get the money or is he drawing on the union treasury to treat his friends among the manufacturers.

Millstein's friend is now working on the job from which the other union member was fired. This is an example of the way the Millstein-Kaufman gang works in Chicago.

Millstein a Hypocrit.

This man Millstein recently issued an open letter to the progressive group asking them to attend the meetings and express themselves, but his conduct at the last meeting shows that he is still following the same terrorist tactics that Kaufman used in New York. The progressive group in New York defeated Kaufmanism because of his gangster methods and his local tool Millstein will get the same medicine, say the progressive members of the union.

The question before the members of Local 45 now, declared Brother Israelson, speaking for the progressive group, is: "Whether the membership are going to lie down and surrender to the Kaufman gangsters or whether they will fight and defeat the gangster methods of Millstein and Kaufman as their brothers did in New York."

TOMSKY CAPTIVATES SCARBOROUGH IN SPEECH ON UNITY RESOLUTION; AN A. F. OF L. DUBB "ALSO SPOKE"

LONDON, Sept. 13—(By Mail.)—The great moment of the Trades Union Congress at Scarborough for which the capitalist press had waited, levelling all their propaganda to secure the end they desired, came—and saw their schemes come utterly to naught.

The congress endorsed the Russian unity proposals of the general council with acclamation.

American "Also Spoke."

It was red day at the congress.

After the American and Canadian delegates, Messrs. Adamski, Evans, and Marsh, had addressed the congress, the delegates greeted Tomsky (the All-Russian Trade Unions) when he stepped forward to address them. This was the most intense moment of the week.

Tomsky made no secret of his policy. The Russians, he said, were not ashamed of their ideas.

It was in the name of these ideas that in October, 1917, they gave up criticising the capitalist class by resolution and began criticising them by arms.

They set free the bankers from the burden of the banks—(laughter)—they set free the employers from the burden of conducting the factories; they set free the landowners from the burden of the land; and on that basis they held power and had built up a working class state.

They saw no reason why after eight years of that power they should give up the ideas they had had to fight for, and which had stood them in such good stead.

At the same time they did not ask anyone else to abandon their ideas. Why should there not be diversity of ideas in the same international when they were agreed on one common aim? In a trade union they had catholics and protestants, and people of different colors and sexes. Did that prevent unity? The question was not the setting up of a political organization, but a united trade union organization which had as its central aim the liberation of labor from the yoke of capital.

At the close of the reception to the fraternal delegates, the congress sang the Internationale.

International Unity and Russia.

The question of the report of the delegation to Russia was opened up by a very effective speech from Fred Bramley. He said that unity negotiations were complex and difficult, but the Russians had helped these by their attitude.

The Russian revolution was the first in history aiming at, and securing, the overthrow of economic exploitation. It was also the first great national experiment in working class control. Russia was a socialist republic, and he wanted to call their attention to the fact that it was the only revolution, the only economic change, which had received the universal condemnation of the exploiting classes.

The congress unanimously endorsed the report of the delegates who visited Russia.

Then came the endorsement of the policy of the general council in its efforts to secure international unity. It was expected by the capitalist press that this would cause great dissension. But the congress had made up its mind.

S. Elsbury (Tailors and Garmen Workers) moved:

That this congress records appreciation of the general council's efforts to promote international unity, and urges the incoming general council to do everything in their power towards securing the worldwide unity of the trade union movement thru an all-in inclusive international federation of trade unions.

S. O. Davies (Miners' Federation) seconded, and the resolution was immediately put to the conference and carried unanimously.

With the passing of this resolution the most important work of the congress had been accomplished.

Tomsky Interviewed Later.

Tomsky, interviewed on Friday on the congress decision on the subject of international unity, declares that it was the biggest step yet taken towards building one organization for the world's workers out of the scattered sections of every country.

"The effect," he said, "will be permanent and far-reaching. Its first step showed itself today in the enthusiastic message of gratitude and greeting received by the congress from 1,500 members of factory committees in Munich. Similarly the unanimous decision of the Norwegian T. U. C. last week was proof of the correctness of the policy of forming an Anglo-Soviet council.

"Friends of unity of working-class movement elsewhere will be encouraged and strengthened by events of this week.

"That solidarity is the best reply to those who assert that the campaign for world trade union unity is only a political maneuver of a small group of Russian leaders.

"Such a suggestion can only come from petty politicians who are accustomed to tricks and swindles themselves. The man who attempts to mislead millions of workers today is soon found out.

"Workers of Britain and Russia, as well as workers in many other countries, are finding new hope and inspiration in the Anglo-Russian agreement for unity and the Anglo-Russian advisory council, precisely because we have always told them the truth about the difficulties and dangers facing them and the experience of our own struggles, proving to them we were telling the truth.

11,000,000 on the March.

"They are realizing that our cause is the cause of liberation of tens, maybe of hundreds of millions of oppressed workers of all countries from the capitalist yoke.

"My message to the British workers is the same as it will be to the Russian workers:

"Be of good cheer, comrades. Together we have beaten down many obstacles and we shall beat down more.

"No obstacles can arrest the march of eleven million organized workers.

"More than ever we can be confident that there will yet be a single united International of Trade Unions."

SOVIETS INSIST GYPSIES SETTLE OR RISK EXILE

Must Do Some Productive Work

MOSCOW, Sept. 29—Plans have been submitted by the people's commissariat of agriculture to the council of people's commissaries for the settling of the wandering gypsies on the land. The people's commissariat of agriculture considers the nomadic life of the gypsies incompatible with the Soviet political system in which every citizen must engage in useful, productive work.

Must Settle in Three Years.

According to the plans worked out by the people's commissariat of agriculture, the gypsies must take up settled life within three years from the publication of the official decree to that effect. The gypsies are to be offered the choice of either settling in urban communities, in residential quarters allotted to them, or taking up agriculture.

Those gypsies who will not avail themselves of the three-year period given them for taking up settled life will be exiled to remote districts, where free land will be allotted them.

Turkish Envoy Departs.

GENEVA, Sept. 29—Tewfik Bey, the Turkish foreign minister, suddenly left Geneva tonight for Constantinople. It is understood that he will there begin discussions with the British ambassador to consider the difficulties between the two nations, and that the Turkish ambassador in London will get in touch with the British foreign office.

NEW GOLD FIELDS DISCOVERED AT ALDAN, SIBERIA

Soviet Klondyke Draws Gold Hunters

MOSCOW,—(Tass)—Sept. 29.—The reputation of a "Soviet Klondyke" has been established with the newly discovered Aldan goldfields of Siberia. Rumors are being spread thruout the Union about the riches of this region, attracting many fortune hunters. Searchers for gold arrive even from countries like Japan, China and America.

The Aldan goldfields comprise the following system of rivers: Big and Small Nimgere, Nimgerican, Zelidgar, Yakonat and a series of smaller tributaries of Aldan, which itself is a tributary of Lena.

In the center of the region runs the Tommot river, the valley of which is most abundant in gold. The Tommot gold area numbers 15 thousand square kilometers. There is no everlasting frozen state of the soil on this region, owing to this fact, the excavatory work can be carried on during a long period every year.

The total amount of gold deposited in the Aldan regions is being estimated at about 420 tons. In the best land portions of the Tommot region the daily yield of gold per worker is up to 1 pound. Average land portions yield 20-30 zolotnics (one zolotnik contains 2.40 grams), while the poor portions of land give a worker 10-15 zolotnics daily.

Some districts are particularly fit for dredge work. The possibility of mechanizing the works at Aldan is now being under consideration. Last year the goldfields were exploited by a local Yakut trust. At the present time, this trust has been reorganised into an all-Union one and bears the name of Aldanzoloto. Its stock capital amounts to one million rubles.

To regulate communications between separate goldfield regions, an air line is to be established from the Larinskaya station (formerly Rukhlove), of the Amur railway, thru Tommot-Aldan-Yakutsk.

A new town bearing the same name as the river, Aldan, is rapidly growing in the goldfields.

Mellon Lays Hands on Canadian Power Site; Adds to His Monopoly

MONTREAL, Sept. 29.—(FP)—An important power site on the Saguenay river, Quebec, which the late Sir Wm. Price of Quebec and Duke, the American tobacco magnate, acquired for a song, has been sold to the Aluminum Co. of America, secretary Mellon's trust, for $16,000,000 according to report. This, says the Mining Journal of N. Y., is the result of a threat of Duke, to undertake the manufacture of aluminum.

DAILY WORKER PUBLISHING COMPANY
1113 W. WASHINGTON BLVD. Chicago - ILL.

STOVE COMPANY TRIES TO SCARE STRIKERS' WIVES

Threaten to Revoke Insurance

The Cribben and Sexton Co., North Sacramento Blvd. and West Chicago Avenue, manufacturers of Universal stoves and ranges, finding itself unable to coerce the strikers back to work, has begun to propagandize the wives and sisters of the strikers. The company thinks by scaring the wives, they can break the strike.

As was mentioned in a previous issue of the DAILY WORKER, the company issues an insurance policy to each one of its workers after he has been in the employ of the plant three months. The men's sisters and wives are now being sent letters by the company's general manager telling them that if the striking husband or brother does not return to work by a certain date, the insurance policy will be forfeited.

This is one of the letters sent by the general superintendent of the plant to the wife of one of the men:

"Dear Madam: You are the beneficiary and hold an insurance policy of $1,500.00, which policy this company took out and pays for your husband as long as he is in our employ.

"Your husband having left our employ on September 16, it is necessary for us to take some action on this insurance, and unless your husband reports to work in our shop on or before Monday morning, September 28, we will be obliged to cancel this insurance.

"In that case, it will not be necessary for you to return the policy as we will notify the insurance company to cancel the policy and it will be worthless.

"Yours very truly,
"Cribben & Sexton Company,
"W. A. Smith, Vice-President and General Manager."

The strikers are now more determined than ever to refuse to go back under the old conditions. Their demand for recognition of their union and the recognition of the shop committee will have to be met by the bosses before they will allow the lathes and wheels to turn.

The company is arranging for police protection and undoubtedly they intend to "rough house" the picketers. The flivver squad tried to chase the men away from the shop after they had been inside the main office. Later the pickets noticed a plainclothes man and a uniformed policeman go into the office and come out two or three hours later. It seems as tho plans are being made to break up the effective picket lines with police force.

Burman, who is superintendent of the plant is determined to bring the spy system and speed-up system as practiced in the Western Electric and Edison Appliance Co. plants into the Cribben and Sexton Co. shop. He has had years of training in the two plants mentioned and intends to use it.

Walkout Still On.

The walkout that was called at the Chicago Plating Works, formerly known as the Co-operative Co., 351 West Superior St., is still on. The union was only successful in bringing out half the men employed, but production is so small and help has been made so hard to get that the company will not be able to produce much of the struck work they have been receiving from the Cribben plant.

The Workers Party in Action

What Is a Language Fraction?

By ELLIS PETERSON.

THE question of party fractions, in trade unions, etc., is not clear in our party. Many comrades confuse the party fraction with the fundamental party unit, the shop nucleus, and do not understand that the fraction is an auxiliary party instrument working within non-party organizations.

In the party constitution the fraction is defined as follows: "The fractions are organs of the party within non-party organizations. They are not independent, fully authorized organizations but are subordinate to the competent local party committees."

Not only are the fractions subordinate to their respective local party committee, but they can also be subordinate to other Communist fractions in the higher committee of the same non-party organization of which they form a Communist fraction.

THIS means that there can be no fraction (trade union, language, etc.) organized without the existence of some non-party organization in which a certain number of Communists are members.

The language fractions do not differ from other Communist fractions as far as organizational methods are concerned; their leading committees, however, are organized by the party in a different way. The language fractions are organized precisely on the same principle as are the other Communist fractions.

A language fraction can never be organized as an independent party organization in a section or a sub-section of the party. Neither can there be organized a language fraction in a shop nucleus or in a street nucleus (international branch) of the party. Before we can have a language fraction, there must be a non-party organization in which this language fraction can be organized. If there are already Communists in this non-party organization, then the building up of the Communist fraction therein is an easy task. If not, then the party, thru its organs, has to see to it that party members will enter the organization and form a fraction in it.

During the transition period, it may be necessary to organize workingmen's clubs where no party branches exist at present. In these instances, the first step to be taken is the organization of the party language fractions and around them the Communists have to organize workingmen's clubs.

THERE are various kinds of organizations in which Communist language fractions can be formed. In fact, the party ought to have language fractions in every mass organization of foreign speaking nationalities, provided the members of these organizations are workers. It is the duty of the Communists to do work among the masses, wherever the masses are found, and there are plenty of such working class mass organization, i. e. South Slavic national organizations, Lithuanian, Italian, Finnish, etc. Among the Scandinavian workers we find thousands belonging to temperance societies and the Communists have done no systematic propaganda work in these organizations. Among the Finns we have co-operative societies, and the organized work of the Finnish comrades among the workers belonging to these co-operatives has been very profitable indeed.

After the party reorganization we will have our workingmen's clubs (the present language branches) in which the party members, i. e. all the present members who do not drop out of the party but remain in the party thru membership in a shop or street nucleus, organize themselves as language fractions, one in each workingmen's club, provided that these clubs have been able to develop to some extent into an organization of workers, in which there are non-Communist members. And if these workingmen's clubs can be transformed into real mass organizations with hundreds of members and with meetings of a popular character attended by many more workers than the actual membership, then the party work in these clubs will be a very important task for the Communists.

On the other hand, if these workingmen's clubs cannot be developed into mass organizations, then a number of the small workingmen's clubs of the same language can be amalgamated into one big club.

BUT, the party members have always to remember that their most important work is the work in the shop and street nucleus. And the fractional work of every party member must be so organized that the language work will be carried out truly on a mass scale so that the party members will not lose time and energy in work which will be of little or no use to the party because it is done in organizations having insignificant membership.

From the aforesaid it will be understood that a language fraction is an auxiliary organ of the Communist Party in a non-party language organization. The language fraction consists of all party members, who belong to a certain non-party organization of workers, with the aim to propagate and organize the workers of that organization for the revolutionary class struggle under the leadership of the party.

When members of such a language organization wish to join the party the members of the Communist fraction have to see to it that such workers join the party thru the shop nucleus where they work or, if that cannot be thru the street nucleus organized where they live. They cannot join the party thru the language fraction.

HOW can the activities of the language fractions be controlled and led? Thru commissions of the various languages, Italian, Russian, Scandinavian, Lithuanian, etc. Every important party committee has an agitprop department. Working in the closest contact wiht this agitprop department, are language commissions. If there are Jewish, Russian and German comrades in a certain town, the city committee of this town will have a Russian, Jewish and German language commission working in its agitprop department. These commissions will now be composed by the respective federation committees and bureaus, but later they will be elected or appointed by the respective party committees from among the most active and ablest comrades of the respective language groups. These commissions have to control and lead the party work of all the language fractions in their territory; they are subordinate to the local party committee and also to the respective language commission of the next higher party unit. The agitprop of the C. E. C. has at its command a language commission for every language group. Under the guidance of the agitprop and the C. E. C. these commissions lead the party work among the foreign speaking workers in this country.

LORE DEFEATED IN NEW YORK BRANCHES AS THEY VOTE TO TAKE STAND WITH THE WORKERS PARTY

By WILLIAM WEINSTONE.

THE efforts of Lore to split the German branches away from the party in New York and surrounding vicinities has been completely defeated by the party. The overwhelming number of members and branches have stood firmly with the party and Lore remains isolated with his official Volkszeitung family. The German bureau of the party sent out a corps of speakers and after a thorogoing discussion the following results were achieved.

The Yorkville branch, the largest and most influential branch, voted 57 for the party and 11 for Lore. Those eleven made up part of the 37 that had already gotten together with Lore in the Lore organization—the International Workmen's Association. The Nightworkers branch, 16 [illegible] unanimously for the party. Buswick branch which had for a long time been under Lore's influence, voted 5 for the party and 3 against. North Hudson voted 4 for the party and has now been united with the Hoboken branch. The combined branch has already increased its members to 16. Newark, 3 stood for the party and 2 for Lore. Ridgewood branch for the party by overwhelming majority. Only one voted for Lore. Passaic, 5 for the party and 2 for Lore. The branches totalled 90 for the party and 22 for Lore.

Outside of the New York districts, Lore was defeated. In Philadelphia, 7 to 3. The latter three declared they would stay with the party. The Rochester branch which has been outside of party life and still regarded itself as an "Arbeiter Verein," part of the old Lore "Arbeiter Bildingsverein" of 1921 and the branch in New Haven have joined Lore's forces.

These are the results to date. They show that in spite of the fact that Lore has had the Volkszeitung as his organ and has suppressed reports and articles that truly exposed his activities, the branches have proven loyal to the party. Those who have left with Lore had been a source of friction within the party and never acted as party members, and the party is sounder for their leaving. Among these members are some of the old time bureaucrats who have been stumbling blocks to the proper functioning of the party members in the unions, and who have resisted party influence in the unions.

The first task in the defeat of Lore has thus been accomplished. The next task consists in building up the coordinated and systematic activity of the party members in the German workmen's organizations. There Loreism has for a long time flourished. These organizations are dominated by the social-democratic bureaucrats who have kept these workers organizations outside of the militant class struggle. The party members have now a free hand to accomplish in these organizations the work of liquidating the social-democratic ideology and getting these important bodies into the political struggle. This work will revitalize the organizations and overcome the stagnation and social-democratic inactivity which the Loreist leadership has kept them in.

WORKERS PARTY OPEN AIR MEETINGS HELD IN N. Y. THIS WEEK

U. S. S. R. SHOWS HUGE GROWTH IN ALL PRODUCTION

Expect 90 Per Cent of Pre-War Level in 1926

BERLIN, Sept. 29.—The Moscow gosplan and the Russian foreign trade commissariat are busy getting out programs and forecasts for the busines year 1925-26, which in Russia begins on Oct. 1. The commissariat's estimate for the export of agricultural, forestry and similar prooducts is 823,000,000 rubles, against 372,000,000 in the present business year. The figure for the coming twelve months places an estimate of 448,000,000 rubles of grain exports, as against 72,000,000 in the present business year. The gosplan estimate is 950,000,000 rubles.

For export of industrial products the commissariat foreshadows 172,000,000 rubles, against 132,000,000 in the present business year. It figures the gross production of oil at 521,000,000 puds, against 432,000,000 in the present business year and 562,000,000 in 1913. Of the estimated production for the coming year, 352,000,000 are allotted to the Baku fields and 144,000,000 to Grosny.

The Donezt coal production program is for 790,000,000 puds, or 42 per cent more than in the present fiscal year. Wood production planned by all the state trusts is 141,000,000 rubles. Pig iron production planned calls for 151,000,000 puds, against 73,000,000 in the present year, and for steel 182,000,000 puds, against 102,000,000.

98 Per Cent Fulfilled

The official Eckonomitcheskaya Zhizn publishes figures to show that the official program for the present year has been fulfilled up to 98 per cent in the leading industries and that the entire national production applied to the new business year, agricultural and industrial, should be 90 per cent of prewar output.

40,000 School Kids Less Mean that Many More Child Workers

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—(FP)—The number of working minors receiving part time instruction in New York City schools decreased by almost 40,000 for this school year, according to the report of the board of education. The number of full time pupils showed a normal increase, rising to over a million. No reason is suggested for the decrease in the number of working children who find it possible to attend school after working hours.

CAILLAUX PUTS UP THE ANTE BUT NOT HIGH ENUF

His Mission May Be a Large Fizzle

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.— Joseph Caillaux, the French finance minister, raised his ante today in the negotiations for the funding of France's $4,000,00,000 war debt—but he didn't raise it high enough to reach a settlement.

Under insistent pressure from the Wall Street bankers to come forth with something that will at least approach the previous settlements made by the debt commission with seven other European nations, M. Caillaux submitted a revised schedule of payments, but it still fell short of meeting American expectations, and he withdrew it again to make still further modifications.

M. Caillaux regretfully explained this morning that while certain parts of America's counter-offer, handed him last Friday, were all right, other parts were equally all wrong. His substitute proposals were then presented, there was short discussion of it, and the Americans made the same answer to him that he had made to them a few minutes before.

The haggling still goes on.

GRAFT SCANDAL BARED TO RIVAL FALL OIL STEAL

Defraud Alien Property Custodian's Office

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—Another graft scandal which threatens to assume the same proportions that the Teapot Dome scandal did last year, is being uncovered in the alien property custodian's department. It is intimated that "three of the best known men in the country" will be implicated among them "a former appointee of President Harding, a very noted politician and an influential banker."

"Bonds of very great value," says the Washington Post, "are declared to have been deposited in the latter's bank (the unnamed banker's) and there was a general manipulation of records of the alien property custodian's office designed to cover the transaction and make it appear that it was a bona fide transaction whereby what had seemed to be German-owned property actually was the possession of nationals of a neutral state."

All efforts are being made by Mellon, Coolidge and others in their attempt to block and investigation that may be proposed.

Tractors Harvest But One Per Cent of Big Grain Crop of Soviet

WASHINGTON—Russia's greatest grain harvest since 1911 is being handled by the aid of 7,500 tractors, most of which were made in the United States, says a report from the commissariat of agriculture to the Russian information bureau in Washington. On the ocean or on trains en route to the Soviet Union are 3,800 more of these Yankee tractors.

The agricultural co-operatives received orders for 20,000 tractors in the first six months of the present year, but were unable to supply so many. Next year, 22,000 more are to be distributed, of which 3,000 will be built in Moscow and Leningrad.

Tractors plowed and cultivated 1,687,000 acres in the Soviet Union this year. This is less than 1 per cent of the total tilled area.

PULLMAN OWNERS TO RECEIVE FAT DIVIDEND CHECKS

But Pullman Porters Get Measly Wages

Profits totalling $15,771,976 reported by the anti-union Pullman company for the year ended July 31, 1925, mean a return of $11.68 a share on the common stock. This exceeds the best returns of the profitable war years. It brings the total return to common stockholders since 1914 to $97.19 a share or over 97 per cent on the par value of the stock.

The Pullman company, which makes the bulk of its profits off the services of colored porters working as high as 400 hours a month for beggarly wages, shows an unbroken dividend record since 1877. In that period the common stockholders have received regular dividends totaling 475 per cent on their stock and in addition extra dividends bringing the total to more than 500 per cent. They have gotten back in cash over five times the amount which they are supposed to have invested.

The company has on hand today approximately $30,000,000 in undivided profits, enough to pay dividends for about three years if the company were forced to operate without profit. It has over $25,000,000 in cash and government bonds in its treasury.

This profitable corporation is completely owned and dominated by J. P. Morgan interests. Morgan himself has a place on the board of directors. With him sit George F. Baker, and his son representing the First National Bank of New York, a leading Morgan instrument for consolidating control of railroads and industrial corporations. Other directors are J. J. Mitchell, president of the Illinois Trust & Savings Bank, and director of New York banks and corporations, Chauncey Keep, director of the Illinois Trust & Savings, U. S. Trust Co. of New York, etc., John A. Spoor, and H. S. Vanderbilt all of the inner financial ring which governs the country's economic life

Fewer Steel Trust Stockholders

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—Stockholders of the United States Steel corporation common stock numbered 93,191 at the closing of books for the Sept. dividend. This compares with 93,446 in June.

Preferred shareholders at the closing of the books for August dividend numbered 76,574, against 77,152 in May.

NEW YORK FILTHY PRISON FOR THE MASSES, ONLY RICH HAVE COMFORT, VISITOR FROM SOVIET UNION FINDS

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., Sept. 29.—A citizen of the Soviet Union, just returned from a visit to the United States, writes on his impressions in the Pravda, revealing the unfavorable showing of New York alongside of Moscow.

The writer's first disappointment is the Statue of Liberty—"how small it seems in the distance and in comparison with the watery expanse it dominates." It is also lacking in artistic beauty, he decides—in fact, it is typically expressive of the "hollowness of the freedom of the American capitalist state."

The skyscrapers please him no more. They are big, he admits, but ugly and stiff and materialistic—just money making machines, cold and inhuman. He landed at a wooden customs building, which he compares unfavorably to the solid stone edifice of the German port of Bremen. Then he passes forth into the streets and is appalled by their dirtiness—"good Lord, what a mess; rubbish, waste paper, cigar butts, ends of lumber and general messiness. One glance and you know no master hand directs. A street is just as unkempt as a Russian steppe." He crosses the Hudson and finds Central New York no better—"anywhere in Moscow it is cleaner."

Moscow, he says, is safe. Before the New York post office he saw a guard armed with a revolver and he saw money transported in an armored truck with machine guns mounted fore and aft. "What a dreadful idea that one can get a bullet in the throat, not in a furious insurrection, but simply for the safe transportation of money," he said.

Dismayed by the dirt and danger, the visitor was also well nigh choked by the fumes of gasoline from innumerable autos. No wonder each room in the big hotels has a bath, he says, when the people must live in such a filthy atmosphere. The millionaires it is true, get fresh air and houses with gardens, but the working masses stifle—"seven million two-legged animals are penned in evil-smelling cages." The subways he found jammed unbearably and the elevated a dark and noisy roof over gloomy streets.

Mussolini Awaits French

ROME, Sept. 29.—The Italian debt mission to the United States has postponed its departure until Oct. 20, it was announced today. The mission, headed by Count Volpi, Italian finance minister had planned to sail the end of next week.

The reason for the delay has not been announced but it is probable that Premier Mussolini wishes to study the results of the Franco-American debt negotiations, before Count Volpi leaves Italy.

BOB, JR., SURE OF VICTORY IN WIS. ELECTION

Lenroot Worried About His Future

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Sept. 29.—There is no doubt about the election of Robert LaFollette Jr. to replace his father as senator from Wisconsin in the elections taking place today. He is the only republican candidate on the official ballot and all his republican opponents are running independent. LaFollette's nearest opponent is former Lieutenant Governor Dithmar of Baraboo, who is conceded not to have a show and who has the support of a remnant of the old-guard.

Fear is expressed in old guard republican quarters for Senator Lenroot's reelection in the regular elections next year. Senator Lenroot misjudged the political winds and lined up with the Oshkosh convention that nominated LaFollette's opponent in the primaries, Wilcox. Lenroot appeared to have instructions from the old guard in Washington to do so. Then the primaries came and Wilcox was snowed under by a hundred thousand votes. Lenroot and the Washington committee abandoned Wilcox and won the enmity of his supporters at Oshkosh. Now Lenroot is worrying about his job.

The DAILY WORKER will carry the election returns tomorrow.

CHINESE TEXTILE STRIKERS WIN IN LONG STRUGGLE

British Mill Owners Surrender

SHANGHAI, Sept. 29.—Chinese textile workers in the British-owned mills here have won their four months' strike. The settlement is an almost complete victory for the strikers including recognition of the union, reinstatement of all strikers without discrimination, back pay for the time they have been on strike, reduction of working hours, substantial improvement in other working conditions and no discharge of workers without causes which have been passed upon by a joint committee of the union and the employers.

The recognition of the union will be in line with the new regulations now under consideration by the Pekin government—a series of measures which applies not only to Shanghai, but to the whole nation secured by the Chinese masses as a result of their recent efforts to build a national labor movement with anti-imperialist aims.

The British-owned mills have suffered severely as a result of the long period of idleness during a part of which their Japanese competitors have been operating following an earlier settlement with the strikers.

It is the general opinion here in financial circles that the British textile owners will not be able to overcome their handicap and must sell to either Chinese or Japanese interests.

British Lose Shipping.

Since the shipping strike a number of British vessels have been purchased by Chinese and it is stated here that the Chinese are preparing to force Great Britain out of the coastal carrying trade. The boycott instituted against all British industry by the workers and students has placed British capital in a difficult position and made it possible for it to be squeezed out of major industries such as textiles and marine transport.

FAKIR-EDITOR IN PLEA TO BABBITS' IDEA OF JUSTICE

"Pity the Poor, Downtrodden Miners"

(Special to The Daily Worker)

TOLEDO, Ohio, September 29—Ellis Searles, editor of the United Mine Workers' Journal and chief Communist-baiter of the Lewis machaine in the U. M. W. of A. spoke here before the Exchange club's noonday lunch for babbits. His solution of the scab and thug problem in the West Virginia mine fields consists in appealing to business men not to buy W. Virginia coal. "Those unfortunate men would not stay in the mines of W. Virginia and work for $1.75 a day if they could get away, but they are helpless."

Miners in those places are forced to take what they can for their labor, said Searles, because of the presence of a large army of thugs and gun-men who force them to stay in W. Virginia. "By purchasing coal from other states you force your fellow citizens of Ohio, the men who labor in the mines, to stand idle."

Searles said nothing about organizing the scab fields of West Virginia and Kentucky. West Virginia coal is much cheaper than in the organized fields because of the difference in wages, but he appealed to the business men's sense of "economic justice" to buy Ohio coal at higher rate.

Fame Has No Lure for Dining Car Waiter If Not Accompanying Cash

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—(FP)—It's not the fact that passengers call him "George" that worries the dining car employe, but the fact that the railroad charges too much for its food and makes the passenger sore, says Rienzi B. Lemus, president of the grand council of the Brotherhood of Dining Car Employes, in a reply to the Pennsylvania railroad's announcement that the actual names of its waiters will be printed on the menu cards.

Lemus shows that the turnover of personnel on Pennsy dining cars is so rapid that the names printed would be out of date most of the time. Experienced waiters have been deprived of the dignified status they once enjoyed; management has made them responsible for all mistakes and capable of resenting no wrongs. They are regarded as having no rights while on duty.

Every extortionate charge on the bill of fare reacts against the tips that the waiter depends upon for his wage. Every line of propaganda on the menu card injures the temper and generosity of the passenger and reduces the income of the waiter. Hence the Pennsy's "reform" is a mockery so long as it goes along with the printing of higher prices and unwelcome political and industrial arguments.

given by France for maintaining a colossal military establisment was that the danger of a German war of revenge made a large armed force necessary. "The security pact is the answer" said Wall Street. "This will enable you to save money to begin paying your debts to us and we will give you enuf money at a nice rate of interest to tide you over the coffee and doughnut days."

ENGLAND wants the security pact, chiefly as a war move against Soviet Russia. Germany wants it because she can sell her willingness to join in such a move at a good price. England is willing to pay this price, provided France honors her check. France has given lip loyalty to the pact, but there is suspicion that if the Caillaux debt mission becomes a cropper. France will consign the pact to the deep blue sea. Caillaux knows that Wall Street favors the security pact, and is willing to make concessions for the French signature. England would like nothing better than to see France's cognomen on the treaty. But if Mellon gives France better debt terms than he gives England there will be a big howl in Threadneedle Street.

CAILLAUX has one eye on Mellon and another eye on the political situation in France. If he signs an agreement that means much heavier taxes for the French taxpayers somebody else may be the next finance minister. The bankers can do a lot of things but they cannot always buy elections—not always. They can usually buy the elected, tho. If he does not sign an agreement and the security pact goes awry, he will have other troubles. His franc is liable to start on another nose dive. England will begin to prod the Syrian rebels and perhaps give the Riffians a few more shiploads of arms.

THE United States and Britain want the security pact more than any other country. In fact France and Germany are only pawns in their game. And yet, England and the United States are the two greatest rivals in the capitalist world! Complicated isn't it? Quite so. But this is a good-sized world, despite the advance of engineering science which has knit the continents by invisible wires and ships that fly in the air. The international bankers are trying to bring order out of the chaos they have helped to create. But they only create more chaos. Just the same, when reading the press reports about the Mellon-Caillaux debt confab, our readers should not forget the security pact and the plots that never die against Soviet Russia.

Wisconsin Economy Shows Upward Trend Over Previous Years

MADISON, Sept. 29.—Employment gains due almost entirely to seasonal operations in the canning factories brought Wisconsin employment in July to the highest level attained this year, according to the monthly report of the state industrial commission. The number on factory payrolls is also 11 per cent above July 1924 and represents the highest level of any July in the last four years.

Weekly wages averaged $24.44 which is also a peak for July wages since the 1921 slump representing a gain of 18 per cent over July, 1922. The gain in employment and in average wages combine to bring total wages paid to a level 33 per cent ahead of July, 1922.

Excluding the canning factories there has been no change in employment since May and a decided drop in wages, the average having fallen from $26.20 a week in May to $24.88 in July.

BRITISH BOSSES AND GOVERNMENT PROVOKE STRIKE

Violate Mine Pact in Proposing Wage Cut

LONDON, Sept. 29.—The conflict is deepening between the Miners' Federation and the Baldwin government, with the purpose of the tory premier clearly apparent to provoke the miners by backing up the operators in a new attempt to cut wage rates in violation of the peace terms agreed upon in the last days of July.

The government and the operators evidently feel assured from some unknown quarter that they can attack safely or can crush the miners in case of a crisis by aid of the new unofficial army of fascists. They are, in addition, pressing the fight to come over complicated interpretations of the truce agreement and are using legal technicalities to confuse the issue.

Making New Attack on Wages.

In spite of the truce agreement providing that the government's August subsidy grant of $50,000,000 was to be used for "a temporary subvention to enable the coal mining industry to continue payments of wages at rates not less than those obtaining in July, 1925," the operators are proposing to reduce wages right now.

The government, clearly in secret understanding with the operators, contend that this is all negated by the fact that in the memoranda "accompanying" the estimate in which the above is set forth, repeated allusions are made to the effect that the 1924 agreement is the basis of the subsidy. Therefore, according to Prime Minister Baldwin and the operators, the operators are permitted to reduce basic wage rates because "variations" were provided for in the 1924 agreement.

Moreover, Baldwin threatens that if the miners do not accept the wage cuts proposed by the bosses, the miners will not be allowed to draw a penny of unemployment dole.

Cook Speaks For Miners.

A. J. Cook, secretary of the Miners' Federation, announcing that the union was calling a conference for October 9, meanwhile boycotting the coal commission set up following the truce, says eminent lawyers support the union contention. But he adds:

"We are consulting the Trades Union Congress general council and shall act with them. I am arranging that verbatim report of the conversations with Premier Baldwin shall be issued widely thruout the coal fields, so that the miners may judge for themselves of the action we have taken in their interests."

Cook expressed resentment at the traitorous attacks being made on the policy of the union, by the ex-prime minister of the so-called "labor" government, Ramsay MacDonald.

"I resent the continuous attacks by the former minister on the trade union movement," said Cook. "In his articles Mr. MacDonald has confirmed the attitude he took in regard to the miners' settlement, which I denounced at the time to the executive of the Miners' Federation."

Arrests in the Anthracite Strike

The arrest of Alex Reid, Patrick Toohey, August Valentine and Vareck, all members of the United Mine Workers of America, three of them striking anthracite miners, for putting forward the program of the progressive miners at mass meetings in the strike district shows that the local authorities, in accord with the wishes of the coal barons and the Lewis machine intend to squelch any attempt to inform the strikers of the basic class issues underlying the strike.

The Progressive Miners' Committee has had as the keynote of its program such vitally necessary demands as "no government interference," "standardization of work and wages," "a 100 per cent strike," that is calling out the maintenance men who are keeping the coal barons' properties from suffering any depreciation during the period of idleness, and the calling out of the bituminous miners. A basic wage of $9 to $10 per day is another demand.

In a labor dispute in which every effort is being made by both the coal owners and the officials of the union to limit the issues to a discussion of profits and a ten per cent increase in wages accompanied by the check-off and which has resulted so far only in giving the miners a vacation and allowing the coal owners to dispose of surplus stocks of low grade coal at fancy prices, it is obvious that any effort to make it a real struggle will be bitterly resented and punished by both of these friendly enemies.

Let no one be deceived by the peaceful character of the anthracite strike up to date. The Coolidge administration as the instrument of the capitalist class is fully informed of the strike and if the coal barons were in any danger it would not hesitate to resort to injunctions accompanied by a display of military force. The Lewis machine has undoubtedly given the Coolidge government assurances that nothing smacking of the class struggle beyond a cessation of work will be permitted to mar the process of arriving at an agreement with the anthracite barons.

The Lewis strategy is to secure the check-off in the anthracite, tie up the miners there with an ironclad agreement and then let the miners in the bituminous fields, now being cut to pieces by the mine owners following a long period of idleness and semi-starvation, shift for themselves. All of this fits in with the plans of the coal barons.

To expose this continuation of the policy of surrender to the coal owners followed consistently by Lewis, is the duty of every militant member of the miners' union. It must be carried out in spite of the arrests of the militants in the anthracite fields and the policy of terrorization in co-operation with the authorities announced by Rinaldo Cappellini, the Lewis tool who is doing the dirty work of the operators in procuring the arrests of members of his own union.

The Liverpool Conference

The agents of British imperialism in the British labor party are staging a desperate struggle at the Liverpool conference.

The passage by an overwhelming majority of the anti-imperialist resolution by the Scarborough meeting of the British Trades Union Congress has made it necessary for the ruling class to call upon the Thomases, Clynes and MacDonalds for extra efforts in behalf of the bloody empire.

Ostensibly the struggle between the left wing of the labor party and the reactionaries will center around the question of excluding Communists from individual membership in the labor party. We say ostensibly because the real fight is for the repudiation of the Scarborough resolution—the greatest blow ever delivered to British imperialism by British workingmen and women.

The Liverpool conference is less representative of the masses of workers than Scarborough and it is possbile that the anti-imperialist resolution may be repudiated and the Communists excluded. But this will mean not defeat for the left wing and the Communists, but merely a widening of the gap between the official leadership of the labor party and the masses of membership.

It seems to us that the time has past in Great Britain when "the red menace" can be used successfully to confuse the real issues of the workers' struggle and cover up the treachery of imperialism's tools in the labor movement. The Liverpool conference, because of the all important issues upon which the delegates will pass, regardless of the outcome, is an event of the greatest significance for world labor. The coming visit of A. A. Purcell, chairman of the International Federation of Trade Unions and outstanding figure in the left wing forces in Great Britain, to this country as a fraternal delegate to the Aemrican Federation of Labor, should serve to arouse the intense interest of American workers in the Liverpool conference.

That conference will definitely settle upon the Communist Party of Great Britain the leadership in the struggle against imperialism and the fight of the reactionaries against the Communists in the labor party is the acknowledgement of that leadership and its results in mobilizing more than 3,000,000 votes for the anti-imperialist resolution at Scarborough.

Chinese textile workers will get paid by the bosses for the four months they were on strike. We refer this news item to the anthracite miners for their serious consideration.

The U. S. State Department Is "Conscience Stricken

By B. BORISOFF.

THE American aviators in Morocco are perplexed, aroused, enraged. After they had been engaged for almost two months in bombing Riffian villages for the purpose of terrorizing the Riffians into submission to French imperialism, the U. S. state department at Washington suddenly requests them to abandon their "civilizing" mission, or be called to court and deprived of their American citizenship. The Yank aviators refuse to understand this order and refuse to comply with it. In the cables which their chief, Charles Sweeney sends to the Chicago Daily News they vigorously protest against the interference of the state department and point out its inconsistency.

They explain that they are engaged in the task of defending the "civilization" of the white man (read the imperialist exploitation of the oppressed colonial peoples) against the danger of its overthrow by the revolt of colored races of China, India, and Africa. They expose the state department, showing that the state department knew with what intentions they went to Morocco and gave its tacit approval to their mission. In the words of Col. Thomas Sweeney, he chief of the American esquadrille:

"Rather interesting in view of the present attitude of Washington, was the experience of Lieut. Pennington before he left New York. When he asked for a passport he gave as his reason for wishing to travel his desire to join the French foreign legion to fight the Riffians. When his passport was forwarded to him from Washington it was shown to have been granted for the purpose of permitting him to 'travel for pleasure.'"

THis is an interesting and important revelation. It shows that the blood of the Riffians slain by the American aviators in Morocco is also on the hands of the American government.

In harmony with the former attitude of the state department the American "press" acclaimed the volunteer aviators as heroes. It printed, without a word of protest, or even reproach, the eulogies of the French general, Noulin, in which he said that these murderers (in our conception) typify the noble spirit of the American nation, that they are fighting the cause of humanity and defending France against the "barbarous" onslaught of the Riffians. Now, however, there is a sudden change of front. The state department suddenly recollects that the action of the aviators, in waging war against the Riffians is in violation of the American law. (Did the state department forget the law, when it issued a visa to Lieutenant Pennington?)

THE "press" too sings now a different tone. The bankers' controlled Daily News, in its issue of September 25, 1925, comments upon the refusal of the aviators to comply with the request of the state department, as follows:

> So far as their (the aviators—B. B.) consciences are concerned they justify themselves by the consideration that French administration of Morocco has been efficient, progressive and benevolent, and that the rebellion led by Abd-el-Krim is a Moslem revolt against western culture. Consequently, as Colonel Sweeney cables The Daily News, the American avaitors after a conference have decided to go on fighting.
> Still, as law-abiding Americans they cannot disregard indefinitely the explicit declaration of the state department that they have laid themselves open to prosecution and punishment. It seems clear that they have violated the statutes of the United States governing the enlistment of American citizens in foreign armies engaged in hostilities. (Emphasis ours, B. B.)

American citizens may enlist in foreign military service, but they are forbidden to make war on any foreign power with which the United States is at peace, or "in the service of one portion of the people against any other portion of the same people." The United States has not recognized the Riffian rebels, and they are not a "foreign power" within the meaning of the statutes; but they are "one portion of the people" of Morocco engaged in fighting another portion. It is under this provision that the flyers are liable to prosecution if they return to the United States.

They will argue, of course, that an unwarranted and reactionary rebellion like that of Abd-el-Krim was not within the contemplation of the provision in question. That, however, is an issue for the courts. Apparently the state department intends to give the courts an opportunity of determining that issue—an important one in this age of "self-determination" and embattled nationalism.

WHAT happened to cause this sudden change in the attitude of the state department and of the "press"? Have Messrs. Coolidge and Kellogg suddenly felt the pangs of conscience calloused by the visions of helpless women and children killed by the bombs of the American flyers? Or were they stirred to their action by the protests of the liberal-pacifists, or of the revolutionists?

There is hardly a basis to suspect this. The oligarchy of Morgan would not put at the helm of the state sentimentalists who would weaken at the thought of women and children deliberately murdered by bombs dropped from the skies in a fight for "civilization," and the oligarchy feels itself too strong to pay heed to protests against its actions.

IT is quite safe to say that the interest of the banking oligarchy alone dictated the changed course of its puppets in Washington and of its kept press. What is that interest? It is the interest in the rich mineral resources of the Riff. Only recently the press informed us that a huge syndicate headed by American plutocrats was about to take over the concessions of the German firm of Bros Mannersman in the country of Riff. Is it not plausible to presume that the deal is now closed and that the imperialist exploiters are impatient to begin the exploitation? Is it not also plausible to presume that the American imperialists are not satisfied with the results of the military measures of their French allies with their slow progress against the indomitable Riffians? Could it not be that the House of Morgan came to the conclusion that the methods of "peaceful penetration" are more efficient at this time, when it is clear that only a long drawn out and exhausting campaign could subdue the Riffians.

If these suppositions are true to fact, then the reason for the sudden change of heart by the state department and the "press," which puzzles so much the American aviators in Morocco and also, perhaps, a great many citizens of the United States, becomes quite clear.

THE activity of the American aviators became embarrassing to the House of Morgan seeking "peace" in Morocco and, consequently, to its state department in Washington. As "good American citizens" the aviators should not grumble. The "interests of their nation" demand that they cease their activity, and they must submit, even if their prestige is to suffer. The state department should have whispered this beforehand into their ears.

If our judgment of the situation is correct, and, indeed, there is some good basis for it, then we may expect that "peace" will soon come to the troubled Morocco. The House of Morgan needs only to wink. This is a favorable moment. The French delegation is here to settle the question of French loans. The fate of Fr is in the hands of the House of gan. Without its support the would tumble, and state bankr would follow. A little pressure the Moroccoan war will end. The tion of the state department wo indicate that this is the policy of American imperialism, and eve will show whether this is the case.

BUT were it so, what carries th "peace" in store for the Morocc ans? Instead of the "efficient, pro gressive and benevolent"—(bene lent indeed!) French administrat there appears upon the scene a m "efficient," a more "progressive" a great deal more "benevolent" tor—the American imperialism, tak hold of the precious resources of land of Riff. American imperiali needs and covets the mineral reso es of Morocco, its zinc, and copp and iron. It will fight for their p session just as Germany fought. Wi the coming of the British-Ameri syndicate into Morocco, the Morocc ans face a new and more power enemy than the French imperialis They face the American imperial with its all-powerful industry, its limited supply of gold, its dre naughts and air fleets, and its ene ous man power. In the future Am can marines and soldiers will, doubtedly, try to accomplish the which baffles now the French w machine. For the Moroccoans, as all other oppressed peoples in th fight for freedom, there is only way of successfully opposing th ray of imperialist forces—to hands with the revolutionary mov ment of the workers throut world. Just as now they find th best allies in the French Commu at the time when French imperia attacks them, so in the future it w find their best allies in the Am can Communist Party when the Am ican imperialism will attact them.

Long live the union of opp peoples with the revolutionary wor ers of the world.

How Lenin Lived Abroad

By N. Krupsk

Much is written about Vladimir Ilyitch. In these reminiscences, V. I. is frequently represented as an ascetic, a virtuous philistine, a pater familias. This is a distortion. He was not like that. He was a human being who understood everything that was human. He loved life in all its aspects and drank deeply of the cup of life.

Our life is being described as full of privations. This is not true. We never knew what it is not to be able to buy bread. Is that how many of our emigre comrades lived? Some of them were two years at a stretch without any earnings, neither did they receive money from Russia, they starved in the literal sense of the word. We never went thru anything of the kind.

Lenin Lived Simply.

We lived very simply, it is true. But does happiness really consist in eating well and living luxuriously? V. I. knew how to make the most of life and its joys. He loved nature. Not to mention Siberia, even in the countries where we lived as emigres we always went out of town to fill our lungs with pure country air. We generally covered great distances, and returned home intoxicated with air, exercise, and impressions.

Our mode of life was very different from that of the other emigres. These people loved endless talks, gossiping at the tea-table, surrounded by clouds of tobacco smoke. V. I. got very soon tired of such gossiping, and always managed to slip away and go for a walk. I well remember the first year of our life in exile. Once in Munich, we invited Martov and Anna Ilyinishna to accompany us on our walk, as we wanted to show them a very favorite spot of ours—the wild banks of the Isar which could only be reached thru a thicket of shrubs.

The two were so tired after half an hour's walk, that they began to grumble. We therefore took them post haste across the water in a boat into the cultured part of the town, and proceeded just we two alone to "our" spot. Even in London we managed to take refuge with nature, and it is not an easy matter to get away from this smoky and foggy monster, especially if one does not want to spend more than three-halfpence in omnibus fares.

Later on, in Switzerland, when we became the lucky possessors of bicycles, we were able to extend our outings considerably. I well remember how once in London Vera Ivanovna Zasulitch said indignantly to a comrade, who, taking it for granted that Ilyitch does nothing but sit and read in the British Museum, was surprised at seeing him making preparation to go for a walk: "But he is passionately fond of nature." And I also remember that I thought at the time: "How true this is."

Studied Workers' Lives.

Ilyitch also loved to study customs and conditions of life. Wherever we two would take up our abode, be it in Munich, London or Paris, he loved to study the notices as to various socialist meetings in the suburbs, in small cafes, in English churches.

He wanted to see how German, British and French workers lived. He wanted to hear them speak their thoughts, and about their life, not at big meetings, but in the circle of intimate friends. We attended all kinds of election meetings in Paris. We were better acquainted with the customs and life of the workers of the country in which we stayed, than emigres generally are.

I remember the time in Paris when we had a passion for French revolutionary chansonettes. V. I. made the acquaintance of Monteguste, the very talented author and profesor of revolutionary chansonettes. The son of a communard, Monteguste, was the favorite of the working class quarters. At one time, Ilyitch liked to hum his song: "We greet you, soldiers of the 17th regiment"—this song was addressed to the French soldiers who had refused to shoot on strikers.

Ilyitch was also very fond of Monteguste's song which ridiculed the socialist deputies elected by the backward peasantry, who for 15,000 francs (the salary of a deputy), were selling the people's freedom in parliament. We began to visit theatres. Ilyitch hunted up advertisements about theatrical performances in the suburbs of Paris where Monteguste figured on the program. With the help of a plan of Paris we found our way to the outlying suburbs. We watched, together with the working class audience the piece which was generally some sentimental and rather improper nonsense, with which the French bourgeoisie is wont to amuse the workers.

After the play it was the turn of Monteguste. The workers greeted his appearance with frantic applause, and he, dressed in the jacket of a working man with a kerchief tied around his neck, quite in the French workingman's style, sang to them topical songs, ridiculed the bourgeoise, sang about the hard lot of the workers and about working class solidarity. The working class crowds in the Paris suburbs react very quickly to everything; the sight of a lady in a fashionable tall hat was enough to set the whole theatre agog.

Socialist Out For Votes

They get easily excited by the subject of the piece "You scoundrel", shouted a working man to the actor who played the role of the landlord, who made indecent advances to a young and pretty lodger. Ilyitch liked to feel himself one with this working class crowd. Monteguste appeared once at one of our Russian social evenings, and he and Ilyitch sat and talked until the small hours of the morning about the coming world revolution. The son of a Communard and the Russian Bolshevik had each of them his own ideas about this revolution. During the war Monteguste began to write patriotic songs.

There was also a time when he had the passion for election meetings to which the workers brought their children, for there was no one to look after them at home. We listened to the speakers trying to find out what it was which electrified the audience and watched with pleasure the athletic figure of a blacksmith who could not take his eyes off the face of the speaker, and his little son was just as interested as his father.

We listened to a socialist deputy of the chamber when he addressed a working class audience, and then we went to hear him at a meeting of the intelligentsia, and we saw how different was this orator's tame and colourless address to the bourgeois audience from his impassionate expositfon of great ideas which had electrified the working class audience. You see, he was out for votes. On our way home Ilyitch humed Monteguste's chansonnette about the socialist deputy.

Studied All Phases Of Life.

In London, we went to Hyde Park to listen to the open-air speakers. One would speak of God, another about garden cities. We visited Whitechapel, the Jewish quarter of London, and got there into touch with the Russian sailors and poor Jews, and we listened to their songs which were full of sorrow and despair.

We went to a circle where a young socialist was speaking about municipal socialism and an old member of the party, who on the previous day had officiated in the capacity of a socialist clergyman, at a service in the "Seven Sisters" Socialist church, was explaining to the audience that the exodus of the Jews from Egypt is to be considered as the prototype of the exodus of the workers from imperialist capitalism into the realm of socialism, and was accusing the young lecturer of opportunism.

To be able to observe life and human existence in all its shapes and forms, to find in it something which responds to one's own feeling and experiences,—is not this equivalent to enjoying life, and is an ascetic capable of this?

Relation To Plekhanov.

Vladimir Ilyitch was fond of children. He did not have on his table an array of photographs of those whom he loved, as someone wrote not so long ago. But he loved people passionately, for instance Plekhanov. The latter played an important role in the development of V. I., he helped him to get on to the right revolutionary path, and therefore, for a long time for him Plekhanov had a halo round his head. The smallest disagreement with Plekhanv was extremely painful to him. Even after the split he followed very carefully everything Plekhanov said.

With what joy he repeated Plekhanov's words: "I do not want to die an opportunist." Even in 1914 when war broke out Vladimir Ilyitch was very excited when he was preparing to speak against the war at the meeting in Lausanne where Plekhanov was also to speak: "Can it be that he will fail to understand",—Vladimir Ilyitch said. In P. N. Lepeshinsky's reminiscences there is one very incongruous statement. Lepeshinsky says that Vladimir Ilyitch said to him once: "Plekhanov is dead, but I am alive."

He could not have said such a thing. There must have been some intonation, some meaning which P. N. failed to catch. Never did Vladimir Ilyitch compare himself to Plekhanov in this way.

Young comrades who study the history of the party do not probably actually realise what the split with the mensheviks really meant.

Vladimir Ilyitch was not only devoted to Plekhanov, he also loved Zasulitch and Axelrod. "Well you are going to meet Vera Ivanovna, she is a person of crystalline purity",—said Vladimir Ilyitch to me on the first evening of my arrival to Munich. For a long time too he regarded Axelrod through rose-colored spectacles.

A little while before his death he asked me about Axelrod. He pointed to his name in the newspaper and said:—"What?" He begged me to ask Kamenev about him on the telephone and listened very attentively to the account given. When I told him about A. M. Kalmykova and he asked me again—"What", I understood that he was asking about Portressov. I told him what I knew and asked: "Could I find out more about him?" He shook his head to say no. "There is a rumor that Markoff is also dying," said Vladimir Ilyitch a little while before he lost the power of speech, and there was something tender and soft in his words.

Lenin's Political Honesty

But even the greatest attachment to people never influenced the political attitude of Vladimir Ilytich. In spite of his great love for Plekhanov and Markoff, he broke with them politically, (if one breaks with a person politically, one breaks with his or her also personally, and it could not be otherwise when one's whole life is bound up with the political struggle,) as soon as the cause demanded it.

But personal attachment to people caused Vladimir Ilyitch great suffering whenever such splits were necessary. I well remember how miserable Vladimir Ilyitch felt when it became evident at the 2nd Congress that severance from Axelrod, Zasulitch, Martoff and others was inevtible. If he had not been so passionately attached to people, he would not have broken down so soon. Political honesty, in the true and deep sense of this word, when it is a question of political judgment and actions. Not everyone has this capacity, and those who have frequently pay a high price for it.

Vladimir Ilyitch was always interestted in people and was even enthusiastic about them. As soon as he espied something interesting in someone, he would, so to speak, take possession of that person. I well remember his two weeks' "romance" with Natanson, who struck him as a remarkable organizer. His whole talk was about Natanson. V. I. was particularly interested in all new arrivals from Russia. And it generally happened that under the influence of his questions, and spellbound by his character, these people unknown to themselves showed him the best side of their nature—his own self, which found its reflex in their attitude to their work and the manner in which they approached it.

Unwittingly, they idealized their work when they were speaking about it to Vladimir Ilyitch. Ilyitch could be quite carried away by people and also by his work. Both these things were intertwined, and this made his life very full, very intensive and rich in impressions. He became imbued with the life around him, with all its complications and many-sidedness. O such stuff ascetics are not made.

With his views on life and peop and his keen, almost passionate inte est in everything, Ilyitch could less be the virtuous lower-middle person, depicted by some of his bio raphers: the exemplary pater fa surrounded by wife and children, array of family portraits on his wrapped in a quilted dressing with a book in his hand, a p kitten on his lap and around him rious furniture and comfort in w he rests from his public activity. V dimir Ilyitch's every step and move is subjected, so to speak, the lens of some sort of ph sentimentality. It would be as w to write a little less on this subject.

Refused to Pry Into Private Lives.

V. I. had the greatest contempt all gossip and interference with th private life of others. We considered such interference inadmissible. When we lived in exile Vladimir Ilyitch spoke frequently on this subject. He spoke of the necessity to steer clear of all kind of "exile scandal" which generally results from gossiping, idle inquisitiveness and prying into other people's hearts and minds. This kind of thing is the essence of everything that is mean and petty-bourgeois.

In 1902 in London Vladimir Ilyitch had a serious disagreement with some members of the editorial board of the "Iskra," who wanted to pass judgment on a comrade for his alleged misdemeanor whilst in exile. The investigation of the affair implied naturally the coarsest interference with the private life of this comrade. Vladimir Ilyitch protested against this most energetically. He refused to take any part in this abomination, as he called it. He was subsequently accused of lack of delicacy.

It seems to me that the refusal to pry into the mind and heart of another person is a proof of real delicacy.

Need New Building Trades Head.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—"My ele tion as president of the Brotherhoo of Painters means that the building trades department of the American Federation of Labor must select so other man as its president," Geo. F. Hedrick, head of the department, told The Federated Press on the eve of his departure for Atlantic City to open the convention of the department.

He offered no suggestion as to who would probably take the vacant post. The delegates will make the selection October 2 or 3.

FEAR BAD PEACE IN COAL WAR

Demand That the A. F. of L. Wage Fight For Saklatvala

STATEMENT OF CENTRAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE WORKERS PARTY OF AMERICA

HUNDREDS of local unions are adopting resolutions against the exclusion of Shapurji Saklatvala from the United States. The New York Central Labor Council has adopted a protest. The joint board of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers in Chicago has denounced his exclusion.

These organizations realize that the exclusion of Saklatvala is a blow at the labor movement of the United States. Saklatvala was excluded because he spoke for labor, because at the congress of the inter-parliamentary union he would have raised his voice in the interest of labor.

The great British Trade Union Congress denounced that very British imperialism for fighting which Saklatvala was barred from the United States because the agent of Morgan in the White House and state department wished to stiffle his voice in the interest of imperialist looting of the capitalists.

The American Federation of Labor begins its sessions next Monday. The reactionary bureaucrats who control the American Federation of Labor have in the past shown themselves as the agents of American imperialism. The labor unions of the United States should put them to the test. They should compel Green and his cohorts to go on record as to whether they will take their stand with the British Trade Union Congress in fighting imperialism or with Morgan's government in the fight to support and protect imperialism.

Every labor union that stands for the interest of labor should demand that the American Federation of Labor go on record on the question of the exclusion of Saklatvala. Pass resolutions, send telegrams to the A. F. of L. convention at Atlantic City demanding that it take its stand for the right of a spokesman of labor, a fighter against imperialism, to enter the United States.

Make the labor bureaucrats show their color.

For labor or for imperialism.

Open the gates for Saklatvala.

BRITISH LABOR PARTY REPELS COMMUNISTS

No Change in Rule, But Issue is Communism

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Sept. 30—On motion to rescing the order of the conservative labor party executive that no individual Communist be entitled to become a member of the local branches of the labor party, there were 321,000 votes cast for the motion against 2,870,000 opposed in the labor party congress at Liverpool yesterday.

This is heralded far and wide as a "crushing defeat" of the Communists, but while this is formally true, the essence of the contradiction between the action at Liverpool and the action of the British unions at Scarbourough, is that the labor party congress is not as representative of the real opinion of the British rank and file workers as the Trades Union Congress. These workers are no more opposed to the Communists today than they were three weeks ago.

Same Place They Started From.

The vote, however, altho a defeat, is but a repulse of an attack, which leaves the Communists in the same position as before, so far as reality is concerned, for there is no guarantee that they will now be expelled from local labor party branches that refused previously to carry out the same order.

The labor party leadership, preeminently social-democratic and bitterly opposed to the Communists, took great pains to show their hatred which some of them who got to the Scarborough congress had to stiffe behind their teeth. Cramp, Ramsay MacDonald and Ernest Bevin went the limit in verbal attacks.

Pollitt Says Something.

Gallagher, a Scotchman, and one of the approximately thirty Communists present representing trade unions, was continually interrupted. Harry Pollitt, a London Commuist, could not shame these delegates representing "labor" by his remark: "If this movement is wide enuf to go yatching with Lord Inchcape, it is wide enuf for anybody." He added that, "No barrier is strong enuf to keep the Communists out. We will get in one way or another."

This seems to be the truth, since he was there despite the rule barring Communists. Further, if the labor party executive tries to carry out the order they have previously feared to carry out, the labor unions will be the scene of some violent opposition to the Ramsay MacDonald leadership of the labor party.

5,000 UNEMPLOYED IN LONDON DEMONSTRATION DEMAND WINTER RELIEF

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Sept. 30—Banners with such inscriptions as "Work or Maintenance" and "Better be Fighting than Starving" were carried in a procession of 5,000 unemployed when they marched to the office of the West Ham board of guardians. The purpose of the demonstration was to secure for the unemployed additional allowances of coal during the winter. The crowd was addressed by speakers, including several local Communists. More than 200 mounted police were stationed along the route of the procession.

FLORSHEIM SHOE CO. ATTEMPTS TO CUT WAGE SCALE

Workers Resent Slash in Wages

Workers in various departments of the Florsheim Shoe Co., Adams and Clinton Sts., have been called together by the bosses in an attempt to slash wages from 10 to 25 per cent. The workers at these meetings have been addressed by the bosses and asked whether they agree to the proposition of taking a slash in wages. Several of the workers objected, showing the utter impossibility of living decently under the proposed cut.

The bosses then produced a sheat of statistics comparing the shoe workers' industry with that of unskilled labor and other lower-paid industries, showing that if these workers can live on what is paid them, why so can the shoe workers.

This attitude of the employers is resented by the workers. Their union heads are attempting to negotiate an agreement which will avoid a cut in wages.

The bosses have expressed willingness to enter arbitration. The workers on the other hand do not want to go into arbitration as they realize that any arbitrator that may se agreeable to the bosses is on the side of the bosses and their case will not get a thoro hearing.

The Boot and Shoe Workers' Union has control of the shop.

KELLOGG RULES AGAINST DEMAND FOR ELECTIONS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—Secretary of State Kellogg refuses to pay any attention to the Haitian demand for new elections, next January.

Borno, the present president of the Haitian government was placed into office by virtue of American machine guns. His opponent was forced to leave the island during the American occupation for refusing to do the bidding of the bankers of America.

The state department states that the constitution provides for elections on "even numbered years" and that it is up to Borno, whether an election will be held in 1926 or not. It expresses, it will be satisfied if Borno intends to remain two or more years longer. Borno refuses to hold an election of the legislative body, as this body elects the president and he fears that he would stand no chance of getting the presidency.

NEGOTIATIONS FOR BETRAYAL OF ANTHRACITE WAGE DEMANDS LOOM AFTER LEWIS MEETS "MEDIATORS"

SCRANTON, Pa., Sept. 30.—While four leaders of the progressive miners are being held in jail in the drive against the Progressive Miners' Committee by the combined forces of police, labor fakers and mine operators, preparation is being made to sell out the strike, by a conference between John L. Lewis and a committee elected by the Scranton chamber of commerce.

Alex Reid, secretary of the progressive miners' committee, Pat Toohey and August Valentine, strikers and local progressive leaders, together with a striker, Alex Vareck, who tried to offer bail and was arrested, remain in prison while the International Labor Defense is perfecting legal and financial measures to fight their cases and others arising in the terrorism being practiced against the militant miners in the anthracite.

Lewis Confers With Chamber of Commerce

On Tuesday, after a three hour conference between John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, and a committee of three elected by the Scranton chamber of commerce, it was intimated that negotiations would soon be resumed between the operators and the union officials.

What is in store for the striking miners may be seen from the character of the committee from the chamber of commerce and the chamber's complete endorsement of the arguments of the coal operators.

Fine Lot of Mediators

On Monday the chamber of commerce met and passed a resolution favoring mediation and arbitration in the present dispute. Then it appointed R. E. Weeks, president of the International Correspondence Schools; E. J. Lynett, owner of a local capitalist newspaper, and R. A. Amerman, a banker, as a committee to bring about renewal of negotiations between the miners and operators.

After warning the miners that "substitutes" would put anthracite out of the market if the strike was continued, and expressing approval of the operators' offer to submit their case to "impartial arbitrators," the chamber's resolution specifies that the committee it elects shall—"use its efforts in bringing about the adoption of a new working agreement containing a clause providing that in the future when differences arise that cannot be adjusted in joint conference or thru mediators, these differences shall be submitted to impartial and competent arbitrators."

Sell Out Ahead

This perfectly expresses the argument of the operators, and the fact that John L. Lewis held a "satisfactory" conference with them shows clearly that Lewis is laying the ground to accept the operators' proposals and betray the strikers by dropping the miners' demands for a wage increase in exchange for the check-off being granted by the bosses.

This view is strengthened by the outbreak of publicity thruout the anthracite capitalist press setting forth that there is no chance at all for a wage raise, but that the check-off is a demand wholly justified and "righteous altogether."

Try to Jail Opposition

The arrest of the progressive miners is a move on the part of the coal operators and the corrupt Lewis machine to prevent any serious opposition to the contemplated betrayal of the wage demands. However, the progressives declare that they cannot be silenced by prison or otherwise, and will raise a storm of protest against Lewis' sell out and Cappellini's playing the stool pigeon for capitalist jailors and mine owners. The militants will not permit a check-off settlement and will attempt to block any settlement that does not include the wage increases demanded by the miners when the strike began.

BRITISH FAKERS ATTACK SEAMEN STRIKE LEADER

Calling Hardy "Spy" Is Resented by Unionists

LONDON, Sept. 30.—Despite the reams of propaganda of the reactionary National Sailors' and Firemen's Union leaders, spread gladly by the capitalist press to defeat the "outlaw" strike of British seamen, the strike holds fast to British trade with invisible talons.

According to the "fakers" and the press the strike is "waning," but unfortunately a score of big passenger liners due to sail from England for the dominions are unable to sail at all, cargo steamer lines are wholly disorganized and cables tell that eighteen steamers are tied up in So. Africa and fifty-six in Australia.

Wilson Attacks George Hardy

Havelock Wilson, cabling long diatribes against the strikers from Canada and the United States outdoes all former slimness.

The Sunday Worker, reprints a quotation from a leaflet printed in red and distributed around the docks by the traitorus officials of the N. S. U. inciting the sailors as follows:

"Will you follow the lead of a spy tho helped the Germans sink our ships and send thousands of our brave lads to their death?"

The "spy" mentioned is George Hardy, and he is so termed by Havelock Wilson because, in 1918, Hardy as a member of the American I. W. W. was imprisoned under a sentence of a year and a day at Leavenworth, having been convicted by a war-time jury before Judge Landis of Chicago along with one hundred other I. W. W. on all sorts of fantastic charges under the infamous "espionage act," nothing being proven except that the I. W. W. had called some strikes for economic demands which, incidentally, were stated to be justified by government investigathing commissions.

Hardy Among "Outlaw" Strikers

After Hardy's prison term was up, he was elected as general secretary-treasurer of the I. W. W., but was finally deported to England, his native land, after concluding his term of office with the I. W. W. As one of the leaders of the "outlaw" strike of seamen protesting against Wilson's signing of an agreement with the ship owners cutting the seamen's wages $5 a month, Hardy has been made the center of the most despicable attack of Wilson and his tribe in England and Furuseth, Olander and company of the International Seamen's Union in America.

The caliber of Wilson's attack can well be judged by his statement to the capitalist press that "Not one of the reds' private characters can stand up for five minutes," and his launching of the most personal slanders upon opponents of his labor union policies. The Sunday Worker, organ of the progressive center of British unionism observes that "Wilson's union must be hard hit to stoop as low as this."

UNITED STATES GUNBOAT STEAMS UP CHINESE RIVER TO PROTECT INTERESTS OF AMERICAN BUSINESS

SHANGHAI, Sept. 30.—An American gunboat, the Palos, was ordered 1,400 miles up the Yangtze river to Ichang, where a river craft owned by the American-controlled Yangtze Rapids Navigation company, is reported by company officials to have been fired on by Chinese soldiers. No questions were asked, the gunboat being sent on the long voyage inland to act as convoy for the company's boat.

BORAH DEMANDS FRANCE CEASE WAR ON RIFFS

Stop Wars, Pay Debts, Ultimatum

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30—Every time a French soldier fires a shot at the Riff hillsides, or drops a bomb from an airplane on a Riff village, or discharges a piece of heavy artillery toward a Moorish trench, he is using up American loaned money, and is making less possible the payment of the French debt to the United States.

That is the position which the Borah-Norris group will take in discussing the Mellon-Coolidge agreement with Caillaux for the possible future satisfaction of America's $4,000,000,000 claim against the French national treasury.

Since France cannot pay the United States because she keeps an army of 700,000 men ready for imperialist raids, such as the present attack on the Riffian Moors, Borah and his associates propose that the American policy be one of forcing the French to pay their debts first and then maintain a huge army afterward if she can.

BOSTON C. OF C. ASKS SELECTION OF IMMIGRATION

To Pick Workers by Productivity Standard

BOSTON, Sept. 30—The chamber of commerce committee on immigration and Americanization submitted a recommendation for selective immigration. It proposes that immigration laws be devised to allow only those workers come to America who can guarantee the greatest productivity to capital.

There are thousands of idle workers in the coal fields. These can be drawn on for agricultural and other industries that show a shortage of unskilled labor and thus make up for the shortage caused by restricted immigration. The committee's report talks of shifting and selecting working class populations as if they were cattle.

Unemployment in N. Y.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30—The unemployment report for the city of New York states there was a decline in employment during August. Many workers are unemployed in the express transportation lines and in the building industry. A falling off in the demand for labor is noted in the metal trades and a large surplus of clerical help exists.

PARIS, Sept. 30.—After fighting unaided for many weeks, the Paris bank clerks have been forced to return to work without any substantial gain.

Some of the smaller banks have granted an increase of about $1.10 a month, and a coal allowance during the winter, but the big establishments have not only refused to grant an increase, but have victimized many of the strikers.

UNEMPLOYMENT ON THE INCREASE ALONG WITH BRITISH LIVING COST

LONDON, Sept. 30.—The percentage of unemployed among 11,500,000 British workpeople by the last return is 12.8 against 11.5 a month earlier and 10.8 a year ago.

Cost of living averages, as issued by the ministry of labor at the beginning of September, show retail prices 74 per cent above July, 1924, as compared with 73 per cent in August, 80 in January and 72 in September, 1924.

WORKERS DEMONSTRATE AT PIER AGAINST BRITISH DELEGATES WHO FAVOR BAN ON SAKLATVALA

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—As the steamship Caronia bearing some of the British delegation entered the Cunard pier a demonstration of New York workers demanding the admittance of Shapurji Saklatvala, Communist member of the British house of commons, greeted the arch-reactionary Col. Woodcock.

Police reserves were on hand and began to club the demonstrators, who carried banners denouncing the cowardly stand of the British delegation in not demanding the admittance of the British Communist delegate to the interparliamentary union congress to be held in Washington, D. C., October 7.

As Col. Woodcock, Sir Park Goff and other members of the British delegation came down the gangplank, the demonstrating workers surged forward to meet them with banners denouncing their reactionary stand. Mounted police then rode down upon the crowd that had gathered in their attempt to break up the demonstration.

The British delegates were quickly escorted by the police to a waiting automobile which hurriedly left the dock.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—A united front demonstration protesting the exclusion of Shapurji Saklatvala, Communist member of the British house of commons, the arrest of 199 Communists in Budapest, Hungary and the threatened execution of Mathias Rakosi will take place at Union Square, Monday, October 5, at 6 p. m., under the auspices of the International Labor Defense Council. The Workers Party will also participate.

WARREN, Ohio, Sept. 30.—The workers of Warren, Ohio, will raise their voices in protesting against the exclusion of Shapurji Saklatvala from the United States at the Hippodrome Hall, (3rd floor), Sunday, October 4, at 2 p. m. This protest meeting has been arranged by the Protest Committee in Behalf of Saklatvala.

Civil Liberties Protest.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—In a speech made by Elizabeth Curley Flynn at the Town Hall meeting of the American Civil Liberties Union held as a protest against the exclusion of Shapurji Saklatvala, Communist member of the British house of commons, she declared the willingness of the American Civil Liberties Union to assist Saklatvala in his fight if he decides to enter America. On behalf of the Civil Liberties Union, she said that every possible means of assistance would be given the Hindu Communist if he desired to fight the decision of Secretary of State Kellogg.

Frank P. Walsh said that the denial of admittance to Saklatvala was a "hypocritial, sneaking effort to carry out the policy of the British empire." He called the exclusion an assault on American traditions in behalf of the greatest criminal organization in the world—the British empire, which is built upon the murder of innocent women and terrorism. Centuries ago Britain could support herself, but now she has to obtain markets for her goods. The white man's burden is a myth. In India, Egypt, Ireland and elsewhere, murders take place to assure a market for British goods. The British empire is tottering. The balance of power is against her. The value of her money has gone down. Two per cent of all the males in Britain are living on doles. Ten per cent of all the people in Britain are now living in poverty.

Countries Supported by U. S. Compete.

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., Sept. 30.—The transactions following the auto transportation contests in which many countries participated, including America, bring out a peculiar fact of international financial relations regarding America. The American auto companies refused to grant credit to Russia and consequently sold very few cars. Other countries granting credit sold many cars to the various Russian state trusts. It is pointed out that the very countries who advanced credit to Russia are themselves being supported by loans from the U. S.

French Suspicious of New Flotation; Internal Loan Fails

PARIS, Sept. 30.—The French treasury was forced to postpone the closing time of the present internal loan being floated among the population. The interest is lower than on previous internal loans and the peasants, who are the biggest investors look with suspicion on it in view of heavy losses on previous government ventures.

The government expected to obtain $1,500,000,000, but succeeded in getting only $300,000,000. This internal credit collapse is not expected to have a very healthy effect on France's efforts to secure terms abroad.

ASSASSIN STORY CIRCULATED TO BULLY WORKERS

"Plot" Against King to Intimidate Congress

LONDON, Sept. 30.—The so-called "plot" to assassinate King George being played up by the press and laid to the door of Communists, is looked upon in working class circles here as amounting to a plot on the part of the government to influence the delegates to the labor party conference in Liverpool whose decision is being made whether to allow the Communists to enter the labor party.

The tories are greatly concerned over the "swing to the left" now being performed by the workers of Britain and is very much frightened about the resolution against imperialism passed by the Scarborough Trades Union Congress. Very few are fooled by the story, everyone having a distinct recollection of several "Zinoviev letters" similarly played up.

The plot is so obviously a publicity stunt that even Sir Joynson Hicks, the reactionary home minister, "hesitates to accuse the Communists of complicity, and as much as says he doubts Scotland Yard" and the London Times' story that Communist agents are being sent from Berlin and Moscow to assassinate the king. The question is being asked: "What difference does King George make?"

Leningrad Workers Welcome Hungarian Emigres to Russia

LENINGRAD, (By Mail.)—The steamer Preussen brot twenty-three Hungarian emigres and their families to Leningrad on August 25. Representatives of the Communist Party of Russia and the International Red Aid welcomed them to Soviet Russia. All of the comrades had been sentenced from 12 years to life in Hungarian prisons with the exception of one who was sentenced to five.

After they have seen Leningrad, they are to go to Moscow, where the International Red Aid has arranged quarters for them and their families.

WAR MEMOIRS OF LORD GREY ARE REVEALING

Pres. Wilson Decided for Allies in 1916

NEW YORK, Sept. 30. — Viscount Grey, foreign minister in Premier Asquith's war cabinet, has just published his memoirs in which he declares that President Wilson, as early as 1916 had decided to join the war on the side of the allies.

Lord Grey writes that in February of 1916, Col. E. M. House, the president's confidential spokesman, submitted a memorandum to Lord Grey, later approved by Wilson, which pledged America's support to the allies. Lord Grey also "absolves the kaiser of guilt for beginning the war."

He said Europe was an armed camp and war was inevitable in 1914. The same thing, he observes, is true today. It will be recalled that pre-war documents gleaned from various European archives held Lord Grey as responsible for the war as anyone.

FRENCH CLIQUE AND AMERICAN BANKERS AGREE

Dispute Only Interest Terms Now

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—Finance Minister Caillaux of the French debt commission meeting in Washington has agreed to pay the sum demanded by the American bankers. In his desperation as to the terms of the payments, he threatened to quit the parley. This attempt is looked upon by all as an attempt to bargain with Aemrican capitalists for more lenient terms and is not taken seriously.

Secretary of the Treasury Mellon insists upon American bankers getting the same consideration from French imperialists that England received. France claims she cannot accede to the demands of the American capitalists.

Increase Offer

Caillaux now offers the American commission $30,000,000 a year to start with and $100,000,000 annually after the twentieth year. He also demands a safety clause in the pact by means of which negotiations can be reopened to cut the annual sum in case of a crisis in France.

The representative of the American bankers, Mellon, demands $40,000,000 annually for the first five years and $130,000,000 annually for the next sixty-two years.

Many political observers around Washington realize that a failure of French capitalism to get satisfactory terms at Washington will mean a failure in floating the French government loan now being attempted by Wall Street bankers. Failure to get money will mean the end of imperialist policy for France. She is badly in need of finances to take care of the gigantic expenditures on the military campaigns she is making in Morocco and Syria. The viewpoint of observers is that Caillaux will not be allowed to quit, but that the American bankers will meet the French commission half way in order to make France safe for the capitalist class.

Bankers' Servants in Confab.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 30.—Since the declaration of the French imperialist financial commission to bolt from the debt negotiations, President Coolidge has summoned a number of republican party leaders into a conference.

Curtis, the republican party leader in congress, was met by a delegation of the French imperialists with a view to arranging more lenient terms. He then went to the banker satellite, Coolidge at the White House and had a conference on the debt negotiations.

William E. Borah, chairman of the senate foreign relations committee, was then called into a secret meeting in the White House. The results of these conferences are undoubtedly forerunners of the capitalist lackeys at Washington for the acceptance of the new offer made by Caillaux in the desperate attempt to get another lease of life for imperialist France.

German Government Persecution Goes on in Spite of Amnesty

BERLIN, Sept. 30.—In spite of the amnesty that the German working class forced the government to grant several hundred workers that had been jailed, persecution of workers in Germany still continues.

During the month of August, 25 trial took place resulting in 36 workers getting a total of 38 years of penal servitude, 6 years and 9 months of fortress, 30 years and 11 months of prison, two 380 mark fines and 18 years loss of civil rights.

Legal proceedings were also started against 155 workers. Ten revolutionary workers were arrested and are held in jail.

League of Nations Has Again Adjourned After Hatching 3 Conferences

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, flocks of bourgeois statesmen, including 17 foreign ministers, three prime ministers and a score of plenipotentiaries, wing their way back to their capitalist homelands, following the adjournment of the sixth assembly of the league of nations.

These capitalist birds of prey, who have kept warm the "Black Capitalist International" in the friendly atmosphere of Geneva, Switzerland, have scored their usual successes. They have hatched out three more conferences, or materially advanced the hatching process, as follows:

FIRST:—It has brought about an agreement on the conditions under which a disarmament conference can be held and has ordered technical preparation to be made for such a conference.

SECOND:—It has agreed that a conference to study the economic maladies of the world which might lead to war should be held, and has ordered the council to make an essential study for such a conference.

THIRD:—It has ordered commencement of the preliminary work essential to a conference for the control of the private manufacture of arms.

But while the disarmament joke was being seriously considered at Geneva, the greatest British military maneuvers since 1913 were being held, on Engisih soil, "culminating with the successful defense of London." Counterparts of these British war preparations are going on in every capitalist country, while in the United States the question of air warfare is the biggest piece of kept press news. Mustapha Kemal Pasha, head of New Turkey, in stating his position on the failure of the league of nations to settle the Mosul oil dispute, declared, "Our army is ready and its morale is excellent."

Even imperialist nations are not unwilling that investigations be made into economic maladies that lead to war. Such investigations, when made by defenders of capitalist economics, are never dangerous to capitalist rule. Information that might enlighten the workers, and educate them as to the real causes of war, can easily be suppressed or cleverly soft-pedalled. Labor can get real information about the economic maladies leading to war by reading the DAILY WORKER and other Communist literature. But the league of nations has not yet ordered an investigation. It has merely ordered an investigation of the advisibility of making such an investigation.

• • • •

The private manufacture of arms is a question of keen interest to the great capitalist nations. If they do not manufacture all arms and munitions themselves, they are at least anxious to control it. Arms in the hands of oppressed workers and farmers, or subject peoples, is a dangerous proposition. British and French imperialists are very much worried about the arms sent to the Riffians, to the Chinese and to the Syrians who are in open war against them. They feel it an invaluable aid to them if they can place an embargo on munitions going to these discontented peoples. The solution offered is "the control of the private manufacture of arms." Upon this issue they will get busy.

• • • •

But not one of these conferences will bring peace to Europe and the world, nor solve any of the contradictions within the capitalist social system. In fact, they will only serve to aggravate them. Which prompts one observer at Geneva to report that it wasn't what was done in the open sessions of the league that counted, bu what was accomplished in the secret gatherings held behind closed doors between the capitalist diplomats in the hotels Bergues, Beaurivage and Monopole. But secret diplomacy here only lived up to its old pre-war traditions, hatching those alliances and building those blocs among the imperialist nations that will lead to another war just as surely as the last world conflict broke on August 4, 1914.

Turk Communists Get Long Jail Terms at Provocateur's Behest

ANGORA, Turkey, Sept. 30. — The Turkish bourgeoisie is carrying on an unrelenting struggle against the Communists of Turkey. In a trial of 16 Communists before the court of independence at Angora, prison sentences of 7, 10 and 15 years were passed. Those convicted had been charged with the publication of a May Day leaflet, and for co-operation with the commission for the elaboration of labor legislation of the Workers' Association.

Try to Corrupt Workers.

The Turkish bourgeoisie is attempting to corrupt the workers' movement in Turkey at its start. The ruling People's Party, following the style of the czarist agent, Subatov, who, under the czarist instructoins, formed "workers' organizations," has started to do the same stunt. The chairman of the People's Party in Constantinople is a member of the Workers' Association and also a spy in the government service. Every Communist spotted in the Workers' Association is pointed out to the government and immediately arrested.

In the trial of the 16 Communists he played an important part. Every attempt possible is made by the People's Party to clean out the radical elements from the Workers' Association by jailing them and thus make it a movement where government spies can control it and use it as a weapon against the struggles of radical workers.

Suppress Communist Papers.

Following a general strike which occurred in the latter part of 1924, numerous arrests took place, and printing of all Communist papers was prohibited by the ruling People's Party government.

FRENCH CONSOLE SELVES IN RIFF WAR WITH HOPES

Imagination Increased by Worry

FEZ, French Morocco, Sept. 30.—The French are trying to console themselves with statements that the Riffians will be unable to carry on the war during the rainy season. They expect the Riffs to desert the cause of Abd-el-Krim fighting for the independence of Morocco, in order to do their fall plowing and planting.

The war in Morocco has had the French worried for a long time. During their war with the Beni Zerouals last year they succeeded in crushing the tribesmen with a few battalions, now they are unable to succeed with whole divisions of French troops, supplemented by Spanish troops and [illegible] mercenaries.

Riffs Fight Stubbornly.

Despite the pillaging and burning of crops and villages and the possible hunger to be faced by the Riffian tribesmen, Abd-el-Krim has been able to keep his forces intact. The French have in their strugle with the Riffs encountered an attitude so stubbornly [illegible] that it is doubtful if she will ever gain a complete victory in Morocco. If she succeeds in crushing the present rebellion of the Riffs, she realizes she must keep a tremendous number of soldiers under arms in Morocco.

France has attempted to show that the native tribesmen have fought desperately to break thru Riffian lines to return to their homes, but one thing is noticeable, the tribesmen leave their native soil en masse whenever the French start to occupy it and refuse to go back and till the soil despite all promises and assurances offered by the henchmen of French imperialism.

The French and Spanish troops are concentrating for a drive against Abd-el-Krim before the winter season sets in as they realize that the territory will be impassable for French and Spanish troops. Preparations are being made for more bombing planes on the part of the two imperialist powers.

Fear Riff Winter Drive.

The French generals fear that the Riffs will be able to capture many guns and cannon in their offensive [illegible]. Their only consolation is the fact that Abd-el-Krim's men will have to go back to their soil and [illegible] in order to have food for the coming year. The bay of Alhucemas is blockaded by Spanish warships so that no aid may arrive to the Riffs from other lands.

Bombing Plane Missing.

One of the Goliath bombing planes that has been dropping bombs on [illegible] has not returned to its flying field. The squadron encountered a fog after it had completed its day of devastation and the leaders did not notice the absence of the missing plane until the landing at Fez. The fear is that it may have crashed into the mountain peaks. The plane carried fuel for nine hours, having a crew of four men and an officer provisioned for two days. The French hope it has landed back of Spanish lines as they would have short shrift if the Riffs were to spot them.

Drive Against Adjir.

MELLILA, Spanish Morocco, Sept. 30.—An intensive drive by the Spanish foreign legion is under way against Adjir, the capital of the Moroccan chieftain, Ad-el-Krim. After a terrific military preparation by land and sea the Spanish troops have begun their advance.

Moroccans in Fighting Mood.

The Moroccans are in a fighting frenzy and have inflicted severe losses on the Spaniards. The Riffs are pressing the Spanish troops at Tizza Aza, a point southeast of Adjir. Airplanes have been dispatched by the Spanish commanders to disperse the Riffian [illegible].

The number of sick has been increasing among the Spanish troops due to lack of water and the change in climate. The sick rolls now number [illegible].

INTERNATIONAL RED AID CALLS ON WORLD'S WORKERS TO PROTEST PERSECUTION OF GREEK TOILERS

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., Sept. 30.—In a stirring appeal made by the International Red Aid for working class action against the "radical" and "republican" government of Greece, the persecution of Greek workers is revealed. In spite of the election promises of the Pangalos government that it will stop the persecution of workers in Greece, persecution continues unabated.

The following appeal of the International Red Aid is addressed to the workers of the world:

To the Workers and Peasants of All Countries:

The government of General Pangalos seized power in Greece by means of a military coup d'etat, June 15. It promised to lighten the condition of the working class and peasantry, to stop the persecution of the Communist Party, and amnestize the political prisoners. By means of these promises, it attempted to gain the sympathy of the popular masses of Greece. But it very soon came to light, that under cover of the ultra-radical phrases the new government was in fact creating a military fascist dictatorship.

The Pangalos government swiftly took the well-worn road of the policy of terror and persecution which in the long run was directed to the final destruction of the labor movement, and which is paving the way to the restoration of the monarchy.

Over 400 members and sympathizers are imprisoned in Greecian prisons, apart from this, over 250 victims of political persecutions have been banished to the small islands of the Aegian Sea. All of the Central Committee of the Communist Party, of the Central Committee of the Communist Youth, the Central Committee of the local International Red Aid, editors of the labor newspapers and many active workers of the trade union movement. Not only the leaders, but the worker and peasant masses undergo harsh persecution. In Larissa, Tricole, Livadia and in many other parts of Thessaly many skirmishes have taken place in which blood was shed and numerous arrests were made among the poor peasants and the late participators in the war for the confiscation of the big Greecian landowners' land in favor of the poorer peasants.

In compliance to the wishes of American capital, the Pangalos government is throwing onto the streets all those refugees from Little Asia who fled to Greece. Eighteen soldiers were sentenced to from 1½ to 10 years each by the court martial in Salonica for merely reading the Communist newspaper Risospastio. Extraordinary strong is the governmental terror in those regions annexed to Greece after the war—Macedonia and Thracia. Court martials prevail there, and the labor press has no chance of gaining a foothold there. All struggle for the freedom of Macedonia and Thrace is declared treason and is heavily punished and persecuted.

Nine comrades were sentenced in July to a total of 132 years' penal servitude in Salonica for their participation in the Macedonian movement for freedom.

Trials and court martials follow one another with rapidity. Many members of the Greecian Communist Party were sentenced on August 3, to many years of imprisonment. The newspaper Risospastio, which had defended the political prisoners against the torture and foul attitude displayed against them, met with a similar fate at its trial which ended on the 8th of August.

At the present time, the Pangalos government is finishing the mock political trial, which commenced on the 28th of August, of those Communists accused of treason. Thirty-two prisoners stand before the bar. Among these are the general secretary of the Greecian Communist Party, Comrade Maximos, other members of the Central Committee, and active members of the Communist movement. Their "treason" consists in their struggle against the policy of national oppression in Macedonia and in Thrace, and for their national freedom. The trial is taking place before a court martial, and a few of the accused are threatened with death sentences.

Workers and peasants of the world!

In the southern Balkan peninsula, the bourgeois government, under the cloak of democratic demagogy, and attempting to deceive the popular masses by means of faithless promises, is now going over to the methods of fierce vengeance against the labor and peasant movement. The Greecian government is following in the footsteps of the Roumanian Sigurantsi, and of Zankov's "justice."

The last stronghold of the legal labor movement in the Balkans threatens to fall under the blows of reaction, striving to disorganize the laboring masses. Reaction is closing its ranks by means of its terroristic policy.

Comrades!

Protest against the terroristic regime of the Greek fascisti!

Down with mock political trials!

No more death sentences!

Long live the amnesty of political prisoners!

Long live the international solidarity of labor!—Executive Committee, International Red Aid.

CLASS JUSTICE SHOWS LEECHES STICK TOGETHER

Embezzler and Picket Treated Differently

By REGINA MYROSKI.

MOUNDSVILLE, W. Va., Sept. 30.—Occasionally, we find the capitalist courts meting out "justice" to the so-called higher (?) class of society—the parasites. Not that they want to, no indeed! But they must at least go thru the pretense to save their face and so give opportunity to the morons, half-wits, etc., for saying the rich man and the poor man is equal in the sight of the law. Such a case occurred in this section during the September term of court.

At the beginning of summer startling revelations were made at the Bank of Benwood, Benwood, W. Va., that the cashier, William S. Leach, and the assistant cashier, Joe Ward, had been defrauding the bank of funds for a number of years. The assistant cashier fled across the continent and was finally arrested in California and brot back, while Leach also was put under arrest. The case caused a great deal of sensation and thru the whole summer the capitalist press devoted columns to these two thieves until they were in a fair way of becoming immortalized.

Much Fuss Over Parasite.

Leach was tried during the week of September 21. There were fourteen indictments against him. He pled guilty and so was tried on only one, for giving false statements to the state banking commission in 1920 or 1921. The other indictments were annulled. When sentence was to be passed upon him, his attorney pleaded in the court to make it as lenient as possible, saying Leach was an old man (43), is suffering considerably because he is already ostracised from his friends, his home is "broken up," and the rest of the hokum resorted to by the parasites when they find themselves in a tight place.

Judge Morris, of the Marshall county court, deemed it best not to appear too friendly and so gave Leach the maximum sentence, only 10 years.

Stole Money of Workers.

Only 10 years for defrauding the bank of three-quarter of a million dollars, money that was deposited there by orphans and widows of miners who had been killed in the great mine disaster at the Hitchman mine, McMechen, W. Va., a year ago last April!

And this is not all. There is hope that he will be either pardoned, paroled, or upon good behavior his sentence will last only six or seven years. And, also, it is expected that he will get one of the "soft" jobs in the prison, being treated as an unwilling guest who is forced to do something to while away the time. In fact, a "gentleman" crook—treated as a gentleman.

[illegible] the so-called "better" class are shedding tears at this sad fate of their hero who was so unwise as to make a slip—for is not robbing orphans and widows a heroic deed in the eyes of the capitalists?

Who Weeps For the Worker?

Only 10 years for robbing widows and orphans! And, yet, during the May, 1925 term of court, a mine strike picketer, because he was fighting for his rights and for living wages also received 10 years in the state prison! But his case was not attended by middle class sympathy, columns of newspaper sympathy, respectful treatment, and so on.

Leach will be out one of these days, and soon. True, there are still a number of indictments that could be entered against him besides the fourteen but, as one of the local capitalist presses stated, the officers of the "law" will feel in honor beund not to molest Leach any further.

THE 'MAJAH' TRIES IT ON TOLEDO, OHIO

Seems Irritated at Pesky Communists

By BRUCE T. SMITH
(Special to The Daily Worker)

TOLEDO, O., Sept. 29.—If I should have held the slightest fear that the DAILY WORKER in past issues had misrepresented the faker president of the pressmen's union, "Major" Geo. L. Berry it was entirely dissipated after having had the opportunity of hearing George explain, or rather defend himself, before a rather small audience at Labor Temple Auditorium, Friday evening Sept. 26.

The major's attitude was purely that of defense; somebody has evidently cornered him on tactics, it would seem.

Consequently his typical bourgeois mind, his opportunism, his egotism, his pay-triotism, his smug satisfaction with things as they are, was brot out clear and distinct and was expressed with grace and apparent sincerity.

The Naughty Red.

All this in spite of the fact that a mischevious Communist down on the street corner had handed him a copy of the DAILY WORKER of back date, in fact a bundle had been kept in store for this very occasion. This little incident had sent the major into a paroxysm of rage which showed conclusively that the merest mention of Communism was to kick the major's coon-dog.

By the way he diverted once in his talk from his smug and affectionate attitude. That was when he paid his respects to the Communist movement, he became at this juncture vehement, vitrolic, and unmistakably exasperated. And if it is true, "Whom the gods wish to destroy they first make mad," the major is doomed for destruction.

Don't Let it Worry You, George.

He finished his little tirade with an attempt to be cute. He said that if the Communists ever said any good thing about him he would have a committee appointed to look him over to to see what had happened to him. But I don't think he will need a committee for a long time.

Oh, yes! "Major" Berry had addressed the Toledo commerce club, also the rotarians during the day, and he emphasized that they had received him with open arms, which was undoubtedly a fact, also unmistakeably evidence of his class collaboration character.

Home guards who had went into ecstasy over how the "major" had honor heaped upon him by his craft, honoring him with the presidency for nineteen years, were just a little shocked when the "major" explained what a heck of a time he had had hanging on to his job down thru those years. If the "major" is typical of old-line labor leaders, which he undoubtedly is, then "labor faker" is the proper pronounciation of their title.

Boston Store Gives Employes Meal for Christmas Overtime

(Worker Correspondent)

I'll try to describe the exploitation in the Boston Store. Beginning two weeks before Thanksgiving the administration will start to hire extra help, to be able to manage the holiday rush and beginning with December 15 all the employes will have to put in officially ½ hour more daily, without pay, as the store will close at 6 o'clock instead of 5.30. And commencing December 16th till December 24th they'll have to work officially till 9 o'clock in the evening, in reality till 11 o'clock, getting paid for this overtime work of 3½ to 5½ hours with a meal ticket calling for a supper worth 65c. but actually worth 25c. These meals are prepared out of the remmants of the thanksgiving sale: turkeys, chickens, etc.

Everyone works harder, naturally because of the daily rush, and the holiday shopping crowds, but, especially is this true of the extra help who put forth all possible efforts to be noticed by the bosses in hopes of retaining their jobs after Christmas eve.

These conditions have existed in the Boston Store always, still the employes have not made a real effort to change them. Let's hope that this year they will take advantage of the Christmas season and turn it into a means for bettering their conditions instead of letting the bosses use it as a whip to beat them into greater submission. The best time to organize and present demands to the owners for better wages and working conditions is just before the Christmas rush.

LABOR PRODUCTIVITY ASSURES WORLD POWER OF WALL STREET

By LELAND OLDS
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

The tremendous productive power of American labor when applied to a wealth of national resources, supplies the energy back of the bid of U. S. capitalists for world power. The $1,000,000,000 in loans to foreign countries which are expected to follow the funding of the French debt will be produced by American labor just as the $20,000,000 already invested overseas really represents products of American labor already shipped abroad.

The rise to power which has enabled U. S. capital to challenge and surpass British capital as the center of world empire is pictured in comparative figures of population, wealth and production compiled by Joseph Walker & Sons of New York. These figures show that in the last 30 years while the population of the United States was increasing by 102 per cent the value of manufacturing production increased by approximately 600 per cent. Making allowance for price increases in the period this still involves an increase of nearly 300 per cent in the volume of factory production. It means an increase of at least 70 per cent in the productivity of the average industrial worker.

The Walker figures for population, wealth and production in 1885 and 1924 are:

Population	56,000,000	113,000,000
Wealth	$55,000,000,000	$330,000,000,000
Production, Agriculture.
Cotton, bales	6,000,000	13,160,000
Wheat, bushels	500,000,000	870,000,000
Corn, bushels	2,000,000,000	2,440,000,000
Farm, products	$ 2,300,000,000	$ 9,840,000,000
Production, Mines.
Copper, tons	75,000	890,000
Lake iron ore, tons	2,500,000	45,000,000
Coal, tons	100,000,000	570,000,00
Petroleum, gals.	1,000,000,000	30,000,000,000
Manufacture.
Number of workers	2,500,000	8,050,000
Value of products	$ 7,500,000,000	$ 52,350,000,000
Pig iron, tons	4,000,000	31,300,000
Steel, tons	1,700,000	37,600,000
Cotton, value	$ 280,000,000	$ 1,500,000,000

These figures show how completely the new power of U. S. financiers is based on huge development of mine and factory production. Agriculture's contribution was an increase of 312 per cent in total value of products. Increases in important farm products include 219 per cent in the number of bales of cotton and only 74 per cent and 22 per cent respectively in bushels of wheat and corn. Taking into account price changes agricultural production has only just kept pace with the growth of population, with important food staples falling behind.

Production of the country's miners is a different story. The generation chalked up a gain of 1,086 per cent in copper production, of 1,700 per cent in iron ore, of 470 per cent in coal and 2,900 per cent in petroleum. While industrial workers turned out 706 per cent more pig iron, 2,116 per cent more steel and 552 per cent more cotton mill products.

Prior to the war the farmers were required to pour their excess products overseas to pay the interest on capital borrowed by captains of industry for the development of their mines and factories. Since the outbreak of the war the industrial workers have been called on to add their surplus production to the stream. The increased volume not only cancelled the mortgage which Europe held over American capitalism but rendered European capitalism dependent. And American financiers, whether in the French debt negotiations or in private financing operations, will hold the productivity of American industrial labor as a trump card in extending their power.

RAGING TORRENT DESTROYS CROPS ABOUT SHANTUNG

2,000,000 Chinese Left Without Food

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PEKIN, Sept. 30.—A second break in the Yellow River dyke in the province of Shantung, has resulted in a flood much worse than the one experienced in 1887. The flooded area now covered by water is equal in size to the size of the state of Delaware, and is being enlarged hourly by the water that is rushing southward. A part of the water is going down the Grand canal and on to the Yangtze, but the greater portion is covering the land like a blanket.

Hundreds Drowned.

It is estimated that 2,000,000 people and 2,000 towns and villages have been affected. Hundreds have been drowned and the crops are ruined.

The first break caused by the swollen rivers of the Yellow River submerged 400 square miles, swept everything in its path and inundated the region to a depth of fifteen feet.

Wait Till It Subsides.

The tremendous pressure of the water forced the second break. It is impossible to repair the walls until the raging torrent subsides. It is feared that when the river subsides it will be found to follow the original course.

UNIONS FIGHT EACH OTHER; BOSSES JOYFUL

"Brotherhoods" Show Very Little of It

CLEVELAND, Sept. 30. — [illegible] layoffs of engine service men as a result of the speeding up tactics of railroad management and motor competition threaten the close relations between the two big engine service brotherhoods that have existed ever since 1912. A ballot is being taken by divisions of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers on the abrogation of the Chicago joint agreement. This agreement regulates the job relations between members of the engineers' and firemen's organizations.

Craft Leaders Unable to Agree.

After months of fruitless negotiations, committees representing the two unions have been unable to agree on a revision of the Chicago agreement. The firemen in their recent Detroit convention backed up their committee in requesting certain concessions from the engineers. The engineers' committee soon after decided to ask the membership to determine whether to continue negotiations or end the pact.

If the latter proposition carries the engine service brotherhoods will return to the chaotic conditions which existed prior to the joint agreement when unfriendly competition was the order of the day. The firemen during that period added the words "and enginemen" to their official title to show that they meant to make their order include all men in the engine cab.

Fight One Another Instead of Bosses.

The present difference hinges on technical mileage and seniority rights. With many engine service men being thrown out of jobs these questions are unusually acute and [illegible] the limitation of monthly mileage allowed to any one man and the exercise of the engineer's seniority right to take over a fireman's job in case of a layoff.

The announcement of the balloting is made in the October issue of the Locomotive Engineers' Journal.

LANTSUTSKY IS GIVEN 3 YEAR JAIL SENTENCE

Lodz Court Sentences Communist

WARSAW, (By Mail.)—Stanislaus Lantsutsky, former Communist member of the Polish sejm, was sentenced to three years' imprisonment following the so-called trial at a court in Lodz. At the trial, Comrade Lantsutsky declared that his trial was not a question of justice, but was an attempt of the Polish bourgeoisie to crush the working class movement in Poland.

To be Tried Again.

Comrade Lansutsky was tried again in Warsaw on Sept. 15. He was tried for sending an open letter in November, 1922, to the then Premier Novak. In this letter he called attention of the premier to the violations of the election laws and compared them to those practiced in similar dictatorships.

Democracy a Lie.

"Under your government, Polish elections will be henceforth identical thruout the world with shameless fraud and violation of the rights of large sections of the population of Poland. They can be compared with the wild excesses of elections in Hungary and Roumania," stated Lantsutsky in the letter for which he is ostensibly being tried. "The present elections have shown to the masses that in a bourgeois state such as the Polish republic the freedom of the subject is an exceptional privilege of the landowner-capitalist clique and its lackeys. Bourgeois democracy is nothing but a lie, a vile travesty, under cover of which the proletariat suffers czarist oppression."

"The congress of the General Trade Union Federation of Norway which represents the whole Norwegian working class, expresses its fury and its disgust against the shameful murder of our Polish comrades, Botwin, Hibner, Rutkovsky and Knievsky and demands that the trial against Lantsutsky be stopped and our comrades released from prison."

ENTHUSIASM OVER REORGANIZATION AMONG LITHUANIANS OF DIST. No. 8; COAL MINER RELATES EXPERIENCES

By NELLIE KATILUS.

The Lithuanian section of District 8, at its conference held Sunday, July 26, 1925, in Chicago, was greatly enthused over the reorganization of the party.

After a lengthy report on the reorganization and its future as a Bolshevized and centralized revolutionary party, Comrade Juskauskas, a coal miner from West Frankfort, Illinois, told how a shop nucleus works in coal mining region in Southern Illinois. He said that before the organization of the shop nucleus, they had doubts as to the possible success of the work, but after the short period of the shop nucleus in effect, they have found out that party work is carried out much more effectively than before.

He pointed out, that miners who were hard to draw into the party are now attracted by the work done by a centralized body and are coming into the party. And the enemies recognize that we are a growing power. He said that the sooner the party is reorganized on the shop nuclei basis, the sooner its Communist work will be more effective and the growth of the party assured.

Then delegate after delegate took the floor and pointed out the benefits our party will derive from reorganization. Altho it was admitted that we shall have some difficulties, but once the party is reorganized on the shop nuclei basis and centralized, it will draw all the active and fighting elements of the working class into it.

It is especially hopeful for foreign-born workers who have so many labor and semi-labor organizations and for whom it is hard to distinguish the differences between the party and other labor organizations. It was repeatedly pointed by delegates that after the party is reorganized, they will easily see that the centralized and Bolshevized party is the vanguard of the working class in its struggles for its immediate demands and for the final task.

There was also a healthy discussion on how to best reorganize the eighth district. The conference was enthusiastic and unanimous on every important question. There were 29 regular delegates from the district.

ANTI-SOVIET WAR COST 70 MILLION ROUMANIA CLAIMS

U. S. Envoy Advised Attack on Bessarabia

GENEVA, Sept. 30.—The Roumanian debt funding commission is coming over here with a claim against the United States for $70,000,000. They are going to say that Oscar Crosby, official American representative to Roumania, joined the allies in ordering Roumania to attack the Bolshevik army in Bessarabia in December, 1917. The Roumanian government had sent $70,000,000 in gold to Moscow for safe keeping and the attack on the Bolsheviks lost them their chances of getting it back.

The U. S. state department will very likely disclaim the action of Crosby and, in any case, will point out that Roumania occupied Bessarabia and kept it. Bessarabia is worth considerably more than $70,000,000.

The Roumanian commission will leave for Washington Oct. 10. The Bratiano dictatorship of the Boyar country wants to borrow $100,000,000 in New York. The three Bratiano brothers who rule the country are also its chief bankers. They need money for their banks and they have been informed that they can't have any from Wall Street until they worry about the $45,000,000 they already owe. So they are sending a commission to talk it over with Mellon.

S. L. P. Miss-Information!

To the DAILY WORKER:—I had occasion to hear a S. L. P. speaker at Bug-House Square, a short time ago, ooze his venom upon the Workers Party and the Communist movement a while. His chief criticism was of the dictatorship of the proletariat.

According to the speaker, the proletarian state does not need any form of dictatorship as there would be no one to dictate to (?). The question arising from such a menshevik argumentation would be: Does the Communist movement believe in dictatorship as a thing in itself, or as a means to an end?

I have a pamphlet published by the S. L. P., "Historical Materialism," a part of Engle's "Socialism, Utopian and Scientific," in which it is clearly shown that every epoch is the dictatorship of a dominating class, that economic domination of a class means domination of every human activity by that class and it is very essential that during a proletarian revolution or during the process of liquidation of the capitalist order the dictatorship of the proletariat be enforced. The success of the revolution would depend upon its ability to liquidate the capitalist order until such time when a Communist state has been established in the literal meaning of the word.

Again this question is clearly expounded in the Communist Manifesto, in the following words: "The proletariat will use its political supremacy to wrest by degrees all capital from the bourgeoisie, to centralize all instruments of production in the hands of the state, i. e. of the proletariat organized as the ruling class." The above words are simple enuf to be understood and it is high time that the S. L. P. forgets its hair-splitting controversies.—John Lucas.

Correction by Robert Minor.

Editor, DAILY WORKER:—In the issue of the DAILY WORKER of Thursday, Sept. 24, my article on "Bolshevik Reorganization" becomes a victim of a slip of the printer's hand. Ordinarily typographical errors, which are inevitable in a daily newspaper, have to be endured with no space wasted in correction. But in this case the misplacing of five lines of type happens to produce the following embarassing statement:

"The development of history in this period of the decay of capitalist organization, lack of political franchise, etc.) led to a different basis of organization. Workers could not hold meetings in public halls; yet the same workers were drawn to 'democratic' institutions and of the proletarian revolution," etc., etc.

Several comrades have asked me "what the hell this means." To avoid further misunderstanding it is necessary to explain that the above paragraph as printed contains five lines of type that belonged in an earlier paragraph. Correctly the text should be:

"Different political conditions in which the Russian party developed (the prohibition of all working class organization, lack of political franchise, etc.) led to a different basis of organization. Workers could not hold meetings in public halls; yet the same workers were of necessity drawn together every day in the factory at their employment. The formation of the working class revolutionary party in Russia inevitably took the outline of the workshop as the outline of the basic unit of the party—the shop nucleus.

"Necessity had brought the Russian party to the best type of organization, while the rest of the parties lagged behind with an inferior form.

The development of history in this period of the decay of capitalist 'democratic' institutions and of the proletarian revolution, has created in all industrial countries of the world the essential conditions which now compel the reorganization of all sections of the revolutionary party in the higher form, on the basis of shop nuclei."—Robert Minor.

I. W. A. OPENING CAMPAIGN FOR NEEDY CHINESE

Civil War and Famine Scourges Nation

The International Workers' Aid now located at 1553 W. Madison street, Chicago, Ill., is now carrying on a nation-wide drive for relief of the struggling and starving workers and children of China.

This is the same organization that did such splendid work for the relief of the famine stricken workers and peasants of Russia in 1922-1923, then known as the Friends of Soviet Russia, and which came to the rescue of the German workers in 1923-24 and the Irish famine stricken peasants in 1925.

The I. W. A. is the American section of the Workers' International Relief with headquarters in Berlin, Germany, having national sections in every country of note thruout the world.

From a report sent out by the Berlin office, we note that the German workers collected a million gold marks in four weeks' time for the relief of their suffering fellow workers in China.

In England the Chinese relief work is being supported by labor in a manner that leaves no room for doubt as to how they feel toward the Chinese workers. At a recent W. I. R. congress held in London, the delegates pledged their full support and solidarity.

Many Tough Problems.

The Chinese workers who are only just awakening to the realization of the class struggle, are confronted with a triple problem; first, their own exploiters and profiteers; second, the capitalist invaders who now rule China, and as per late reports, they have had a flood that has pauperized millions of workers and peasants whose crops were wiped out. Two million families were left high and dry without a morsel to call their own. The American I. W. A. looks forward to receiving unstinted and immediate support from all sections of the country, from the ranks of labor and sympathizers.

It is to be hoped that the American workers will rally to the support of the Chinese workers morally and financially. It is not charity but a duty that calls. Send your contribution to the International Workers Aid, 1553 W. Madison street, Chicago, Ill., today.

Teachers Fight Fake McAndrew Vote on Salary Schedules

Superintendent of Schools William McAndrew took the teachers by surprise with a hasty order for a vote on his proposed salary schedule during school hours.

When the ballots were sprung on the teachers 2861, the more experienced ones who had been thru many a battle with the school board refused to vote without first discussing the move among themselves at their federation meeting. The younger ones 2887, being less experienced but courageous nevertheless, voted against the schedule at once. 3,310 voted in favor of the bill. The vote shows that McAndrew has either convinced or intimidated only 3,310 teachers out of 9,058 for his bill.

Tea Pot Dome Figure Demoted

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—Rear Admiral J. K. Robinson who gave his consent to the lease of Tea Pot Dome and who figured prominently in the scandal, reverted to the rank of captain when he gave up his post as chief of the navy's bureau of engineering. Robinson had asked to be retired as a rear admiral but the senate failed to confirm his promotion.

NEGROES FIGHT SEGREGATION IN 'FREE' AMERICA

Residential Bars to Be Resisted

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—The fight on residential segregation is spreading thruout the North according to reports received. Recently there was a small riot in Philadelphia and now it is reported that an organization has been formed in Cleveland to debar colored people from a white residential district

To Bar Negro Doctor.

The fight in Cleveland is being made to bar Dr. C. H. Garvin, a colored physician from occupying a house he is having built on Wade Park avenue. Two hundred white property owners recently held a meeting and formed an organization. At the meeting white neighbors of Dr. Garvin protested against his occupancy of the house he was having built.

One white attorney, Frank F. Gentsch, of 11104 Wade Park avenue, N. E., near Dr. Garvin's property, is reported to have said to G. W. Willis, a colored man present at the meeting:

"I want you to know that you will never live in the Wade allotment. Furthermore, you can say to Dr. Garvin that he will never live in the house that he is building on Wade Park avenue."

Not for Sale.

Dr. Garvin is reported to have said in a press interview that he was not trying to speculate in real estate but that he was building a home in which he intended to live and that the property was not for sale at any price.

Y. W. L. DISTRICT HELPS MINERS IN ANTHRACITE

Demands Free Speech and Victims' Release

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Sept. 30.—The following resolution, presented by Norman Tallentire, district organizer of the Workers (Communist) Party, to the convention of District 3 of the Young Worker League here, was carried unanimously:

"WHEREAS, four active workers, militant leaders of the striking miners in the anthracite coal fields of Pennsylvania, in contravention of capitalist law, have been denied the right of free speech, and are now held in jail by the hireling political bosses of the coal operators, and

"WHEREAS, the struggles of the workers against their exploiters demand constant vigilance and constant fight to maintain the semblance of rights which remain to them under the capitalist system controlled by the bosses' government.

"THEREFORE, the convention resolves that we condemn the action of the bosses' political agents in arresting Comrades Valentine, Reid, Toohey and Zarak, and pledge our full moral and financial support to procure the unconditional release of these comrades, and we further "RESOLVE, that the fight for free expression by the exploited workers is an essential fight for a fundamental weapon, necessary to the workers in their struggle, and pledge ourselves to continue the fight for free speech for the workers."

Germans Give Russ $50,000,000 Credit for Big Purchases

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., Sept. 30.—It is reported that German commercial circles are preparing to extend credits of $50,000,000 to Soviet Russia for the purchase of agricultural machinery, automobiles, tractors and industrial equipment. While Germany is unwilling, in fact, hardly able, to extend large credits to any country, it is plain that Russia offers her biggest outlet.

Russia is not in a position to pay cash and insists on long term loans that are possible of liquidation thru exports of raw materials and Russian products. The loan to Russia is said to be private German affair in which the government is taking no part.

Of this total, American companies have invested about $221,000,000, British $102,000,000, Dutch $42,000,000 and Mexican companies $12,000,000. The area now under production or held by oil barons is 6,539,000 acres.

NEW YORK I. L. D. TO STAGE BIG DEMONSTRATION

Protest the Threatened Executions in Hungary

NEW YORK, Sept. 30—The arrest of 100 Communists in Budapest and the severe beating up and threatened execution of Mathias Rakosi, Communist leader of the Hungarian workers, has aroused the indignation of the class-conscious workers of New York.

A mass meeting in protest against the brutality of the Hungarian [illegible] agents and their representatives that have secured free entrance into the United States to the interparliamentary union has been called by the International Labor Defense for Monday evening, Oct. 5, at 6:30 p. m. at Union Square.

The International Labor Defense has called upon all workers' organizations to join in this protest meeting which is directed against all the white terrorist governments whose representatives have just entered the country. The meeting will demand the liberation of the thousands of Hungarian workers in Horthy's dungeons, the freedom of Comrade Rakosi and the hundreds of workers arrested in Budapest, and the end of the brutal persecution and murder of workers in Italy, Hungary, Bulgaria, Roumania and other capitalist countries.

Robbing Banks from the Inside Is Safe Both "Night and Day"

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Sept. 30.—As expected by those who have observed the case for nearly four years, A. O. [illegible], former cashier of the looted Night and Day bank of St. Louis, has been finally acquitted of embezzlement by a jury at Union, Mo., where the case had been taken from St. Louis on a change of venue.

The bank's gutted condition was discovered by state bank examiners [illegible] 6, 1923. The bank was ordered closed. Meininger, the president of the bank and its entire board of directors were indicted. The president was found "not guilty," and indictments against the directors were dismissed on technical grounds. Not one of those charged with robbing the bank from the inside have spent a single day in jail.

Labor organizations and wage earning depositors were chief among the sufferers from the crash. Four small depositors, despondent over the loss of their life savings, have committed suicide.

INTERNATIONAL LABOR DEFENSE SURVEY OF CONFERENCES SHOWS I. L. D. FIRMLY ESTABLISHED

A survey of the local conferences held thruout the country on Sept. 13 under the auspices of International Labor Defense, indicates a growing response to the call for defense of labor's class-war prisoners. The conferences occurred in 25 of the largest cities in the country and 35 of the smaller towns. In nearly every instance they were successful. In every instance the purpose of the conferences was attained: the setting up of permanent branches of International Labor Defense composed of dues paying members who accept the principle of fighting against capitalist persecution of working class fighters.

Represented at the various conferences were local trade unions, workers' fraternal and benefit societies, co-operatives and permanent I. L. D. branches previously established. These latter were provisionally formed since the national conference for labor defense held in Chicago last June that founded I. L. D. At the Sept. 13 conferences these branches were brot together in city-wide locals and connected with city central committees.

Collective Affiliation.

In addition to these units, there are now represented in the city central committees other workers' organizations that sent delegates to the conference and declared their desire to collectively affiliate. These now have delegates to the city centrals and pay a monthly sum in collective dues.

At the New York conference, 40,000 workers were represented, in Chicago, 15,000. Boston, Philadelphia, Cleveland, Minneapolis, Los Angeles, Seattle, San Francisco and other of the more important cities held conferences that compared favorably, in proportion, to New York and Chicago.

Protest Persecutions.

Without exception, the conferences endorsed the proceedings and actions of the national conference of June 28 last, that brot International Labor Defense into existence. The conference went on record for the release of all class war prisoners and passed resolutions of protest. Many sent resolutions of protest to the ambassadors of foreign countries that have subjected their working classes to persecutions and terror such as Poland, Roumania, Esthonia. Resolutions were sent to the U. S. war department asking the release of Crouch and Trumbull, imprisoned Communist soldiers.

The central feature of the gatherings was the case in Zeigler, Ill., where Henry Corbishley and 14 other union coal miners are being victimized by a frame-up of criminal charges brot by corrupt union officials with the backing of the coal operators and the ku klux klan. Reports were made on the various cases now before I. L. D. for legal defense. There are many cases of attempts to deport foreign-born workers pending and new ones frequently arising. There are big trials in progress in Michigan and Pennsylvania. In addition to this, I. L. D. has assumed the obligation of supplying material aid to the more than 100 class war prisoners now in jail and their families. The conferences mapped out plans for meeting these obligations and prepared campaigns to revive interest in labor defense thruout the organized labor movement in their respective cities.

A Great Power.

In most of the cities the conferences were followed by enthusiastic mass meetings that served to give impetus to the work before them. The appeal of I. L. D. is that it is a non-partisan organization pledged to defend all workers, regardless of affiliation or conviction, who are attacked for their activities in the labor movement. The Sept. 13 conferences laid the proper mass basis for International Labor Defense and put it on the road to becoming a great defense power of the organized workers in America.

MUSIC IS JUST LIKE LIQUOR, SO HOOVER EXPERT INFORMS US

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—Prohibition is held directly responsible for America's insatiable demand for jazz music.

Figures depicting this jazz mania and showing that the production of musical instruments has more than doubled in the last ten years were made public by Hoover's department of commerce.

In 1914, the value of the factories engaged in producing musical instruments was $119,889,000. The 1925 production will reach $300,000,000, officials estimated.

Music, according to an acoustic engineer at the bureau of standards, is more intoxicating than liquor, if properly developed.

"Jazz has the same disorganizing effect on the nervous system as moonshine liquor," declared this authority.

Russian Industry to Reach Prewar Level Soon, Statistics Show

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., Sept. 30.—According to the statistics compiled by gosplan (state planning committee), the economic tendency in agriculture and industry is toward the achievement of pre-war standards. Each year the production has come closer and closer to the pre-war production of Russia.

Agriculture Goes Up.

In the year 1921-22 agricultural production was 45 per cent of the pre-war. In 1922-23 it was 70 per cent; 1923-24, 72 per cent; 1924-25, 74 per cent. The forecast for 1925-26 is 92 per cent of the 1913 production.

Agricultural prices have increased. In 1922-23 they were 72 per cent; 1923-24, 79 per cent; 1924-25, 94 per cent; and the forecast for 1925-26 is 95 per cent of prewar prices.

Industrial Production Rises.

In the year 1921-22 industrial production was 17 per cent of the pre-war standard. In 1922-23, 37 per cent; 1923-24, 46 per cent; 1924-25, 72 per cent and the forecast for 1925-26 is 98 per cent.

Prices of industrial products have begun to fall and are nearning the level of the year 1913-14. In 1922-23 prices were 138 per cent of pre-war; 1923-24, 127 per cent; 1924-25, 106 per cent and the forecast for 1925-26 is 105 per cent.

FRENCH DRIVE ON RIFFS HAS BEEN BROKEN

Rains Aid Abd-el-Krim Against Invaders

FEZ, French Morocco, Sept. 30.—The concerted drive of the French from the south and the Spaiards from the north on Adjir, has been definitely postponed. Rain torrents have begun to fall in Morocco, making it impossible for the French to advance with their heavy artillery and supplies.

The torrents of rain have made the clay impassable and the fog which hangs over the country makes flying impossible. The Riffians under Abd-el-Krim have begun to vigorously attack the French and Spanish lines on all fronts.

Riffs Attack French.

A fierce attack has been made against El Bibane in the central part of the front and a counter-attack has been made in the Kel-el-Loun sector.

Motor transportation and telephonic connections between Fez and Taza have been severed on the eastern front by the continued rains.

Marshal Lyautey has asked to be replaced and leaves French Morocco soon. He has been one of the empire builders of imperialist France and the methods that he used are now being resisted by the Riffians in their struggle for independence.

Airplanes Riddled by Riffs.

The American mercenaries in Morocco are finding that the Riffs are better shots than they thot they were. American flyers have had the habit of taking bombs, painting them red, white and blue, putting their name on them and then circling low to an advancing column or outpost, drop the bomb. Then they would circle back to see what havoc they had wrought. Two or three of them in trying this stunt have had their engines go dead on them. Some of them were able to escape, and they never tried the stunt again as their airplanes were riddled by Riff bullets so that they looked like sieves.

Riffs Excellent Shots.

"The Riffs are excellent infantry and first-class shots" writes Col. Charles Sweeny, one of the mercenaries in the employ of French imperialism. "You may judge when I tell you that they have already shot out of airplanes from 500 to 1,000 feet up and going from 80 to 100 miles an hour over twenty French aviators."

Higher Than World War.

The percentage of casualties among French aviators in Morocco is higher than those of the world war, due to the excellent markmanship of the Riffians, admits the French war office.

Krim Getting Munitions

MELILLA, Spanish Marocco, Sept. 30.—The Riffs have begun intense activity around Tizzi Azza, where supply convoys have been forced to abandon the use of mules and rely on human packbearers. Load after load of munitions, food and other materials have fallen into the hands of the Riffian tribesmen.

The tribesmen have also renewed their attacks in the Afrau, Sidi Mesand, Quebdani, Farha, and Midar regions. The Riffs are hidden in ravines and are keeping up a constant fire on the Spanish posts.

At Cebadilla, the Riffians have a field gun, captured from the Spanish legion, raising the number of casualties in the Spanish camp 800 feet away.

Naval Operations Paralyzed

All naval operations along the coast of Morocco have been paralyzed by the rain storms.

At Alhucemas the aviators are meeting with heavy rifle and machine gun fire. Many of the planes return to their bases riddled with bullets. A number of aviators have been killed by Riff marksmen.

CANADA TO HAVE ELECTIONS OVER TARIFF ISSUES

TORONTO, Sept. 30.—The Canadian elections, to be held October 29, will revolve around the od dispute, to have or not to have protective tariff. The present liberal government headed by Mackenzie King is going to the people because it lacks a working majority against the conservatives and progressives, the latter holding the balance of power. The liberals want a tariff "for revenue only." The conservatives want a definitely protective tariff.

The progressives, the western farmers and petit-bourgeois group, want the removal of protective duties on necessaries and instruments of production, by which they mean farm machinery. The workers of Canada are beginning to see that all this scrapping about tariffs is a smoke-screen to blind their own political consciousness.

Worker Exposes New Jersey Hospital as Filthy Slave Shop

By FRANCIS MILLER
(Worker Correspondent)

JERSEY CITY, N. J., Sept. 30.—I wish to tell of my experiences as a waitress in the dining room of a Jersey City private hospital.

In order to get the work, I had to make an outlay of $1.70 for a uniform of coarse, cheap, ugly material. After a washing the uniform became too small for me.

The hours are from 6 a. m. to 7:30 p. m. There is also one night in the week from 9:30 p. m. to 2:30 a. m., when one has to serve and dispose of great piles of dirty dishes alone, without any assistance. We must also work every other Sunday.

Rush About

One has to rush about, and by the time things are cleaned up, one is too dead tired to eat. One woman was living on milk only. A young girl who was being bullied about by this woman often left her meal untouched.

I threw her dinner in the refuse can—the waste at this place was frightful.

Living Rooms Filthy

The living quarters were unspeakably filthy, I could not take the dirty room and unmade bed with dirty rags thrown upon it, that was assigned me, but doubled up with a young girl. The workers themselves had to scrub and fumigate the rooms—and on institution day the nurses' house was open for inspection.

All the women suffer with their feet. After the day's work one is just about able to crawl. They spend the time bathing their feet in epsom salts to allay the misery.

Low Wages, Long Hours

The wage for this slavery is $10 a week. The housekeeper told me that those who work even harder, at cleaning, receive only $35 a month. The women I saw were mostly illiterate, not able to even write their name. In receiving their wages they sign with a cross.

Solicits Charity

This hospital, tho a "pay" institution solicits charity, even writing to my home address for donations.

In the New York Sun for the 19th, I cut out a clipping: "Death Laid To Neglect. Police and Hospital Charged With Failure to Aid Man." It was this Jersey Hospital, whose ambulance surgeon handed a case of heart attack over to the police. The man was taken in a patrol wagon to headquarters, booked and locked in a cell for ten hours, then he was taken to a different hospital where he died a few hours later. What do you say to this for brutality?

YOUNG PIONEERS' INTERNATIONAL MEET IN MOSCOW

Delegates From Many Lands Present

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., Sept. 30.—The First International Congress of the Junior Communists is being held in Moscow with delegates from Sweden, Norway, Germany, Austria, Holland, Finland and the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics. The Junior Communists organized in the Young Pioneers comprise the youngest group of Communists organized, their ages ranging about 12 and 14.

The Pioneer movement has just barely started in Europe, but in the Soviet Union its organization numbers 1,500,000 members.

In the call for the convention the purpose of the gathering is outlined as follows:

"The congress will play a great role in the revolutionary organization and education of the workers, especially in western countries. The education of children there is now in the hands of the clergy and bourgeois teachers, all of whom oppose the general class struggle and especially oppose class distinctions between children.

"It is necessary to fight religious prejudices and abolish fear of revolution thru the Pioneer's organization and to build thru it the foundations of future class unity among the proletariat of the world."

More Gunboat Diplomacy in China

The American gunboat Palos has been rushed 1,400 miles up the Yangtze river following the alleged firing of 200 shots by Chinese soldiers at an American-owned steamer—the Chi Chuen.

What bloody possibilities there are in incidents such as this! The "gunmen of American diplomacy," as an American writer has called the naval detachments recently, are responsible to no one but the war department and in the past they have presented the American masses with more than one wholesale butchery of "backward peoples"—neither hushed up or justified in the face of popular clamor.

The Chinese people are, with much pain and struggle, throwing off the yoke of their own reactionary ruling class and that of the foreign exploiters. Slowly they are uniting their country, divided again and again by the military chieftains and portioned out among the great powers. A national labor movement, the infallible sign of the advancement of the masses, is rapidly arising. In many ways, some of them difficult for those who live in highly industrialized countries to understand, the Chinese workers and peasants, with some student organizations playing a leading role, are lifting themselves out of the morass of ignorance and poverty that western capitalism is largely responsible for perpetrating.

American shipowners have never been regarded as angels of sweetness and light and it is certain that the American steamer which got into difficulty 1,400 miles up the river from Shanghai was engaged in no altruistic mission.

In plain words, it had no business there, yet no sooner are its owners notified of its being looked upon as an enemy by the Chinese than a gunboat is dispatched to terrorize the natives.

Of late there has been a let-down in the news carried by the capitalist press on the Chinese situation. The popular opinion seems to be that the crisis has passed and that pending the conference of the Chinese government and the great powers over the question of custom duties and extra-territoriality the aggressions of the imperialists will cease.

The dispatch of a U. S. gunboat to the interior of China shows that this is a wrong idea. American troops and warships are still in China. They are there to terrorize the Chinese masses and to support any reactionary uprising that can be utilized to thwart the Chinese liberation movement.

What news of the Chinese developments that is carried by the capitalist press now emphasizes the danger of the "Bolshevist menace." If the American militarists choose to slaughter Chinese workers, peasants and students, it will undoubtedly occur in the holy cause of freeing them—and American businessmen in China—from the "menace of Bolshevism."

The Shanghai strike has shown that Japanese, British and American imperialist interests could not work together harmoniously altho as thieves they had many things in common. The other powers will not allow America a free hand if her activity threatens their privileges. There is the threat of imperialist war of a world-wide character in such adventures as that of the gunboat Palos.

The slogan of the Workers (Communist) Party of America is just as forcible today as it was three months ago—

Bring American warships and troops out of China!

The French Debt

The middle class spokesmen can yip their heads off about the huge sums owed to "their country" by European nations, France in particular, but the kind of settlement that is indicated by the negotiations now in progress between Caillaux and Mellon is fairly convincing evidence that American finance-capital is not going to force the French ruling class into bankruptcy. That ruling class is still, with its hostility towards British imperialism, too valuable an asset for Wall Street to dispose of for a matter of a few billion dollars.

American imperialism prefers to keep France under its thumb and it allows her therefore to pay at the rate of $40,000,000 per year on a total debt of over $4,000,000,000. This is at the rate of one per cent per year—certainly very generous terms as any debtor will admit.

But these generous terms can be revised at any time and they mean that the House of Morgan will continue to be the real ruler of France. The French national economy will be forced to adjust itself to the needs of Wall Street.

The needs are just the opposite of those of the French working class and peasantry and as in Germany a Dawes plan under some other name will throw the whole burden upon their shoulders.

Overshadowing all the fine phrases of the diplomats and financiers put out for public consumption is the one basic fact—that France is an appendage of American imperialism and favors in the matter of money payments will have to be repaid a hundredfold by still more brutal suppression and exploitation of the French masses.

The Comintern Letter to the Communist Party of Germany

HARDLY two months after the Tenth Congress of the Communist Party of Germany in July the Communist International found it necessary to take issue with the leadership of its German section. In a communication sent to the German Party the Communist International discusses all questions at issue and gives advice and direction.

This letter is not only a manifestation of the international leadership of our Comintern, but it is also a conclusive proof of the absolute necessity of such a leadership. Too often there exists a tendency that political orientations fall victims to subjective influences of the leadership. Too often the subjective conceptions of a leadership give a wrong slant to the consideration of objective conditions.

THUS, for instance, we find, that the desire to stick to Leninism is in itself not sufficient. One must have the fundamental concepts of Leninism as an integral part of one's point of view. Where this fundamental concept is missing, we find that the mere technical attempt to be Leninist leads to distortions of Leninism, manifesting themselves in leftist opportunism, or in opportunist pessimism.

The Communist International, led by those comrades who have been the comrades and fellow officers of the great leader of the world proletariat in the victorious battle against Russian capitalism, preserves a universal outlook for its consideration of the problems of the revolutionary movement in the different countries. They are Leninists in action capable of judging the Leninist qualities of the activities not on the basis of a Leninist formula, but on the basis of the live principles of Lenin.

RUTH FISHER, the leader of the severely criticised group of leadership of the German Party, recognized this and she testified to the correctness of the Communist International's criticism with her signature.

The Communist International is the genreal staff of our international revolutionary party. To this general staff falls the right and the duty to finally pass upon the correctness of the use of our revolutionary forces on all national and international battle fronts of the class struggle. To recognize this right and duty of the Communist International carries with it a determination to understand, rather than to criticise its decisions.

The DAILY WORKER will print the Communist International letter to Germany. Its importance is obvious.

First the German Party is part of our own party because it is part of our International.

Second the Communist International judgment on problems in Germany suggests valuable and important conclusions on the Communist International judgment on problems in America.

Third, the letter helps us to understand better the methods of judgment of the Communist International, helps to give us a better understanding of Leninism.

We will print the letter serially, beginning in today's issue. For the better understanding of the letter we reprint here an article of the Pravda, official organ of the Russian Communist Party, on the Communist International letter to the German Party.

The Political Meaning of the Letter of the E. C. C. I. to the German Party

"ALL those who hold dear the interests of the world revolution must give careful consideration to the letter of the Executive Committee of the Communist International to the Communist Party of Germany. May the gourgeois penny-a-liners, may the opportunists and reformists rejoice because of the public criticism of the Executive Committee of the Communist International on the leadership of the German Communist Party. To rejoice about the difficulties on the road to revolution is the shameful historic profession of the Social-Democratic lackeys of capitalism. Cruel self-criticism, understanding of one's own mistakes, and the rectification of such mistakes is what Lenin taught us.

"Certain deviations became apparent in the Ruth Fisher-Maslow group and also certain mistakes in the leadership of the party. On the other hand, the Communist Party of Germany did not understand how to exploit all its chances of propaganda among the masses. Naturally there are also objective conditions which make this propaganda of the Communist Party of Germany among the masses more difficult. The tiredness of the masses as a result of the October defeat is still prevalent; the illusions are not yet overcome which were created by the victory of the left block in France, by the MacDonold government in England and by the Dawes' plan the German bourgeoisie still pulls along with it certain proletarian groups on the basis of western orientation.

"THIS made it all the more necessary to call attention to a number of mistakes and deviations of the Ruth Fisher-Maslow group. The latter underestimated the characteristic historic changes and particularities which took place among the masses. The offensive of capital and of reaction created among the German masses a will for self-defense and for struggle. A growth of the sympathies of the proletarian masses for the Soviet Union which expressed itself in the Social-Democratic and non-partisan workers' delegation to Russia is also unquestionable. The masses began to move and new energy accumulated for the class struggle.

"This change in the consciousness of the masses has not been correctly estimated and sufficiently exploited by the German comrades. As a result of this the dissatisfaction of the masses merely drove water on the mills of the social-democratic 'left' opposition instead of becoming useful for the Communist Party of Germany. The Ruth Fisher-Maslow group not only underestimated this change of the mood of the masses but it also disregarded the work in the trade unions. Too small forces were centrated on this sector of the proletarian front. For this reason we suffered considerable losses in the field of trade union work.

"HERE it becomes clearly apparent that we have to pay for any attempt to be more left than Leninism. It would be absolutely incorrect to take for granted that the Communist Party of Germany has no prospects for success in the trade union work at present. Even the social-democratic Liepziger Volkszeitung must admit that in the elections of the German Federation of Labor the Communist Party of Germany polled from 25 to 30 per cent of the votes altho it elected only three representatives.

"The united front strategy was also insufficently understood. Many thot that the united front was merely a diplomatic play of the Russian [illegible] policies.

"It is absolutely clear that [illegible] highest organ of the revolution, [illegible] Executive Committee of the Communist International, had to call the attention of the party membership to the dangers besetting the correct Bolshevist line. The Executive Committee of the Communist International acted in accordance with Leninism. It acted correctly. The correctness of the criticism of the Executive Committee of the Communist International is also recognised by the resolution of the Central Executive Committee of the Communist Party of Germany.

"TO the masses! Nearer to the Social-Democratic workers! Bold application of the united front tactics not in words but in deeds! Energetic strengthening of trade union unity! That is the political meaning of the letter of the Executive Committee of the Commuist International.

"The Communists must penetrate into the depths of the Social-Democratic working masses and must carry on trade union work. This will not be very pleasant for the Social-Democratic Party, but our main task is to widen the scope of influence of our party among the masses.

"May the renegades of the proletarian revolution rejoice about the fight of Moscow with the Communist Party of Germany. May they babble about the 'penants and [illegible] of the world revolution!' It is not the first time that we hear such [illegible]. The revolutionary advance guard of the German working class has sufficiently strong nerves to consider the malicious rejoicings of the [illegible] traitors with contempt and to determine its will to fight and its determination for victory."

To All Organizations and Members of the Communist Party of Germany

Letter from the E. C. C. I. to all Organizations and Members of the Communist Party of Germany.

Dear comrades:

As early as the last session of the Enlarged Executive—March-April 1925—and shortly afterwards, we discussed in detail, in conjunction with the representatives of the German Communist Party, those questions in which, in our opinion, the greatest defects of Party work are evidenced. The most important question—the question of the German Party—was at that time, and still continues to be, the problem of increasing the recruiting powers of our Party, the problem of winning the masses, especially the masses of social democratic workers. Our general political line has been determined from this standpoint, and from this standpoint we have considered the other questions. Among these we find the following tasks; work in the trade unions; convincing the social democratic workers (questions of propaganda, "change of tone," etc); the "normalising" of Party life (inner Party democracy, employment of the former opposition, freedom of discussion, election of Party functionaries, introduction of fresh leading forces, etc.), was regarded by us at the same time as a prerequisite for the establishment of correct relations towards the masses outside the Party; the liquidation of the hidden fight against the International (liquidation of the custom of so-called independent emissaries in other parties, sincere carrying out of the real Bolshevist line).

Before the Party Conference, the representatives of the Executive once more negotiated with the representatives of the German Party, although not entirely officially; this was at the wish of the German representatives.

At these negotiations the three most important groups of questions were discussed.

Firstly: The Executive pointed out the existence of certain right deviations in the leading group Ruth Fischer-Maslow; the adoption of a too parliamentary attitude, etc.

Secondly: It was decided that a really new course should be followed in the trade union question; that a strong and capable trade union department be demonstratively elected at the Party Conference, or instructions to this effect given to the new Party Central.

Thirdly: The representatives of the Executive insisted that fresh leading forces are to elected to the Central, especially comrades familiar with trade union work, and including some comrades of the opposition. Not for the purpose of dragging the Party over to the "right", as has been deliberately wrongly asserted, but in order to a create means of access to the vacillating members of the Party.

The Executive received three subsequent inquiries as to the elements of which the Party Central was to be composed, and three times it confirmed its advice.

At the Party Conference itself these decisions were, for the most part, not carried out. Comrade Ruth Fischer's group not only sabotaged the decisions, but at the same time caused the delegation sent by the Executive to be treated in such a manner that it was obliged to issue a declaration to this effect. At the conclusion of the Party Conference an offer of an alliance on the part of the Scholem-Rosenberg group against the Eecutive was tacitly accepted, a proceeding void of all principle, seeing that politically the Party Conference was being carried on in the spirit of fight against the ultra left. A conflict with the representatives of the Youth International was brought about in an analogous manner; the International Youth Conference, in which the representatives of 13 countries participated, has officially stated its standpoint with regard to this, and addressed an appeal to this effect to the Eecutive.

This brought about a severe crisis. The first delegation coming to us with instructions for the disavowal of the E. C. C. I. delegation was obliged to admit, after a heated discusion, that the Eecutive was right. The whole delegation made a declaration to the effect that it held the criticism made by the E. C. C. I. to be correct, that it considered the standpoint represented by the E. C. C. I. delegation to have been right, and that it was in agreement with the political line taken by the youth representatives and by the International Youth Conference.

Meanwhile it was decided—at the wish of the German delegation—to have the larger body of representatives sent for. Ruth Fischer employed every possible means in order to delay their arrival.

The second delegation was divided into two groups. At first comrade Ruth Fischer opposed the criticism of the E. C. C. I., but after a long discussion in the Commission of the E. C. C. I., participated in by the representatives of all the leading parties, she too made a declaration acknowledging the correctness of the criticism made by the E. C. C. I.

This, briefly stated, is the state of affairs. We wish however to add some further explanations, for the purpose of making the standpoint of the Communist International clear to the German comrades.

1. The General Situation.

The world political situation may be regarded as extremely critical. Despite the relative stabilization in Central Europe, the fundamental inconsistencies of modern capitalism are causing a state of extreme tension. The rapid growth of the Soviet Union, the decline experienced by England, the successes of the International red united front (Anglo-Russian trade union bloc and the struggle for unity; the German and other workers' delegations to Soviet Russia; the workers' and peasants' congresses in France; the revolutionizing of the whole English labor movement, etc.), and the enormous increase in the acuteness of the colonial and semi-colonial struggles for freedom (Morocco, Syria, and especially in China) on the one hand; and on the other hand the concentration of imperialist forces against the Soviet Union (the military-diplomatic "ring" around Moscow; agitation in the bourgeois press; English policy and the security pact; preparations for war and blockade; the attitude adopted by Kautsky and the social democratic press, etc.)—these are all symptoms of the general aggravation of the situation.

Among this complex of symptoms one of particular importance is Germany's fresh orientation towards the West. This orientation is creating another general trend of feeling among the people, and is even mirrored to a certain extent among the least class conscious sections of the proletariat.

Two different processes are to be observed among the German people. In the first place the fresh wave of sympathy for the Soviet Union; the social democratic workers are beginning to develop towards communism. Not directly towards the Communist Party but by roundabout paths and in novel ways, which the Party must learn to estimate. A typical example is furnished by the workers' delegations.

On the other hand, we have to record the growth, in certain—if small—sections of the working class of the so-called "anti-Moscow" tendencies, an expression of the fresh orientation of the bourgeoisie. This process is also going on in the German C. P. to a certain extent. The so-called ultra left tendency is frequently merely a cloak for social democratic, reformist, "Levitic" tendencies, which threaten to change into direct [illegible] al of the international working [illegible]. These two processes are of an international character, and are thus of particular importance.

There is no doubt that a number of circumstances greatly increased the difficulties existed at the time when the left took over the leadership of the Party. The October defeat, months of illegality, the MacDonald government, left elections in France and the Dawes report with the resultant reformist illusions among broad strata of the working class. But in spite of all this, the losses sustained by the Party, unavoidable to a certain degree, would not have been so great if the leaders of the Party had not committed the most grave errors.

In spite of this we must state that the above-mentioned group of leaders in the Party Central have not by any means showed themselves capable of reacting properly to the new processes taking place in the working class. Although the general situation is by no means unfavorable, the number of members in the Party, at best, only maintains its level; there is a serious falling off in the trade unions; there were serious losses at the political elections; the recruiting powers of the Party are insufficiently developed, despite the apparent unity, which is by no means a Bolshevist unity. This is the point which has now been reached. The Party leaders have not proved capable of winning over the social democratic and non-party workers.

The Ruth Fischer-Maslow group has not proved capable of an energetic fight against the "ultra left" in reality anti-communist tendencies and has even supported these tendencies by playing a highly ambiguous role in international questions.

FASCIST ITALY PREPARES FOR MORE VIOLENCE

Mussolini Threatens as Regime Totters

ROME, Sept. 30—The growing opposition to the fascist dictatorship in Italy has called forth frantic and violent speeches from the spokesmen of fascism in a campaign designed to intimidate parliament when it opens in October or November. Premier Mussolini, speaking of the opposition at a meeting in Northern Italy, said: "They will never succeed in paralyzing with their feeble barricades our powerful movement." He warned the opposition that it must accept the government or be "constrained by force."

Sig. Farinacci, secretary general of the fascist party said, "This is a peaceful revolution if not opposed, but if opposed it will be carried out by force." Rumors persist that the army is undergoing a changed attitude regarding fascism and certainly the civil population is becoming daily more resentful of the iron dictatorship.

Tightening Dictatorship.

In order to save itself, the dictatorship must become ever more severe. In the present campaign legislation is proposed that will further centralize the government, giving it complete jurisdiction over the press and usurping for itself the appointment of mayors of municipalities—a procedure unheard of in Italy from time immemorial.

The feeling is current that Mussolini's last resort against the growing menace of the internal situation will be to plunge the country into a foreign war. His foreign policy is of the most eccentric character and his solutions of the Italian debt problem have failed to materialize. The regime is undoubtedly tottering and is making preparation for its last feast of violence.

Quake Hits Oakland, Calif.

OAKLAND, Cal., Sept. 30—A strong, sharp earthquake rocked Oakland at 7:20 o'clock this morning, paralyzing telephone service thruout the city for ten minutes. There were no casualties and no damage was reported. The shock was at first thought to have been caused by a terrific blast. University of California seismogolists are investigating their instruments for an explanation of the shock.

Echo of Teapot Dome.

CLEVELAND, Sept. 30. — Appeal from the decision of the U. S. district judge for the district of Wyoming upholding the validity of the Teapot Dome leases to Harry F. Sinclair was filed at St. Louis in the U. S. court of appeals by Atlee Pomereme, counsel for the government.

"RECOGNIZE SOVIET UNION!" IS RALLYING CALL FOR THE EIGHTH ANNIVERSARY DEMONSTRATIONS

As the eighth anniversary of the Russian Socialist Federated Soviet Republic draws near, the Workers (Communist) Party issues a rousing call to all its units to prepare for the celebration of November 7, the day of victory for the Russian workers and peasants with the opening of an intensive drive for the recognition of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics, of which Russia is a part.

The capitalist class of the world realizes that their hope and dream of a collapse of the Soviet Union is futile. Soviet Russia today stands out as the only nation in Europe where the conditions of the working class have improved. In Germany, France, England and the other nations the conditions of the workers are growing worse. This anniversary finds the economic condition of Soviet Russia better than ever. Industrial and agricultural production have nearly reached the prewar standard. More and more factories are being erected. Trade is once more being successfully carried on. With these facts facing the capitalist class in the face, their hope of a collapse of Soviet power has given way to a fear of the example shown by the Soviet Union.

The menace of the Soviet Union to world capitalism has increased. It stands out as a guide showing them how their condition may be bettered. The fear of the capitalist class of their own workers is increased as long as Russia stands in the position to materially aid the revolting proletarians of other lands.

Launch International Attack.

The capitalist class in their desperation have launched a vicious attack on an international scale against the Communists of the world and against the Soviet Union. The security pact, the attack on the Communists of Bulgaria, Roumania, Greece, Turkey and other lands serve as good examples of these drives.

Arrange Mass Meetings!

It is up to the workers of America to frustrate the aims of its capitalist class. In the united front mass meetings to be held all over the country every worker sympathetic to the cause of Soviet Russia must be drawn into the drive for recognition of the Soviet Union. As many meetings as can be called must be held on November 7, to celebrate the eighth anniversary of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics.

Distribute Leaflets!

A million leaflets demanding the recognition of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics are being printed by the Workers (Communist) Party to be used in the drive to force American capitalism to recognise the only working class republic in the world. To supplement the leaflets, buttons are being made to be worn by the workers to show their active sympathy for the Soviet Union. Stickers and other methods to rouse the workers of America are also to be used.

U. S.-FRENCH SETTLEMENT COMPLETED

France to Continue Her Aggressions

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 1. — After a week or so of quibbling the representatives of French imperialism and the American bankers have come to a settlement of terms.

The sub-committees of the French and American delegations met in secret session and there they decided upon the plan that will be rubber-stamped by President Coolidge. Mellon, Hoover and other prominent republican members are to present their unanimous decision for the president's approval.

Thus French imperialism is given a new lease of life to bomb Syrian and Moroccan villages in her attempt to dominate the world's resources.

The terms of the settlement agreed on are arranged in the following manner:

A series of five annual payments of $40,000,000 from 1926 to 1930, inclusive.

A series of seven annual payments of $60,000,000 from 1931 to 1937, inclusive.

A series of 50 annual payments of $100,000,000 from 1938 to 1987, inclusive. The payments cover a period of 62 years.

A safeguard clause by which France can open up negotiations again if her financial condition is such that the currency of the imperialist power is in danger, has been agreed to.

France agrees to pay the American bankers $5,620,000,000 for the $4,200,000,000 loaned during the war.

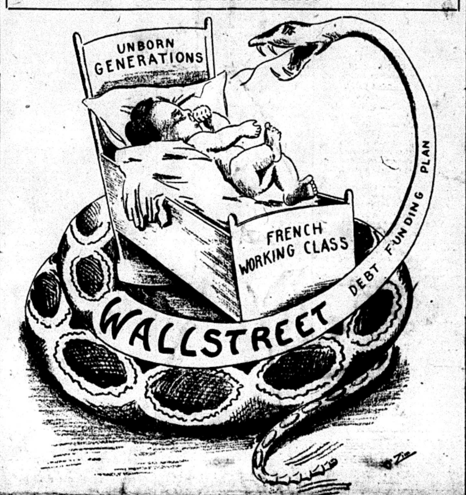
The terms given to France will allow her to prosecute her military aggression wherever she sees fit as the terms of the Franco-American debt settlement neatly dovetail into the Anglo-French agreement and coincide nicely with France's share of Germany's reparations. If the reich continues to exist to execute the Dawes plan faithfully, France will never be forced to pay out more in any year in discharging her obligations to Great Britain and the United States than she receives from Germany.

France receives 52 per cent of all reparations and the first five annuities under the Dawes plan will give her approximately $104,000,000 a year. Of this she will pay $40,000,000 to the United States and 5,000,000 pounds sterling ($25,000,000) to Great Britain under the terms of the Churchill-Caillaux agreement of August.

It is only at the expiration of five years that France begins paying London 12,500,000 pounds ($62,000,000) annually, and at precisely that date her annuities to the United States increase to $60,000,000. This leaves France a balance of roughly $2,000,000.

Later on, when the Dawes plan is yielding 2,500,000,000 gold marks ($625,000,000) annually, France's share will be about $325,000,000 a year out of which she will pay $100,000,000 to America and $62,000,000 to England. This will leave a balance of about $163,000,000 a year for her.

A STRATEGIC POSITION



Communists in Big Fight At Labor Party Congress

LONDON, Oct. 1. — While the nervous capitalist "fat boys" were beginning to heave long sighs of relief at the "rout" of the Communists at the labor party congress at Liverpool, the ubiquitious Reds, seemingly undisturbed by all their "defeats" intensify their attacks on labor party policies advocated for British workers, described by the Communist Delegate Ferguson as one of "crawling, sniveling gradualism."

And it should be made a matter of particular note to those interested, that altho the motion which upheld the order of the labor party executive which "barred" any and all Communists from even being a member of the increasingly respectable labor party, here are thirty of these Communists, many of them national and international figures in the Communist movement right in the middle of the labor party congress, whaling away with might and main with the bitterest criticism of the treacherous opportunism of the social-democratic leaders of the Ramsay MacDonald stripe.

Communists Launch Big Offensive.

Delegate Ferguson of Glasgow, a Communist who did not seem to mind a bit that Communism was "defeated the day before," opened a day of good fighting with a resolution ordering James Ramsay MacDonald to apologize to the Soviet government for his hasty and scandalous publication of the ridiculous forgery known as the "Zinoviev letter" without investigation and with his attack on the Communist International as an eleventh hour pre-election effort to appear more respectable than the tories, and keep control of his then sinecure in the "labor" government.

The motion lost, of course, but there were some fine things said for the British workers to read in their morning paper. Likewise, Willie Gallagher, who followed Ferguson, arguing for a resolution condemning the labor party for its indifference to the miseries of the rapidly increasing army of unemployed, took occasion to say a few things for the ears and eyes of British workers.

Ferguson, when MacDonald introduced a resolution providing for the labor party policy to be one of national reconstruction by "parliamentary means and by progressive stages," launched an attack on it as one of "crawling, sniveling gradualism" and proceeded to move an amendment calling for vigorous struggle for the overthrowal of capitalism and the establishment of a workers' and farmers' government. The congress, which included among lots of more of her kind, Lady Cynthia Mosely, the noble lady who lends both grace and funds to the British socialist party, voted down the rude Communist proposal for class war.

So it went on. All very mystifying to the ill-informed who could not get the idea why the labor party congress should be so conservative, even reactionary, when the Trade Union Congress three weeks ago, went unanimously to the left with a Communist tone from beginning to end. The Trade Union Congress had adopted resolutions saying that overthrow of capitalism was necessary and that "shop committees are indispensable weapons" to do the job. But the Trades Union Congress had said no such kind things about Ramsay MacDonald and his leadership of the Labor Party.

Communism is the most talked of thing in Great Britain. And Communists are the life of the show at Liverpool, tho they are not "legally" there at all.

'B. & O. BILL' DECLARES RECALL PETITION "ILLEGAL", DEFYING MACHINISTS' UNION MEMBERSHIP

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—William H. Johnston, president of the International Association of Machinists, has announced to the executive council of that body his decision that the recall petition filed Sept. 12 against himself and all other members of the council is illegal. Pending appeal by the petitioners to the council, no further steps to resist the recall movement have been agreed upon.

This decision, based upon the view that the charges contained in the recall petition are not specific, was forecast by

TERRORISM AGAINST PROGRESSIVE MINERS IN ANTHRACITE STRIKE SHARED BY POLICE AND FAKERS

SCRANTON, Pa., Oct. 1.—Police Magistrate P. J. McNamara of Scranton, in court Monday ordered Alex Reid of Springfield, Ill., secretary of the Progressive Miners' Committee; Pat Toohey and August Valentine, progressive leaders in the striking anthracite fields; and Alex Zarek, a striker, to be held to "await the action of federal authorities."

Pat Toohey was unceremoniously arrested when he appeared at the hearing to aid the defense of the other three; while Zarek had been arrested when he went to the police station to bail out the first two. Zarek was first held on a charge of distributing handbills announcing a meeting without first obtaining a permit for the meeting. But later the magistrate said he would not hold him on that charge.

This is "Justice."

The judge declared, however, that: "If the federal authorities will not take care of them I will decide later what is to be done with them." This is taken to mean that if the favorite proceeding of deportation is not begun by the federal government, the progressives will be persecuted on some other frame-up.

That the traitorous leaders of the United Mine Workers' Union are willing and even anxioups to play the role of stoolpigeons, is seen in the attendance at the hearing of D. W. Davis, representing the international officials of the U. M. W. of A. and James Gleason and John Boylan, members of the executive board of District 1, U. M. W. of A.

Stoolpigeons Roost in High Office.

Gleason charged the four progressives with "attempting to disrupt" the union, without adducing any proof of such a charge and in face of the fact that the program of the Progressive Miners' Committee especially stresses the need for greater solidarity in the union and urges a militant struggle against the coal operators.

The strange scene of union officials appearing in a capitalist court room with a complaint against members of the union of "disruption" of the union was easily explained, however, when it is known that the union officials are preparing to sell out the wage demands of the strikers and compromise on the check-off, and wish no opposition from the arrested progressive leaders, whose program of greater solidarity and a more militant struggle against the operators is just what the treacherous union officials do not want.

Betrayal in the Wind.

This coming sell-out is understood since the conference between the committee for mediation elected by the Scranton chamber of commerce and John L. Lewis on Tuesday. And the same day there arrived in suspicious conjunction Tom Kennedy, international secretary-treasurer of the U. M. W. of A., James A. Gorman, secretary of the joint conference of union officials and operators, and Samuel Pierce, publicity director for the anthracite operators.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Oct. 1.—Pan-American Petroleum, E. L. Doheny's California oil company, declared a dividend of ten per cent on its $20,000,000 capitalization here today. The company reported earnings of over $5,000,000 for the first eight months of the year.

BANKERS RAISE HALF MILLION FOR COLLEGES

Make Liberal Donation to Goose Step Plan

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Oct. 1—Delegates to the American Bankers association meeting here fell all over each other giving money to a scholarship fund for economic students. A half million to endow 100 scholarships in economics in various colleges will be raised before the convention is over. The object is to train young men in the affairs of finance to carry on the traditions of banking when the old fellows have passed away, it was said.

"The Good of Our Acts."

One of the bankers, overcome with his own kindness said, "Let us make it possible for others to live abundantly. Let us spread as far as possible the good of our acts." Another said, "I think it is quite possible to work out an economic plan and to show people by systematic and small savings, by systematic curtailment of waste, continued over a period of years, it is possible for the average man to approach the coming of age with a feeling of comfort and serenity."

The bankers all seemed enthusiastic about their plan of turning out a hundred goose-steppers a year and are confident they are performing a great philanthropic deed. After the convention they will go home and pull in some more mortgages, leaving several thousand workers and farmers homeless.

ROUMANIAN BOYARS RUSH SECRET TRIAL OF TATARBOUNAR PEASANTS FEAR WORLD-WIDE DEMONSTRATION

KISHINEV, Bessarabia. (By Mail)—The trial of the Tatarbounar peasants opened in Kishinev on August 25. There are 1,000 peasants on trial. The indictment is 600 pages long and 600 witnesses and "specialists" are to testify against these peasants who dared to revolt against the inhuman exploitation of the Bessarabian peasants by the Roumanian boyars. The date of the trial and the indictment was made known to the lawyers but 24 hours before the actual trial began. The crime charged in the indictment is "crime against safety of the state" for which punishment is extremely high, death or long prison terms.

Secret Trial Held.

As the lawyers did not have the proper time to prepare their cases, they demanded that the trial be postponed. This right was denied them. All preparations were made for a secret trial by the Roumanian government. The great fear of the boyars was a demonstration by the proletariat of the world similar to the demonstrations that took place against the Polish lords

LITTLE CONCERN PAID TO FRENCH GAINS BY RIFFS

French-Spanish Navy Ineffective

(Special to The Daily Worker)

RIFF GENERAL HEADQUARTERS, TARGHZUIT, October 1.—The massing of 200,000 French troops on the southern frontier has wrought but little havoc on the Riffian tribesmen. Abd-el-Krim has been able to successfully oppose them with but 800 Riffians supported by a force of Arab tribesmen numbering 12,000.

Navy Ineffective.

Little concern is paid to the small gains made by the French last week. The staff is much relieved since they have seen the ineffectiveness of the Spanish and French warships. They had feared that the warships would do a great deal of damage. They have found out that the navy is useless to the imperialists in their war against the Moroccans.

The landing of the Spanish forces on the barren rock of Cape Moro Nuevo on Alhucemas bay is laughed at as a military maneuver, as the troops must depend upon the fleet for water, food and other supplies. The Spanish and French fleet numbers about 60 ships of all classes.

Telephonic connections are working with little interruption on all fronts. The general staff has constant information as to all moves of the Spanish and French troops and the moves of the Riffians.

France Uses All Means.

"France has employed every means in her power to defeat us on the southern frontier," declared Sidi Mohammed, commander of the Riffian forces, "big guns, huge armies, intensive campaigns by airplanes, all the newest inventions in artillery and bombing of every sort, in fact the full resources of the greatest military power in the world, excepting only chemical warfare.

"France has now roughly 200,000 men on the southern front. Do you know what is the highest number we have ever been able to employ there? Only 18,000.

"What has been the result?

Victory!

"Victory for us! I doubt whether anyone will deny that."

With the presence of the heavy winter rains the Riffs are making plans to get enough French and Spanish cannon and supplies to put a successful climax to their struggle for independence.

It is possible for the tribesmen to move rapidly as they have no need for using food supply trains. Luscious cactus fruits, melons and ripe figs are plucked by the tribesmen along the way and they are thus able to move without stopping for any length of time to prepare meals.

Jardine Refuses to Stop Grain Gambling at Chicago Exchange

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—Secretary of Agriculture Jardine, who has never believed ill of the Chicago grain speculators, announces his approval of the program of reform which has been laid before the members of the Chicago board of trade, consequent upon an investigation of the wild artificial rise in May wheat prices during and after the presidential campaign of 1924.

He wants the grain speculators to set up a business conduct committee which shall try to make the grain pit gamblers barely keep within the law. And he wants the directors of the pit to limit the daily fluctuations of speculative prices on grain in "emergency periods"—an intimation that he does not intend to so interpret and enforce the grain futures law as to stop the gambling.

This Chap Evidently Is a Strike Agitator, He Wants a Long One

HOLYOKE, Mass.—(FP)—Tag days were denied the striking workers of the Holyoke Worsted Mills by the local commissioner of the poor, on the grounds that the workers had not been on strike long enough to be poor. The weavers struck for a 15 per cent increase in pay four weeks ago. The mills reopened recently and claim to be operating at 50 per cent normal, but the strikers claim this is an exaggeration.

DAWES PLAN GOT BLACK EYE WITH BRITISH UNIONS

Exposed as Anti-Labor Campaign Basis

By CARL BRANNIN.

SCARBOROUGH, England.—(FP)—The British Trades Union Congress went on record by a large majority vote as against the Dawes Plan. This is the first time that this matter has come before the official labor movement in this country. Previously when a similar resolution was presented to the Labor Party Conference ways were found to keep it off the agenda. It is a striking repudiation of one of the acts of the Labor Government which Ramsay MacDonald, and James H. Thomas and other labor statesmen have defended with vigor. Mr. Thomas sat at his seat as a delegate and never opened his mouth.

The resolution declared that the low wages and long hours existing in Germany were directly due to the successful attempt of the employers to place the burden of this plan on the workers. The congress pledged itself, in adopting the resolution, to "assist the German workers in every possible way in improving their standard of life and to support the General Council in its efforts to obtain International Trade Union Unity which will enable the workers to fight on an international scale for the repudiation of the Dawes Plan."

A. J. Cook, secretary of the Miners Federation, in supporting the motion against the plan pointed out that in 1913 Britain exported 73.4 million tons of coal. In 1925 according to present estimates she would not export 50 million. France and Italy which formerly bought coal from England had been pushed out of the market by Germany's reparation payments.

"In England today," said Cook, "there are 200,000 miners unemployed. We have lived to regret what we have done. It has damned German workers. It has damned us at the same time. We cannot hold the seven-hour day here if the German miners are forced to work 8 and 9 hours. The Versailles Treaty must be revised; reparations must be done away with."

Pollitt reminded the delegates that every capitalist government in the world supported the Dawes Plan, surely it could not be very good for the workers. He read an item announcing that Mr. Ramsay MacDonald had been invited to address the Pilgrim Club, an exclusive New York institution, because of the valuable part he had played as the Labor Premier in getting the Dawes Plan accepted.

SENOR MORONES OPENS UP HIS BAG OF TRICKS

Worries Lots About Our Bankers' Interests

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 1.—Luis N. Morones, the "Gompers of Mexico," wants to make his position of class collaboration toward capital and his class treachery toward labor clear.

Asked regarding the supposed apprehension of capital of Mexican strikes and an advanced labor program, Senor Morones replied:

"If foreign capital comes to Mexico with a spirit of co-operation and in harmony with the needs of Mexico and the necessities of the laboring classes here, such capital need not fear that organized labor in Mexico will place any obstacles before it."

Let Us See Some Proof.

Senor Morones said the Regional Confederation of Labor and the American Federation of Labor had reached an agreement under which Mexican workers in the United States and all Americans in Mexico might join labor bodies in the respective countries, each organization guaranteeing the same treatment to native and foreign members.

This will be news to the outrageously oppressed Mexican workers who have come into the United States, only to find that not only the American government and state authorities regard them as the scum of the earth and subject them to dastardly persecution, but that the labor unions, particularly in the southwest, regard Mexicans as "spics" who are quite outside the pale of even consideration and decent treatment on the jobs and socially, let alone as workers equally entitled to membership on a par with others in the trade unions.

A Two-Edged Sword.

Senor Morones says that during his recent visit to the United States he "convinced some of the American bankers and businessmen that the Mexican labor movement is not antagonistic to capital." Opponents to Morones point out that the reverse side of this is that he has convinced American bankers that the leadership of Morones IS antagonistic to the interests of labor.

Craft Unions Based on Skill to Discover Open-Shop Shrewdness

NEW ORLEANS.—(FP)—Backing up the open shop interests the state of Alabama has organized at Gadsden the Alabama School of Trades and Industries and proposes to teach in three months the rudiments of a trade which the trade unions demand three years shall be taken in order to thoroughly school the apprentice. Fifty young Americans are on the ground from various sections of the state. All trades will be taught.

St. Louis Tailors Strike Is Half Won

ST. LOUIS.—(FP)—The backbone of opposition to the striking tailors of St. Louis was broken when nine employers settled with the union, sending half of the 500 strikers back to work. The strike has been in effect two weeks. The union demands the 44-hour week with the same scale of pay, $40.80 a week. An early settlement is anticipated since some of the leading bosses broke with the anti-union lineup.

DIFFERENCE IN DICTATORSHIPS SHOWN BY ITALY

Wages Cut; While Soviet Union Raises Wages

MILAN, Italy—(FP)—How Fascist union-smashing has affected the wages of Italian workers is shown by carefully compiled statistics published in a recent issue of La Giustizia, organ of the Reformist Socialists. Since the time when the Fascists seized power, breaking up the bona-fide trade unions and attempting to substitute for them the class-collaboration fascist "unions," wages have fallen steadily and the eight-hour day has in fact been abolished in nearly every industry, altho nominally it is still supposed to exist.

The average reduction in wages as between 1921 and 1924 in some of the principal industries was:

Textile	15-18 per cent
Machine	15-20 per cent
Chemical	15-25 per cent
Building	18-20 per cent
Wool	20-25 per cent
Food	20-30 per cent

Taking into account the cost of living, La Giustizia finds that whereas the trade unions had forced real wages on an average thruout the country to a standard above that of 1914 in the years following the war, in 1924 after several years of Fascist dictatorship real wages had fallen to as low as 79.66 per cent of the 1914 standard.

The heavy reductions in wages have compelled the workers to accept two, three or even four hours a day overtime in nearly every industry, in order to live. In the iron and steel industry 75 per cent of the workers perform three hours' extra work per day and railwaymen, post and telegraph workers, employed by the state, work 10 hours or more a day. A 12-hour day is now the rule for agricultural labor while seamen on some Italian ships work 16 hours a day.

Chamber of Commerce Called "White House Addition" by Guides

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 1.—The chamber of commerce building fronting the White House and the state department across LaFayette Square, is being announced by guides in the city of Washington as the "White House addition." The unusual display of interest by the chamber of commerce to the purely state affair of the interparliamentary union congress to be held Oct. 1, has caused many Washington workers to see the close connection between the financial interests in the chamber of commerce building and their executive committee of lackeys in the White House.

Must Organize Labor Party to Fight Wall Street in Wisconsin

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the Wall Street crowd gets ready to receive "Bob" LaFollette, Jr., in Washington as the youngest senator the United States has ever had. The money power did not oppose the election of Wisconsin's "crown prince" to fill the shoes of his father. It can expect that LaFollette, Jr., will not give them much trouble.

• • • •

One of the big facts about last Tuesday's special senatorial election in the badger state, that cannot be emphasized too strongly, is that LaFollette, Jr., ran as a regular republican. The so-called "LaFollette candidate," who will appear next year in an effort to unseat Senator Lenroot, will also appear on the ballot as a regular republican, whether it is Governor Blaine or Attorney General Ekern, both field marshals of the late LaFollette. With the elder LaFollette resting peacefully in his grave it can be depended on that any claims to "progressiveness" will rapidly be dropped by his successors. Governor Blaine started this backward march long before the senator died.

The vote last Tuesday was: LaFollette, Jr., republican, 223,308; Dithmar, independent republican, 89,036; Work, socialist, 11,085, and Bruce, democrat, 10,395.

This shows that there will not be much left after the fusion of the LaFollette-Dithmar forces, which will undoubtedly take place after the republican primaries in next years' elections. The "socialist" vote falls to a level with that of the candidate of the democratic party that has lost its legal standing thru scarcity of ballots supporting it. Work, the "socialist," polled barely one-tenth of the vote cast for Victor L. Berger, as "socialist" candidate for United States senator in the special election of 1918. The "socialist" vote outside Milwaukee county was under 3,000.

The lesson here for the class-conscious workers and poor farmers of Wisconsin is that they must organize to break away that large section of labor support that has been following blindly the LaFollette banner in the mistaken belief that it meant progress for its cause.

Unorganized workers and poor farmers have given their backing to LaFollette during half a century, with the result that today Wisconsin is in the lead among the non-union states of the nation, while the crop of mortgaged farms is steadily on the increase.

The campaign just over has sadly soiled the "progressive" mantle that LaFollette, Sr., bestowed upon his son. Even the public ownership of railroad's plank was dumped, along with measures to curtail the power of the capitalist courts. When LaFollette, Jr., thru his actions in the U. S. senate at Washington, completely divests himself of the magic robe, that has won so many political victories for his father, then the Wisconsin city and land workers will be forced to look about them for new means of carrying on the struggle.

The workers will learn that their great reliance will be in a Labor Party, that can win the support of the poor farmers, landless or staggering under confiscatory mortgages. The conditions in Wisconsin are ripe for the fight of the Labor Party against Wall Street's republican party, to which the LaFollette political generals are subservient, but in which they cannot hold the working and farming masses of the state.

The organization of the Labor Party forces in Wisconsin is the big task that awaits fulfillment before the congressional elections of next year. The Workers (Communist) Party will aid Wisconsin's workers in accomplishing that task.

TEAR BOMBS AND THE RESERVES IN NEW YORK STRIKE

A. C. W. Makes Fight on Scabby Concern

NEW YORK.—(FP)—After bringing a truck load of tear bombs and reserves from a dozen stations to scatter a mass of workers who gathered in front of the International Tailoring Co. factory here, the police next day raided the offices of the Cutters' union on the pretext that weapons would be found in the possession of some members. None of the alleged weapons were found, and no arrests were made.

The raid followed a spontaneous demonstration of the striking tailors in front of the shops of the tailoring company. It was caused by the action of 175 workers in the struck plant, who abandoned work in the morning and came to the union office to join the other strikers.

The workers who were around headquarters immediately started a demonstration, marching around the corner to the plant and gathering in the street in such a large crowd that all traffic on the busy thoroughfare was completely stopped. Police reserves came and drove away the strikers, without resorting to the use of the truck load of tear gas bombs they had brought along.

The strike against the International Tailoring company is one of the most bitter the Amalgamated Clothing Workers has ever conducted. Early in the strike the company obtained an injunction which, if enforced, would have prevented the workers meeting in their own halls. Despite this drastic injunction the union has kept its strike up, with five pickets on the line before the plant of the company. The pickets have been unusually successful, despite rigidly enforced rules of silence, in getting workers in the shop to quit and join the union.

RAKOSI FACES EXECUTION BY HORTHY REGIME

Communist Leader and 100 Others on Trial

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—Mathias Rakosi, leader of the Hungarian Communists, who has fallen into the hands of the Horthy agents in Budapest, and who, according to information received by the International Labor Defense, has passed thru a severe third degree in which he suffered the worst of the white terror brutalities, is now in danger of execution.

The Hungarian government, in order to wreak vengeance against the Communists and to stop the growing movement of workers against the Hungarian agents, are threatening to rush Rakosi thru a sham trial and execute him.

Big Demonstration

The International Labor Defense has called a demonstration against the threatened execution and the arrest of 100 workers in Budapest and is demanding the freedom of all political prisoners in the Horthy dungeons. The demonstration is arranged particularly in connection with the visit of 7 Hungarian white terrorists to the interparliamentary union. These have arrived to tour the country on behalf of the Horthy regime. The International Labor Defense has invited all labor organizations to participate in the demonstration to be held in Union Square on Monday, October 5th, at 5:30 p. m.

TURKS PREPARE TO RESIST ALL BRITISH ATTACKS

Hold Reserves in Readiness for War

CONSTANTINOPLE, Oct. 1.—Mobilization of the Turkish army is under way to resist any attempt on the part of England to attack the Turkish frontier.

Four classes of Turkish recruits, ranging from the ages of [illegible] to [illegible] years have been called to the defense of the interests of the Angora government. The officers of the first and second reserves are to undergo a strict medical examination and are to be prepared to answer the call to arms at the first possible sign of British troops crossing the Turkish frontier.

Demand Mosul

Turkey is much aroused over the question of Mosul, which was taken away from Turkey and handed to imperialist Great Britain in the mandate for Iraq. Turkey does not expect the British controlled league of nations to give her a satisfactory settlement. Tho The Hague is discussing the case now, there is no doubt in the minds of either the British or the Turkish statemen that Mosul will be given to England again.

"Turkey will not stand by with her arms folded," says one of the Turkish newspapers, "and permit England to acquire Mosul for the benefit of her petroleum kings."

HELP CHINA!

In all the principal cities of China today, the workers are rising in revolt against their oppressors, feeling the breath of freedom that comes to them from the workers' government of Soviet Russia, they, too, want to be free.

The iron hand of international imperialism is pressing harder and harder upon their throats in an effort to starve them and keep them in submission, abject slavery and servitude.

The success of international capitalism spells starvation, exploitation, imprisonment and death for the workers of all countries.

Don't Let Them Starve

GERMAN TOILERS IN RUSSIA SAY MENSHEVIKS LIE

Delegation Answers Plea of Traitors

MOSCOW—(By Inprecorr.)—Before its departure the German workers' delegation published a letter in answer to a letter signed by the bureau of the Russian social-democratic party. The delegation acknowledges receipt of the letter and points out in its reply that it has seen everything in the U. S. S. R. and that all doors including those of the prisons have been opened to it. Only one thing was not seen by the delegation—the mensheviks.

The letter proceeds: "You write in the name of your party organization, but we found nothing of the sort. Have you not confidence in us, we who hold the same opinions as you? Where we looked for you and found you, you had for a long time ceased to be that which you once were. Nevertheless we attempted to prove your statements, but we must honestly confess that not one of them is true.

Prisoners Not Complaining.

"Further: Amongst hundreds and even thousands of people we did not find a single one to corroborate your statements. We had the right of free entry into all prisons and we found mensheviks and social revolutionaries there, but not one of them could complain about anything but the loss of freedom." The letter is signed by Nelle, Freiberger, Baer and Benevitz.

The Isvestia publishes a statement of the German workers' delegation to the workers and peasants of the U. S. S. R. in which the impressions and opinions formed by the delegation are shortly described. The declaration stresses the fact that it always chose the places to be visited itself and always received accurate information upon all questions for which any interest was expressed. The declaration puts the question:

Is Soviet Russia in reality that state in which the fundamental principles of Marx and Engels are being carried out? The answer must be that the German working class has an absolutely false idea of the U. S. S. R., says the declaration. It is completely correct that the U. S. S. R. is actually on the way to the realization of the aims set by Marx and Engels. The work of economic reconstruction is carried out in the direction of socialism with the participation of the broadest sections of the toiling masses.

Condition of Workers Better.

The much hated dictatorship of the proletariat is in reality the true workers' democracy which differs favorably from the so-called "democracy" of the western countries. The declaration points out that not only the workers and peasants, but also the overwhelming majority of the engineers, technical experts, teachers, scholars, etc., also support the Soviet government. The workers of the U. S. S. R. have decided upon the eight-hour day for adults and the six-hour day for youths. The shop councils have great influence and take an active part in the settlement of all social questions, for instance, the socialist construction of industry.

One-time palaces and villas are at the disposal of the toilers. On the average the Russian workers do not live worse than the Germans, and with regard to nourishment, they live considerably better. The material and cultural level of the broad masses rises from year to year. The enormous perspectives for the furthering of the national economy make the employment of tens of thousands of skilled workers possible in the various branches of industry.

In conclusion, the declaration says that the German working class will not act indifferently towards the existing danger of imperialist intervention against the U. S. S. R. for the fate of the latter is closely bound with the [illegible] of the whole working class. The declaration concludes with the statement that only the creation of a united [illegible] union international can prevent the danger of new wars.

CHINESE PEASANTS AND WORKERS SUPPORT CANTON, SEAT OF LEFT REVOLUTIONARY KUOMINTANG RULE

By SINBAD.

CANTON (By Mail).—Since the death of Dr. Sun Yat Sen, the world at large has come to know a little more of China and still more of the seat of the national revolutionary movement, Canton. The victory of the left revolutionary Kuomintang over the reactionary militarists, Yang Hsi Min, Liu Chen Wan and others, who constituted what was known as the "right Kuomintang," was due largely to the support of the workers and peasants of Kwangtung.

Peasants Support Revolution.

Under the rule of the reactionary militarists the workers and peasants were burdened with heavy taxes and suffered a great deal so that when the struggle took place between the usurpers, the reactionary militarists and the warriors of the people, the revolutionary Kuomintang, the victory was complete. Now the nationalist government has been reorganized and the committee or commissariat system of government has been instituted. At present Canton is the seat of the three divisions of the new administration; the nationalist government proper which is to have jurisdiction over all of China as soon as the imperialist subsidized Pekin government is overthrown; the provincial government which controls the province of Kwangtung; the city government of Canton which controls the affairs of the capital of the national government. These three are all directed by and strictly follow out the orders of the Kuomintang.

The recent imperialist butcheries in different parts of China have aroused the already enraged masses of China to the full realization of the existence of that terrible ogre who has entered and established itself in their country.

Unequal Treaties.

Unequal treaties have been concluded with all the say on the side of the imperialist powers and concessions and settlements have been forced from China ever since the occasion when Great Britain brot in her warship and troops to force opium into China. With the loss of Hongkong and the loss of certain treaty ports to the British and other imperialists, China began to take it as a matter of course and with the Taiping indemnities, the spheres of influence, the Boxer indemnities, the twenty-one demands, etc., China lost whatever international prestige she had and became the "happy hunting ground" for any of the imperialist powers.

Cossack Methods Used.

Concessions and settlements being established at most of the strategic points in China the administration of these became totally foreign. The laws are made by the imperialists to whom the concession was granted, the taxes are collected by them, the imperialist police with methods equalled only by those used by the czarist cossacks to "protect" the settlement or concession and imperialist economic monopoly is fostered not only within the concession but thruout all China.

The courts of justice in these settlements are naturally partial and when there is a judicial decision to be made in a case between a foreigner and a Chinese, it is usually rendered in favor of the former. Imperialist men-o-war are always present in the harbors adjoining the "treaty ports" and sailors and marines are landed upon the slightest pretext. The excuse always given is that they want to "protect the lives and property of their nationals." The actual reason is an attempt to strike mortal terror into the hearts of the Chinese.

Civilizing China!

Wholesale, unprovoked killings of Chinese students and workers are the standards of civilization which are lauded so far and wide. The Chinese are beginning to realize the important fact that the existence of the unequal treaties and the possession by the imperialists of settlements and concessions are the fundamental causes of the atrocious and barbaric actions of the imperialists in China, and that until these treaties are abrogated and until the concessions and settlements are returned to China, imperialism will necessarily continue her bestial aggression.

The fundamental solution for the present situation is the abolition of the unequal treaties and the return of the concessions. Dr. Sun Yat Sen died, but left a heritage to the Kuomintang; those principles that he endeavored to carry out in his life time. The revolutionary Kuomintang true to the principles of its creator, Dr. Sun Yat Sen, and true to the body that its creator had toiled to emancipate, the Chinese masses, after defeating the enemies of the revolution within the Kuomintang, is going forth to battle with imperialism, to abolish the unequal treaties, thus establishing economic and political independence for China.

It is not a simple task, but a movement that has the masses of peasants and workers willing to battle to the death to insure its success, cannot fail to succeed.

A. F. OF L. MEET TO PLUNGE INTO SWILL BARREL

Insurance and Banks Lead the Agenda

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Oct. 1—The American Federation of Labor, which will meet here in annual convention next Monday, plans to consider, so it is announced, the further departure from policies of class struggle of entering into insurance just as it has entered banking. The executive council has now before it proposal to organize an insurance company with a capitalization of $2,000,000. Now that the Bankers' association convention is over here, the A. F. of L. is next in line.

Other matters the council wants to talk about include labor banks, employe-and-customer ownership, company unions and the perennial adjudication of the jurisdictional dispute between the bricklayers and the plasterers. A so-called "organization drive" is on the agenda to give the convention the air of doing something.

Delegations of fraternal nature are expected from England, Germany, Mexico and South America. Green is supposedly slated for re-election on the basis of his following the policies of Gompers, but there may be some quarreling over places on the executive council.

SOVIETS AIDING JEWISH WORKERS TO WORK FARMS

Colonization of Crimea Assisted

NEW YORK, October 1.—The lies spread thruout the capitalist world about the persecution of the Jewish workers in the Soviet Union, was refuted by Dr. Bernard Kahn, in his report on the Crimean colonization of Jewish workers on farms carried on successfully by the Joint Distribution Committee which is raising $15,000,000 to further the work.

"The new settler comes to the land to become a peasant, but a Jewish peasant. The sabbath and all the holidays are observed," declared Bernard Kahn. "The lack of interference on the part of the Soviet government officials and their agencies makes it possible for them to develop their schools and institutions along Jewish lines. The Agro-Joint (Russian official title of the Joint Distribution Committee) does everything in its power to develop their schools and institutions along Jewish lines."

Land Granted.

Land is granted the Jewish settlers on the same basis as it is granted to all Russian peasants. According to the law of the Soviet Union, the peasant can get all the land that he can use and it belongs to him and his family as long as they work it. The peasant can neither sell nor mortgage the land.

The Joint Distribution Committee is collecting $15,000,000 to be used for the purpose of colonizing the Jewish population on the land.

Non-Productive Occuption.

Before the war, the Jewish population was divided into the following categories: 38 per cent were merchants, shopkeepers and traders; 35 per cent artisans; 5½ per cent were professionals; 7 per cent were servants, etc., and only 3½ per cent were engaged in agriculture. In the period of the revolution and after the revolution, the Jewish population found themselves ill-fixed in the economic structure of Soviet Russia, which demanded that some form of productive work be engaged in by all residents of the country. The Jewish population were mainly in the non-productive and useless occupations. This move of colonizing the Jewish merchants and others who carried on non-productive work, is going on in good pace with the able assistance of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics.

Committee Program.

The Joint Distribution Committee intends in the next three years to spend $8,400,000 for the development of the agricultural colonies of which $4,500,000 will go for agricultural machinery and $900,000 for further assistance to those already working as farmers.

British Business in Marked Decline Under Last Year and July

LONDON, Oct. 1.—Big reductions both in imports and exports are recorded in the board of trade returns for August just issued.

The imports for the months were valued at £91,732,604 which is lower by £7,012,245 than the total for July, and by £10,435,328 than the amount for the corresponding month last year.

Exports totalled £61,037,999, a reduction of £5,250,295 compared with August, 1924.

In spite of the attempt to bolster up business by means of subsidies and tariffs, the slump is considered serious.

Agust is usually a slack month, but a comparison with August of last year shows a serious decline.

TOM LEWIS APPEALS FOR CORPS OF WORKER CORRESPONDENTS

A letter from Comrade Tom Lewis, district organizer of the California district of the Workers Party, and a fighter well known thruout the rebel movement, asks worker militants to get behind the worker correspondent move of the DAILY WORKER.

The DAILY WORKER has started a campaign to persuade its readers to also be writers, to send in news of interest to workers from all parts of the country. The letter from Comrade Lewis follows:

"It seems to me, the call for the organization of worker correspondents is a very essential thing to develop our Communist press. The conditions prevalent thruout the country industrially, the continual intensification in production and the great numbers out of employment, makes it appear, with the abundant material at hand, that the comrades should bet busy and broadcast their shop news when such a splendid opportunity is offered them.

"The proletarian has always told his story verbally to his friends and comrades. He is not accustomed to using the pen except when he is applying for the illusive job, consequently its a difficult thing for him to compose an article. He is very often handicapped too because of the lack of education.

"He must get away from the old idea that he cannot write of his experiences, and also break loose from his chain of fear, that he will make too many mistakes. Who is it that doesn't make them? Being a Communist, one should not hesitate being afraid to make a mistake. It is by our mistakes we learn.

"If the Communists would only make up their minds to jot down the happenings in the place where they work a few times, until what they are attempting looks pretty good to them, it may surprise them and many of us too. Come on comrades! Try, and keep on trying. Don't continue to be satisfied with other people's writing. Remember, the shop news must come from those who work in them. None feel the hardships like those who suffer them. Break loose, tell the story as you know it and you feel it. Send your message to the DAILY WORKER. By so doing you will be aiding not only yourself, but your fellow workers in the struggle. Encourage them by showing your courage."

Former Police Spy, Ex-Co-op Head, Gets Death, Report Says

BERLIN, October 1.—Reports from Moscow state that the former director of the All-Russian Co-operative Bank in Siberia, Gabell, has been sentenced by a Moscow court to be shot. It was found that he had been a czarist police spy and that for years he had carried on secret operations against the revolutionary movement.

It was after Gabell had been sent to Siberia for participation in the 1905 revolt that he asked for clemency from the czar and turned informer against his own comrades, the report says. He lived in Irkutsk for years as a police informer and somehow managed to evade detection, entering the government in Siberia after the revolution.

ALAS, THE POOR BANKERS PROTEST AT "REGULATION"

Worked to Death Foreclosing Mortgages

ATLANTIC CITY, Oct. 1—The American Bankers' association is finishing its convention here. After electing their officers they got down to business with their usual protest against "strict regulations" which they say prevents them making from other peoples' money enuf to save them from poverty and distress.

They complain that one tenth of the capital of the nation's banks has been diverted from national to state banks because of the freer manipulation of first mortgage real estate bonds allowed state banks. This, they say, threatens the "very foundation of the national banking system."

The bankers claim that the conditions of the farmers are being improved, because a "surplus of stock" has been wiped out, while the demand for beef is increasing.

Nationalizing Girls Is Old Stuff, Now We Internationalize 'Em

By W. FRANCIS AHERN.

SYDNEY, Australia—(FP)—One aspect of the visit of the American Naval Fleet to Australia was the manner in which the Big Business press called upon the girls of the cities visited by the sailors to "give the boys a good time." Some of the statements in the newspapers came very near to suggesting prostitution. The following is an extract of a statement appearing in the Melbourne Age, a leading Big Business newspaper:

"Every young sailor worth his salt has only one question on his tongue—What sort of girls have you got?

"So it is up to you, girls, to do your best for Australia. You can do more for the cause of international peace in the next ten days than the League of Nations is likely to do in the next ten years. Human relations are more powerful than international relations. The amorous reciprocities of youth will draw nations closer together than the trading reciprocities that are embodied in treaties."

This is a fair sample of the kind of stuff that appeared in the majority of the newspapers. The young girls of Australia did mix freely with the American sailor-lads. There have been many heavy hearts, and sorrowing mothers as a result of the fleet's stay in Austrialia.

One point worth noting was that as soon as the fleet left Sydney and Melbourne, the puritans howled for a cleanup of the 'red light' quarters in both cities, and the police and civic fathers got busy on the job. But nothing was said about cleaning up the 'red light' localities while the fleet was paying its visit.

Crown Prince Willy Kidnaps Daughter of German Proletarian

BERLIN, Oct. 1.—Grave charges have been made against the former crown prince in the Prussian diet, and his conduct is now under investigation. A deputy speaking in the diet charged that Hildegarde Rappichs, daughter of Gustav Rappichs, an engine driver, has been forcibly detained in the crown prince's castle at Oels.

Although the mother of the girl did not object to the relations between her daughter and the crown prince, the father did and made an effort to bring her back to her home. The deputy declared that while the engine driver was making efforts to get his daughter from the crown prince's castle at Oels, he was placed under arrest, adjudged insane and placed in an asylum. So far as can be learned, Hildegarde is still in the toil of the villain.

THE LIST GROWS, BUT NOT AS FAST AS THE NEED

WHEN will it be possible to rest in our efforts to save THE DAILY WORKER? This is a question which the slackening in THE DAILY WORKER drive suggests. For during the past week the returns in the campaign have been showing a steady decrease. Unless the tendency to believe that the DAILY WORKER crisis is over and that we can now rest in our efforts is stopped our organ will soon face a situation similar to that which resulted in the emergency call for help.

We will be able to rest from our labor in saving THE DAILY WORKER when the task we set out to accomplish is finished. So far we are quite a long way from the end. In spite of the good beginning, we have not even yet been successful in our goal for the first $10,000. In the meantime new obligations have been piling up which must be met and the urgency for paying them is becoming just as serious as was the case at the beginning of the campaign.

The following are the receipts for September 28, 29 and 30. The record is good for those who appear and for those whose names have been on the honor roll previously. What is still lacking in the campaign is the effort to save THE DAILY WORKER on the part of the thousands of readers who have not yet taken part.

SAVE THE DAILY WORKER is the slogan and there can be no rest until it is saved.

RIFFIANS PLAY PUSS IN CORNER WITH AVIATORS

Teach Yankee Flyers How to Fight

QUEZZON, French Morocco, Oct. 1.—The American mercenary aviators got a taste of Riffian war that was not all pleasant. They set out with a convoy to the relief of Louganous. All were mounted and thot they were on a lark, until Riffian bullets shot their horses from under them.

The American mercenaries, who have bragged so much of their bravery, charged the woods. When they got there no Riffians could be found. The Riffians fired from another side, the Americans charged there.

This game of the Riffians continued for over four hours, keeping the train and its American guardians out in the hot sun. Not a single tribesman could be seen.

The bullets kept the Americans dodging and then after the Riffs had captured the supplies convoyed by the Americans, they left the valley.

Tanks came to the assistance of the Americans, but when they reached the top of the hills, not a trace of of the supplies nor the Riffians was to be found.

Use Spanish Guns.

TANGIERS, Spanish Morocco, Oct. 1.—Tetuan, the capital of Spanish Morocco, was heavily shelled by the Riffian forces, using seventy-five millimeter guns captured from the Spaniards.

Heavy casualties were inflicted by the Riffians on those within the fort.

Spanish convoy carrying provisions to Malmussi from Morro Viejo, was taken by Riffian artillery. Heavy losses were inflicted on the guards. This gives the Riffs more munitions and other necessary articles.

No Surrender!

RIFF HEADQUARTERS, Targhsuit, Oct. 1.—Sidi Mohammed, commander of Abd-el-Krim's Riffian army intimates that if the war is not over by this winter, it will continue for another year.

"To conquer us the French will have to invade our country and kill us to the last man. We will never submit to slavery," declared the Riff. "We will fight if necessary until our nation is exterminated."

"No power since the world war began has ever been able to control the Riff and the people there remain substantially as they were before the the Arab conquest 1,100 years ago. We are a tenacious people and France cannot conquer us."

Marshal Lyautey, who has just been forced by the turns of events to resign, attempted to drown the Riffian movement of independence in blood. His attempts at taking away privileges long enjoyed by the Riffs, led to the Riffian struggle for the independence of Morocco.

TWENTY MILLION TAX DODGERS IN UNITED STATES

Treasury Department Is Stumped

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—The treasury is fretting about its inability to collect income tax. Of the 115,000,000 people in the U. S. no more than 7,000,000 make out income tax returns and only 4,500,000 make payments. The treasury figures there are at least 20,000,000 tax dodgers.

Deputy internal revenue collectors made 45,854 investigations that resulted in making that many tax-payers come across with a little better than $4,000,000. At the same time the treasury was forced to refund over $11,000,000 to taxpayers because of illegal assessment. In order to make tax returns complete, it would seem that one half the population would have to be pressed into service as deputy collectors to make the other half fork over.

J. F. Anderson, former vice-president and recent presidential candidate against Johnston, stated that the recall petition bore the endorsement of 152 lodges; the constitution required 119 endorsements.

He declined to discuss the next moves to be made by the opposition, but declared that recent proposals by the Johnston administration, that the election laws of the union be changed, included reforms ordered by the Detroit convention a year ago and not carried out by Johnston before the election of the new council. This, he maintained, was proof of his charge that the election of last May was "crooked."

SOVIET RUSSIA SENDS PERSIA 100,000 POODS OF WHEAT; AIDS TEHERAN'S WORKERS AND PEASANTS

TEHERAN, Persia, Oct. 1.—Soviet Russia has presented Teheran with 100,000 poods of wheat and offers to sell more to Persia at a reasonable rate.

Teheran has been the scene of many bread riots the past few months. Wheat and grains have been scarce and it was impossible for the peasants and workers to get bread except at prohibitive prices. Russian workers, seeing the plight of their Teheran brothers, have sent them this aid.

EVEN OBREGON SPURNS STRUCK FRISCO HOTELS

Waiters Putting Up a Good Battle

By TOM LEWIS.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 1—Waiters on strike at the Palace and St. Francis Hotels here wired to General Alvaro Obregon, former president of Mexico, who was about to arrive, asking him not to stop at either scab hostelry. Obregon wired back that he wouldn't. Nevertheless the St. Francis was decorated for the occasion.

Mayor Rolf met the distinguished visitor with a cordon of Frisco's finest and the parade started on the way to the St. Francis. A waiter showed Obregon's telegram to the mayor and said he thot Obregon was a union man. "So am I" said the mayor and the parade kept on its way. In the vicinity of the St. Francis, however, some confusion developed in the patry and the procession moved to the Bellevue, a union house.

Waiters Winning.

The striking waiters are conducting a good battle against the two biggest hotels in Frisco, so good, in fact that the industrial association has broadcast letters appealing to business men to help the scab houses out. As for Obregon, he is being feted by the business element of the city and capturing the front page of the press which are featuring him as a leader of the Mexican masses—which of course, he is not.

KELLOGG BLOWS OFF HOT AIR AT CONGRESS MEET

Parliamentarians of the Capitalists Gather

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 1—The 23rd annual session of the interparliamentary union congress has opened in Washington at the hall of the house of representatives with delegates from all nations. Three hundred delegates have assembled. The meeting is mainly a fascist-tory conference.

An address of welcome by Senator McKinley and Secretary of State Kellogg occupied the greater portion of the day.

Every effort is being made to keep any mention of the exclusion of Shapurji Saklatvala, Communist member of the British house of commons, from being raised on the floor of the congress by the tories.

The main points on the agenda for the congress which is to end on October 7, is international peace, reduction of armaments, codification of international laws, and the plight of minorities. The joke of the entire proceeding is that many delegates who are present have so little in common with the questions to be discussed that it will amount to nothing more than a play on words.

R. R. Pres. Complains.

The president of the Chicago and Northwestern railroad complains that auto bus traffic is eating into railroad revenue and must be stopped. Since 1916 the passenger business of his road has decreased 50 per cent while the bus business has jumped 165 per cent in the road's territory.

AUSTRALIAN SEAMEN WIN STRIKE BUT BRITISH LINES STILL OUT

SYDNEY, Australia, October 1.—(FP)—The Seamen's Union has won out in its fight against the shippng combine in Australia. The strike has been declared off, and the vessels at the various ports are now being manned as quickly as possible.

The shipowners have agreed to endorse the rates of pay and working conditions on the ships' articles, arrange fortnightly payment of wages, and allow time off every month for stop-work meeting.

The men, on their part, have given way to the owners on several minor points, but the result of the settlement is undoubtedly a big gain for the seamen.

The DAILY WORKER points out that the victory of the Australian seamen spoken of above, will tend to aid the "outlaw" strike of the British seamen, which is still on and should still be supported.

INTERPARLIAMENTARY UNION CHIEFS IN ATTEMPT TO BAN SAKLATVALA CASE FROM CONGRESS DISCUSSIONS

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 1.—All attempts to raise the issue of the exclusion of Shapurpi Saklatvala, Communist member of the British house of commons on the floor of the interparliamentary union congress in session in Washington, D. C., will be resisted by the council in charge of the meeting.

This action followed the adoption of a resolution recognizing the right of the United States government to bar Saklatvala, at a meeting of the council behind closed doors.

Saklatvala Sends Letter

Shapurji Saklatvala in a letter to the congress, handed the committee by Senator Borah of Idaho, denounces his exclusion from America for the speech made in the British parliament for Indian independence. The committee refuses to make public the letter. They fear that if the contents of the letter were known it would give the imperialists of England and America a black eye.

Protest meetings are being held in the big industrial centers demanding the admittance of Shapurji Saklatvala.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 1.—A well attended protest meeting against the exclusion of Shapurji Saklatvala was held at 225 Valencia St., at which speakers in Hindu, Chinese and English addressed the meeting in a protest against the exclusion of the Communist member of the British parliament for defending the independence of India.

OPEN SHOP WARD COMPANY STARTS PRICE SLASHING

Forces the Small Shops Against Wall

A price-slashing war has been started in Chicago by the Ward Baking company of Chicago in an attempt to run the small union bakeshops out of business. An order came from the New York headquarters of the Ward Baking company authorizing a reduction of about 20 per cent in the price of their bread.

Large loaves that have sold for 15 cents each are now to be sold to the customer at 12½ cents. The small 10 cent loaves are to sold at 8½ cents.

The wholesaler will buy the 15 cent loaf at 10 cents and the 10 cent loaf at 7 cents.

The Ward Baking company, representing a capitalization of $150,000,000, is known as an anti-union concern. Union men in this plant stand no chance of working there very long as the spies maintained by the company ferret them out very quickly.

This concern was a union concern five years ago. At that time the company attempted to force a cut of 20 per cent in the wages, paid the workers. The workers refused to accept this reduction and went on strike. Since then the company has been operating on the open-shop anti-union basis.

Preparatory to the present cut in the price of bread, a cut in wages of all those employed in the bakeshop was made.

Druggan-Lake Gold Makes Sheriff Worry and Thompson Happy

The sheriff of Cook county, Peter Hoffman, is likely to go to jail because he winked his eye at the behavior of jail officials, also in hot water, who "shook down" Terry Druggan and Johnny Lake, millionaire beer-runners for something like a grand total of thirty thousand in return for the extension of Waldorf privileges to the two bootleggers who are boarding at the county jail.

The sheriff, the warden and seven jail attendants are being tried before Federal Judge Wilkerson and things look bad for the lot. The county blow-up has caused the usual political hurry-scurry and Chicagoans can be sure that much mud is being thrown in the waters of local politics that they don't know about. A rumor has it that William Hale Thompson will take this occasion to boom himself for mayor again.

NEW YORK BOMB SQUAD GUARDS FASCISTI MEET

Fear Repitition of Pier Greeting

NEW YORK CITY, October 1.—With the assistance of acting Captain James J. Gegan and six members of the New York bomb squad, the Italian fascist delegates to the interparliamentary union congress in Washington, D. C., were able to cheer Mussolini at a luncheon and conference arranged by a New York fascist society in the Biltmore Hotel.

Every precaution was taken by the bomb squad so that the precious hides of the oppressors of Italy's working class would not get a taste of the hatred felt toward them by the Italian workers in America.

As they landed in America, a delegation of Italian workers greeted them at the pier with derisive shouts. The police did all they could to break up the demonstration to no avail.

RARE OLD VINTAGES SURE FLOW IN FRENCH EMBASSY AFTER DEBT CONFERENCE

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 1—After a successful agreement had been concluded by the French imperialists and American bankers a booze banquet was held at the French embassy.

The French under extra-territorial rights have the right to guzzle all the liquor their heart desires without any interference by the United States prohibition department.

On the wine card passed around along with a menu of rich viands we find it start with aperitifs, Martinis, and Manhattan cocktails, sherry and port, then dry white Burgundy, afterward rich red Bordeaux, and finally a rare old vintage of champagne with cognac and chartreuse with the coffee (if any of the delegation will want it) and cigars.

McAndrew Dangles Lavender Coats to Win Teachers' Favor

Superintendent William McAndrew in line with his policy to break the teachers' organization so as to bring the teachers completely within his control flares into view in the capitalist press every few weeks with some new attention which he hopes will win them. In an editorial he wrote in the Educational Review, a New York magazine of which he is editor he recommends lavender coats "just like the artists wear" as an idea for teachers' uniforms. Only a few weeks ago he advocated lavender blackboards with pink chalk to make classrooms more cheerful.

The teachers' federation sees in his last proposal only another demonstration of his plan to factory-ise the schools.

Thaw Shuns Lassies and Gives Gold to Poor; So He Says

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—The first thing Harry K. Thaw did when he hit New York for a visit to Broadway, his hunting grounds before he was confined in an insane asylum years ago, was to deny any intention of "picking up lassies on the highways or by-ways and giving them money."

Harry says he mother told him before he left Pittsburgh where he and his mother control steel mills, coal mines and banks to the tune of several millions, "Now remember, Harry, that there are many people not as well off we are." So Harry gives his money to charity—according to Harry.

HARRIMAN WILL BUILD SOVIET MANGANESE MINE

Agrees to Export 16 Million Tons

MOSCOW, (By Mail.)—According to the following interesting details, now made public, the concession agreement signed between the Soviet government and the business firm of Harriman and company provides for transferring to the latter firm for a period of 20 years the exclusive right to prospect, work and exploit the Chiaturi deposits and to export manganese and manganese peroxide from these deposits, which are located in Sharopan county, Kutais province, in Transcaucasia.

The concessionary firm is also accorded the right to make use of the land, forests and waters throughout the territory of the Soviet Union for the requirements of the concession under the general regulations in accordance with the prevailing laws of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

The concessionary is exempted from the payment of all taxes and assessments with the exception of minor duties (license, stamp court fees and others) as stipulated in the agreement.

The concessionary receives the privilege of importing from abroad articles and machines needed for the equipment and exploitation of the concession enterprise, such equipment to be importable duty-free during the first four years of the concession period, while articles now produced in the Soviet Union and patented abroad shall be importable duty-free during the course of five years from the date the concession is signed.

The government retains within the concession region a sector containing ore reserves amounting to 15,000,000 tons, which it has the right to work for domestic requirements. In addition to this, throughout the concession period the government has the privilege of obtaining from the concessionary firm at cost price the quantity of manganese requisite for the industries of the U. S. S. R.

Modern Equipment.

The concessionary engages himself to construct and exploit the concession enterprise in accordance with the latest technical achievements. In particular, the concessionary firm is obliged to build new ore washing plants and to mechanize the delivery of ore from the mines to these plants within the first three and a half years, and to erect mechanical loading equipment (an elevator) with an annual loading capacity of 2,000,000 tons at the port of Poti before the end of the fifth year.

Within the same terms of years the concessionary has to convert the Chiaturi narrow gauge branch railroad into a broad gauge line so that the freight capacity of the branch in question may correspond with the loading installation at Poti. The concessionary is also bound to provide with additional equipment the railway sector from Chiaturi to the port of Poti, in order to increase its traffic capacity.

The concessionary firm is obliged to expend not less than $4,000,000 on the equipment work mentioned above, not less than $1,000,000 of this total to be spent on the construction of the port loading elevator, $2,000,000 on the branch railroad, and not less than $1,000,000 on the equipment of the washing plants at Chiaturi.

Soviet Controls Railway.

As soon as its re-equipment is completed, the Chiaturi railway branch passes into the control of the people's commissariat for transports, which will move the concessionary's freight with special locomotives and rolling stock supplied for this purpose by the concessionary. The technical specifications for the construction of the railway and the loading equipment at Poti are appended to the agreement, in connection with which the people's commissariat for transports is given the right to supervise the building operations. The freight rates to be charged for carrying the concessionary's freight, before as well as after the branch is rebuilt, are stipulated in detail in the agreement.

The concessionary guarantees to export not less than 16,000,000 tons of Chiaturi manganese and manganese peroxide during the term of the concession agreement, annual minimum exports being fixed for each year according to a definite sliding scale. Apart from this, the agreement sets a minimum yearly production program, in conformity with which the concessionary is obliged to produce 300,000 tons during the first year, 400,000 tons the second year, 450,000 tons the third year, and not less than 500,000 tons during each succeeding year.

In return for the concession, the holding firm is to make the following payments to the government in accordance with a system elaborated in detail in the agreement: For manganese, $3 on each ton exported during the first three years, and $4 on each ton exported thereafter; for manganese peroxide $8 on each ton exported during the first three years, and $9 on each ton exported during subsequent years. The quantity of manganese peroxide exported may not be less than 4 per cent of the manganese shipments.

Soviet Labor Laws Applied

In addition to this, the concessionary firm is to make a payment of 2 rubles per hectare on the sectors allotted to it for exploitation, and 100 rubles per hectare on the area turned over to it for building purposes.

In labor matters the concessionary firm submits to the general legislation of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

The agreement also provides that the government shall participate in the profits of the concessionary firm to the extend of 50 per cent if the price of manganese rises above the fixed sum, in conjunction with which the concessionary must keep special sales accounts.

The concessionary must deposit a security of $1,000,000 in a foreign bank within three weeks after the agreement is signed and $1,0000,000 in the state bank of the U. S. S. R. within five days after the dissolution of the "Chemo" (Chiaturi Manganese Export company) as an advance on account of future payments.

Disputed questions between the government and the concessionary firm concerning the interpretation of the contract in whole or in separate clauses, are to be adjudicated by a court of arbitration consisting of one representative of the Soviet government and one of the concessionary, who select an umpire by mutual agreement. If no agreement is reached concerning an umpire, the government is to name six candidates from among the professors of the Sorbonne University in Paris or of the University of Oslo and the concessionary is to choose one of these as umpire.

CANADIAN PARTY CONVENTION REPORTS BIG TASKS AHEAD

The proceedings of the fourth national convention of the Communist Party of Canada held in Toronto on Sept. 11-13, indicate that slow but unquestionable progress is being made by the Canadian party towards development of its influence among the Canadian workers.

The outstanding features in the Canadian situation for the past year were reported as: A continued decline in the trade union movement of Canada, the liquidation of the acute agrarian and industrial crisis of 1920-1923, increasing penetration of American imperialism and open shop drives accompanied by expropriation of thousands of mortgaged farmers.

Industrial Report.

Comrade Tim Buck, reporting on industrial work, pointed out that 50 per cent of the local trade unions had supported the amalgamation program and other moves of the party but that the bureucratic officialdom stepped drastically in whenever any organizational measures were proposed.

The convention laid definite plans for the immediate reorganization of the party on the basis of factory nuclei and set up an agitprop department to Bolshevise the membership thru an intensive campaign of Marxist-Leninist education.

Political Resolution.

The immediate demands of the party formulated in its political resolution are, the establishment of state unemployment insurance, maximum eight-hour day and five-day week, a national minimum wage of $25 per week, the repeal of anti-labor legislation, abolition of the use of troops in industrial disputes and full recognition of Soviet Russia.

Labor Party.

On the Canadian labor party the political resolution says. "The establishment of a mass labor party in this country is an imperative necessity. The Communist Party of Canada will do everything in its power for the upbuilding of the Canadian labor party and will, within that party, advocate the linking up of the provincial sections into a country-wide party."

A national executive committee of thirteen was elected including Comrades Buck, Spector, McDonald, Custance, Bruce and Moriarty.

Russian Imports and Exports Improving in Spite of Bad Harvest

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., (Tass)—Oct. 1.—According to the statistics issued by the people's commissariat for the three-quarter period of the 1924-25 economic year, exports have decreased by 2,400,000 roubles while imports have increased 250,600,000 roubles.

In 1923-24 exports totalled 392,000,000 roubles, while in 1924-25 they totalled 389,600,000 roubles.

Imports in 1923-24 were 249,000,000 roubles and in 1924-25 were 499,500,000 roubles.

Imports Decreasing

In the course of the first months 1924-25, importation of victuals showed a considerable increase owing to the failure of the harvest. The last months of the period especially June, shows a decrease for this group of imported goods which is explained by the improving condition of the Soviet Union.

ROUMANIAN BOYAR SIGURANTSI ARREST PEASANT CANDIDATES IN RURAL COUNCIL ELECTIONS

KISHINEV, Bessarabia, Oct. 1.—The candidates, N. Spkur, I. Pora, Sanduttsa, Meroshanu, Petrescu and Gelma, running in opposition to the candidates of the Roumanian boyars n Bessarabia have been arrested. These candidates were put up in opposition to the boyar's ticket in the rural council elections taking place in Bessarabia.

Prohibit Hire of Motor Cars.

Prefect of Police Tsaptsu has issued an order prohibiting any motor-car owner from loaning the use of his car to a candidate of the opposition. All motor owners that allow the opposition to hire their cars for agitation tours will be faced with imprisonment and confiscation of their car.

Rush Trial of Bessarabian Peasants

when they attempted to kill Lantsutsky.

The boyar government wants the trial to be carried out in entire secrecy so that the workers will hear of it only after the sentences have been passed.

The struggle of the peasants in Roumania has been a bitter one. The land was taken away from the peasants and given to the gendarmes, the tax collectors, boyars, soldiers and other lackeys who blindly support the boyar rule.

Agricultural Country.

Bessarabia is not an industrial country, it is an agricultural country. The price of land was high. If a peasant bought some land, he was taxed so highly that he either worked mainly to pay the taxes or tried to sell it to the first buyer. The land reforms which the bourgeois press lauds mean nothing to the peasant. They may look good on paper, but in practice they mean nothing.

Extensive Spy System.

The Roumanian government maintains a system of spies that cannot be beaten elsewhere. There is a spy to every village and in some places there is one spy to every three persons. For minor infringments of the law, the peasants are taken into an open field. There they are told that the sigurantsi (Roumanian secret police) have nothing against them and tell them to run home. As the peasants start to run, the secret police draw their pistols and shoot the fleeing peasants. The official reports that are handed to their chief contain the legend, "killed in the attempt to escape."

In the village of Plachtovko, 13 peasants were arrested. They were brot to the prison. There the third degree of the Roumanian sigurantsi was given them. Their nails were pulled off, hot oil poured on their shaved heads, the soles of their feet pricked with needles and then beaten with clubs. After the police found that the peasants refused to sign the confessions handed them, they were brot to a field and told to run home. The peasants were killed and left on the field.

Peasants Revolt.

These conditions brot about a revolt of the peasants in Bessarabia. Last autumn the greatest uprisings occurred in Tatarbounar, Nikolayevka, Trubayevka, Bulkanikov, Jokfil, Cisnea and from these points spread all over Southern Bessarabia. In three districts, Soviet republics were proclaimed. Tatarbounar, the village from which most of the peasants now on trial come, was bombarded by artillery and the town destroyed.

The torture that the peasants, whose misfortune it was to survive the bloody reprisals of the Roumanian boyars, underwent is vividly described in the following two statements made by victims of the sigurantsi.

Arrest Mother.

"Two agents of the sigurantsi, Nodelko and Stefanescu, arrested me in my house in Arda. They straight away threw themselves at me and wanted to hit me, but when my baby began to scream, desisted. They drove me in a cart to the sigurantsi, and all the way beat me most fearfully. When I arrived at the sigurantsi, I was shown many prisoners who had already been beaten till they were half dead, and was informed that the same fate awaited me also.

"After this, they beat me about to such a terrible extent, that to this day I am feeling the pains, and am deaf.

"After the beating they led me to the outskirts of the village, and declared that they would beat me as they beat all Communists in Bessarabia, if I do not answer as they required.

Gives False Evidence.

"Under the pressure of these threats, I was forced to give false evidence," writes Bela Foldi in her confession published by Costa-Fern in his "Jaccuse."

Another victim of the sigurantsi, Mor Fishea tells of his torture in the following words:

Use India-Rubber Club

"I was arrested on Dec. 13, 1924. I was accused of being a member of the Communist Party. Before commencing the inquiry, the chief of the sigurantsi ordered me to strip, and from 2 to 6 p. m. beat me with an India-rubber club.

"I was then sent, in chains, to Arad. In Arad, the Assistant Chief Woolfe beat me about the head and all over my body with a rubber club.

"I was thrice so severely beaten about the head and face, that blood flowed from my mouth and nose for a whole hour. During the night, I was called up several times for inquiry and Assistant Chief Woolfe most severely beat me in the presence of Chief Markalescu, Assistant Chief Kiorescu, and Commissar Stefanscu.

Threaten Life.

"After I had signed a declaration, the contents of which to this day I do not know, I was once more beaten and was threatened that I would be let out in the street and shot like a dog, under the pretext that I was attempting to escape.

"I demanded from the prison governor, that I be examined by a doctor; but as the latter treated us worse than dogs—I refused his treatment."

These statements can be duplicated by thousands of other peasants who have been in the torture mills of the Roumanian boyars.

Working Class Demonstrations

There is but one thing that can save the lives of the peasants on trial and that is worldwide mass demonstrations of the working class against the white terror of the Roumanian boyars. It is the duty of workers in all lands to carry on demonstrations protesting against the persecution of these peasants active in a cause to free themselves from the slavery they now suffer.

Novgorod Fair Is Success

MOSCOW, —(Tass)— Oct. 1.—The turnover of the Nijny Novgorod Fair up to the 20th of August surpassed the sum of 66,000,000 roubles. The biggest transactions are those on sugar, manufactured goods and metals.

CANADA SEAMEN BACK UP CHINESE JAILED STRIKERS

Boycott Laid on Any Ships Struck

VANCOUVER, B. C., Oct. 1—That Canadian seamen are not asleep to the fact that their interests are the same as their fellow workers in China, is shown by the way the Federated Seafarers' Union has been supporting the Chinese crews who struck on British vessels entering western Canadian ports.

One of the union's leaflets, issued by the union to appeal to all seamen not to scab on the striking Chinese says:

"Seafarers of all nationalities! Attention!

"Strike on—The Seafarers' Union has passed the following resolution:

"That members of the Federated Seafarers' Union of Canada refuse to man the Empress or any other line of ships, affected or involved in the present dispute with the Chinese workers.

"There are 16 Chinese seafarers imprisoned for supporting their fellow workers on strike.

"Refuse to allow the employers to intimidate workers during disputes by these methods. Help us to get our fellow workers out of jail. Their fight is yours." (Signed)—The Federated Seafarers' Union, Units Committee.

British Imperialism Rallies at Liverpool

Ramsay MacDonald delivered the goods for British imperialism at the Liverpool conference of the labor party yesterday. The left wing was defeated and Britain's ruling class breathes a little easier.

Sharing the glory of being among the foremost agents of the British exploiters was C. T. Cramp, who praised everything from British constitutionalism to the Dawes plan. In this connection Cramp appeared as the defender of the German working class against the military occupation which he said would occur if the Dawes plan was defeated. That British workers could defeat the Dawes plan and prevent their rulers carrying out a military occupation of Germany by a united front with the French and German workers is a certainty but the Cramps and MacDonalds, of course, reject such methods because they bring them into collision with their friends the capitalists.

It is much better from the standpoint of these hangers-on of British capitalism to appeal to god to "defend the party that is right" as MacDonald did in his peroration. It is noticable that British imperialism depends very little upon god but very much on airplane bombs, tanks, battleships and machine guns in its righteous crusades aganist the colonial peoples and in its warfare on the British working class. But such methods in defense of empire bring no condemnation from the hypocritical official leaders of the labor party. It is against the Communists and the most militant section of the workers which they lead that the MacDonalds fulminate in their finest style.

But even after the extensive preparations of the officialdom of the labor party aided by a continuous barrage in the capitalist press against the left wing, there was a solid vote at Liverpool representing one-ninth of the labor party membership. As we remarked yesterday the labor party conference is far less representative than the Trades Union Congress and the middle class groups have far more influence. Their next step will probably be to maneuver for a repudiation of the anti-imperialist resolution of the Trades Congress or to emasculate it.

In the meantime the breakdown of trade and industry in Great Britain proceeds at a rapid rate and something more than appeals for a class truce are necessary to pacify a working class which sees its already low standard of living wittled down day by day.

The soul unity of capitalism is shown in a striking manner by the jubilation of the American press over the "defeat" of the "reds" at Liverpool.

Be Nice to the Wolf!

"Let us not be too hard on the employing and exploiting classes," writes the editor of the Illinois Miner, a gentleman by the name of Oscar Ameringer and leading light in what is left of the socialist party of America.

The reactionary socialists are very careful about wounding the sensitive feelings of the capitalists. They are always willing to find excuses for them. That they exploit the workers is no fault of theirs, we are told. They are not even responsible for wars or for any of the other evils that the workers suffer from.

We admit that capitalism is a stage in economic development and that capitalists are as indigenous to capitalism as blubber is to a whale. We know that disposing of individual capitalists would not solve the problem. Capitalism itself must be destroyed.

But we cannot love a class that makes its living by robbery any more than we welcome the attentions of a bedbug, who is compellel by nature to bite a living out of our anatomies. We know that he bears no particular animosity towards us, but we know that his bite is disagreeable, so he dies at our hand unless he succeeds in making a quick getaway after he has his breakfast.

This does not mean that we favor the extermination of individual capitalists in the same manner that the victim of a bed bug's bite disposes of his persecutor. What we propose to do is to organize the workers to fight capitalism and the capitalists. Those who have to pity the capitalists for having to live in fine houses, wear the best of clothes, eat the choicest of food and see the nice spots of the world, should think once in a while of the millions of wage slaves who live on the crumbs that fall from the tables of the rich.

Let the American Federation of Labor convention next week at Atlantic City feel the pressure of the workers' demands for the admittance to the United States of Shapurji Saklatvala, the barred Communist member of the British parliament.

MacDonald threatens to resign if the Communists are not repudiated by the Liverpool labor party conference. Our advice to MacDonald is that he notify his biscuit millionaire sponsor to get the old home ready for a tired labor leader.

The interparliamentary union gets under way at Washington, but what it says is almost drowned with the rising protest demanding the admission of the Communist Saklatvala, barred as dangerous to American capitalism.

The slogan of the recruiting service, "Join the Navy and See the World," should be changed to "Join the Navy and See the Next World."

Lynching will be a little less popular in the United States if Mexico manages to collect the $50,000 demanded for the killing of Jose Gonzales and Santoa Ortez, on Sept. 13, 1919, at Pueblo, Colo.

The Comintern Letter to the Communist Party of Germany

EDITOR'S NOTE.—Here is the second installment of the letter of the Communist International to the Communist Party of Germany. It takes up the question of trade union work, which the Communist International charges was neglected under the Ruth Fischer-Maslow leadership in the German party. The concluding installment will appear in the DAILY WORKER tomorrow.

2. Trade Union Work, the Comintern, and the Leading Groups in the Party Central.

These defects in leadership have been most strikingly evidenced in the trade union question. As early as the Frankfort Party Congress (1924), at which the victory of the German left over Brandlerism was decided, considerable differences arose between the Executive and the new German Party leaders in the trade union question. The leading group Maslow-Ruth Fischer, it is true, opposed the crassest advances made by the ultra left abandonment of work in the reformist unions, but their half-hearted decisions (for instance, with reference to the independent unions) showed their failure to grasp the fundamental essence and the full extent of the problem of our trade union work. This lack of understanding of the importance of trade union work has practically had the effect of causing the Maslow-Ruth Fischer group for months to carry out the decisions of the Comintern imperfectly. A confidential telegram sent by the Executive after the Frankfort Party Congress was sent in a circular to all the district secretaries for the purpose of inciting these to protest against the Executive; the anti-trade union propaganda in the ranks of the Party was inadequately combatted up to the V. World Congress.

AT the Fifth World Congress the slogan of international trade union unity was placed on the agenda for the first time. This congress regarded this new slogan as the fundamental element of our whole Bolshevist strategy, the first aim of which is the winning of the majority of the working class. In this connection the Fifth World Congress analyzed the MacDonald government as what it really was; the reflection—tho false and reformist—of a profound historical process of development in the English working class.

The German delegation, under the leadership of Ruth Fischer, at first opposed the propositions of the executive at the Fifth World Congress. A veiled insinuation was made that the struggle for international trade union unity was merely a "move in the game of Russian foreign politics," an attempt at a rapprochement to the social democratic MacDonald government.

It was not until after lengthy negotiations that the delegation allowed itself to be convinced of the untenableness of its policy. The accusation that the struggle for trade union unity was merely a diplomatic move in Russian foreign politics can only be attributed to a fundamentally anti-Bolshevist and social democratic mentality on the part of the leading group. The like accusation was made by MacDonald himself, and by all the English and international social traitors, in order to discredit the struggle for trade union unity.

THE struggle for unity among the trade unions is a constituent of Bolshevist strategy towards the majority of the international working class. Those who have not grasped this have not been able, and are still unable, to form a correct estimate of the total world political constellation of the present day, and are even less able to carry out the tactics of the Comintern in their own country with full energy.

The lack of comprehension revealed by the leading group in the international trade union campaign is on a line with the serious errors and omissions of this group in their trade union work in Germany itself.

The decisions of the Fifth World Congress in the trade union question have been "carried out" too much by means of mechanical pressure and threats of organizatory measures.

On the other hand the actual work of enlightenment, the ideological education of the members of the party to an understanding of our trade union policy, and the working out of a positive line of policy with the A. D. G. B. (General German Trade Union Federation) have been exceedingly deficient.

THIS has meant an increase in the severe losses suffered by our party of late years in every sphere of trade union work. Whilst the opposition counted 88 delegates at the last congress held by the General German Trade Union Federation (1922), at this year's congress it was represented by only two delegates. We have lost a number of payment centers and local cartels. Not only in number, but in ideology, and above all in organization, we have greatly lost influence among the free German trade unions with their more than 80 per cent non-party membership. Altho there are a number of objective factors (the changed political situation, the mass expulsions, the reactionary statutes and election stipulations of the trade unions) which have also contributed to bring about these losses, still the errors and omissions of the leading group of party leaders have played the main role.

The main errors of our trade union work consist of the incapacity to grasp and secure, politically and organizatorically, the trends and currents favorable to us among the broad masses of the working class. For some months there have been signs of the gradual reawakening of political activity among large sections of the German working class (the building workers' strike and various other wage struggles in the different branches of industry, the wood workers' struggle, great demonstrations in various cities, successful Red Days, etc.). The party leaders have not shown themselves capable of reaching to these new phenomena, above all they have not been able to take advantage of them for our trade union work.

WE have already mentioned that Comrade Ruth Fischer's group dissolved the former trade union department of the central without according the matter due consideration. The express undertaking of the representative of the central to propose the renewed formation of a strong trade union department at the Tenth Party Congress, was not adhered to. There can only be two explanations of this omission; either the leading group forgot to carry out the decision of the Comintern, or it did not want to carry it out. Should the first be the case, then the leaders forgot one of the most important political and organizatory tasks of the party; should the second be the case, then they sabotaged the will of the Communist International. In either case they have undertaken a serious responsibility towards the party and the International.

One of the reasons why the leading comrades of this group neglect the trade union question is their lack of faith in the political power and activity of the masses, both of the members of their own party and of the working class in general. This pessimism, which is anything but Bolshevism, on the part of various leading comrades has, for instance, been expressed as follows:

"If we disregard the head functionaries, and take the trouble to descend into the ranks of the members, we shall find that our proletarians in the shops and factories are very uncertain in their defense of the Communist Party. They do not feel themselves as the victors of the future, but as people following a tradition for the sake of decency." (Speech delivered by Comrade Ruth Fischer at the Central Committee meeting on 9-10, May, 1925. See protocol in the pamphlet: "The Monarchist Danger and the Tactics of the German C. P." p. 55.)

WE are firmly convinced that these declarations represent an undervaluation of the Communist Party of Germany, a party which, despite all its defects, is one of the soundest and best proletarian sections of the Comintern.

An even crasser statement is that contained in Ruth Fischer's speech (in The German Commission of the Presidium) to the effect that "the masses flee from everyday life, and play at soldiers":

"I believe the cause of the difficulties arise from two main sources, these, however, being again connected with one another. First, a concealed trend of feeling, deep down among the masses of the members, towards liquidation, which says: We have won no victory, why should we trouble ourselves to build up a Communist Party? We can just as well carry on class warfare among the social democrats. As an example and proof of this we may cite the really impassioned enthusiasm with which our party members take part in demonstrations and in the Red Front Fighters' Union. Why? Because they can imagine that they are conquering power, they can play at making revolution without performing any organizatory work. It is my conviction that our comrades take refuge in the demonstrations to save themselves the daily work in the trade unions and factories."

These ideas have nothing whatever in common with either a correct estimate of the actual situation, nor with Bolshevism. They are an attempt on the part of the leading group to substitute a false criticism of the totality of the party members for self-criticism. This under-valuation of the party members and of the working masses is a further key to the errors of the comrades in question, in trade union and other work.

The actual task incumbent on the party is precisely the opposite of this; it should increase the confidence of the party in its own power and in all the sound forces existing in the working class; it should awaken the fighting spirit of the party, and arouse its consciousness of its growing strength.

3. Relations to the Communist International.

THE great political currents stirring the working class are not without influence on the party representing the revolutionary vanguard of the proletariat. The impulse felt by ever-broadening strata of the working class towards affiliation with the victorious working class of the Soviet Union is mirrored within our own ranks by their permeation with Leninism, and with the experience gained by the Bolsheviki. And on the other hand, the vacillations and treacheries of certain labor groups, influenced by the bourgeois anti-Moscow agitation, have their final effect in the "anti-Moscow" tendencies, that is, the tendencies directed against the Soviet Union, against the Russian C. P. and against the Comintern within our party.

This danger is all the greater in the German C. P. because all its nuances and currents, without exception, are at the present day still, to a large extent, subordinate to the influence of social democratic "West European" traditions.

Every deviation from Communist policy which has hitherto occurred in Germany has begun with an attack upon Soviet Russia, the Russian C. P., the Comintern. Seven years of experience in the German revolution have taught us that all deviations of this description, no matter whether disguised as "Right" or "Left," have either developed directly into social democracy, or have practically entered into an alliance with it. This applies to the German Communist Labor Party, to Levi, to Friesland, to various followers of Brandler, to the Schuhmacher group, etc.

THE changes in the political situation, the final transition of the German bourgeoisie to a western orientation, the climax reached by social democratic agitation against Soviet Russia, render the danger of anti-Bolshevist deviations in the German C. P. at the present juncture greater and acuter than ever.

The ultra-left group Scholem, Rosenberg, Katz, who reproach the Comintern and its most important parties of "opportunism," have nothing in common with Leninism, but on the contrary, their relations to the Comintern and their attitude towards the problems of the German revolution are expressly anti-Bolshevist in character.

Dangerous and essentially social democratic deviations of this nature are to be found, however, not only in the officially ultra-left group, but among the leading persons in the Maslow-Ruth Fischer group. Comrade Maslow's writings cannot be regarded as a contribution to the serious, conscientious, theoretical education of the party in the spirit of Leninism. His latest literary works in particular are a concealed and extremely dangerous attack upon the principles of Leninism, and against the whole policy of the Comintern at the present period.

IN his book: "The Two Revolutions of 1917," (Vol. 1, part 4, p. 45), Comrade Maslow writes as follows on the Third World Congress of the Communist International:

"I am firmly convinced that such grave errors were committed at the Third World Congress that this congress did far more harm than good to the European (!) parties. Certainly this applies to the German C. P.

"At the Third World Congress a general attack was made on the left, and which was carried to a ridiculous point: Comrade Trotzky discovered highly acute 'Left dangers' even in Frossard's party . . in the French C. P. It is to be regratted that Comrade Lenin made the same mistake. It is the sole error known to me (!) in Lenin's dealings with the party. Thus to fail to recognize the character of a party like the German C. P. with its powerful social democratic traditions, especially under rightly recognized objective conditions which afforded no opportunity for left excesses . . .

"The Third Congress declared Levi to be actually in the right.

"The congress drove the German Party (like the French) to the right, brot about a serious and lengthy liquidatory crisis. . ."

THE executive declares before the whole Communist International that this monstrous attack upon Lenin and Leninism cannot be tolerated under any circumstances.

The reproach that the Comintern not only recognized Levi's criticism of various ultra-left errors in the party, but declared the group of renegades around Levi to be "actually in the right," "drove" the "European parties" into "opportunism at the Third Congress, and "brot about" the liquidation current in the German Party, is a repetition of the assertions made in 1921 by Ruehle, Pfemffert, and those adherents of the Communist Labor Party of Germany who have since landed in the camp of counter-revolution. Comrade Maslow attempts to oppose to Lenin's alleged "opportunism" a "pure," "left," and specifically "West European" Communism. This is precisely the standpoint taken by Paul Levi, Frossard, Hoglund, and all the enemies of Leninism.

Behind the mask of combatting Trotskyism and the renegade Levi, Maslow prepares his attack on Lenin, who "failed to recognize the character of the German C. P." Beneath the cloak of combatting "West European" deviations from Communism, that is, anti-Bolshevist deviations, Maslow propagated a "West European Communism" of the worst kind.

It is not by accident that today, in 1925, Comrade Maslow makes precisely the Third World Congress the object of his attack.

THE Third Congress embodies precisely that concrete link in the chain of the development of Leninism and of the Comintern which is of the greatest immediate practical significance in the present situation for all Communist Parties, but above all for the German. The Third World Congress took place at a turning point of international proletarian revolution, at the moment of transition from the period of tempestuous revolutionary upheaval in the years immediately following the war, 1919 and 1920, to the period of slower revolutionary development in 1921 to 1925—and beyond this. The fresh estimate of the international situation enabled the Third Congress, under the leadership of Lenin, to draw fresh conclusions for the tactics of all Communist Parties.

Whilst the I. and II. World Congresses determined only the general outlines of the strategy and tactics of the Comintern, the Third Congress worked out the concrete policy to be pursued between two revolutions. It placed the slogan: "Go to the masses" in the center of our policy that is, it directed our course towards the winning over of the great majority of the working class. With this it created the beginning of the Bolshevist united front tactics, the axis around which our present policy revolves.

THOSE who—like Comrade Maslow—deny this important turning point in our tactics, those who seek to discredit it as a "swing to the right," those who deride it as a concession to Trotskyism or to the apostate Levi, are attacking the fundamental principles of the Comintern.

The practical consequences of Comrade Maslow's false theory are inevitable. If we delete out the basis of the united front tactics, the results in practise must be zero. If we assert that "Lenin failed to recognise the character of the German Communist Party," then we cannot lead this party in the spirit of Leninism. Comrade Maslow's ideology is antagonistic to Leninism, not only in tactics, but in principle. It is one of the roots of the resistance still opposing the tactics of the Comintern in the German C. P. today. It is one of the roots of the years of misunderstanding encountered in trade union work, this main center of our policy, among the leading group of the German Central. And finally, it is one of the roots of the continuous coquetting on the part of the alleged "combatters" of the ultra-left group, headed by Comrade Maslow and Ruth Fischer, with precisely this group itself.

SINCE the Third World Congress the attitude of the Maslow group to the Comintern has been unsound and un-Bolshevist. At the Jena Party conference this group opposed the standpoint held by Lenin and the executive. Not only did it criticise—and quite rightly—the opportunist distortion of the united front tactics on the part of the Brandler group, but it brot forward all manner of objections and reservations against the actual united front tactics of the Comintern, and against the slogan of the "Workers' and Peasants' government." Up to recently these anti-Bolshevist tendencies possessed decisive influence in this group. The fact that the Maslow-Ruth Fischer group, despite all warnings from the Comintern, combined with the Scholem-Rosenberg-Katz group to form a firm unit until five months ago did not fail to bring its punishment. At the Frankfort Party congress various "anti-Moscow" advances were made (in the trade union question, in the question of the selection of members to compose the Central, etc.). In spite of the objection raised by the executive, Comrade Ruth Fischer sent several emissaries to various sections during the course of the past year, entrusted with the "mission" of altering the tactics of the executive by fractional means. The result of these emissaries' journeys has been the discrediting and alienation of the German Party in the brother parties of the Comintern.

These tendencies were expressed with special clearness at the last party congress. All the proposals made by the executive in the trade union and Central questions were rejected, despite the given undertaking to accept them. At the party conference not a word was said—except in Comrade Thalmann's speech—about the promised demonstrative change to be made in our trade union tactics.

Добро пожаловать, Тов. Маяковскнй

OUT of far away Red Russia, thru the cordons of misrepresentations, lies and columnies, comes to us a ray of the new world that is being built under the leadership of the Communist Party in the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics.

Comrade Vladimir Mayakovsky, the revolutionary poet of the new Russia is coming to Chicago today.

The intellectual bankrupts, the "socialist" lackeys of the bourgeoisie, all the enemies of the revolution united in the attack against the Soviet Union. All of them claim that the revolution brought only destruction. Nothing new is being created, they claim. But in spite of these claims, a new world is growing under our very eyes. Not only in material improvements, but also in science, literature and poetry, the NEW is being created and the OLD discarded. The cultural level of the masses is being raised. New artists, scientists, writers and poets are appearing. Comrade Mayakovsky is one of them. They are responding to the masses and not crawling on their bellies before the bourgeoisie as their brethren in the bourgeois world. Never before has the Russian Academy of Science had such possibilities as under the Soviet government. There is nothing new in Europe in music worth while, says Stock of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, except in Soviet Russia.

Things are created there in spite of the handicaps to which the capitalist world contributed liberally.

Things are created for the wide masses of the producers instead of the small class of parasites as in all other countries.

Comrade Mayakovsky is one of the these new creators. He is a singer of the masses, a singer of the revolution.

Welcome to our city, Comrade Mayakovsky!

We are printing here one of his poems, "Our March," in the original Russian language. We hope to be able in the near future to print some of his poems translated into English. Most of his work has been translated into many languages, but we have been unable to secure a translation in English.

НАШ МАРШ

Бейте в площади бунтов топот!
Выше гордых голов гряда!
Мы разливом второго потопа
Переноси миров города.
Дней бык пег.
Медленна бет арба.
Наш бог — бег.
Серце — наш барабан.
Есть ли наших золот небесней
Нас ли сжалит пуля — оса?
Наше оружие — наши песни.
Наше золото — звенящие голоса.
Зеленью ляг луг
Выстрелы дно дням.
Радуга дай дуг,
Лет быстролетным коням.
Видите скушно звезд небу!
Без него наши песни вьем!
Эй, Большая Медведица! требуй,
Чтоб на небо нас взяли живьем.
Радости пей! Пой!
В жилах весна разлита,
Серце бей бой!
Грудь наша медь литавр.

TURCO-BRITISH WAR THREATENS

ANTHRACITE COURT SENTENCES ALEX REID AND PAT TOOHEY TO SIX MONTHS JAIL AT SCRANTON

SCRANTON, Pa., Oct. 2.—Late Wednesday, Police Magistrate McNamara sentenced Alex Reid and Pat Toohey, national and local leaders of the Progressive Miners' Committee, to serve six months in the workhouse.

This outrageous sentence was decreed without any charges being preferred against them and without notice to their attorney, Isaac Shoor of New York, who had interviewed the imprisoned progressives earlier in the day, as well as having an interview with the United States district attorney, who was holding them for investigation before turning them over to McNamara.

Being Poor Is a Crime.

Valentine was released when he showed a bank book. Alex Reid had $30 in his possession which would forestall any charges of "vagrancy," but he was sentenced to six months' anyhow. Alex Zarek was finally released unconditionally at 3 p. m. Wednesday.

This tyrannical action of the two progressive miners being sentenced to the work house, followed an equally autocratic detention for one hundred hours, during which local federal agents assisted by Philadelphia secret service men made frenzied efforts to frame up something on the defendants.

Union Officials Aid Capitalist Court.

The militant miners around Scranton are indignant at the action of the union officials, who were present in the courtroom Monday assisting in the prosecution of the progressive members of the union and who officially published a letter Tuesday praising the police for breaking up the meetings of the striking miners.

The mayor of Scranton refuses to exercise his power to intervene and set aside the police magistrate's sentence.

SING RED FLAG, RAISE A WHITE AT LIVERPOOL

Communist 'Defeat' Not Pleasing to Enemies

LONDON, Oct. 2.—The labor party congress closed at Liverpool today after going thru an ardorous campaign to repel Communist boarders of the social-democratic ship, and after resolving in no uncertain way that the labor party should have nothing to do with revolution, the delegates went out the door singing the "Red Flag," a song ingrained in British radical movements.

Defend the Workers' Government of Soviet Russia

Manifesto of the Central Executive Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party on the eighth anniversary of the establishment of the workers' and peasants' government of Russia.

EIGHT years ago, on November 7, 1917, the workers and peasants of Russia threw their exploiters from their backs. They formed a Soviet government and established the workers' rule in Russia.

For eight years the workers and peasants of Russia have defended their government and their right to abolish the exploitation and oppression of the capitalists. They have fought to establish a new social order in which the product of their labor would be used to give them a higher standard of life, in place of enriching a few capitalists and landowners.

TO maintain their workers' and peasants' government they were obliged to fight the armies of the czarist generals who sought to re-establish the rule of robbery and autocracy in Russia. They were forced to fight the imperialist capitalists' governments—England, France, the United States—which sought to destroy their government because the capitalists feared the effect of the example of workers' rule in Russia upon the workers these capitalists were exploiting at home. They were compelled to fight the socialist mensheviks who conspired with and acted as spies for their enemies.

The Russian workers and peasants were compelled to overcome the blockade through which capitalism was seeking to strangle their government. They were obliged to overcome famine and hunger which followed the destruction wrought by counter-revolution and their imperialist enemies.

Against all these enemies the Soviet government of the workers and peasants has triumphed. It has maintained the rule of the workers and peasants in Russia and is creating a social order which is putting to an end the oppression and exploitation of the workers by capitalists.

Achievements of the Workers' Republic

WHILE in all capitalist Europe the standard of life of the workers has been reduced to below what it was in 1914, before the war began, in Soviet Russia, the standard of life of the workers has been improved over what it was in 1914. Capitalist society has made worse the lot of the workers; the Communist government has against great obstacles improved their lot.

The workers and peasants of Russia are no longer ruled by agents of the capitalists, who use the government to fight the workers. Injunctions are not issued against workers in Russia; they are issued against the enemies of the workers. The courts

DELEGATE HITS LACK OF POLICY OF CONGRESS

Wars of Aggression Assailed

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 2.— A bombshell was thrown into the inter-parliamentary union congress, which is in session at Washington, D. C. when a delegate from Sweden attacked the colonial policy of the union.

What About Asia?

"A fatal defect in the protocol," declared the delegate from Sweden, "is its standpoint that the right to self-determination of the people of Asia and Northern Africa is a private matter for decision of the ruling European powers, and not a question of international law."

"This protocol condemns wars of aggression as crime. But the English government's ultimatum to Egypt and the Spanish-French war against the Riffs do not seem to interest either the league of nations or the inter-parliamentary union. These are the private matters of three European powers."

Mary McSwiney Barred.

The congress followed up its stand in being a conservative and reactionary body by refusing to seat Miss Mary McSwiney, sister of the late mayor of Cork, who died in a hunger strike as a protest against the brutal policy England tried to ram down the throats of Irish workers.

WASHINGTON TO SELL SHIPYARD AT HOG ISLAND

To Go to the Highest Bidder

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 2.— The Hog Island shipyard, which was built by the United States during the world war, to turn out ships, is being sold to the highest bidder. This shipyard has figured in many a scandal since it has been built and the Washington government is trying to forget those sores by turning it over to the highest bidder.

In [illegible] of the amount that may be collected for this ship building yard, it will be a mite compared to the sum expended in turning out the one or two ships that were turned out.

The Root-Carter company of New York has made a bid of $3,500,000 for the yards. The bid was not accompanied by a certified check.

The highest offer accompanied by a check was from James P. Connolly of Philadelphia for $2,000,000.

SANTIAGO, Chile, Oct. 2.—President Arturo Alessandri who rode into office on a coup backed by the working population against a league of officers and militarists that had controlled the government, resigned today. The president's resignation followed a dispute with the Minister of War, Ibanez, and his office is taken by Vice-President Borgono.

RIFF CHIEF REFUSES TO ACCEPT DESERTERS FROM FRENCH ALLIES

TANGIERS, Oct. 2.—Abd-el-Krim wants no deserters from the French allies in his army. He gave intimation of this when he announced that he is sending the two sons of Caid Tazi, an important French ally, back to their father.

The two youths, inspired by the courage of the Riffian tribesmen, fled from their father's forces and attempted to join Abd-el-Krim, but the Riffian leader would not have them.

CAILLAUX AND WALL STREET BANKERS MEET

Arrange to Burden the French Workers

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—The French debt commission head, Caillaux, is in New York arranging terms for a loan with bankers on Wall Street.

His sailing arrangements for today have been cancelled and he will stay in New York until arrangements are completed for the loan to be raised.

Need Money Badly.

France is in dire need of funds to carry on her wars of aggression in Syria and Morocco. The American bankers had made arrangement to float a loan for the French government just before the debt negotiations. Now since the debt negotiations have been settled to the satisfaction of the French delegation the bankers will begin actual work on it's realization.

Saddled French Toilers

Caillaux and the bankers are haggling over the amount of interest to be arranged and saddled on the workers of France for hundreds of years to come.

To Go Before Deputies.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 2.—French Finance Minister Caillaux is preparing to bring the results of his debt negotiations with the American bankers in Washington to the French chamber of deputies. The American bankers and the French imperialists have finally arranged for the payment by France of $40,000,000 per year for the first five years and at the end of the five years, they will again discuss the payment of a higher rate.

The agreement of the two commissions must also go before congress to be ratified. It is understood that this compromise effected between the two groups is an attempt to pacify the element in congress that demanded a set of terms similar to those arranged by France and England.

There is no doubt, but that the terms laid down by the American bankers will be accepted in Congress.

President Coolidge will address the legionnaires next Thursday. Berry, an ex-officer and himself a member of the legion, is the representative of the American Federation of Labor to the convention.

ENGLAND SENDS BATTLESHIPS TO NEAR EAST SEAS

War Clouds Hovering Over Mediterranean

LONDON, Oct. 2.—War clouds are hovering over Euorpe. Imperialist Great Britain is concentrating its naval forces in the near eastern waters, preparatory to an attack on the Angora government of Turkey in its drive to maintain absolute control of the Mosul oil fields.

Under orders from the naval heads in England, the third battle squadron, the third destroyer squadron and the first and third flotillas are to concentrate at Suda Bay, Isle of Crete, and on October 15 they are to go to Malta.

The battleship Queen Elizabeth is to steam into the harbor of Suda Bay upon the leaving of the other naval squadrons for Malta on October 15. The Queen Elizabeth will also leave for Malta on Oct. 20.

These maneuvers of the British fleet are a threat to the insistent demand of the Turkish government for the return of Mosul, over which England secured a mandate from the League of Nations. Mosul is one of the rich oil fields of Europe and England hates to let it slip out of its hands.

Turkey is calling out four classes of her reserves and intends to defend herself against any aggression which England will attempt in the near future.

BERRY AGENT TRIES TO BLOCK AMALGAMATION

Members Must Answer Questionaire

Major Berry's henchman, Hugh Crambert is attempting to block the move being made by the members of Franklin Union No. 4 (press feeders) to amalgamate with the members of Pressman's Union No. 3. He has sent letters to every member of the union local telling him that he must fill out a card which is an insult to the intelligence of the members of that local.

In this card the Berry henchman tries to make it appear that the members of the union did not realize that they were signing for an amalgamation of the two unions.

The "Questionnaire"

This is the card which every member of the union must fill out and send in to this lackey of the notorious strikebreaker:

"Dear Sir and Brother:

"For the purpose of determining under what condition you signed petition for 'Amalgamation' you are requested to fill out blank.

"Did you sign petition?

"Did you sign petition with the intention of leaving your organization?

"Did you sign petition with the belief that same was meant for special meeting?

"Fraternally yours,
"Hugh Crambert, President."

Members Resent Insult

Over 1100 members of Franklin No. 4 signed the petition for amalgamating the two locals. The members are not well pleased with this piece of arrogance on the part of the Berry henchman, and are having a meeting with the representatives of the Pressman's Union No. 3 where plans of amalgamation will be gone over by both groups, before final action is taken.

the labor party, MacDonald himself uttered the significant words:

"We know that the vote would only remove the attack upon us from the floor of this conference to the street corners."

While it failed even to stop the attacks in the conference, which was one long battle from start to finish, and MacDonald was disappointed in this issue, his remark about the fight being removed to the "street corners" expresses in a distorted fashion the fact that the Communists will continue their criticism of the "crawling, sniveling policy" of the labor party among the rank and file of British labor in the shops and unions. Moreover, the labor party is in grievous need of funds to run a general election, and it has to go to the trade unions to get them.

A real victory for the Communists, and one the capitalist press has concealed completely or hidden in obscure places, is the fact that the Communists forced thru a resolution declaring that the famous "Zinoviev letter" which lost the election for MacDonald, has been proven a forgery.

How much the labor party was put upon trial may be seen in the onslaughts of the Communists, Gallagher saying on the question of unemployment, that the type of leaders such as J. H. Thomas, Clynes and MacDonald were sacrificing the labor movement to the middle class.

"These leaders are recognized by Beaverbrook, Rothermere, Birkenhead, Churchill and the whole gang, as friends of capital. Buckingham palace is wide open for them. The poorhouse is wide open for the workers."

Again, the labor party was exposed to the British workers when it voted down the resolution of the Communists demanding that a minimum wage of $20 a week and a 44-hour work-week be granted British workers, with an immediate increase of $5 a week for all workers.

Clynes on Empire

J. R. Clynes spoke for the reformist resolution on the policy toward the empire. Its main idea was a periodical survey of the resources of the empire and their "scientific development by the home and dominion governments so as to prevent exploitation by private capitalists."

After voting down the Communist resolution declaring that the interests of the empire were opposed and hostile to the interests of the workers and that India and all other colonies and dominions should have the right of self determination to the point of complete independence. Dr. Haden Guest making what the capitalist press calls a "notable speech" against breaking up the empire, the congress passed—as a matter of record—a resolution advocating self government for India and recommending Egypt to the tender mercies of the league of nations.

NEW YORK DISTRICT CONVENTION Y. W. L. OVERWHELMINGLY STANDS BEHIND WORKERS PARTY C. E. C.

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—The resolution accepting and agreeing with the recent Communist International decision and pledging loyal support to the newly elected C. E. C. of the Workers (Communist) Party as presented by Comrade Weinstone to the second convention of Dist. 2, Young Workers League was passed by a vote of 36 for and 7 abstaining, none against.

Two resolutions were introduced. One by the minority of the resolutions committee and the other by Comrade Weinstone for the majority. The convention decided that in view of the recent decision of the Communist International they do not recognize any other resolution but the one of the party representative. The resolutions were ordered back to the resolutions committee by unanimous vote for the purpose of revision so that there shall be no discord in the attempt to unify the league on the basis of the Communist International decision.

Resolution Adopted

The final draft of the resolution as presented by the party representative read in part as follows:

The parity thesis on the immediate tasks of the party adopted by the fourth national convention lays down the correct line of policy to be followed by us in the building up a mass Bolshevik party in the U. S.

This convention of the Y. W. L. endorses the resolutions adopted by the party convention particularly on the liquidation of Loreism, Bolshevization, Trade Union Work, Reorganization, Labor Party Policy, Agrarian work, Youth work and Negro work.

The action of the national convention in removing Comrade Askelli as the editor of the Finnish paper the Tyomies, and excluding Lore from the party shows that the party has reached the stage where it can no longer tolerate opportunistic elements which consciously aim to pervert the policies of the C. I. and to break the unity and discipline of the party.

Comrade Shachtman stated that his resolution differed materially from the one introduced by Comrade Weinstone and insisted that both be voted upon separately. In view of this, Comrade Stachel introduced a resolution supplementary to the one by the party representative which follows in full:

Endorses C. I. Decision.

The C. I. in its latest decision declares that "It has finally become clear that the Ruthenberg group is more loyal to its decisions and views."

The convention declares that it wholeheartedly accepts this decision and pledges to do everything in its power to support the party leadership endorsed by the C. I.

Spirit as Well as Letter.

The convention declares that the decision must be accepted in spirit as well as in letter. The introduction of a separate resolution is a concealed form of opposition to the decision and a declaration of dissatisfaction with the action of the C. I., and is construed as an attempt to maintain their group on the basis of an appeal.

Against Obstruction.

This we declare is obstriction to carrying out of the C. I. decision and is creating confusion and distrust and makes it more difficut to unify our party.

This last also was passed, 35 for and 8 abstaining.

In view of the fact that the discussion on the report of the party representative had taken most of the convention's time it was unanimously agreed to refer all other business to the incoming District Executive Committee.

Elect Delegates.

Delegates were elected to the national convention, the entire delegation being supporters of the two resolutions as reprinted above. One of the delegates from Hartford who was elected from his branch because of having supported the former majority said that he "is convinced that opposition to the present Central Executive Committee in the form of refusing to support the party resolution would be opposition to the Communist International." He therefore voted for it. Two other delegates, supporters of the former majority, took the same view. The convention decided that to show its desire for unity on the basis of the Communist International decision it would elect one of these comrades as delegate to the national convention despite this former position which they had maintained up to the time of voting. The Harfort delegate was chosen.

A resolution was introduced asking the coming national convention to move the office of the league to New York City. This was greeted with a great demonstration and was adopted by acclamation, only one delegate voting against it.

New D. E. C. Elected.

The convention also elected a new District Executive Committee giving representation to the former opposition on the basis of the vote they received.

With all singing the International and amidst great enthusiasm, the convention adjourned.

Fascisti Suspend Turin Newspaper

The action followed the printing of a report from a special correspondent who described acts of looting and vandalism carried on by soldiers in the zone of recent military manouevers.

700 PRISONERS TO MAKE SHOES IN LEAVENWORTH

To Compete with Union Labor

FORT LEAVENWORTH, Kan., Oct. 2.—A $1,000,000 shoe factory in Fort Leavenworth prison will soon be turning out from 2,000 to 3,000 pairs of shoes daily to compete with union labor.

The government announces that it will run the factory at first turning out shoes for the sailors and soldiers, later for all branches of the government service. Production is to start January 1.

The shop will employ over 700 convicts.

Use Only Human Labor.

The factory was built at a great cost of human labor. When it was necessary to hoist tons of brick and steel, cement and crushed stone to the workers on the skeleton of the fourth story, instead of getting machinery to do this very heavy work, the convicts were forced to trundle it up long runways, they had built in the prison lumber mill.

The labor of 600 convicts was used in constructing this shoe factory.

May Lease Later.

Superintendent Warren F. Goldthwaite came to Fort Leavenworth from Haverhill, Mass., where he had charge of a shoe factory for 25 years. This prison shop will eventually be rented out to some private concern in the same fashion that manufacturers of prison-made shirts and shoes have done in other states.

Bar Married Women from Union Membership

BUTTE, Mont.—(FP)—The Silver Bow (Butte) Trades and Labor Council recommends to all local unions the they follow the example of the Butte Clerks' Union and bar married women from membership.

The recommendation is an answer to the practise of many Butte firms of giving job preference to married women, making it harder for girls and single women to get employment. In some cases man and wife are given jobs by the same house. The council takes the position that when there are not enough decent jobs to go round the girls that have no provider should get the first chance.

Security Pact Meeting in Switzerland Is Being Spoiled by Red Moscow

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the Chicago Tribune carries the headline, "Russia Fails to Get Berlin to Quit Allies." But the headline voices a hope rather than states a fact. The hope is that Germany can be inveigled into a "security pact" with the allies of the Versailles peace, an agreement that can be used as a weapon against the Union of Soviet Republics. But the fact is that the Tribune headline is still warm when the news comes that the German cabinet at Berlin has decided to sign a Soviet-German trade treaty, and that it will refrain from an unconditional entry into the league of nations, which the Soviet Union has notified the Hindenburg-Luther government will be a violation of the spirit of the Rapollo treaty, which recognized the Soviet Union and brought a Soviet ambassador to Berlin.

In fact the negotiations that have been going on in Berlin, these past few days, between the Germans and George Tchitcherin, the Soviet commissar of foreign affairs, seem to have knocked the supports from under the kind of a "security pact" that London and Paris were angling for. Germany, thru sheer necessity, because she is economically dependent on the Soviet Union, seems more determined than ever to stick by her resolve to enter the league only on condition that she be relieved of the obligation imposed by Article 16 of the covenant to permit the passage of league military expeditions thru her territory.

The Soviet Union knows, and even the German government of President Hindenburg and Chancellor Luther knows, that there is only one reason that spurs the desire of London and Paris to cross Germany with all their accoutrements of imperialist war; the desire to wage another attack against the workers' and peasants' government, in an attempt to overthrow it.

The Germans made their first bold stroke in connection with the approaching security pact conference at Locarno, Switzerland, when they demanded that they be absolved from responsibility for the world war. The allies placed the war guilt on Berlin and they are determined that it shall stay there, otherwise it might get abroad among the workers, quicker than it is being spread at the present time, that all the capitalist nations were equally guilty.

The allies of the world war are very much chagrined that Germany should raise this ticklish question of "war guilt" at this time, but it is one of the few diplomatic weapons left to the Reich.

All in all, the London and Paris statesmen and their press are inclined to charge that it is Soviet diplomacy that has worsted them, and that Moscow is throwing a hand grenade of rather large and powerful proportions into the "safety pact" conference.

But the success of Soviet strategy in dealing with world imperialist nations should not permit a single worker, especially in the United States, to slumber. On another page there is published today the call for the celebration of the eigth anniversary of the establishment of the workers' and peasants' government. This manifesto sounds the tocsin for new resistance and other greater offensive struggles against world imperialism.

The class war rages on a host of fronts over the world. American workers must throw themselves into action intelligently on the side of the labor's struggle on every one of these fronts. The security pact and the Dawes-Morgan plan have established two threatening sectors that call for more vigorous attack than ever.

Judge Wants Stenographic Spies

NEW YORK CITY—(FP)—Stenographers to pursue radical street meetings and report proceedings to federal authorities are wanted by Judge Louras of New York. The judge told Emil Gardos and James Lustig, Hungarian Communists, that they would undoubtedly have been deported if a stenographer had reported their speeches against Sec. Kellogg's ban on Saklatvala.

When Attorney Carol Weis King proved to the judge that it is no offense to speak on the streets in a foreign language, Judge Louras attempted to make the two young men plead guilty to a charge of interfering with an officer. Patrolman Cornelius Connell told how milk-bottles and other missiles had been directed toward him when he broke up the meeting. The case was dismissed.

BANNED M. P. FLAYS KELLOGG IN STATEMENT

Saklatvala May Come Anyhow

LONDON, Oct 2.—In a further statement on his exclusion from the United States by an edict of Secretary of State Kellogg, Shapurji Saklatvala, Communist M. P. from Battersea, said: "If Mr. Kellogg would give an assurance that he would prevent the entry of ex-King Manuel into the United States because he was planning the overthrow of the Portuguese republic, or Mussolini because he had overthrown a settled government in Italy, I should have no reason to complain of the ban that has been set on me.

"The revolutionary representatives of wealth are free to do what they like; only those of poverty, who fight the workers' cause, are treated as I have been.

May Come Anyhow.

"If it could be ascertained that it would test that particular issue and crystallize the opinion of the American people, as distinct from that of their rulers, I would go to the states in spite of the ban.

"I may do so as it is, but I have had no time to decide or consult the views of other people."

Battersea For Saklatvala.

The Battersea Trades Council has cabled to the interparliamentary union being held this week in Washington and to which Saklatvala was an invited representative, stating that the council "unanimously endorses Mr. Saklatvala's policy of fearless exposure of British imperialism and appeals to the American people for fair play."

Resigns Business Post.

Saklatvala has addressed a communication to Tata Ltd., the well-known English firm of which he is London representative, resigning his post saying: "One's political obligations require at times a somewhat uncompromising stand, irrespective of one's personal interests."

are not used to oppress the workers; the courts safeguard the right of the workers. The police and soldiers are not used to force workers into submission when they go on strike and fight the capitalists; they are used to protect the workers.

The capitalist employer no longer rules in Russian industry. There is no boss who hires and fires the workers at will. The Russian industrial unions have by law the right to represent the workers in the industries. They make the agreements in regard to scales of wages and the workers' right to work. The workers' shop committees represent the workers in the management. The workers of Russia are no longer the slaves of the capitalists; they have won their right to full participation in every phase of the work of production.

The Soviet government protects the workers against injury in industry, it protects them against unemployment; it is creating educational opportunities for young and old; it is creating the opportunities for recreation and the broadening of the life of the workers and peasants of Russia.

Thus there is being built a new social order in which the hardship and evils, the exploitation and oppression of capitalism are being ended and the opportunity for a finer, happier life created for the workers.

The Danger to Capitalism

THE Soviet Union which the workers and peasants of Russia have created is a dagger thrust at the heart of the capitalists' social order. The capitalists know that the success of the Russian workers and peasants in building a new social order means the death-knell of capitalism. The capitalists know that the workers of the capitalist countries will follow in the footsteps of the workers and peasants of Russia; that they will overthrow their capitalist rulers and set to work to create better conditions of life for themselves.

The Soviet Union is an inspiration to all oppressed peoples of the earth. They find in the workers' and peasants' government an ally and supporters in their struggles for freedom. The people of China, the people of India, the people of Africa, the people of Morocco are inspired by the triumph of the Soviet Union to take up the struggle against the imperialist capitalist countries which are robbing them.

The labor unions of the Soviet Union have taken the initiative in uniting the trade unions of the world against capitalism. They are seeking to draw together in one great international organization all the organizations of labor. The capitalists see in this movement for trade union unity a new danger and threat against capitalism.

Because the Soviet Union is the inspiration of all oppressed peoples in the struggle against imperialism, because the labor unions of the Soviet Union are creating a mighty weapon against capitalism in trade union unity, because of the glorious example of a workers' government creating a better life for the workers and peasants which exists in the Soviet Union, international capitalism is again moving to destroy the achievements of the workers and peasants of Russia.

The New Attack on the Soviet Union

THE negotiations now under way between Great Britain, France and Germany for the creation of a "security pact" is an effort to clear the way for an attack upon the Soviet Union. What Great Britain, France and Germany want is the security of capitalism, which can only be gained by destroying the Soviet Union.

The debt negotiations of the United States government are an effort to settle the European problems in order to pave the way for the struggle against the Soviet Union. Through the Dawes' plan in Germany and through debt settlements, new loans and investments, the American capitalists are becoming the exploiters of the workers all over the world. The American capitalists cannot take payment of their profits and interests in goods; they can only secure payment through greater investment. Thus the interests of the American capitalists in other countries grows.

American capitalism is seeking to protect its billions of investments against the danger of revolt of the oppressed peoples and the exploited workers, which the existence of the Soviet Union inspires, and it therefore follows the policy of the most irreconcilable enemy of the Soviet Union. It refused to recognize the Soviet Union.

It misses no opportunity to make an attack upon the Soviet Union. The exclusion of the Communist member of the British parliament from the United States, Saklatvala, and the threat of new persecutions against Communists coupled therewith, is a sign of a coming attack upon the Soviet Union.

Attack Upon the Soviet Union Attack Upon All Workers

THE attack upon the Soviet Union is an attack upon all workers. If the imperialist capitalist powers can destroy the Soviet Union, it will mean a wave of reaction and effort to destroy the labor movement the world over.

The workers of the United States will find that with the danger of the Soviet Union removed the capitalists will launch an even greater attack than that through which they drove down wages, lengthened hours, and destroyed many unions in the open shop drive of 1921-1922.

Capitalism, freed from the obstacles of the Soviet Union in its exploitation and oppression of colonial peoples, will drive unchecked into new imperialist struggles and a new imperialist world war.

American capitalism will be free to use its investments in European industry as a means of forcing down the wages of the American workers and forcing upon them the low standard of life which it is compelling the slaves of the Dawes' plan in Germany to accept.

Fight for the Soviet Union and the Workers' Interests

THE American workers must unite with the workers of other countries for defense of the Soviet Union and the workers' interests. The interests of the workers and peasants of the Soviet Union are the interests of the workers of every country. They are fighting against the same capitalist enemy. The same capitalist enemies which seek to destroy the Soviet Union are seeking to further oppress and exploit the workers of the United States.

Every workers' organization must place itself on record for the defense of the Soviet Union. In every city the trade unions, the co-operatives, the workers' fraternal and political organizations should send delegates to a conference to unite for defense of the Soviet Union and to fight for the workers' interests. Form a united front of labor for defense of the Soviet Union and the workers' interests.

Down with American imperialism and its looting of the peoples of Mexico, South America, China and the Philippines.

Down with the Dawes plan and the enslaving of the German and American workers.

Down with American militarism and its sacrifices of the workers' lives for the capitalist profits.

Old Suffragette Now Organizes Women for "Preventing" Strikes

LONDON, Oct. 2. — The women's guild of the empire, a direct descendant of the militant suffragists who fought so desperately for the vote, and headed by Mrs. Drummond, "fighting general" of the old organization, has been formed to fight Communism and prevent strikes. Two hundred delegates will hold a conference in London this week. The idea is to form a national body of housewives who will stand fast for preventing their husbands from going or staying on strike and to oppose all "radical" ideas and movements.

Our Readers' Views

Parents Must Get Busy.

To the DAILY WORKER:— The other day I visited the Lane Tech high school. The conditions I witnessed there were appalling. The corridors, study hall, lunchroom and surroundings were filthy, the boys were terribly crowded, the routine and management was like that of a factory.

At lunch the boys are divided into three shifts. During these periods they can be seen with their "hot dog" sandwiches standing around in the street, sitting on the curbstones, huddled together in the hallways. The lunch room is poorly equipped and dirty and there are no grounds around the building. The atmosphere is not of school, but is characteristic of factory life and the boys are driven by teachers who perform the tasks of foremen.

The school has about 6,000 boys and can only accommodate from 2,500 to 3,000. There are 18 portables, some as far as a half a block from the main building. Across the street from Lane is the perfume producing plant of Oscar Meyer and company, meat packers.

Where is that new school building we have been promised since 1895, to be built on the present Riverview amusement park site?

I believe the time is ripe in Chicago for the organization of a parents' union for visiting the schools, checking up on the board of education's negligence and demanding decent schools for our children. I should like to hear what other parents think about this matter thru the columns of the DAILY WORKER. — Clara Leiberman, Chicago, Ill.

Child Exploitation Increases in Fields of Sunny California

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 1.— Child slavery in California is on the increase. According to the information gathered by the state bureau of labor statistics there are 5,000 children working in the fields of California.

In 1920, according to the federal census, there were but 1,832 children at work in the agricultural fields.

Many of these children work in the cotton fields of Fresno and Imperial Valleys.

HELP CHINA!

In all the principal cities of China today, the workers are rising in revolt against their oppressors, feeling the breath of freedom that comes to them from the workers' government of Soviet Russia, they too, want to be free.

The iron hand of international imperialism is pressing harder and harder upon their throats in an effort to starve them and keep them in submission, abject slavery and servitude.

The success of international capitalism spells starvation, exploitation, imprisonment and death for the workers of all countries.

FLINT, MICH., IS IDEAL TOWN FOR AUTO BOSS

Workers Clamoring for Dangerous Jobs

By A. W. HARWITT
(Worker Correspondent)

FLINT, Mich., Oct. 2.—Workers are lined up in front of employment offices of big automobile plants here continuely from morning till night waiting to sell their labor power. The workers waiting for jobs at the big Buick plant have to stand in a long line awaiting their turn to be interviewed. Sometimes they are hired but there is only about one out of ten that get a job.

Pool System Used in Buick

The Buick has the pool system of piece work and it is impossible for a worker to know how much he is going to receive till pay day. It depends on how much the gang makes that he works in. Some of the workers interviewed said that the wages run as low as $2.00 per day. Many men waiting for jobs have been in the line for weeks only to be told there is nothing doing when at last they reached the desk.

The employment office at the Chevrolet plant is crowded all day long till the white colored flunky who sits at the desk, comes out and crisply announces that there will be nothing more doing today, "Come back tomorrow morning." He seems to enjoy this part of his job the most, and seems to have no doubt that they will be on hand the next day. Workers who can not hold up till payday are not hired. Hundreds are coming to town every week of their own accord while the out of town agents are shipping to Flint from points far away. Most of the men coming in are with out funds.

Only Dirty and Dangerous Jobs Available

About the only jobs to be had are in the sheet metal department, and on punch presses. The work in the sheet metal department is very hard and dirty and a man can stand it but a short time. The workers in this department are saturated with oil from morning till night because they have to handle the material so fast.

The punch press jobs in this plant are not very popular as it is a common sight to see a worker coming from the building with his hand swathed in bandages.

When the hired flunky calls out the jobs for the punch press the workers carefully look at their fingers. But somebody always takes the job.

Regardless of the fact that there are thousands of idle men here, the workers who have jobs are forced to work overtime. The workers don't like the night work as they say that night work reduces their efficiency, thereby reducing their bonus. Whenever a worker cannot stand the overtime, he is fired.

Who Gets the Subsidy?

The mine owners of Great Britain have been trying to reduce the base wage rates of the miners, in spite of the assurance made by them and Prime Minister Baldwin when the government granted a subsidy to "the industry," that the base wage rates would remain—pending the report tof the new coal commission and a final agreement—the same as they were in July 1925.

Baldwin is now backing up the owners in their violation of this specific agreement, with the lawyer's argument that—in July 1925—the agreement of 1924 was operative, and that under it the basic wage rates could be, under some circumstances, "altered." The miners contend that the subsidy was granted definitely to provide that the rates prevailing in July 1925 would continue, without regard to how these rates were derived.

Clearly, the reactionary tory government, with its spirit buoyed up a bit by the new fascist army mobilizing for violence and civil war against labor's resistance to a decrease in its starvation living standard, wants to renege on its July promise and contract with the miners, and is deliberately provoking a serious crisis.

Without venturing into prophecy we may observe that British labor's mood to take up the challenge for battle may result in a casualty list not altogether one-sided. But what we wish to bring out is the truth of the debate going on over the subsidy. The owners got all huffy the other day when A. J. Cook mentioned that the owners had little cause to cut wage rates when the subsidy guarantees their profits. This was a lie, the owners vociferously protest. Let's see.

The owners were making profit on the coal mined and marketed. If they do not make profit the coal isn't mined, with the miners unemployed and profits stopped. This, of course, has been a result in some degree of competing with reparations "Dawes plan coal"—but no one will deny that the unemployed miners bear the heaviest burden of suffering and want. There have been no mine owners reduced to living in shanties and begging for crusts.

Under capitalism the first charge upon industry is profit. Unless the miners accepted the wage cut, the owners said they could make no profit and would shut down. The miners refused to accept a cut, and the government, to prevent disastrous dislocation to all industry, agreed to pay a subsidy to the mine owners to allow the continuance of wages without taking the owners' profits. The claim of the miners that the subsidy guaranteed profits is correct, and the attempt to cut wages is a deliberate effort to provoke a new battte with labor in the hopes, as our Chicago Tribune says, that the British bourgeoisie has a better chance "for a clear showdown now," with the aid of the counter-revolution organizing its fascist army for a dictatorship which the Tribune wishes us to believe would be but "momentary."

The settlement which answers the need of society is, of course, the nationalization of the mines, but it is apparent that British capitalism is not going to allow such a thing unless forced after open civil war with victory perched on the standards of the working class. This is why the question "Should the workers arm?" is the debate before British labor.

Liverpool and the Red Flag

While the elated bourgeoisie is venting great shouts of joy at the defeat of the Communists in the Liverpool labor party congress, the congress closes with three significant things. First, it opposes the alleged "security pact"; second, it endorses the Dawes plan; and third, it ends singing the song, "The Red Flag."

Why this new mystification for our Main Streeters? After the Scarborough Trade Union Congress went to the left and the Liverpool labor party congress remained right, the British movement has no right to puzzle the brains of the American Babbits with added conundrums.

But the fact is that the fraternity that has grown up between British and Russian labor is so overwhelming that even James Ramsay MacDonald has to bend an ear to the argument that the "security pact" is a war alliance against the Soviet Union, Communists in the congress forced upon him this platonic gesture at least of opposition to a new war against the workers' republics. He cannot betray the Russian workers, so he makes a virtue of protecting them and has the added advantage of being in opposition to the Baldwin government which made the "security pact" and can gain political capital by opposing its handiwork.

The Dawes plan, however, is one of MacDonald's own babies. It may be a sickly infant with a questionable parent on the other side from MacDonald, but it is his. And then this Dawes plan only betrays the British workers, who are in his power in some measure. He can do it, so he does it.

As to the "Red Flag," that is a traditional song in the ranks of British labor, and just as only a "political idiot," as Lenin once said, pays attention to words, so it may be said that while the labor party congress closed singing the "Red Flag" it raised a white one.

Anthracite Death List for August

By EARL R. BROWDER.

DURING the month of August, 46 miners of anthracite coal were killed in the bituminous mines. This is the latest casualty list issued by the bureau of mines, department of commerce, at Washington. Ten miners were killed in an explosion at Wilkes-Barre on Aug. 3.

THE total number of miners killed during 1925 now stands at 1,461. The death rate in anthracite for the eight months shows an increase over last year of eight per cent.

The month of September will show a sudden cessation of this wholesale killing of anthracite miners. This is because they have left the mines, on strike for an increase of 10 per cent in the price of miners' lives.

IF the rich anthracite profiteers will just pay a little more money out of their bursting treasuries they can buy all the miners' lives which they need to destroy in order to continue their flow of profits.

Such is anthracite mining and industry generally under capitalism. It would cost the workers less in life and limb to take the industries away from the capitalists entirely, and operate them for the benefit of the entire working class.

Internal Situation of the Workers (Communist) Party

By P. GREEN.

A SHORT report has been given to me by some comrades about the membership meeting of the New York organization, September 25. This report shows that Comrade Foster, in his speech, sometimes quoted my words spoken in the Parity Commission. I took occasion already during the party convention to emphasize that no stenographic minutes of the Parity Commission exist and that therefore quotations from memory are not a good source for the information of the party. They are always more or less inexact and can always be questioned. It is therefore preferable not to use such sources but instead use facts and documents.

The report of the New York membership meeting makes it urgent for me to give the party a short report of the work of the Parity Commission on the basis of unquestioned facts and documents.

At the beginning of the work of the Parity Commission (beginning of July) there existed a split in the party; in Cleveland there were two organizations; a similar situation existed in Philadelphia; in Chicago and New York the situation was extremely sharp. The party had two central committees, two independent organizations with their own finances and connections and their own internal discipline.

THIS actual split was liquidated by the Parity Commission.

The Parity Commission did not detect any fundamental differences in political questions between the two facttions. All political resolutions were adopted unanimously. (I emphasize this fact later when I analyze the party life during the last months. I will therefore come back to this.)

The election campaign before the party convention was the basis for an extreme sharpening of the factional struggle. The dangers of a split grew to a high pitch. Especially so because apparently the struggle was not about principles but about the majority in the party.

The representatives of the minority, foreseeing the possibilities of a split, made the proposal to the Parity Commission to settle the most touchy questions of the individual composition of the Central Committee and the District Committees. They agreed to form a minority in the Central Committee altho the result of the elections was not yet clear. By these means they hoped to avoid a split. The proposal was accepted by the Parity Commission. The number of members in the Central Committee for the Foster group was fixed at 13 while 8 were assigned to the Ruthenberg group. Irrespective of this decision there developed an actual split in three districts. The Parity Commission succeeded in liquidating this split.

THE decision of the Communist International coincided in the most important practical proposals and decisions with those of the Parity Commission, not less than 40% for the representatives of the minority of the Central Committee (the decision of the Parity Commission was 38%), maximum of the parity principle in all executive organs, (the decision of the Parity Commission was not less than one-third for the minority). But the political appraisal of both factions by the Comintern, contained in the resolution of the E. C. C. I., created a crisis within the majority faction. The faction split in two parts; first the group of Comrade Foster which in the beginning declared itself for nonparticipation in the Central Committee and later proposed not to take the majority in that committee, and second, the group of Comrade Cannon which made the proposal to organise the Central Committee on the basis of the parity principle. The view of Comrade Cannon was victorious and his proposal was accepted unanimously by the faction after a long discussion.

A new session of the majority faction designated as candidates for the politbureau Comrades Foster and Bittelman. (During all this time Comrade Bittelman supported Comrade Foster.)

In the meeting of the new Central Committee—thanks to my vote—the majority of the politbureau and the secretariat was secured for the Ruthenberg group and instead of Bittelman, Cannon was elected to the politbureau and the secretariat for the Foster group.

LET us try to analyze the above cited facts.

The first thing one is impressed with is that the party has gone thru a very severe crisis and that it had sufficient strength to overcome the danger of a split between the former majority and minority. That does not mean that the danger of a split is completely eliminated or even considerably lessened. It only means that the crisis of the party has been moved onto a new track; the former divisions in the party are giving way to new divisions. It is no secret in the party that there are serious differences between the Foster and Cannon groups. These differences are not less serious than those that had existed between the former majority and minority. The formal division of the former majority group into two groups is only a question of time. That is the first thing.

Second: The differences between the new groups in the party follow a new line. That does not mean that the former differences are fully overcome. It merely means that new questions arise as the center of the inner party controversy. Now it is no longer the question of the labor party that is being discussed but the question of Bolshevization and reorganization of the party and first of all the question of the relation of the party to the Communist International. (Both questions are very closely connected. The group which goes against the Comintern cannot at the same time be for the Bolshevization of the party.)

THEREFORE, if a split does come, it will take place on a new line; only part of the former majority will split off from the party.

Third: What importance can be attached to the fact that the former majority faction accepted unanimously the resolution of Cannon but proposed as members of the politbureau and the secretariat Comrades Foster and Bittelman?

Here we find a tremendous and irreconcilable contradiction between the words and the deeds of the former majority. It has long been established that judgment of political parties and groups must be based not upon their words, their declarations, their promises, their resolutions and their programs, but upon their deeds, upon their practical activities. The resolution of Cannon was accepted (for the C. I.) but as candidates for the politbureau there was selected Comrades Foster and Bittelman who took a position against the C. I., against the decision of the Comintern. In words therefore, they were for the C. I., in action against it, in words for Cannon, in deeds for Foster and Bittelman.

The last membership meeting of the New York party organization where Comrades Zack, Krumbein and Aronberg made open declarations against the C. I. declaration, and declared themselves openly against cooperation with the Ruthenberg group, has clearly proven that part of the former majority have begun to travel a road that does not lead toward the Comintern, but in an entirely different direction. A number of facts from party life after the party convention prove that the contradictions within the former majority which has never been a homogeneous group are sharpening. From the one side the social democrat and Loreist elements begin to raise their heads and openly oppose reorganization. On the other hand, part of the former majority is fully aware of the impossibility of following the road selected by Comrades Foster and Bittelman, the road which does not lead toward the Comintern. This part of the former majority is beginning to desert its leaders and to approach the Ruthenberg group.

COMRADES FOSTER, Bittelman, Krumbein, Aronberg and Zack declared that they are for the Comintern, while in fact they are following a political policy against the Comintern. Such a system of double accounting, where one account belies the other, cannot be continued for any length of time. Already the unanimous acceptance of the political resolutions in the Parity Commission was somewhat suspicious. This unanimity smelled very much like double accounting. The deeds differing from words. The acceptance of the Cannon resolution and the election of Foster and Bittelman into the politbureau has clearly brot to life this double accounting. It became clear then that a parity policy in the C. E. C. was impossible. One cannot give equal rights to that group which is for the Comintern and that group which carries on a policy against the Comintern. It is necessary to preserve the leading role in the party for that group which stands for the Comintern not only in words, but also in deeds and which was characterised by the Comintern as being "nearer and more loyal to it."

Objectively the situation in the party is as follows: Lore accepted the resolution of the party congress about his expulsion from the party with a light heart. He did not make any attempt to protest against this decision to the C. I. which only proves that the Comintern is thereby foreign to him. Now he is openly working against it. The Lore alone is not a big power, yet we must not forget that he is the spokesman of these social democratic Loreist and half-Loreist elements which are still very numerous in our party.

FOSTER and Bittelman are actually following a line against the Comintern altho they declare that they are for the Comintern. (Such declarations are very cheap.) They are gathering the right wing of the party around them. The elections to the convention prove that.

By remaining longer in the Foster faction, the Cannon group, which is supported by the healthier part of the former majority, which actually is for the Comintern, risks in this situation to be thoroly discredited. Neither the party nor the Comintern could interpret such a further adherence in any other way than as a support to the Foster-Bittelman group. After the New York membership meeting which has proven that the Foster-Bittelman group has made a further step against the Comintern, a firmer formal unity of the Cannon group with the Foster-Bittelman group is objectively a support of the right wing of the party.

There is a lot of talk in the party at the present time that the last decision of the Comintern was the result of incorrect information and of foreign influences. The talk goes around that the Comintern will annul this decision. This is ridiculous humbug. But facts are stubborn things. No rumor can eliminate or hide them. Is it not a fact that Comrades Foster and Bittelman are now taking a position against the C. I.? Is it not a fact that they are supported in the party by the right elements? These facts cannot be hidden by any resolution and even the C. I. does not have the power to do that.

THE party has still many difficulties ahead of it until it stands on the firm ground of Bolshevism. But it will overcome these difficulties if it learns to judge the groups and factions not by their words but by their deeds. This is all important.

I am sorry that Canadian engagements make it impossible for me to take further part in the work of the Workers Party in this extremely important period of Bolshevization and reorganization. But it is clear to me that the party has entered a new period of its life and that the old divisions are changing. This is proof of the growth of the party and a guarantee for its further development in the direction of Bolshevization.

NEW YORK MEMBERSHIP MEETING INDORSES CENTRAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE AND C. I. DECISIONS

NEW YORK CITY, Oct. 2—At the New York City membership meeting held at Manhattan Lyceum on Sept. 25, the Central Executive Committee resolution was adopted by a vote of 388 for, 9 against, and 127 abstaining from voting. The meeting was called as the first step in the local campaign to Bolshevize and reorganize the party on the shop nucleus basis.

Comrade Lovestone opened the meeting with a speech on the immediate problems confronting the party in the work of reorganization. He reviewed the convention and Communist International decision, discussed the menace of Loreism and then went into detail on the meaning and process of reorganization. Comrades asking questions from the floor and discussion followed, and then the resolution was put, with the result given above.

In his speech, Comrade Lovestone declared that with the Communist International decision and the convention, the party had really begun in earnest the work of Bolshevizing the party. Askeli's removal and Lore's expulsion, both of which were political, not personal acts, were the signal of the newt tendency. Lore had been given the chance to appear in Moscow before the Executive Committee of the Communist International to defend and redeem himself, but had refused and upon his expulsion showed how much of a Communist he was by immediately attacking the Communist International, attempting to discredit and undermine it. The party had now outgrown the time when such opportunism was permissible. The theory of mass spontaneity, a "senile disease" as Stalin had called it, had also been struck a severe blow.

Lore's argument that the Communist International was basing its decisions on wrong information, a typical opportunist claim, which was used as an excuse for evasion, defeatism and sabotage of Communist International decisions, had also been smashed. His attempt in the Volkszeitung to use the removal from power in the German Communist Party of Fischer and Maslov as capital for his case was also typical of an opportunist. That removal was along the same line as the decision on the American question—a blow at right deviations cloaked in ultra-left phrases. The pessimism of the comrades led by these two was the result of an unawareness of new developments in the working class ranks, as well as of a lack of confidence in the party, an acceptance of the decisions of the International Communist Party in words, while sabotaging them in practice.

Bolshevization, Lovestone defined as the application of the lessons and experiences of the Russian Communist Party and the Russian revolution on a concrete basis to the objective conditions in the United States. It will mean lessening the gap between the rank and file of the party, and the center, on the one hand, and lessening the gap between the party and the masses of the proletariat, on the other. It will mean intensifying our work, bringing into unions the membership and then fighting to win the majority of the working class for Communism. The Central Executive Committee was pledged to lend all its energy and resources to this work. We should help to develop a special organ for the left wing movement in the unions. The Central Executive Committee has organized a special trade union department, would resume and intensity work among the farming masses, and was working on a campaign against imperialism concertized on an active organizational basis.

Reorganization was a fundamental political problem, not merely an organizational one. If the road to the revolution was paved with picnic tickets we would have a walkover, considering the present activity of many party branches. Lovestone put the question bluntly to the meeting: were we proud of the order of business at our meetings, were we satisfied to be merely a "walking agency" collecting money all the time and little else? The fault was to a great extent in the basically wrong form of organization of our party, a social-democratic legacy, which specialized in parliamentary campaigns and was organized to promote class peace, not to destroy capitalism. Our party must be based on the working class, organized where they are found, in the mines, mills, factories and shops. The plans issued by the Central Executive Committee would soon turn the pious wish which reorganization had been for so long into an actuality. The branch, section and city membership meetings, the mobilization of the press, the assembling of all our resources to educate the party to the immediate necessity of reorganization — this would soon uproot the territorial and federation basis of the party, a basis which Piatnitzky had called "federated chaos" and which had made us in this respect one of the most backward sections of the Communist International. Our 17 small "parties" with their inevitable factionalism and pinprick politics would give place to a party so organized that of it "every factory would be a Communist fortress" (Lenin). Members must take the initiative in organizing nuclei, as soon as three of them work in one shop—organize first, then notify the district office and it would see that the nucleus lives and grows.

Our slogans for success, Lovestone emphasized, are (1) "Stand by the Communist International" as an answer to Loreties and other opportunists: (2) "Back to work" a full liquidation of the recent factional struggle, which we are leaving for the next stage of building a mass party; (3) "Unity in our ranks" (4) the spirit of the "subotnzik" (Saturdaying) of sacrifice for the party, more hard work, more loyalty to the party and Communist International.

Comrade Foster introduced his remarks with a reference to the Communist International decision declaring that he did not see what caused it to be made. He related facts which led him to feel that the decision was unexpected and unwarranted. He called upon all comrades to accept the decision and carry it out. Comrade Foster then spoke on Bolshevization and reorganization. He showed that reorganization had been the principal item before the last enlarged Executive Committee of the Communist International meeting, and that now the task before us was—work to carry these decisions out. He also stressed the federation as the breeding ground of factionalism and sectarianism, of isolation from the masses, of decentralization. A reorganized party would not only be able to root its influence in the masses but would also feel the pulse of the masses at all moments. It would be a center for organizing the unorganized, and would plant the party immediately in the very heart of the class struggle. If New York were reorganized now, the needle trades unions would be ours almost at once.

Lack of English, tho it was a barrier, Foster pointed out, would be overcome by the language clubs that would supplant the federations. At this time, with most of our members so long in the United States it was a disgrace for them not to understand English. They had better hurry up and learn it if they wish to become a factor in the American class struggle, and the best place to learn would be in the shop nucleus. The clubs would have fractions in them, fractions which would be connected up in national organizations that would support the language press. Inertia was a big difficulty in the way of reorganization, and an ideological campaign must be waged that would destroy it.

A great many questions were then asked about reorganization of the party and discussion followed. Comrades Zack, Aronberg and Krumbein discussed the Communist International decision and the resolution introduced by the Central Executive Committee representative. Zack and Aronberg declared their opposition to the Communist International decision and attacked the resolution of the Central Executive Committee. Comrade Krumbein alleged that the decision of the Central Executive Committee in the selection of the personnel of the sub-committees in New York district was factional and declared that he would abstain from voting.

Comrades Gitlow, Wolfe, Stachel and Weinstone spoke in favor of the Central Executive Committee resolution and the Communist International decision. They pointed out that the remarks of Zack, Krumpein and Aronberg were violations of the spirit of the Communist International decision and were raising factionalism at a time when the party should get down to work on reorganization and bolshevization. They particularly scored the remarks of those comrades as they were members of the Central Executive Committee and District Executive Committee.

Comrade Lovestone then summed up for the Central Executive Committee, replying to the arguments and the resolution was put to a vote and carried by an overwhelming majority.

TUNNEL CAEVIN TRAPS WORKERS NEAR RICHMOND

Repair Men Caught as Collapse Occurs

RICHMOND, Va., Oct. 2—More than one hundred workers were trapped in the collapse of a tunnel on the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad they had been sent in to repair, near Richmond, Va.

Most of the workers were foreign-born. The section that caved in took the roadway in the park above the tunnel with it. Those who were first at the park could hear the stifled groans of the workers that were caught in the tunnel.

A rescue crew has begun the work of rescuing the covered workers. It is not known as yet how many are in the tunnel. The railroad head in charge of the job estimates there were several hundred in the tunnel and that many have been able to escape. The estimated number within the tunnel at present is placed above 100.

Apple and Potato Harvest

On the heels of the wheat harvest in the Dakotas and southern Canada comes the apple crop in Washington and Oregon and the potato crop in Idaho, as is pointed out by the Industrial Workers of the World from their headquarters in Chicago. They urge their organizers and active members to utilize the harvest conditions for organizing the transient migratory workers that flood those districts. Wenatchee and Yakima will be the organizing centers.

War Dogs Hold Mitchell

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2. — Colonel "Billy" Mitchell, who kicked up the present air row, has been ordered by the war department to remain in Washington to appear next week before the inspector general of the army to answer charges against him for criticising the war and navy departments, it was learned here today.

WARD BAKERIES BECOME PART OF GIGANTIC TRUST

To Control the Large Granaries

Since the Ward Baking company has slashed its prices on bread 20%, the other companies have held a conference and are trying to find ways of meeting the slash.

The Ward company has been a non-union concern for a number of years and this attempt on its part to slash prices is interpreted by the union officials of the Bakers' Union as nothing but an attempt to force the small union shops into the bankruptcy and the larger union shops into the non-union column.

The slash of 20% in bread prices by the Ward Bakery company, comes after an announcement in financial circles of a merger between the Continental Baking Co. and the Ward Baking company. The formation of a bread trust is well under way. The bread trust after the consummation, will control numerous grain elevators flour mills and baking establishments in all the principal cities of America.

SAKLATVALA'S CRIME

British Imperialism in India

SPEECH IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS

That was used as the basis of the charges on which he was barred from entering the United States to attend the sessions of the Interparliamentary Union at Washington.

By SHAPURJI SAKLATVALA.

In the House of Commons on Thursday, July 9th, Mr. S. Saklatvala, M. P., speaking in the Committee of Supply on the Vote for the Indian Office:

"That a sum, not exceeding £76,000, be granted His Majesty, to complete the sum necessary to defray the Charge which will come in course of payment during the year ending on the 31st day of March, 1926, for a contribution towards the Cost of the Department of His Majesty's Secretary of State for India in Council, including a Grant," said:

I am thankful to the Noble Lord that towards the close of his speech he told the Committee that I am bound to take a different view from both Front Benches, who are more or less alike in their policy and their outlook on Indian affairs. I would not take the Noble Lord's certificate that both Front Benches are identically and absolutely alike, but he is entitled to believe that there is a general agreement on certain main questions. What I say here is not in any mood of anger or hatred, but positively with a view to speaking the truth, when sometimes truth, though unpleasant, is ultimately better than diplomatic statesmanship and political thought. I pay homage to the British spirit of hypocritical statesmanship. It is a wonderful sight today. We are talking of the Indian Empire just in the same strain of common agreement, with that very placid attitude of mind and phraseology of speech as if we were discussing some matters relating to the renewal of the furniture of the library or the cooking utensils in the kitchen of the House of Commons.

I assure the Committee that my whole object taking the line I do is to place before the committee, as well as before the country, not only the Communist party point of view, but the general international point of view, the overlooking of which in the near future is going to bring serious calamity of many European countries, and especially to Great Britain. We are debating here as if the Bengal ordinances were never promulgated as if the shooting of Bombay operatives during the cotton strike had never taken place, as if a great strike of thousands of railway workers is not even now going on in the Punjab, with men starving and the Government, the controller of those railways, taking up a hard-faced attitude, as if all these things had not happened, as if a great controversy is not raging, not only with the people of India, but with the people all over the world, whether British Imperialism, whatever its past history, is at all permissible to exist now for the benefit of the citizens of Great Britain herself. There are great problems pertaining to India and Britain which ought to have been discussed on an afternoon like this. I agree that the commonness of parties and the commonness of policy between the last Government and the present Government has tabooed all these important questions from being uttered in the House. The main question is of Imperialism and the existence of the British Empire in its present form.

India's Place in the Empire.

It is rather unfortunate that from the earliest time you have called this agglomeration of different peoples and different races the British Empire. I wish you had from the first designated it as the Indo-British Empire, so that what we may say about the Indian subjects in the Empire may not be taken as a reflection by our Colonial friends in Canada, Australia, and elsewhere. The conditions are entirely different. Rules and regulations, formulae, political remedies and experiences which apply to that part of the British Empire which is composed of Great Britain and her white Colonies are not at all applicable to the other portions of the Empire, such as India and certain portions of China and Africa. I disagree even with those of my own Indian friends and compatriots who would take a sentimental view of British Imperialism as it exists today. I take it for granted that if it is admitted that the Imperialist relationship of one dominant nation guiding the destinies of another bigger and vaster, nation, directing all her social, economic and political—forces in channels of her own choosing, to suit her own convenience—if that tie is to be taken as a justifiable tie my Indian friends have no right to come and dictate to the British nation how to hold on to that tie. If for diplomatic purposes, or if once India herself or the Socialist friends of India undertake to keep up the position of one dominating nation in an Empire controlling the destinies of another nation, then it becomes a contract, and I believe that Great Britain as the contractor should be the best judge as to how to carry out the contract. I do not take the view that there are progressive ways of self-government, of Dominion Home Rule, of Indianization of the Army and all those things just as possible as there are certain progressive measures for cultivating apples in Canada, cattle markets in Australia and bringing the fruit and meat to this country from the distant parts of the Empire.

I take the view of the reality of life, that if genuine self-rule is in the hands of the Indians and if there exists a genuine Indianization of the Indian Army, no Indian will be so despicable, just as to say that they would hold that country and that army for the benefit of some people other than their own. I do not want to deceive myself on that point. The talk of the Constitution, and the alteration of the Constitution, of a 10-year limit or a 15-year limit, are nothing but little details in the art of governing another nation by a sort of hypnotization. I am not interested in such problems. I tell my Indian friends as I tell to my British friends, that the same principles of life are in every European or Asiatic nation. I put that to the Committee and to the Noble Lord and his party quite seriously.

Take the problem as a human problem. India is a large country with over 300,000,000 people. You talk of 10 per cent of the people being educated today. That 10 per cent in that large country represents 30,000,000 people and you admit that those 30,000,000 people—which means a much larger population than many other smaller European countries—are educated and as fit as other similarly educated persons in several parts of Europe. Then you style yourselves the trustees of the whole of India, and as trustees you take jolly good care to see that the other 280,000,000 of people remain ignorant, illiterate, uneducated, with no freedom to call their souls their own. You tell those 30,000,000 people that although they may be educated, and although they may be fit—and in a short time those 30,000,000 will become 40,000,000 or 45,000,000; as big a population as the whole of Great Britain—because Great Britain, to suit her own purpose treats those 280,000,000 persons as so many animals or beasts of burden, these 40,000,000 or 50,000,000 of educated people will have to lead an unnatural life and will have to believe one thing and practice another.

Is there a single British man or woman today, is there a person in any country in Europe, in any of the backward countries, in the Balkan States, in any of the small nations which are not yet so fully developed as Great Britain who should tolerate for one day a power so despotic and arbitrary as the Crown, under the Imperial system, is insisting upon enjoying in India? There would not be man or woman who tomorrow would not rise and fight to the bitter end to claim their rights of monarchy claimed one-tenth of the privileges which in the name of the Crown are exercised over the people of India. Because you keep the other 280,000,000 people back, you are asking the 30 or 40 millions of educated people there also to swallow such an indignity and such an impossibility in public life.

Monarchy in the East.

It may be said, indeed it is said, for it is a Western idea, that the Asiatic people always allow a good deal of latitude to their monarchs. That is Western ignorance. Eastern people have never tolerated anti-democratic rights and privileges in their monarchs. You see in the 20th century the Chinese people have overthrown their monarchy, which was 3,000 years old, because the monarchy did not square in with the democratic opinions of the people. The Persians have overthrown completely one monarchy after another and have put their monarchs under lock and key for not obeying the people's wishes. You see the same thing in Turkey. No Eastern country would tolerate as the British people have tolerated the humbug and nonsense from the governing classes; they have overthrown them and established the people, the peasants in power. It is an untruthful statement to say that the people of the East are tolerating high privileges in monarchy and in their ruling castes and classes. It is a false notion. It is the Western conceit; it is the Westerner admiring himself, as though the Westerners have the highest consciousness of human life.

How does the Committee reconcile the idea of telling 30,000,000 people that they are British, that they have British culture, that they have received British education and yet they must put up with the privileges and rights that have been claimed under the British Crown by their rulers in India and which the people in this country would fight to the bitter end rather than they would accept. Human feeling, the human heart and the human mind are just the same in India as here or elsewhere. You call the Indians seditious when they protest against these things, but when you rise in revolt in this country against the ruling classes it is called the spirit of democracy. In India it is sedition, conspiracy, subversive propaganda. Is it the intention

Comintern Letter to the Communist Party of Germany

Editor's Note.—Here is the concluding installment of the letter of the Communist International to the Communist Party of Germany. Yesterday's installment included the question of trade union work, the Comintern and the leading groups in the German Party central. It also took up the question of the relations of the German Party to the Communist International, of which the opening of today's installment is a continuance:

EVERY delegate to the party congress received from the Central a copy of a special number of the Berlin "Funke," the main contents of which were a "diplomatic" attack by Maslow on the Comintern. In this article, entitled: "Some Observations on Our Tenth Party Congress," Maslow wrote as follows:

"The subsequent left of the German C. P., before the Fourth World Congress, raised the demand of 'Back to the Second World Congress' in this sense, and quite rightly. Comrade Zetkin, in her above mentioned book of memoirs, relates that Lenin laughed at this 'foolishness.' I do not doubt it, for I can easily imagine how this slogan was presented and interpreted to him.

"It is not for nothing that the Fourth Congress, despite Lenin's derision, expressly confirmed the 21 conditions, and it is not for nothing that the Fifth World Congress was compelled to return deliberately and emphatically to the principles of the Second. . ."

Here again Maslow attempts, by means of demagogic confrontation of the Second, Fourth and Fifth World Congresses on the one hand, and the Third, on the other, to destroy ideologically the political development of the Comintern, and to discredit the principles of Communist policy at the present period. Maslow also makes the untrue assertion that: "The Levites, unfortunately, have received the actual support of the Russian comrades."

This agitation against the "Russian comrades" is followed in Maslow's article by the equally dangerous legend that "the Levites rightly regarded themselves as victors at the congress in Moscow (!)."

"The Third Congress," proceeds Maslow, "had above all the effect of preventing the German C. P. from finding clearness for itself. Thus the Third Congress. . . exercised a similar effect upon the German C. P. as the Heidelberg Party conference two years previously; despite correct decisions. . . a harmful effect."

"If the principles of the Second Congress had been propounded without the bogey of 'Left' dangers being raised. . . then in all probability the crises in the German and French Communist Parties would have been considerably shortened.

"But the executive too, and the Russian comrades (!) were not at all agreed. . ."

Maslow writes further that not his group, but the executive "has for a long time prevented the German Party from entering into satisfactory relations with the executive."

He relates with complete approval the following incident:

"When the executive endeavored, after Jena, to correct its (completely unjustifiable) attack by inviting a Berlin delegation to visit Moscow, it was too late; the delegation unanimously declined this invitation to a feast already over, and Friesland, already right, wrote the letter of refusal at the request of the organization."

THIS last paragraph is an unexampled attempt at lowering the Communist International in the eyes of the German workers.

The anti-Bolshevist alliance in Maslow's group is in itself the best proof that Lenin was not merely "setting up the bogey of left dangers" at the Third World Congress, but that these dangers still exist today, four years after the Third World Congress, and are hampering the development of the German Party, hindering its participation in sound political work, and poisoning its ideology. The most expressed representative of these left, or rather Levitical dangers, is Maslow himself with his conception of the Third World Congress.

The whole German Party, above all the best comrades of the German left in all the party organizations and districts, are faced with the duty of exerting their utmost efforts to break with the non-Bolshevist system of relations between the party and the Comintern promoted by the Maslow-Ruth Fischer group.

Another thing which must be broken with—definitely broken with, is the system of "bookkeeping by double entry" employed by the above mentioned comrades for a full year in their relations to the Comintern. Instead of sincerely carrying out the correct lines laid down by the Comintern, this group has made continual attempts at side-tracking, substantiating their action to their own party members by references to an alleged "pressure to the right" on the part of the executive; at the same time they have offered systematic resistance to the executive, by referring to an alleged "ultra-left tendency" among the members of the German party.

THE experience gained during the fighting period just past, since the Frankfort Party conference, have proved to every German Communist that the Comintern has proved to have been unconditionally right in every disputed question with the Maslow-Ruth Fischer group. It has been right in the united front tactics and in the trade union question. It was as right in the question of the presidential election as it has been in its warnings—disregarded for years—as to the ultra-left dangers in the German Party.

We are firmly convinced that the Communist workers of Germany will speedily recognize that in the present struggle for the inner party course to be pursued by the German C. P. for its relations to the Comintern, for its relations to the masses of the workers, for its relations to Leninist theory, the Comintern is absolutely in the right, whilst the Maslow-Ruth Fischer group is unconditionally in the wrong in all these questions.

THE leading group of the party central has not showed itself capable of adopting the right measures for gaining access to the masses. Another reason for this failure has been the wrong line of inner party policy pursued by this group.

As already mentioned, the questions concerning inner party life were discussed in detail with the representatives of the German central at the session of the enlarged executive. These representatives of the executive pointed out that the ultra-centralism, the mechanical pressure, the predominantly administrative measures, the lack of propaganda and of any methods for spreading conviction, the dread of fresh forces, etc., were bound to be absolutely disastrous in effect. At this consultation it was decided to strengthen the inner party democracy. We were of the opinion that after the victory over the right has been won, and the left has the upper hand in the party, the organizatory guarantees for an all round correct general policy are given, and the problem of party education comes into the foreground. On the other hand, we believed that the circle of the new cadre of leaders was to be widened. The possibility of making a wider selection of party functionaries should be guaranteed, and this cannot be done without discussions, eligibility for election, and a conscious policy towards attracting and testing new workers. In this connection we further demanded that fresh forces should be employed, among these the best members of the former opposition, who have remained true to the Comintern and to the party. This work has, however, not been done. On the other hand, this question formed for us a part of the question of the relations towards the non-party and social democratic workers. For when purely administrative methods are employed in the party, the same policy is applied on a larger scale to the workers outside of the party, and the result is the cutting off of the possibility of winning over fresh workers. We believe that unless the party undertakes these inner party reforms, it will not be capable of carrying out a correct policy among the masses. For this reason the executive demanded these reforms to be made in the direction of "normalizing party life." During the session of the enlarged executive the German delegation, headed by Comrade Ruth Fischer, accepted these proposals.

These problems were discussed once more with the German delegation before the party conference. The executive proposed that the central should be enlarged by a number of party workers closely connected with the masses. Among other points, the Russian comrades pointed out that since Lenin's death the Russian C. P. has greatly increased the number of members in its central, thus strengthening the central, establishing its authority more firmly, and at the same time improving its communications with the mass of the party which—in combination with the inner party democratization—created better connections with the masses of workers outside of the party (Lenin recruitment).

THE German Party conference however, was prepared and carried out in such a manner that, in spite of all promises, the direct contrary was attained altho there exist strong wing groups in the party (ultra-left and right), this fact was not reflected in the least at the party conference itself. There was no political discussions, as every delegation had discussed in detail beforehand what was to be said; even at the party conference itself—the highest instance of the party—freedom of discussion was annulled. How scanty were the preparations made for the party conference may be seen from the printed motions sent in by the districts. Only seven motions were proposed; one referring to Esperanto (!), four to subscriptions, one to worker correspondents, and one to courses of communal instruction.

Analogous phenomena are to be recorded in the sphere of ideology. Never in the labor press has one witnessed such advertising as that accorded to Comrade Maslow's pamphlet. As a matter of fact this pamphlet consists solely of correct quotations and thoroly incorrect observations furnished by Comrade Maslow. It was according to this pattern that it was attempted to develop the mental life of the party.

This would not matter so much if the personal authority of the leaders stood very high. But this authority must possess some prerequisites, and not merely be mechanically acquired. Unfortunately, these prerequisites are lacking, and this is a danger for the whole party.

In the party there is a lack of control from below, that is, from the members of the party. At the same time the leading group has been carrying on a perpetual struggle against control from above, that is, from the executive of the Comintern. In this manner such a state of affairs was created as led to a loss of sense of responsibility, which led to various and quite intolerable things.

Such a structure of the party renders impossible the development of its recruiting. Such a system as this destroys the party itself. This system must be done away with, in order that an even worse crisis may be avoided, a crisis which might be really catastrophic in effect.

5. The Danger of Lack of Principle.

PRACTICAL Bolshevism consists, among other things, in acting upon theoretically acknowledged, honest thot out political lines. But in the Maslow-Ruth Fischer group the inner conviction, the inner estimate of the situation, is in obvious conflict with the line accepted. The underlying basis of this group is extremely pessimistic; it lacks revolutionary perspective; it is filled with the conception that the masses are completely passive, fleeing from everyday life, playing at soldiers, etc. The task of winning over the masses is impossible of accomplishment. And on the other hand the Comintern "demands" that the masses be won. Here already there is consistency within this leading group. Its pessimism leads to its conquetting with the ultra-left. The demands of the Comintern are met with an acknowledgment, on paper, of these demands, and with an endeavor to realize them in life, but without faith in them. Hence the vacillating attitude and political flabbiness of this group, a flabbiness combined with a diplomacy of the worst description in its relations to the Comintern.

A typical example of this is the tenth party conference.

We have already referred to the "intellectual" preparations made for the conference; Comrade Maslow wrote the articles, the sole purport of which was to discredit the importance of the Third World Congress, to deprive the whole tactics of the International of their basis, and at the same time to lay the foundation for the ultra-left groups.

FORMALLY, however, the fight was against the ultra-left at the conference. But as soon as it came to a conflict with the International the political line was immediately forgotten and the bloc with the ultra-left formed. And in Moscow Comrade Ruth Fischer declared that the party conference had tended to the ultra-left, and that she could do nothing against it, altho anxious to do so. On the other hand, support is lent to ultra-left tendencies, and on the other hand it is declared: We found ourselves in a state of emergency.

These "tactics" already possessed their traditions. In Moscow Comrade Ruth Fischer declared over and over again that the "masses" hinder her in carrying out the policy recommended by the executive, whilst in Berlin she has stated the C. I. forces an incorrect policy upon her.

This habit also found expression in Comrade Schneller's speech in Moscow—Comrade Schneller has since admitted this error—in which he declared (in order to defend persons) that the left was bankrupt. We consider this assertion to be wrong. It is not the left which is bankrupt, but some of the leaders of this left, and the left itself will hold its own along other lines, winning over ever-increasing numbers of the party members, and developing energetic and positive work.

IN the fundamental contention against the Communist International a great part is played by the argument that we are constantly wanting to "drive the German Party to the right."

We once more here expressly point out that in all important problems subsequent experience has completely justified the standpoint of the Comintern. This is now clearly understood by everyone. Only a politically completely limited mind could fail to grasp that without these tactics we should have had today, in place of the party, merely a small group of Communists, and of very bad Communists at that.

The legend of the constant "driving" of the party towards the "right" by the Comintern must be completely and finally destroyed. We emphasize that at the present moment the executive is not criticising the leading group from the "right," but from the left. Any argument brot forward in support of the assertion that the Comintern is striving to drag the party "to the right" would be regarded by us as a deliberate lie. It is precisely in order to extricate the left, and with it the whole party, from of the bog that we insist upon the proposed reforms.

6. The Tasks of the Party.

THE criticism of the errors of the group which has been leading the party up till now will only be of real and permanent benefit if it leads to a better and more determined fulfillment of the positive tasks of the party towards winning over the masses.

THE PREDICAMENT OF AMERICAN "INTELLECTUALS"

By EARL R. BROWDER

AMERICA is the land of greatest factories, greatest fortunes, and greatest fools. But it is not the land of the greatest "intellectuals," those prise exhibits which receive so much attention in Europe; and the current efforts to establish "intellectuals" in contact with the labor movement in America become lamentable farces.

These reflections are occasioned by reading an article by Benjamin Stolberg on "The Predicament of American Labor," in the Nation, September 30th. This "intellectual"—for so he seems to class himself—sees everything thru very, very dark glasses, and yet he is at the same time optimistic to the point of Pollyannaism. He is for everyone and every class, and against them at the same time. He is the intellectually tolerant-superman, above the battle, examining with a Jovian contempt the struggles of the insects down below in the labor movement.

BUT Stolberg's superior attitude, amusing and entertaining as it may be, becomes hollow when we analyze what he has to say and trace his ideas to their source. For Stolberg, the "intellectual," has contributed nothing to the ideas with which he deals. He has brought a miscellaneous collection of them from the four corners, picking out the brightest colored, the shiningest ones he could find, and furnished only a basket in which to take them to market. If he is satisfied with the role of market-boy, no one can complain, but it should be clearly understood.

What are the ideas in which Stolberg deals? There is the "new unionism" of labor banks, labor insurance, B. & O. plan, etc. Stolberg tells us nothing new for or against or about it. What is his contribution then? It is contained in the phrase: "The new unionism is a road to freedom only to the degree to which it is militantly vigilant of the protective character of the labor movement."

What a profound idea! The so-called new unionism is a new technique of surrendering the labor movement. Stolberg, a true "intellectual," must see all sides of the question; so he agrees that it is a "road to freedom" with a qualification that this is true only to the extent that it is not a road to slavery. But do you really mean, Brother Stolberg, that it can be both?

Such an idea is, of course, stretching the "dialectical contradictions" beyond the breaking point. The recondite conception that the resistance to the "new unionism" will produce an opposite movement is not Stolberg's idea; he qualifies his endorsement of the "new unionism" only in order that he may get into his basket, alongside the gaudy marbles of class-collaboration, also a collection of brilliant fragments of Communist criticism, which he has ruthlessly chipped away from their setting to help make his commodity.

THUS Section I of Stolberg's capacious hamper is filled in by reservations: Labor banks are all to the good, only the engineers should not have invested so heavily in a certain Eastern railroad; going into capitalist production with union funds is laudable, only Warren Stone made a mistake in buying coal mines in a non-union field; the only thing wrong in "labor education," as it exists, is the tendency of "merely contributing to the escape of their students from the labor movement;" schemes of technical collaboration with the employers in the shops are praiseworthy, only they should avoid the raw surrender of the B. & O. plan, which rouses the workers to opposition, etc., etc.

And in this manner does Stolberg make it possible to fill his second section with miscellaneous baubles to amuse the tired readers of the Nation. Having shown that the "new unionism" is a "road to freedom" which, somehow, leads simultaneously in the opposite direction, and that the labor movement is traveling in both directions at once, Stolberg proceeds to tell us "The Real Story." He says:

"The truth is that American labor has never been, relatively, so weak, so utterly deflated and yet restless spiritually, so vitally endangered economically, so inarticulate and unrepresented politically, so torn and bruised by factional bitterness and worse, since the early nineties, if then."

THEN follows a detailed and gloomy picture of the near-wreckage that makes up the official labor movement of the U. S., with all its brutal and stupid, bureaucratic and blundering misrule. Stolberg evidently obtained his bill of particulars from the DAILY WORKER or the Freiheit, glaring and obvious facts showing the degeneration of labor's officialdom, which the Communists have made public and which Stolberg uses. Yet, after using our criticism, he speaks of "the Communists who are irresponsibly disruptive in their attack on the present leadership." This is an exhibit of the typical irresponsibility of the American "intellectual."

The gem of Stolberg's collection comes in Section III. The cause of the bankruptcy (terms as well as ideas are borrowed from Foster and the Communist press, so far as criticism goes) of the labor officialdom lies, according to Stolberg, not in any of the larger policies, but in their subordination of the "intellectuals." The "intelligent minority" of the defunct socialist party, he says, "would not joint the children's crusade of the American Bolsheviks. And so they, as well as most of the other radical intellectuals, ran under the protecting wings of the labor oligarchy."

With what result? The labor movement is today more boss-ridden than ever before. The protecting wings were not so hospitable as expected by the "intellectuals."

And here we find the kernel of "class interest" which we expect to locate in all writings on the labor movement. Stolberg is arguing the case of petty-bourgeois intellectuals, who have been crowded out everywhere, and who are loudly knocking at the door of the labor bureaucrats, offering their brains fo[illegible] as instruments of warfare ag[illegible] the rising Communist movement. This is the root of their "arguments" and the solution of their contradictions.

The predicament of the American intellectuals is this: The revolutionary labor movement they either do not understand, or they shrink from the sacrifices that it demands. The reactionary bureaucracy, whom they wish to serve, is as yet blind to their value as allies against the Communists. And so they must need steal small arms from the Communist arsenal, wherewith to force their way into at least the outer sanctums of the official labor movement.

LENIN AND TROTSKY

By N. Krupskaya

The Facts About Lenin's "Testament" Set Out by His Widow.

YOU have, I see, found it necessary to give some attention to Max Eastman's book, "Since Lenin Died." As Mr. Eastman in his book attempts to depict me as a violent opponent of the Central Committee of the Russian Communist Party vainly endeavoring to protest against its actions, I shall be obliged if you allow me to explain the situation to English readers of this book.

Eastman throws no light on the work of the Russian Communist Party. History has imposed upon this party a most responsible and difficult task. They have to build Communism in an economically backward country during a period when capitalism in countries more advanced economically is temporarily stabilized.

Eastman's book shows nothing of this. It is a collection of petty gossip. There is nothing of what is actually happening; nothing of our vast economic achievements, or of the cultural awakening of the masses; nothing of the tremendous work of laying a secure foundation for the slogans of the November revolution.

The author is only concerned to gather up and smack his lips over every scrap of gossip and color it with his petty-bourgeois anarchist leanings.

The most monstrous thing in Eastman's book is his treatment of the "Lenin Enrollment." When Lenin died hundreds of thousands of workers flocked into the Communist Party to help carry Lenin's work on to a triumphant end. The whole working class rallied round the party and its Central Committee. The new applicants for membership were examined, at open meetings in the factories and workshops, and enthusiastic non-party workers decided whether applicants known to them were fit for the honor of membership. Never has there been such an expression of confidence in any party as was given by the Russian workers in selecting their best to go forward as units in the "Lenin Enrollment."

Lenin's dearest wish was realized. The Russian Communist Party became, not only in its ideology, but in its composition, overwhelmingly proletarian.

Eastman knows nothing of this. In his eyes the workers are merely pawns, understanding nothing; waiting to be led by any leader. To him the "intelligentsia" is the salt of the earth.

We Bolsheviks understand the workers quite otherwise—to us the more workers in the party the better. And these workers know that the Central Committee consists of comrades who during years worked with Lenin, deliberated with him every step, and with him built up the party. In gaol and in exile his work was theirs and theirs his. The working masses know their leaders better than any passing writer forming conclusions from the outside.

These old Bolsheviks have since Lenin's death felt a double weight of responsibility—a weight they could not have borne without the confidence and support of the masses. Lenin's death united them and the masses still more closely by the obvious need to carry his work to a successful conclusion.

It was in this frame of mind that I wrote to Trotsky the personal letter which Eastman has misrepresented. Lenin considered Trotsky a talented worker faithful to the interests of the revolution and to the working class. That was his view to the end —and such an appreciation calls for responsibility. That is what I was thinking of when I wrote to Trotsky.

Trotsky, of course, could not draw from this letter the conclusion that Lenin considered him his successor; or regarded him as understanding his views better than anybody else.

I could not possibly write anything of the sort—or that Lenin was always at one with Trotsky. Everybody in the Russian Party knows otherwise.

Eastman invents various fictions about Lenin's letters to the party congresses — calling them "testaments." Eastman fails absolutely to understand the spirit of our party. For us a congress is not a muster of bureaucrats but a supreme party occasion upon which every member must express himself with the utmost frankness regardless of personal considerations. It was thus that Lenin thought about them. He knew that the party would understand the motives that dictated his letters—and that they would be read and considered only by those about whom there could be no doubt that the interests of the revolution stood above everything.

If in these letters there is criticism of certain comrades and an indication of their faults, there is also, and to a far larger degree, praise of them. Of this praise Eastman says nothing. The letters were intended, and understood as, helps to organization—to the allocation of tasks. To call them "testaments" is folly.

The real testament of Lenin is contained in the last articles he wrote and relate to fundamental questions of party and Soviet work. All these articles have been published. But Eastman finds nothing of interest in them. He is too busy helping the enemies of the Russian Communist Party to calumniate and discredit the Central Committee by alleging that the "testament" (meaning the letters above-mentioned) have been "concealed."

Finally, the part of Eastman's book which deals with Trotsky himself seems to me extremely insulting to Trotsky. It is needless for me to unravel the network of lies Eastman has woven around the question of our party differences with Trotsky. Others have done that. Suffice to say that the whole question took an acute form solely because the whole party felt keenly the need, after Lenin's death, for ideological unity. Personally I was not in agreement with Trotsky and spoke accordingly on several occasions. I also criticised his "Lessons of October" in detail in Pravda.

I was thruout in agreement with the views of the Central Committee. Eastman perverts the truth on this point as he does all thru his book.

N. Krupskaya.

They Admit Russia's Strength.

To the DAILY WORKER: The capitalist reports are trying to scare the American wheat farmers against Bolshevism. The Russian Soviet government is beginning to export wheat which the American capitalist government interprets as a wilful means of causing a new discontent among the wheat farmers because of a lower competitive price.

Since the beginning of the world war, Russia did not export any wheat. This caused a reduction of nearly 200 million bushels on the world market. During the war period and after, United States, Canada, Argentine and Australia increased their wheat export to 337 million bushels.

Now that the Russian Soviet government has reestablished itself to nearly a prewar basis and is beginning to supply the world market again with wheat, the American government is fearing for its own interest of losing some of its own wheat markets.

of the Government, and is it their claim, that the people in India should call themselves British citizens, having equipped themselves fully with education and historical facts, and having received fully the ideas of the progress of the world, and yet put up with an out of date form of government? Day by day they see that the Chinese people, the Persian people, the Turkish people, and other Oriental nations are asserting their rights, the right of the people before the ruling classes.

Do you seriously propose that India should put up with a form of Crown government which was possible 100 years ago, but which today not even the people of the smallest Balkan States would put up with? I put it to my Indian friends that no sensible persons expect them to submit to such an unnatural state of mind and to such hypocritical expressions in their speeches. They are fully entitled to strain every nerve to carry on what is called seditious propaganda, what is called a revolutionary movement, and to fight with all their might and main such iniquities and unjust and brutal privileges as are claimed by the Crown, through their Agents, in India. It is perfectly right. You will all do it. No one doing it in this country would be condemned for doing it. That is the position which has to be viewed in the first place.

The Noble Lord was very angry with my Hon. Friend the Member for Dundee (Mr. Johnston) because he tried to scratch the surface. I do not say that he was angry from any personal motive, but through the habit of mind that believes that certain human beings must be slaves. Mr. Friend from Bombay who took part in the debate spoke of weekly wages in Bombay, and said that in Bombay there had been monthly wages from time immemorial. The Hon. Member forgot that hand loom weaving was the only institution known in Bombay from time immemorial; and that does not prevent him and his partners and his fellow investors from starting factories there. They forgot all about time immemorial then but when it comes to applying to their men the principles of modern rights and privileges, then they speak of time immemorial.

A School-Boyish Theory.

The Noble Lord, if he will forgive me for saying so, stood up in a school-boyish fashion, and referred us to the lessons of history for the last 700 years. As I read English history for the last 700 years, it is a more ignominous record than ours. He says, "you have always had a foreign monarch, always an invader coming from outside to rule you." Since my childhood day, when I was studying English history I have known that England so far never has had an English monarch. She has always had a foreign invader. Never has her monarchy been a home-grown product. Monarchy is a sort of family privilege. A few families supply monarchs to Europe just as a few biscuit factories supply biscuits all over Europe. We sent an English Prince to Norway to be called King Haakon.

The Chairman: We are dealing with the affairs of India and not with those of Europe or Norway. The Noble Lord, the Under-Secretary of State for India cannot be held responsible for the Government of Norway.

Mr. Saklatvala: No; but the Under-Secretary trotted out a theory which is a school-boyish theory, and I am simply showing the want of logic of the position which he took up in reproaching India as a country which was always governed by a foreign monarch, and thereby trying to establish the right of himself and his family and future generations to go on governing India. May I point out that monarchs may be foreign? We do not quarrel with an Englishman who went to India and settled there, and became a king. We shall become reconciled with him, but a foreign monarch never meant a foreign ruler. An Arab, a Turk, a Mongol or a Chinese invader, or anybody may have come in India and may have himself become an Indianized monarch, and lived in the country and become a ruler of the country. But never did the people of China, Turkey, Central Asia, Persia, or Greece, remaining in their own homes, call themselves the rulers of India, and continue to send out their advisers to rule.

It was entirely a futile argument, and if you go back 200 years your education, sanitation, and internal arrangements with bishops burning people, and with persecution and religious terrorism, you had nothing much to be proud of. You had your struggles, and we have ours, and shall still have them. I put it to the Noble Lord as well as to his own party, not to take the narrow-minded school-boyish view of life when talking of the biggest affairs of mankind. What is the good of entering into such recriminations which lead nowhere. We want to put it to you that you are talking in contradictory terms. Sometimes one thing is right and at another moment it is wrong. If you decide to go to India and revolutionize the lives of the Eastern people you do not talk of castes, you do not talk of Hindu and Mohammedan ideas, or of the suppressed classes. When it is your intention to start cotton factories, jute factories, steel works, engineering works, post offices, railways and telegraphs, you do not say, "We cannot do it because India is cut up by caste, or because of Hindu and Mohammedan hatreds, or because there are suppressed classes." With just the same case, comfort and confidence here, you start factories, mines, railroads and dockyards there. Nothing stands in your way then. But when we tell you, "See here, you pay so much a head here"—not that you pay willingly, for it was extorted by the workers fighting inch by inch against you—and we say to you that if you apply these modern instruments of treating human life, you must also apply other conditions, you say, "We must never try such experiments."

A Cowardly Game.

One Hon. Member interjected the Indian workers never work more than four or five hours. We are ready to compel them and to compel you to work eight hours a day. But the position is that when we ask you to apply to these workers the modern conditions of life, then you begin to talk to castes and of Hindus and Mohammedans and the suppressed classes, and you say, "Oh, no, let the Indians educate themselves," which for the last 150 years you have never permitted, and "let them organize themselves," which for the last 150 years you have not been anxious to permit. "Let them sit at their roll-top desks with their monthly circulars, and then in the next 150 years they will have the same rights as the workers of Lancashire." I put it to you that that is a very cowardly game. I do not impeach your intention, but do impeach your habit of mind. It is a very crooked habit of mind to take in the case of human beings. It is a cowardly game.

If you were setting the Indian worker the same equal race with his employer as you have in this country, your argument might be at least logical, even if it were not humanitarian. But here you have a fully developed master class, who with their struggles of 100 years with the working classes in Europe are experienced, well informed and well-equipped with all the methods of enslaving and grinding down human life. That readymade master does not being slow. He goes to India, to Bengal, Bombay or somewhere else, and pitches his camp there, and applies his up to date knowledge and his full blast methods of controlling labor and grinding down human beings. His informed mind, well-equipped with experience, devises schemes. You do not hold his hands. You see a group of British merchants going to India. Immediately they found a Chamber of Commerce, a Cotton Association and this association or that association. I do not blame them.

The Government from time to time says, "We are the trustees of the people, the protectors of the undefended." Where are you when it comes to defending the people against the robbers of your own country? Then your custodianship vanishes. I put this matter to the Government seriously. They talk of labor legislation. The Hon. Member of Bundso (Mr. Johnston) got a whipping in his absence from the Noble Lord the Under-Secretary. At the same time there were jocular remarks and insulting hints against the Indian Swarajists. There were roundabout aspersions on the fitness of the Indian councillor to administer his own country. Before the Indian councillors got some nominal power in their councils, these acts, had not been passed 50 years, I could allow the Noble Lord to take credit to himself as an honest man if these things had been done 50 years ago. This plan of life, the Factory Acts, the curtailment of hours and of child labor, were known to the British ruler for 50 years, and though the British rulers in India were acting as trustees for the people they have not made the slightest effort to use them. All the activity took place because of the push that we gave from here and because of the co-operation of the revolutionary men in India who demanded a fight on behalf of the workers.

We are told by the man in the street how well the British merchants who go out to India take care of the poor people and are always anxious to grant them their rights. Yet two years ago, when our Indian friends wanted to hold a Trade Union Congress in the mining area, to draw the attention of the whole country to the most hideous and most brutal conditions prevailing in the Bengal mines, the Merchants' Association, the European Mineowners' Association asked the Government to stop the Congress. They demanded the presence of a Gurka regiment. Machine guns and soldiers, with bayonets ready, were in the mining areas. That is the part they played in granting the rights of the workers. When these tactics did not succeed, and when the Indians who devoted themselves to work on behalf of the miners, showed their determination and were backed up by 50,000 to 60,000 miners laying down their tools and attending the Congress, the Chairman of the Miners' Association wrote a letter of apology and presented himself and said he would now agree. I appeal to my British friends that if they are so proud of being Britishers, for goodness sake let them remain Britishers when they go abroad. If they want to take credit for everything that somebody else does and refuse to take discredit for everything they neglect to do, the least I can say is that they are a very funny people. But remember that all other people in the world are not so funny; they see you through and through.

India's Infantile Mortality.

Take another matter—the infantile death rate. My Hon. Friend from Bombay spoke in magniloquent terms of the £10,000,000 to be spent upon the homes of the workers. If it were so, I would give credit to the Englishman or Scotsman who did it. But it is not so. It is a case of contracts and contractors. They are handling this £10,000,000 scheme. I remember that over my own signature, four yeras ago, I had to take the place of the Bombay housing scheme. £10,000,000 are not to be spent on the workers' housing scheme. The money is to be spent mainly for contractors' profits, for the dwelling houses of the rich, for showy shop fronts for increasing the land values of the landlords, and so on. There are to be workers' dwellings included, but the original scheme was for dwellings of one room, eight by ten feet, with an average calculated family of 8.3 persons in each room.

Summary of Saklatvala Exclusion.

SHAPURJI SAKLATVALA, Communist member of the British house of commons, upon making arrangements to enter America as a British delegate to the interparliamentary union congress, at Washington, D. C., was granted a visa.

This visa was later revoked by the state department following a conference in Washington of Coolidge, Kellogg and Burton of Ohio where the protest of two British tories and Home Secretary Hicks, who did not dare to bar Saklatvala from leaving England, was discussed.

The state department gave as an excuse for its action a garbled account of a speech made by Saklatvala in parliament for Indian independence.

United front mass meetings and demonstrations have been held and are being held thruout the United States demanding the admittance of Saklatvala, with the Workers (Communist) Party taking the leading role.

I communicated with an architect in this country, I submitted to him the whole plans, and I asked him to draw up a scheme which would not be extravagent. He was an architect belonging to your Army, but at the same time he belonged to the labor party. He studied the whole scheme most minutely, and gave us a design where we could have one anteroom, one back room and an open verandah (porch). We calculated the cost and printed 5,000 copies, and I sent some out to the Governor of Bombay. I had a very nice and courteous acknowledgement, with the usual statement that the proposal would be borne in mind and would be carried out some day when possible, followed by an admission, "At present our hearts are with you, but our money is with us." There was human touch in that letter. These things cannot work. They are bound to bring in the long run a painful fall which will be heavier for Humpty Dumpty in proportion to the long lease of life that he has. The Noble Lord, the Under-Secretary, has entirely evaded the issue of the Bengal Ordinances, seditious movement, suppression of the Communists and so forth.

Communist Bogey.

It may be that you are honest incompetents, and that you say this in your incompetence and incapacity, but why not learn from others? Our Russian Bolshevist friends have in five years' time been able to give the political franchise to the agriculturists of Russia, who are as a class parallel with the agriculturist population of India. They are also people of diverse religions, including Mohammedans, Jews, Greek Church people, and others. The Bolsheviks have been able to give them education in five years, yet in the Czar's days these people were treated with the same callousness and brutal cruelty as that with which you have been treating the Indian peasant for 150 years. In five years after the Communist international revolution in Russia, 65 per cent of the agricultural population have received education and you have today the testimony of half a dozen British men and women that in spite of the bloodcurdling articles in your newspapers, the Russians have done their job well. Why play a dog-in-the-manger part? I appeal to this Committee to allow a commission of Indians to go to Russia to study and to find what the British have failed to discover—the way of granting to the people of political franchise and education, scientific laboratories, institutions, health homes, compensation and allowances for industrial workers. If Russia, a country of agriculturists, could find the way out, how is it that you with your world-proclaimed cleverness as administrators have failed to find it, why not be honest and step aside and let us do the job, and we shall do it on an international Communist basis? Why are you turned inside out at the very thought of Communist propaganda in India? If as an industrial nation with your Western mind you have failed to discover a humanitarian cure for the ills of an agricultural population in an Eastern country, why play the-dog-in-the-manger? Why not permit the Russian nation, which has actually discovered the way out of the darkness, to come and help you?

The Noble Lord delivered himself on a previous occasion of his views on Russian propaganda. Today we have to review his actions during the last 12 months with regard to the Cawnpore trials. Why does he consider himself entitled to suppress Communist propaganda? He says other propaganda or subversive propaganda. That is another contradiction. Every propaganda must be subversive. If it is not subversive then there is no need for propaganda. The Hon. Member for Dundee (Mr. Scrymgeour) is carrying on prohibitionist propaganda. That is propaganda to subvert the drinking system, and if his propaganda were not subversive it would not be worth anything. Every propaganda, if it is effective and sincere, means something new, and if those who carry it on have the courage of their convictions and want to put what they feel to be right in the place of the old system, that propaganda must be subversive. You are talking to the 20th century in the terms of 18th century lawyers when you refer to subversive propaganda, sedition and revolution. They are the birthrights of modern nations, and they are the birthrights of the Indians just as much as they were your birthrights. I for one, will not yield to terrorism. I am going to carry on subversive propaganda, revolutionary propaganda, Communist propaganda with the assistance of the Russian, and the Chinese and the Germans and the British. I am not alone in that. The Government has kept quiet about the great Indian railway strike. The Government says all kinds of doings about the masters being kind, but the Government of India forgets that they themselves are the largest employers of labor in the world, taking their postmen, public men, railwaymen, miners in Government mines, workers in Government factories, and so on, and I put it quite definitely that taking a comparison with any other country, you pay the most miserable wage, and give the most miserable conditions, and deprive the population which works for you and for the prosperity of our great Empire of their rights and inflict on them political indignity and humiliation worse than can be found in any part of Asia. You could improve things if you meant to do so, but you would not be able to stay there after the improvements had taken place. You know it and I do. But the international spirit will throw you over the precipice, if you do not retreat gracefully. I am not talking only about my Russian comrades, but about my British comrades. I know the difficulties of the Front Bench among my British comrades. We must treat them as a section apart. But I think even the Noble Lord knows that the British Government is treating with the most inhuman, callous oppression the railway worker, and imposing on them a negation of their rights to such an extent that the general council of the trade union movement in this country has telegraphed £100 assistance.

I touch on one more point, and that is the death rate to which the Hon. Member for Dundee (Mr. Johnston) referred. He asked the Committee to look at other reports besides the one to which he referred in regard to infantile death rate. You say you went to India because the Rajputs were killing their daughters, and you wanted to save human life; because suttees were being burnt, and you wanted to save human life, but I tell you, you are there to destroy human life. It may not be your intention, but that is part of the game, and without it you cannot play the game. I ask Hon. Members to analyze the infantile death rate a little more closely. The rate mentioned by my Hon. Friend for the City of Bombay was 411 per thousand. That is the normal rate, though it has been 834 in one year. Even this, however, is a mistaken figure. The City of Bombay, is a rich city. My own community is one of the richest communities there, and they do not present a death rate of 411. Their infantile mortality is very near your own. There is also the European population and the rich Hindu and Mohammedan populations. But if you take the figures of infantile mortality in the municipal records before the final abstract is made, and if you study the rate in those wards where the factory women live, the death rate there is not 411 per 1,000, but from 600 to 700 per 1,000. You cannot attribute that to the climate or to insanitary conditions, because all over India in the agricultural areas without sanitation or education and with a hot climate the infantile rate is about 190. It is in the factory wards of Bombay, Calcutta, Allahabad, Delhi, and so on, wherever there are modern factories, that the infantile death rate comes to between 600 and 700 infants, and we think that, if nothing else that one inhuman item, that cannibalistic feature of your Imperialism, should be quite enough to make you come away.

An Eloquent Appeal.

You went there, you say, to save the people, but you have acted in a contrary direction, and in the name of the people there, in the name of the people here, in the name of the masses, I appeal to you to Bolshevize your own minds and hearts, and to determine once and for all, that Imperialism, with all its good talking points has got behind it a trail of inhuman murder, brutality, negation of rights and degradation of human life, and must be dissolved. British Imperialism must go if humanity is to progress. I do not say that in a spirit of anger again. I say it for your own sakes, that if you want to save yourselves from future misery, from a future heavy fall, from being cut out by India in all the raw materials on which alone your industries live, if you want to save the people, if you want to take away all the armaments and military, wasteful energies of the whole of Europe, at the bottom of it all is British Imperialism. Do not despise Communist Internationalism, study it from the point of view of the Indians, and you will find it of greater value.

It being Eleven of the Clock, the Chairman left the Chair to make his Report to the House. On Monday, 13th July, Mr. Saklatvala spoke as follows:

A Personal Explanation.

With your permission, Mr. Speaker, I ask the indulgence of the House while I make a brief personal explanation in regard to a sentence in my speech last Thursday night. It is due not only to me and my party, but the House, and for a correct understanding of the functions and purposes of debate in this House by my Indian friends. When I said in the course of my speech that I held myself responsible for, and that I am at the bottom of many of the Communist manifestoes and the Communist propaganda in India I beg to explain that I unequivocally, unreservedly and without reservation associate myself with, and endorse such manifestoes, resolutions, and propagandist literature as are openly and officially propagated by the Communist Party of Great Britain.

This does not refer to documents of doubtful origin advocating crime, of whatever is alleged, which has no proven authenticity. I submit that, while I, on behalf of my party, as well as on behalf of my electors, will always in this House express fearlessly and unequivocally the sentiments and true feelings of peoples struggling for freedom and liberty in this Empire, we would not, Mr. Speaker, endorse here in this House a propaganda which advocates individual crime through religious or racial animosities, or for personal revenge.

At the present juncture the most important task of the party is to react speedily and energetically upon the impending political regrouping within the German working class. The most significant symptom occurring of late months is the rising resistance among broad masses of the workers against the "western orientation," that is, against the going over of the bourgeoisie to the side of the entente imperialists, against the leadership of the Second International, and the orientation of these working masses towards Soviet Russia, and—if by round-about ways—to proletarian revolution. Without overestimating the significance and speed of this process of development, the party must accord these new symptoms a place in the center of its attention, follow their development with the utmost care, and take them into account at every step in practical politics.

Everything depends upon the increased recruiting powers of the party. In dealing with the masses of social democratic workers now tending to the left, the party must find new formulas, another tone, fresh material for agitation. It must be thoroly informed upon all events in the camp of the social democrats, and must make a special study of the local conditions in the various districts, sub-districts, and local groups, in order to influence them by our agitation. The masses of social democratic workers now turning away from their counter-revolutionary leaders, and beginning slowly and hesitatingly, but incontestably, to turn towards proletarian revolution, must be made to feel that the Communist Party is really a party of the workers, a party which fights tenaciously for the workers' interests, for their partial demands, for their daily needs, a party which does not regard the workers merely as an object for agitation, but as class brothers, and which is sincerely endeavoring to form the proletarian united front in the class struggle.

ALL other political steps undertaken by the party must be made from the standpoint of this main task. Above all, our parliamentary work must be carried on with this standpoint in view. On every occasion and with reference to every political question, we must seek to find the platform from which the party can speak to the masses of the workers in the trade unions and among the social democrats, to the end that they may be won over for class war. This is the light in which we must place all the questions of the security pact, of the league of nations, of the trade agreements, credits, tariffs, taxation, housing policy, etc.

At the same time the combatting of the monarchist danger, the struggle against class legislation, the fight for a complete amnesty, etc., must be combined with the daily economic wage and labor struggles of the proletariat.

In order really to find access to the best section of the German social democratic workers, the fight must be taken up against those excesses which originate from the time when the struggle was carried out with the weapons in hand. The greatest damage is caused to the working class when, for instance, mutual fighting is indulged in between Communists and social democrats (at meetings, among the youth, etc.) which are taking place even today and for which the social democrats are responsible, altho the Communists also are not free from blame. Such fights are welcomed by the counter-revolutionary leaders of the German social democracy and these leaders, of course, consciously incite such a struggle. The Communists must take up the initiative in order finally, to put an end to such things, which of course, presuppose the good will of the social democratic workers.

ONE must understand how to distinguish not only in words but in deeds, between the counter-revolutionary social democratic leaders and the broad mass of the social democratic workers. Our press and in particular our factory newspapers (wall newspapers, etc.) must know how to conduct the agitation against the criminal policy of the social democratic leaders, so that every social democratic worker in the factory or workshop in question feels that he, the worker at the bench, the simple representative elected to the factory council is regarded differently from the high "Barmat" leader, who in parliament sells the worker again and again.

The real change of policy in this respect which will be perceived by all workers, will be accomplished, when the party concentrates all its forces upon increasing our trade union work. The social democratic party of Germany must be beaten by our trade union work. The red united front must be formed by our trade union work.

The party, and its trade union fractions must carry on a wide scale agitation in all unions, local branches regarding the visit of the first German workers' delegation to Soviet Russia. This visit must awaken a powerful response in the whole of the German labor movement.

THE urgent desire for unity felt by the workers must be crystallized as speedily as possible by the development of a left wing in the trade unions, after the pattern of the English labor movement. This is the next step forward to be taken by the German Party in the German and international unity movement. The great movement for the unity of the trade unions will win over the broadest masses, and will bring a fresh influx of members into the free trade unions, if the Communist Party becomes the driving force for trade union unity. The Communists must learn to do their best, most energetic, and concrete work in the trade union; they must prove to the non-party and social democratic trade union members, by means of object lessons, that they are able, in their character as Bolshevists, to be active trade union members at the same time. This means a number of fresh tasks for our fractions in the trade unions. Real penetration into trade union life, intense study of economic and political relations (the formations of trusts, rise and fall of economic prosperity, situation in various branches of industry, peculiarities of certain spheres of economics, etc.), the working out of a clear and competent tariff and social policy, the leading of labor struggles, especially the strategy of the strike, the adoption of a definite standpoint with regard to all organization questions arising in the trade unions, the struggle for the industrial unions, the accordance of special consideration to the role and tasks of the shop stewards, the emphasizing of the interests of juvenile workers within the trade unions, the safeguarding of the interests of the female workers, etc.

The organization of a competent trade union department in the central of the German C. P. must afford the proof that the leaders of the party are seriously inclined to make this work the fundamental task of the party.

THE carrying out of our work in the trade unions implies a determined reorganization of the party in accordance with the organization decisions made by the last party conference. The new statutes and lines of organization laid down by the party conference in Berlin must be realised with the utmost rapidity. The new organizatory course of the party is closely bound up with the new political course. The line of action common to both consists of the transference of the preponderance of all political organizatory work performed by the party into the workshops and factories, to the end that the masses of the workers here employed may be won over. The following three spheres of work are to be made the chief tasks of the new organizatory course:

1. The reform of the inner party course in the direction of the normalizing and democratization of party life, of lively connection between the leaders and the members of the party, by means of all the organizations of the party.

2. A real and absolutely consistent reorganization on the basis of the factory nuclei.

3. The organizatory comprehension and firm establishment of Communist influence in all non-party labor organizations, above all in the trade unions, but at the same time in the mass organization which are being formed among the proletariat.

THE realization of an active connection between the leaders and the members of the party demands the abolition of super-centralization, and the employment of fresh forces not only in the central, but in all the leading organs of the party, especially among the district leaders; it further demands the guarantee of collective work in the entire membership, and the closest co-operation with the Comintern.

Co-operation with the Comintern is the more necessary that it enables the party to be enriched by the experiences gained by the whole International.

Besides the reform of the inner party course, and the reorganization on the basis of the factory cells, another factor of greatest importance is the rapid development of a system of really Bolshevist party fractions, capable of practical work on their own initiative, in every workers' organization, without exception, in which there are Communists. This task is by no means confined to the trade unions, but applies equally to all other non-party mass organizations, whether these have already existed for a long time, or whether they are just being formed. The Red Front Fighters' League affords the best example of the new formation of proletarian mass organizations on the basis of the fighting experiences of the German proletariat. The rapid adaptation of the party to such organizations (sport associations, tenants' league, free thinkers' league, Red women's league, etc.), and making use of the same for strengthening trade union work, are necessary.

AMONG the errors and defects of the leadership of the German C. P., not the least is their completely wrong policy with reference to the young Communist league of Germany. The numerical weakness and the difficulties experienced by the Youth League in Germany are to be explained to a considerable extent by the fact that the party has done next to nothing to aid the Youth League to attain a very much higher standard. The main cause of the weakness of the German Youth League lies, however, in the fact that up to recently it has trod the same wrong path which the party has been led by its leaders, and has shared all the errors of the party. It is thus the more significant that at the tenth party conference only the youth openly and to the end defended the proposals of the Comintern. This is a certain symptom that the youth has already begun to choose the right path for itself, without the aid of the party, and even in spite of the resistance made by the party leaders. Therefore, the attitude of the representatives of the party leaders towards the youth was quite inadmissable as it found expression in the obstruction at the party conference, and the subsequent "pressure" put upon the central committee of the Youth Communist League of Germany. The party must understand the fact that the adoption of such an attitude with regard to the Young Communist League is capable of destroying the whole of the Communist work which has been done among the youthful workers; this work is, however, one of the most important prerequisites for the real Bolshevization of the party.

The organizations of the rural and city petty bourgeoisie require the special attention of the party. At the same time the necessary steps must be taken in Germany towards the practical realization of a Leninist peasant policy in Germany. The party must mobilize the increasing discontent of the petty bourgeoisie and the peasantry in the questions relating to revaluation, trade agreements, credits, taxation, and tariffs, for the purpose of a common struggle against the big bourgeoisie (Communist fraction work in the revaluation and tenants' associations, the organization of the vintners, small holders, tenant farmers, etc.).

THE parliamentary work done by the party in the whole country, in the provinces, and in the municipalities, must be conducted in the main front from the point of view of promoting our work in the mass organizations. For this an indispensable prerequisite is the closest co-operation between the parliamentary fractions and the Communist fractions in the trade unions, etc.

The party must not forget for a moment that serious right and ultra-left dangers still continue to exist in its ranks. Mechanical measures however, do not afford any safeguard against these dangers, but solely a broad, thoro system of enlightening and educative work carried out by the party, penetrating down to the last member, and comprising every organization and cell. The ideological overcoming of all errors in the spheres of practice and theory is best accomplished by means of the permeation of the party with the principles of Leninism and of the Comintern, by means of the application of these principles to the actual conditions obtaining in Germany and by means of the practical party tasks arising out of this application.

This work of inner party propaganda must be consciously commenced by a broad campaign of enlightenment among the whole of the members, explaining the necessity and the political import of the present discussion.

7. Why Must the Change by Made in the Party Precisely Now, and Why Must the Change be Rapid?

MANY party comrades will ask why the change in the leadership of the German C. P. has become so "suddenly" necessary; in reality, however, it is not a matter of differences which "suddenly" arose between the executive and the Ruth Fischer group. It is rather a question of differences which have existed during the whole course of the last eighteen months, and which have become more and more acute until the present state of affairs, entirely intolerable for the party and for the International has been reached. The executive has warned the leading group more than once against the continuation of their deviations. As early as the session of the enlarged executive the Russian delegation informed the German delegation under the lead of Ruth Fischer, after days of serious consultation, that the continuation of the wrong inner party course hitherto pursued would render a severe conflict inevitable. The representatives of the executive in Germany pointed out again and again the deviations and errors of the above mentioned group. But all advice and earnest comrade-like warnings remained without effect. Up to the last the executive has sought to avoid the breaking out of an open conflict and the resulting necessary organizatory measures. It was solely for this reason that the executive confined itself to negotiations with the leading group in the party central, and refrained, in the hope of regaining sound conditions by these means, from submitting the accumulating antagonism to the organizations and members of the party. We have attempted to convince the group Maslow-Ruth Fischer of its errors by means of educational methods and comrade-like co-operation. Despite our misgivings we avoided an open conflict, in order that we might throw no difficulties in the way of the German left, with whose political line the executive has solidarized more than once, at a moment when it was undertaking a severe struggle against the right and ultra-left deviations in the German C. P.

This necessary step has been rendered easier for us by the circumstance that within the left of the German Party the center of a powerful opposition has been formed against the system of the Comrades Maslow-Ruth Fischer. The Berlin party conference, and the events immediately following its close, proved finally to the executive that all hopes of settling the differences in the course of normal co-operation are shattered. The attacks made by Comrades Maslow and Ruth Fischer force upon us the urgent necessity of laying the question of the German party openly before all the members.

MAY our enemies break out into a howl of triumph, and point their fingers at the sore points of the German party. May the bourgeoisie and the social traitors of whole Germany fling scorn and derision upon the party. Lenin taught us to expose ruthlessly all the errors of our party, the sole party of the vanguard of the revolutionary proletariat, with Bolshevist openess, without considering the enemy. There is no party in the world able, like the Communist Party, to recognize and to expose its defects openly and to its logical conclusion. This is the sole pledge for the rapid and complete overcoming of these errors.

The executive is profoundly convinced that no Communist worker in Germany will permit himself to be confused or misled even for a moment by the shrieks of triumph which may certainly be anticipated from the bourgeois and social democratic press.

And may all the adherents of the right and ultra-left in our own ranks too consider the right moment to have come to venture forward again. May the Brandlerists declare that "the left are bankrupt." The Communist Party of Germany will none the less advance in serried ranks without lending an ear to the cries of the right or ultra-left opponents.

We repeat once more; it is not the German left which is bankrupt, but some of their leaders.

The German left, with all its faults in the past and in the present, has never been merely a group of individuals. It has a great historical role to fulfill. It drew the lessons of October, 1923, it defeated Brandlerism, it united the torn party at the moment of its severest crisis.

THE German left must uphold and continue the best traditions of the vanguard of the German industrial proletariat, and of the best and most powerful party organizations, as those of Berlin, Hamburg, the Ruhr area, and the Rhine country. At the same time it must show itself capable of eliminating everything that is wrong, immature, and un-Bolshevist from its past and present. Then it will not only be the left, but the real Bolshevist, leading heart of the German C. P.

Lenin taught us that when we openly and ruthlessly criticise our own errors before the whole working class, then these errors have already been half overcome. During the course of the twenty-five years of its history the Russian C. P. has more than once exposed and overcome its weaknesses—free from all petty bourgeois sentimentality and all egotism. The German C. P. will follow this example.

The main defects are not to be found in the thoroly sound proletarian membership of the party, but among the leaders of the leaders, who have proved incompetent. The party is confronted by great new tasks. The situation is not developing against us, but for us. For some months the class struggle in Germany is no more on the downward but on the upward line.

It is only if the whole party recognizes all the signs of the times, and if it relies upon itself, upon its own powers, upon the Communist International, and upon the unconquerable force of the German working class, then it can overcome the crisis and lead the German proletariat to victory. In this case victory is certain.

(Signed) Executive of the C. I.:

Delegation of the German C. P.:

Resolution of the C. C. of the Communist Party of Germany on the Decision of the Executive in the German Question.

1. The C. C. of the G. C. P. approves the report on the negotiations between the delegation of the G. C. P. and the executive of the Comintern; it agrees without reservation with the decisions of the executive.

2. The C. C. is in agreement with the open letter addressed by the executive to the members of the German party, and recognizes the correctness of the criticism exercised by the executive with regard to the Maslow-Ruth Fischer group which hitherto led the G. C. P.

3. The C. C. agree with the organizatory decisions of the executive, and resolves to carry them out immediately.

4. In order to persuade the broadest masses of the party members in all the districts and organizations of the correctness and necessity of the decisions arrived at, the central is to organize a far-reaching enlightening activity thruout the whole party.

5. The Central Committee, as united body, has to carry out the decisions of the executive, and to defend them against all resistance.

6. The inner work of the Central Committee is to be organized in accordance with the new course, along the line of increased collective work, that is, of the most intense mutual co-operation among all the members and candidates of the C. C.

7. It is only possible to avoid a party crisis if the C. C. brings the whole party unitedly together in accordance with the new decisions and leads it unitedly forward on the path of practical positive tasks.

8. Every attack against the general lines laid down by the Comintern, and against the decisions newly made in the German question in particular, must be ruthlessly combatted, from whatever side it may come, whether from the right or from the ultra-left.

Old Soak at Central Theater Well Acted But Theme Is Mushy

"The Old Soak" with Harry Minturn in the leading role now at the Central Theater at Van Buren near Michigan Ave. is intended as a propaganda play against prohibition, and too bad it does not stick to that one point. But it is ambitious. It preaches against the supposedly "bad people" who ruin the chances for happiness under the present system of society. And so it suffers the fate of being unconvincing.

This is the story. The Old Soak since prohibition chases booze and bootleggers. Previously he used to get "it" easily and everything was normal in the Hawley household. Now the head of the family devotes all his time and money to chasing "it." This brings unhappiness to his wife and two grown up children. His eldest son who outshines him in his wife's eyes because he sticks to his job is not as good a boy as he appears to be. He steals from his firm where he holds a position of responsibility to gamble in stocks. He is forced to rob his mother to make good on his theft. There is a villian in the story, the village banker. The villian shields his true character by pretending to be a church going, god fearing person. This shield of "respectability" enables him to ply his crooked deals undiscovered. But the "Old Soak" discovers his true character when he learns that he is the financier of the bootlegging deals in the village.

The banker, Webster Parsons, enveigles the son into a deal in which he robs the boy of $10,000. The drunkard father to protect his son who is now involved in greater debt than ever, forces the banker to return the money under threat of death. The banker hands over the $10,000.—Everyone is happy.

It is to be hoped that the Central Theater will put on dramas that will be both more educational and convincing.

Organization of Worker Correspondents

By A. G. BOSSE.

That the building up of a mass daily newspaper depends upon the development of hundreds of workers correspondents is now well recognized. The role they played in the growth of Pravda is also well known. The Workers' Weekly, the organ of the British C. P., is being built up upon this basis. When a party of 5,000 can gain for their paper a circulation of 40,000-50,000, they are sinking their roots deep into the masses. We in the U. S. have a circulation of 120,000 for our entire press, in all languages, daily and weekly, which is not bad for a membership of 20,000. Nevertheless, we must recognize that our English daily, the DAILY WORKER, is not a mass paper. And we must set about making it such. This is largely an organizational problem.

Lenin Points the Way.

Lenin ("How are our newspapers to be made into real organs of the labor movement?") showed how incapable a staff of "professional" editors and reporters was of making a paper "awaken to real life or capacity for continued life" unless the five or six on the staff were supplemented by from 500 to 5,000 workers' correspondents. Comrade Dunne's report to the party convention on the DAILY WORKER is very encouraging in this respect. We now have 75-85 worker correspondents contributing to the paper, a fine proportion of whom (one-third) are non-party members. Next year the prospects are that two or three hundred, if not more, will be in the movement, according to Comrade Dunne.

The following is a suggestion as to how comrades can go about organizing themselves so as to cover the city. They can form a class or club to meet weekly, led by the DAILY WORKER reporter for that city, or some other capable comrade. The best basis for discussion would be Comrade Dunne's pamphlet in the Little Red Library, No. 4, "Workers' Correspondents," which gives the news field to be covered, the ways of writing up different kinds of material (journalistic technic), the aims of such work, and ways of building the membership and influence of the party. At the beginning, written work for every session, mutual criticism and comment, assigned topics— in short, constant practical training for each member, rather than demonstrations of how to write by the class leader.

After some of the preliminaries have been covered, the class can reorganize as a staff of "reporters." One can remain at the local headquarters each evening, working on his assignment, and at the same time, he can take care of all possible news items that come in. Since at the beginning it will be impossible for the local workers' correspondents to cover all the meetings of unions, fraternal organizations, strike committees, central labor bodies, etc., this first group will have to cover as many of these meetings as practicable. Later, every effort should be made to get a correspondent in every important local union, etc., so that as much of the city will be covered as possible. These workers might attend the class, or the comrade at the headquarters each evening could go over the articles with them, and help get the material in shape. Those who have benefited by this training can be assigned to edit or assist in editing the factory newspaper which every large shop nucleus will issue when the party re-organization is well on the way.

Each Worker Can Help.

If it is impossible to have a member of the class at the party office each evening, this might be managed for a certain number of evenings each week. If that cannot be done, a bulletin board can be put up and all comrades coming in can jot down on a slip of paper a notice of important meetings to be written up, and from the notices, the correspondents can choose those to be covered. Meanwhile they can look for a capable member of the local union (or whichever other body it is) and have him take care for the DAILY WORKER of the worth-while news of the union, shop, etc. One of the best ways to build the shop nucleus or factory committee is to get a good worker correspondent on the job there, who will tell what his fellow workers are thinking and doing about working conditions (grievances, wages, hours, speeding-up, accidents) and the like.

Then special sale and sub-drives can be made on these bodies to get readers, subscribers, and party members. Every local union, every strike, every important meeting of workers can be utilized in this way. The city DAILY WORKER agent will co-operate to the utmost with this work, and his office can be made a miniature editorial office of the paper for his locality.

If the Chicago office prints a form card, saying that a contribution will be published in such and such an issue, filling in only the date, and mailing it a day or so before, the local correspondent can be ready with a sufficient number of copies for his shop, union, strike meeting, etc. If in Chicago they are overwhelmed with correspondence, the Chicago corps of correspondents can always help out with editing, copyreading, summarising, assorting, etc.

The above are just a few suggestions, which can be adapted or modified according to local facilities. If other comrades who are thinking along the same lines will write in to the DAILY WORKER their problems, suggested solutions, new devices, and successful methods in organizing this work, we shall have not only our two or three hundred worker correspondents by next year, but we shall have buried our news nose deep in the masses in a truly revolutionary manner.

NOTE: Regarding Comrade Bosse's suggestion that The DAILY WORKER print a form card giving the date when the Worker Correspondent's story appears that he may order a sufficient number for his shop, the DAILY WORKER business office has already provided special Workers' Correspondence Paper which may be secured upon request. The form attached to the bottom of this copy paper should be filled out giving the number of DAILY WORKERS the correspondent can use. This saves time and makes unnecessary the printing of such a card as suggested in the above article.

Worker Correspondents---Their Function and Importance

By KARL REEVE.

THE Worker Correspondents are the steel rods which bind the working class masses to the Communist press, and hence to the Communist leadership. The Worker Correspondents blow the hot breath of the class struggle into the pages of the Communist press. It is the stories of the Worker Correspondents which stir ever large masses to contemplate the causes of the subjection to the capitalist system under which they work and live. The Worker Correspondent is the voice of the working class, and the purifier of the Communist movement.

Lenin, in his fight on the "economists" who at the beginning of the twentieth century made their last stand against the agitation among the workers for the dictatorship of the proletariat centered his organization around the newspaper Iskra. In 1900-1901, when the mass demonstrations were beginning which ushered in the 1905 revolution, and proved false beyond a doubt the position of the economists that the workers must be told to fight merely for immediate economic demands, Lenin used the letters of the workers to Iskra as a weapon against the "economists".

"In the literary sources on the history of the workers' movement, one comes across fragments from 'letters to the editor' which the workers of those days sent to the illegal papers. .. Comrade Lenin and his group treasured these letters that they procured like gold," Comrade Zinoviev tells us in his History of the Russian Communist Party. "And Lenin printed them in the course of the struggle against the 'economists' in proof of their contention that it was not wage increases alone the advanced workers desired, but that they were conscious that they had to go out in the streets to get hold of guns, and battle with the czar's police.

COMRADE Lenin, thru the letters of the Worker Correspondents of that day, felt the pulse of the movement of the working class toward revolution. He printed these letters from the workers in the Iskra, considering them valuable contributions in the fight against the opportunist "economists". The Worker Correspondents became a weapon against those who thot to revise Marxism, by thwarting the determination of the militant workers to sieze the state power.

The Workers (Communist) Party and the DAILY WORKER can call upon its corps of Worker Correspondents as a potent aid in the re-organization on the basis of shop nuclei, and the building up of a Bolshevized party after the re-organization. The members of the shop nuclei, have already found in New York and elsewhere, that interesting their shopmates in the DAILY WORKER, inviting them to write up their experiences in the class struggle for the paper, is one of the best possible means of bringing fresh proletarian elements into our party.

The Worker Correspondent is a safeguard against the lies and treacheries of the bureaucratic union officials. The worker correspondent is a rank and filer. His stories have nothing in common with the poisonous propaganda against the Communists regularly peddled by the reactionary union officialdom.

DURING the course of the pressmen's strike of locals No. 3 and 4, against the Cuneo company, which was aided by "Major" George Berry, president of the International Pressmen's union, the DAILY WORKER led, and is leading, the fight against the scabbery of Berry. The stories exposing Berry's strikebreaking activity in cooperation with the printing corporation, were supplied to the DAILY WORKER by the striking pressmen themselves.

So that when the Pressfeeders Franklin Union, number 4, received the infamous letter broadcast over the country by John Fitzpatrick, president of the Chicago Federation of Labor, which slandered the Communists in the manner of a Burns' stoolpigeon, the pressmen rejected this letter in the most militant terms.

Fitzpatrick urged the unions to attack the Communists, to outlaw them. But the pressmen knew of the activities of the DAILY WORKER and the Workers Party on their behalf in their strike. They knew that the Communist press is against the "open shop" drive of the bosses and against the treachery of the union officialdom. They knew that their experiences their very life's blood, was written into the accounts of the strike printed in the DAILY WORKER and they rejected Fitzpatrick's lying attacks. In the same manner dozens of local unions thruout the country have taken similar action, just as the machinists' locals rejected "B. and O." Bill Johnston's attack on the Communists and refused to expel them at this class collaborator's orders.

ALONG with the building up of strong shop nuclei, goes the enlarging of the corps of Worker Correspondent. Workers who do not belong to the Workers Party, thru reading and writing stories of their particular struggle against the bosses are drawn into close contact with the Communist press and the Communist movement. In this way they are made to understand the relation of their fight to the class struggle as a whole, and are gradually made familiar with the Communist program.

The corps of Worker Correspondents can be enlarged by developing the self confidence of the workers, by showing them that their everyday struggles are important bits of history in the class war. The fact that a worker functions for the Communist press brings out his confidence in himself as a worker, showing him the importance of that "historically rising class."

The Worker Correspondent is the backbone of the Communist press and the number of Worker Correspondents is a measure of the extent to which the Communist press is reaching the masses.

GITLOW, C[illegible]DATE OF WORKERS PARTY F[illegible]YOR OF NEW YORK, GIVES DEMANDS OF COMMUNISTS

By KARL REEVE

(Staff Correspondent of the DAILY WORKER)

NEW YORK, Oct 4.—The Workers (Communist) Party, which fights at all times in the interests of the working class, will have the support of all the militant sections of the workers, and of all the rank and file and progressive elements in the trade unions in the municipal election campaign, Benjamin Gitlow, Communist candidate for mayor of New York City, declared.

"The trade union bureaucrats who oppose the unification of the bureaucrats on the political field in the labor party," Gitlow said, "will support either the Tammany hall politician, James Walker, the millionaire republican candidate, Frank Waterman, or the rich, liberal petty bourgeois minister, running on the socialist ticket, Norman Thomas."

The Workers (Communist) Party is the only party taking part in the coming election campaign which represents the interests of the working class, presenting a program opposed to the two old parties which are owned by the employing class.

Unino Member.

Gitlow, represeting the Workers Party, is the only working class candidate for mayor. Gitlow is a member of Cutters' Local No. 4 of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America. He served two years in Sing Sing penitentiary, after being convicted and sentenced under the New York criminal anarchy laws, for signing the left wing manifesto in 1919 at the time the working class elements split from the petty bourgeois leadership of the socialist party. This famous manifesto was printed in the Revolutionary Age, of which Comrade Gitlow was then business manager.

Faces Sing Sing.

Comrade Gitlow was reelased from Sing Sing, pending an appeal, and the supreme court of the United States, in its recent decision which outlawed free speech in America, denied Gitlow's appeal, and decided that the Communist leader must return to prison to serve his sentence.

Even before the campaign ends, Comrade Gitlow may have to return to the capitalist dungeons, to pay the penalty for his loyalty to the interests of the working class.

"I regard it as a major issue of this campaign that the machinery of government be wrested from the hands of the bosses and their political parties and put into the hands of the workers," said Comrade Gitlow. "The Workers (Communist) Party stands for a workers' government. The republican and democratic parties have always given us a bosses' government. To separate the workers from the bosses, to unite them in a single labor party for the winning of control of the powers of government—this is the immediate aim of the Workers Party."

Comrade Gitlow then showed how the socialist party has tried to disunite the workers, refusing to consider the Workers' Party proposal for a united front of labor, in the campaign against the two capitalist parties. Gitlow exposed the petty bour-

CITY VIOLENCE AGAINST LABOR CAMPAIGN ISSUE

Gitlow Denounces Boss Rule Over Workers

NEW YORK, Oct. 4. — Benjamin Gitlow, candidate for mayor of the Workers (Communist) Party, today issued the following statement on the question of the injunction against picketing and the use of police in strikes.

"I consider the breaking up of picket lines by the police and the issuing of injunctions against strikes and picketing to be the major issue of this municiple campaign from the point of view of the workers of this city.

Courts Enjoin Strikers.

"In the case of the hotel and restaurant workers striking against the restaurants and cabarets controlled by John Salvin, the courts of this city enjoined the strikers from notifying other workers that a strike existed. The Machinists' Union was enjoined from even declaring that a strike was on in the printing press factory of the Robert Hoe company.

"Supreme Court Justice Wm. B. Carswell in September last issued an injunction restraining the Laundry Drivers, Chauffeurs and Helpers' Union from supporting strikers during a strike. Pickets were arrested for picketing the J. Kayser and company factory and held under $2,500 bail. In the case of a strike of 15,000 dress and underwear workers in this city in February, eight girls were arrested for picketing and inducing other workers to join their strike.

Police Break Lines.

"Only a week or so ago, the I. S. Taylor Co. and the International Clothing Co. succeeded in getting the aid of police reserves to break up the mass picket line of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers. These are only a few of the innumerable examples in which Hylan and his republican-fusion predecessor as well, have used the police and the courts and the entire machinery of city government for the bosses and against the workers. The courts say in effect: 'Do not strike. Do not organize. Do not unite with your fellow workers to defend yourselves.'

"They reduce the workers to the status of slaves and the policeman's club takes the place of the slave drivers' whip.

Stands For Workers.

"I regard it as the major issue of this campaign that the machinery of government be wrested from the hands of the bosses and their political parties and put it into the hands of the workers. The Workers

Slash Bread Price; Ward Stock Goes Up in N. Y. Exchange

Following cuts in bread prices in Chicago initiated by the Ward Baking Co.'s Chicago plant which slashed its retail prices 20 per cent yesterday, word comes from New York that Ward Baking Co. rose 6 points in the stock exchange to a new high of 82. In addition to this, Ward has bought General Baking at $225 a share as a further step in its campaign to trustify the baking industry in this country. Ward's is a scab house and has recently embarked on a campaign of wage-cutting.

TRACTION VERSUS REALTY ARE TWO BIG ISSUES IN NEW YORK CAMPAIGN

By SAM DARCY.

NEW YORK CITY—(By Mail.)—The first stage in the New York elections (that of choosing a democratic nominee) witnessed a struggle between the two dominating capitalist groups within that party—namely, the traction group and the realty group.

The swift growth of industry which occurred everywhere in the United States within the last fifty years brought this city from a position of being a comparatively insignificant port engaging almost exclusively in commerce to that of being one of the largest manufacturing centers in the world. Parallel with this development and in the greatest measure resulting from it came the great real estate boom to accomodate the increasing number of factories which set up in the suburbs and also the land promotion schemes for housing, the increasing population.

This gave rise to the great public service corporations operating under city franchises which gave them ex-

A HANDSHAKE THAT SHOOK THE WORLD

A. B. Swales, chairman of the British Trade Union Congress, greeting M. Tomsky, secretary of the All-Russian Trade Unions, at Scarborough congress. When will American labor force Green to shake hands with Tomsky?

World Imperialism Mobilizes Against Soviets! Defend the Workers' and Peasants' State!

The Workers (Communist) Party is launching an immediate campaign to warn the workers of America of the preparations being made for a new drive against the Soviet Union and to gather all those sympathetic to the workers' and peasants' government in a nationwide move in defense of Soviet Russia. In special instructions issued by the Central Executive Committee of the party to district and local officers outlining the campaign, the executive points out the imminent danger of a new anti-Soviet alliance.

The negotiations with Germany for a security pact, the present debt negotiations, the intensified struggle for colonial markets and the growing power of the Soviet Union, all lay the basis for a concerted imperialist effort to reduce the Soviet Union to a position of impotence. The following instructions make clear the reasons for the present campaign and lay the organizational basis for a united front movement of the American working class against this new attack upon the workers' government of Russia:

TO ALL DISTRICT ORGANIZERS, CITY SECRETARIES, LANGUAGE SECTION SECRETARIES, AND PARTY BRANCHES.

Dear Comrades:—

World imperialism is mobilizing for a new attack on theworkers' and peasants' government of Russia. The workers of every country must rally to the defense of the Soviet Union.

Our party, as the American section of the Communist International, faces the duty of mobilizing all its forces in defense of the Soviet Union. It must rally the workers of this country for a fight in support of the workers' and peasants' government of Russia.

The imperialist capitalist countries have found the Soviet Union in the pathway of their imperialist adventures. In China the workers are carrying on a bitter struggle against the imperialist powers. Their greatest inspiration and support in the struggle is the Soviet Union. The imperialist French government finds the French Communist Party a determined opponent to its efforts to enslave Morocco. Wherever oppressed colonial peoples are struggling against the exploitation of the imperialist powers they look to the Communist International for aid in their fight.

Great Britain is threatened by the swing to the left of its labor movement with a great increase of the influence of the Communist International. The resolution of the British Trade Union Congress against British imper-

CAPPELLINI IN BETRAYAL OF COAL STRIKERS

Writes Letter of Praise to Police

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—The reactionaries in control of the official positions in Districts 1, 7, and 9 of the United Mine workers of America are part and parcel of the corrupt political machines of the coal companies. Many of the officials play important roles in the activities of these political machines. It is no wonder therefore that you find the United Mine Workers of America in the anthracite officially bitterly opposed to every progressive manifestation in the United Mine Workers Union.

Willing to Be Stoolpigeons

It is for that reason that you find the official gang in the anthracite supporting solidly John L. Lewis and his outrageous betrayal of the workers' interests. And when a fight is started in the anthracite against the interests of the coal companies and for the benefit of the miners, rest assured the officials in control of the United Mine Workers in the anthracite will do everything in their power to interfere, even if prosecution and the jail-

A. F. OF L. DEPARTMENTS HERALD REACTIONARY WAR ON LEFT WING AT ATLANTIC CITY CONVENTION

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Oct. 4.—Departmental conferences that are staged preliminary to the opening of the American Federation of Labor convention ended tonight after a double assault against the Communists, both of which were regarded as "weak" attacks against the militants in the trade unions.

First; the building trades department meeting at the exclusive Strand Hotel decided that no avowed Communist may sit as a delegate in a local building trades council.

Second; the metal trades department approved of a four hundred word attack against the Communists in the report of its president James O'Connell that offered no specific recommendations, however, and mentioned no union in particular.

The Communist problem came before the building trades gathering as a result of the protest of the district council of Painters No. 31 of Seattle, Washington, against the seating of W. H. Jones as delegate to the Seattle Building Trades Council. The decision was to notify Jones that the action of the Seattle Building Trades Council in unseating him was in accordance with the action of the Portland convention of the American Federation of Labor to the effect that no avowed Communist could be seated in any state or local council or central body.

Denies Local's Right of Choice.

In spite of the ruling against Jones he was reelected repeatedly by his local union as its representative. This decision of the building trades department here makes no effort to attack his membership in the union. It merely attacks his right to represent his union in an official position. No other case in any other city is mentioned. No mention was made of the situation in the Carpenters' Union.

The Portland decision referred to was that rendered as a result of which William F. Dunne was unseated as delegate of the Silver Bow (Butte, Montana) Trades and Labor Assembly.

Ancient Dodo Opposes Progress.

O'Connell's red baiting attack in his report to the metal trades consisted mostly of the usual cheap flow of billingsgate used by reactionary labor officials who have no arguments with which to attack the progressives in their organizations. It contains the conclusion, however, that may be interpreted as veiled support of the expulsion policies adopted in the Machinists' Union, that:

"I trust that this convention may declare its position so clearly and emphatically as to bring home to the minds of all the trade unionists, that membership in Communist organizations or similar organizations means nonunion membership in the trade union movement."

O'Connell included the Trade Union Educational League, William Z. Foster and the DAILY WORKER in his attack, and it is taken for granted that he referred to the Machinists' Union, his own organization, when he said: "I congratulate the trade union that it is attempting to cleanse its membership from this outlaw organization"—meaning the T. U. E. L.

A Gift from "B. and O. Bill."

It was William H. Johnston, the renegade socialist, now the anti-Communist head of the Machinists' Union, who defeated O'Connell in order to win his present job. O'Connell was thereupon given the presidency of the metal trades department as a pensioner's job by the Gompers' regime. But O'Connell and Johnston now have a united front against the machinist militants.

PEASANT TRIAL IN BESSARABIA BLOW AT RUSSIA

Peasants Punished for Soviet Sympathies

By A. BADULESKU,

Member of the Central Committee of the Roumanian Communist Party.

According to the latest advices, the Roumanian parliament has succeeded in having the trial of the 500 peasants who rebelled in Southern Bessarabia held behind closed doors and without counsel for the defense.

And it could not very well be otherwise. The present interests of Bratiano's government, as well as the aims which the government desires to realize by this action, could not permit the trial to take place, more or less, "legally" and openly.

Government Defeated.

Last month, during the parliamentary by-elections in Kishinev, the government suffered a shameful defeat. As a result, the rural council [illegible] [illegible] were [illegible] raised — especially in Bessarabia — a hitherto unprecedented terror.

The trial of the Communists, which took place a few months ago, and in which foreign counsel for defense appeared, raised a storm of protest against the government. French, Italian and Czech lawyers were to have taken part in the defense of the accused peasants in the Tatarbounar case, but their appearance at the trial would have meant suicide for the Roumanian government.

What are chief points of this trial? About 1,000 peasants and village

Wild Cat Mine Stock Had Approval of God Said His Sales Agent

SAN JOSE, Cal., Oct. 4—Charges have been brot against Rev. W. K. Towner, pastor of the first baptist church of San Jose, who is accused of selling gold mine stock to his congregation on the representation that the mine has "the presence and approval of god." It is stated that Rev. Towner applied for a permit to sell $25,000 additional stock when he had only $5.53 cash on hand and $890 in bullion from the mine. He has already sold nearly $35,000 worth of the stock, mostly to members of his congregation, who swallowed the assertion that the mining venture was "prayer born" and had been graced by various evidences of the special providence of god. The minister blames "reactionaries" in his church for instigating the state investigation now under way.

POLISH SOCIALIST PARTY NOW DEFENDS CAPITALIST SYSTEM AGAINST COMMUNIST ATTACKS

By L. DOMSKI.

The economic position of Poland day by day grows worse, and with this there is the possibility of a political complication. The fall of the Polish money on the exchange, tho slight and not very decisive, has already caused a rise in food prices. If this tendency continues, new strikes are unavoidable.

The fighting groups of capital—the Polish socialist party, is getting rather nervous. Having long ago lost its hold on the working classes, by which it is now hated, the Polish socialist party owes its position only to the role which it plays in the interests of the bourgeoisie. The Polish socialist party is under the protection of the government, as it acts as its strikebreaker guard. But woe to the Polish socialist party if it should turn out unfit for this role.

And the "red" elements in the trade

SAKLATVALA ISSUE RAISED IN INTERPARLIAMENTARY UNION MEET DESPITE OFFICIAL BAN

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 4.—Despite the efforts made by the council in charge of the interparliamentary union congress to keep the exclusion of Shapurji Saklatvala, Communist member of the British house of commons, from the floor of the congress, Ben Riley, labor member of the British parliament, in his speech scored the union for its method of handling the Saklatvala incident.

His speech followed the transmission of the following letter of protest by Shapurji Saklatvala to the congress of his exclusion.

Saklatvala Protests.

"I submit for the special and emergency consideration of the conference the question of the outrage committed by the United States government upon the rights and prerogatives of our conference, and also of the serious violation of the time-honored usage respected by the hosts for all international assemblages.

"The validity of most meetings of members of an organization becomes doubtful if any member entitled to attend the same is forcefully kept out of it. It would be impossible to accept the invitation of a country for an international assemblage, if the hosts undertook the duties of carefully going thru the career of each delegate, and applied to it some peculiar national standard of fitness or unfitness, and assumed control over permission of delegates to attend conferences."

To Expose Kellogg.

Saklatvala in his letter offered to come before the committee that the interparliamentary union may appoint and show that the speech that he made in the British house of commons was garbled by the secretary of state in his exclusion of the British delegate.

Attacks Union Conference.

"We have no desire," said Ben Riley, labor member of the British parliament in his attack on the failure of the union to protest the Saklatvala ban and also to discuss other issues that contained dynamite for many of the reactionaries in the union congress, "to enter into a discussion of how the exclusion of Mr. Saklatvala has come about, or to question the right of any country to administer its own laws; but we are concerned that unless the council of this union can make such arrangements as will enable all its members to enjoy equal rights, and make their particular convention to the great work for which the union exists, confidence will be destroyed and a great blow struck at the very basis and purpose of the union."

Washington Protest.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 4—The workers of Washington protested against the exclusion of Shapurji Saklatvala, Communist member of the house of commons, from the United States and the interparliamentary union congress now meeting at Washington at a well attended mass meeting held at 1337 Seventh St., Northwest.

Comrade Bloor who was the main speaker, attacked the exclusion tactics of Kellogg to stifle an opposition to the imperialist rule of Great Britain and showed how England had forced her imperialist policy on India, Egypt, Ireland and other nations.

Resolution Adopted.

The following resolution was unanimously adopted:

"This protest meeting assembled at 137 Seventh St., N. W., Washington, D. C., Sept. 30, 1925, resolves that,

"Whereas, Shapurji Saklatvala was excluded from America by an arbitrary act of British representatives in our own government after he had been invited to this country by the interparliamentary union, and,

For Indian Independence.

"Whereas, we know that this act of injustice was to penalize Saklatvala for his championship of the cause of freedom for India's workers and for his vigorous protests against British imperialism, Condemn Kellogg.

"Be it resolved, that we condemn the exclusion of this representative of labor by Secretary of State Kellogg as an act of collusion with the British empire, in its effort to subjugate the workers of India, China, Ireland and many other countries to its lust for world domination."

Frisco Workers Protest

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Oct. 4—A united front protest meeting held at San Francisco Sunday evening, Sept. 27, at which speakers in Chinese, Hindu and English addressed the workers on the exclusion of Shapurji Saklatvala, Communist member of the British house of commons, from the interparliamentary union congress being held at Washington, D. C., adopted the following resolution protesting his exclusion and demanding his immediate admission:

"Whereas: Secretary of State Kellogg, having instructed the general consul at Lndon to revoke the visa granted to Shapurji Saklatvala, a member of the English parliament, and a representative of the organized workers of that country, from attending the interparliamentary conference at Washington; and,

Fights Imperialism.

"Whereas: Saklatvala has carried on an uncompromising struggle against English imperialism in China, Egypt, Ireland, and particularly in India; therefore be it

"Resolved, That thru this mass meeting held in Workers' Hall, San Francisco, on this Sunday evening, Sept. 27, 1925, we unhesitatingly protest the action of the administration thru its secretary of state, in excluding Saklatvala, as an act of hostility against the labor movement of the whole world, and as a blow of discrimination against the foreign-born workers, and at the same time as a vicious blow to free speech in the United States; and be it

Admit Saklatvala!

"Resolved, That we demand the immediate admission of Saklatvala to this country, and be it further

"Resolved, That copies of this resolution be sent to Secretary of State Kellogg; to Senator Hiram Johnson, and to the press.

"Signed, CHAS. W. RILGRIM, chairman of meeting."

Increased Sugar Output in Russia.

In the next business year the production program of the Sugar Trust will be brought up to 58 million poods (1 pood—36 English pounds) of sugar, against 44 million poods in the current year. In connection with this, the Central Administration of State Industries will open in addition to the 125 sugar factories already working, another 26 factories from the list of those not at present working. This year's splendid beet harvest guarantees that sugar will be of a superior quality.

200,000 ANTHRACITE STRIKERS' LEAFLETS TO BE DISTRIBUTED

THE anthracite coal miners are on strike. They are using the strongest weapon at their disposal at this time, to enforce their demands for increased pay, better working conditions. They are fighting a hard struggle.

The American working class must help the miners win this strike. The workers must understand the basis of this strike; they must give the strikers their support, moral and otherwise.

A Communist Duty.

It's the duty of the Communists and militants of the American labor movement, to bring the issues involved, the grievances of the miners, the struggle of the miners; the shortcoming of the craft division of labor, the need for a militant leadership; the need for a labor party; the need for trade union unity nationally and internationally, to the attention of the workers of this country.

A Suitable Leaflet.

The national office of the Workers Party, has issued a leaflet: "Stand by the Anthracite Miners." This leaflet is the best means thru which to speak to the working masses, in a brief way, about the miners' struggles, against the coal barons, who are living in luxury on hundreds of millions of dollars' profit wrung out of the blood of the slaves of the pits, etc.

Has Your Branch Acted?

It's true, 200,000 of these leaflets have been distributed. But that is not enough. Many more must be distributed. It must be done now. The struggling miners need your moral support now. See to it that you place an order at once with the Supplies Department, National Office, Workers Party of America, 1113 Washington Blvd., Chicago, Ill. The price is within the reach of the poorest branch, namely: $2.00 per thousand, which includes express or postage charges.

FRANCE MEETS GREAT DEFEAT IN SYRIAN WAR

Tribesmen Smash First Offensive

DAMASCUS, Syria, October 4.—France's war against the Druse tribesmen is not progressing. She has met with a number of serious defeats, French troops have been ambushed, driven out onto the desert and heavy losses then inflicted on them by the rebels, who demand that France relinquish her mandate over Syria.

This Is Hell.

Ten thousand flea-infested soldiers with blood-shot eyes, swollen and parched lips, wish they had never entered Syria on this expedition to keep Syria for France. Many of the French soldiers are saying: "This is the hell we get for supporting the French mandate in Syria."

The French are organizing a second offensive. The first offensive was smashed by the Druse tribes and many of the French soldiery fear that the second will meet the very same fate.

French Fear Defeat.

The second expedition of the French has a caravan of 600 camels carrying water and supplies to last eight days. The first offensive was smashed by a small band of Druse tribesmen when the supply of water that the French depended upon, was cut off.

GREAT RUSSIAN POET INSPIRES LOCAL CROWDS

Mayakovsky Tells of Soviet Culture

By M. A. SKROMNY.

One of the most enthusiastic meetings ever held in the Russian colony of Chicago, took place Friday night, Oct. 2, when a crowd of about 1,500 people jammed the Temple Hall to listen to the famous Russian poet, Vladimir Mayakovsky. Before the meeting was over the crowd unanimously voted to invite Comrade Mayakovsky again to Chicago before he leaves this country.

The meeting was opened with the International by the Freiheit Singing Society, and after a short introduction by the chairman, Comrade Stolar, Vladimir Mayakovsky began to talk. From the start until the end he held the crowd spellbound. At times they were cheering and at times they were laughing until tears streamed from their eyes.

Plays With 40,000 Actors.

He described the new theater, where Comrade Meyerchold, the great impressario, perhaps the greatest in the world, is staging shows in which 40,000 people are participating as actors.

He described a play about the gas workers which was staged at the gas works instead of an artificial stage with painted machinery. He told about many other things that are taking place in the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics, that would look grotesque and fantastic to the "sane and respectable" playwrights, poets and actors.

Comparing Culture.

Comparing the interest that is shown by the wide masses to literature and poetry in the "barbarous" land of the Bolsheviks with that of the "civilized" countries, he cited the fact that the powerful Chicago poet, Carl Sandburg, was able to draw a crowd in New York of only about 300 or 400 people, while the Russian poets usually speak to crowds of thousands. As a matter of fact, there were about 1,500 people in the hall while he was talking.

He said that when he tried to find out how big the output of poetry was in this country, he was informed by a publisher that the so-called "intellectuals," the dentists, physicians, lawyers, etc., are sometimes buying books of poetry, not to read, but to keep it as furniture, to show "a good taste."

This, while the Russian poet Demjan Bedny has had over 2,500,000 copies of his works printed since 1917, while the speaker (Mayakovsky) has over 1,500,000 copies of his books published since 1917, the books of the poets of the "civilized" countries are printed only by the thousands and even by the hundreds.

Writes Poems on America.

After a short intermission, between the sips of Russian tea, he answered questions, and read some of his own poems, not published yet. The audience almost raised the roof by wildly cheering his American poems, The Discovery of America, The Woolworth Building and the Girl, and Havana Willie. Five hundred copies of his poems that were on hand, were sold out.

To Speak Here Again.

The next lecture by Comrade Mayakovsky in Chicago, will be held Tuesday, Oct. 20, at Schoenhoffen Hall, corner Ashland and Milwaukee Aves. It will be his last lecture in the United States as he has to return home. The request to speak here again postponed his home going, as he was to leave this country in about a week.

Comrade Mayakovsky promised an article for the DAILY WORKER on Russian literature, art and poetry.

Youth Behind Anthracite Miners.

Tony Wishtrat, a young coal miner and delegate to the convention from District 6, spoke on the anthracite strike, calling upon the Y. W. L. to give its support to the striking miners. He also called upon the league to stand behind Pat Toohey, one of the delegates to this convention who could not attend because he is now in jail, together with Comrade Alex Reid of the Workers Party, at Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

Comrade Wishtart offered the following resolution, expressing the unanimous opinion of the convention:

Whereas, Because of the unbearable conditions prevailing in the coal mining industry, the anthracite coal miners have been compelled to engage in an open struggle against the mine operators, and

Whereas, Four militant leaders of the striking coal miners, Pat Toohey, August Valentine, Alex Reid and Alex Zarack, have been arrested by the political hirelings of the coal operators and thrown into jail, because these workers are in the forefront of this struggle; and

Whereas, This marks the beginning of a free speech fight in a sector of the country that is dominated by the most ruthless and brutal reaction; therefore be it

Resolved, That the Third National Convention of the Young Workers League condemns this action on the part of the federal authorities who are nothing other than hirelings of the operators and pledges to give every possible financial and moral assistance to these valiant fighters for teh cause of the working class; and be it

Resolved, That this resolution be sent to all our comrades, and the labor press.

Coolidge-Mellon War Debt Settling Plans Will Aid Only Capitalists

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, Joseph Caillaux, French finance minister, is on his way back to Paris to report on his debt negotiations at Washington with the American secretary of the treasury "Andy" Mellon,' "the third richest man in the United States."

The results of these negotiations may be summarized from information at hand, as follows:

First, since Caillaux did not secure what he wanted, the French are of course, disgruntled. They wanted easy terms, feeling that the rich American uncle should willingly grant them. France needs money, not for useful purposes to benefit the French people, but to carry on her wars in Morocco and Syria, and to prepare for other wars. But in the words of James Hamilton Lewis, former United States senator, from Illinois, and very close to the top in the Wilson war regime, France will agree to Mellon's proposals, "because she wants to share in the $300,000,000 loan to be floated here in behalf of Italy and France."

Second, the Wall Street bankers, like the French statesmen, are not at all enthused by the outcome of the debt parley. Mellon is a Pittsburgh and not a New York banker.

The international bankers would be happy if the government at Washington would forgive the beggar nations of Europe their debts. That would make these nations more able to negotiate new loans with these same international Shylocks, whose coffers are bulging with wealth stolen from labor. Altho, as Mellon declares, the result of the debt talks will not add to the borrowing power of the French nation, nevertheless, France was doing pretty well in getting loans before Caillaux came to Washington. This it will, no doubt, continue to do "in the name of civilization."

Third, Mellon had but one aim in pressing for a settlement of the Frehch war debt of $4,000,000,000 on the best terms possible. War loans repaid means a reduction in taxes on American industry, the essence of Coolidge-Mellon "economy." This policy of lightening the burden of taxation on business has been one of the pet schemes of the "Andy-Cal" regime since it came into power. It scores in the debt parley with France.

Fourth, but nowhere did the interests of the workers of either France or the United States receive any consideration. Easy terms to France, or complete cancellation, would not help the French workers and poor farmers. It would merely strengthen French capitalism, the enemy of the workers and farmers. French capitalism will seek this strength thru new loans secured from Wall Street, an added burden upon the backs of the proletariat of France. American workers and poor farmers, the nation's producers gain nothing by the Mellon-Coolidge policy. Tax reductions, resulting in greater profits for business, are accomplished by wage-cut drives against the already low standard of living of the workers. The anti-labor attack is most vicious in the textile industry of Coolidge's own New England, an attack directed by the textile millionaire, Butler, who was Cal's campaign manager. This attack is being pushed vigorously by the great coal and steel corporations in the Pittsburgh district, in which the Mellon interests have a controlling influence. The Coolidge-Mellon war debt settling policies are 100 per cent for the capitalists.

American workers cannot suffer thru repudiation by the French working class of all the debts owing by France to both the United States government and Wall Street's international banking clique. But such repudiation will only come by decree of a French Soviet republic. All American workers and poor farmers should join heartily in declaring "Let it come!" For the victory of the French working class must weaken American capitalism, and bring American Soviet rule nearer.

• • • •

Let American labor take notice in the hour of the debt haggling between the beggar diplomats of capitalist France and the bandit statesmen of the United States, the Union of Soviet Republics, growing richer in its own right every passing hour, was placing another order for $2,500,000 worth of wrought iron pipe with the Reading Iron company, a subsidiary of the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron corporation. This is being followed by still other orders of greater proportions. Workers of America, march forward with your comrades under the banner of Soviet rule.

SAKLATVALA BAN RESENTED BY THE CHICAGO UNIONS

But Communist Source is "Troublesome"

The barring of Shapurji Saklatvala, the British Communist member of parliament from entry to the United States to attend the sessions of the interparliamentary union, was subject to the fire of many voices in the Chicago Federation of Labor, Sunday.

The resolution to protest the high-handed action of Secretary Kellogg and President Coolidge in shutting out the Communist visitor to the Washington gathering, was introduced by Andrew Overgaard of the Machinists' Union, who put up a stiff fight from the floor and met with wide sympathetic response to his appeal for action.

The American capitalist government has no hesitation, he pointed out, in admitting without the slightest question all sort of enemies of the workers including the counter-revolutionary generals who tried to drown the workers' revolution in Soviet Russia in seas of blood. The American government admits the most savage enemies of the workers from Bulgaria, Hungary, Poland. Now the American government was picking out a representative of the workers to shut out. He protested against the open discrimination by the government against the workers, and pointed out the alliance against the subject people of India, between British and American imperialisms.

Moved to Fumigate It.

The resolutions committee moved to refer the resolution to the federation executive for further report, each committeeman, however, stating that he approved of the purpose of the resolution, but that the trouble was that a Communist introduced it, consequently, it would have to be sort of, fumigated by passing thru the hands of the executive of the federation and again brot before the body. It came from a "suspicious source."

Speaking against the committee motion to refer, Anton Johansen of the Carpenters, Shussler of the Photo Engravers, and Arnold of the Painters, joined Overgaard in militant criticism of the action of the American government, tho the last two wished to make clear they were not in agreement with Communists on other things.

Mead stated that in the past the federation had been over hasty in voting down resolutions, just because they were introduced by Communists. He himself disagreed with Communists generally, but there was a danger of going too far on this path of opposition to every resolution introduced by Communists. Brother Arnold also remarked upon the inadvisability of this course.

Anton Johansen made a slashing attack on Secretary Kellogg for his action, which marked Kellogg as "the most servile tool of capitalism in the American government." The action of Kellogg, moreover, proved the intertwining of British and American imperialism and the control of the enemies of workers and oppressed peoples. Shussler remarked that the act of Kellogg and Coolidge shows that in America we have "hypocricy" and not democracy.

Fitzpatrick Makes Usual Attacks.

John Fitzpatrick opened up his customary barrage on Communists and made the rather obviously untrue statement that Overgaard was "disloyal to the trade union movement." Fitz said he would welcome a chance to deliver a blow at British imperialism, but did not want to be ticketed as Communist for passing a resolution introduced by Overgaard. The resolution was referred to the executive for deliberation and further report.

TCHICHERIN HAS HOPE OF U.S.-SOVIET ACCORD

Optimistic About Russ Agriculture

BERLIN, Oct. 4—George Tchicherin, Soviet foreign minister, in Berlin, conferring with German government heads over a Russo-German trade agreement, said he was convinced the United States would soon give full recognition to Soviet Russia. Negotiations he had conducted with American commercial interests and his observations of the American situation convinced him that American businessmen were anxious to deal with the U. S. S. R.

Tchicherin was optimistic about Russia's rapid agricultural development and said that the crops this year would be 26 per cent better than last. Tractors and other farm equipment are needed, however, said the foreign minister, and negotiations would start at once for credits if the U. S. recognized Russia.

He agreed with the German foreign minister, Stresemann, to send an observer to the next Geneva congress if Germany joined the league of nations.

REPORTS OF PARTY MEMBERSHIP MEETINGS

BOSTON DISTRICT ENDORSES CENTRAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE AND PARTY'S BOLSHEVI ATION

By JOHN J. BALLAM.

BOSTON, Oct. 4.— The Boston District No. 1 membership meeting which was held at Paine Memorial Hall, 9 Appleton St., Boston, was one of the most instructive and important party meetings in this district. There were over 200 party and Y. W. L. members present and all were enthusiastic and receptive to the C. E. C. report of the fourth national convention proceedings and the decision to reorganize our party on the basis of the shop and street nuclei in the shortest possible time.

Analysis of Party.

Comrade Jay Lovestone, head of the organization department of the Central Executive Committee analyzed the present party situation and the party's immediate tasks. Comrade Lovestone pointed out that there were three principle stages in the growth and development of our party: 1. The formation of the Communist parties in 1919 with over 40,000 members; the raids resulting in the underground organization with its sectarianism and factional divisions. 2. The formation of the Workers Party in December 1921 and the development of a more realistic political viewpoint when our comrades began to see the masses; the correcting of the left sicknesses, etc. 3. The period when the American masses began to see the Communist movement and the Workers Party thru the development of the labor party campaigns, the building of the left wing movement in the trade unions, and the united front campaigns.

Fourth Stage.

Comrade Lovestone showed that we are now entering the fourth stage in our growth toward a real Bolshevik party thru the present realization of the need of carrying out the decisions of the Communist International and the convention on Bolshevization. "The factional struggles of the past ten months, which were characterized by so much bitterness," said Lovestone, "were the birth pangs of the new Bolshevik Workers (Communist) Party now being born."

Reporting on the national convention, Comrade Lovestone said that the fact that the convention spent three days on the report of its credentials committee and that there were over one hundred challenges by the former minority alone showed in itself great organizational weakness and defects. It was said by a leading comrade that this was more a convention of dues stamps than of representative Communists in conference. Nevertheless, said Lovestone, "at no previous convention was there more intensive political discussion that at our last convention." The convention lasted ten days and it was said that these were the "ten days that shook the party."

Stand on Loreism.

On the question of opportunist deviations the convention took a firm stand as evidenced by the expulsion of Lore and the removal of Askeli from the editorial board of Tyomies. This served warning upon all those in our party who were drifting toward opportunism that the Central Executive Committee would deal firmly and decisively with those who would lead our party away from the line of the Comintern. It was high time for our party to act, as it was only as late as June 1924 that our party definitely declared itself against Trotskyism in the Russian Communist Party.

The last decision of the Communist International placed the leadership of our party in the hands of the former minority group and the national convention carried out that decision. The attitude of our comrades toward that decision of the C. I. will be one of the best indications of the readiness of our members to accept and carry out Bolshevization and of their loyalty to the Comintern. Already Lore is organizing his Workers' International Association and bidding for support among our members. Lore attempts to show how the C. I. butted in and 40 delegates had to do what Moscow said, etc. This protest against interference by the C. I. in the affairs of the sections of the C. I. is characteristic of all social-democrats and opportunists. Frossard, Hoeglund, Levi, et al, have said the same.

Bolshevization.

On the subject of Bolshevization and reorganization Comrade Lovestone devoted the main part of his speech, showing that the Bolshevization of our party means the raising of the theoretical level which is now very low; that the agitprop departments will strive to give the membership thorogoing instruction on basic theories.

"Reorganization is not merely an organizational problem," said Lovestone, "but a major political problem." Instead of having only 30% of our members in the trade unions we must strive to have three times that number actively engaged in organizing the left wing bloc and influencing the masses of organized workers.

The Central Executive Committee will develop and intensify the anti-imperialist campaigns as illustrated by the Saklatvala meetings in Union Square, New York, and elsewhere. On the labor party, the Central Executive Committee stands pledged to carry out the decisions of the C. I. for which it fought and it will develop a real labor party campaign.

"Reorganization is not a universal quack remedy," said Lovestone. "It will not of itself solve all problems, but the new problems of the party will be more and more the problems of the working class."

Shop and Street Nuclei.

Comrade Lovestone then analyzed the structure and functions of the shop and street nuclei; traced the development of our party from the old socialist party to the present day showing how we inherited our present form of organization from the socialist party which wanted to reform capitalism thru parliamentary means and showed how thru the shop nuclei the party maintains contact with the workers in shops, factories, mills and mines. The C. E. C. thru the local committees, sub-districts and districts will be at all times in close contact with the working masses and able to interpret their moods and needs, and thus become in deed as well as in name the vanguard of the working class. Comrade Lovestone admitted that there may be a loss of membership during the process of reorganization but that in the long run our party will begin to grow more rapidly than heretofore and that the members that will remain out will be that type of membership which does not belong in a Communist Party. The question of language branches and language fractions were next dealt with and Comrade Lovestone concluded by stating the following slogans:

"The Comintern is being attacked—stand by the Communist International!

"Back to work—the cure for factionalism is united effort!

"The party is the instrument of the revolution—THE PARTY ABOVE ALL!"

Discussion.

Comrade Ballam, as chairman, then opened the meeting for questions and discussion. These questions and the discussion which took place showed real enthusiaism for the reorganization program. The speech of Comrade George Kraska caused a demonstration when Kraska declared that the decision of the C. I. was based upon false information, and that the C. I. is not infallible. That Zinoviev made mistakes in the past and that he is mistaken now. That as for leaving the party, Zinoviev himself once left the Russian Communist Party and refused to obey the decisions of Lenin and the Central Executive Committee of the Russian Party. Lore himself could not have made a more violent attack upon the Communist International than did Kraska who was delegate to our last national convention. Comrade Lovestone in replying said that Comrade Kraska should add another chapter to Mr. Eastman's book, "Since Lenin Died," as even Eastman does not claim that Zinoviev left the Russian Party.

Comrade Max Lerner introduced a resolution which was identical with the Central Executive Committee resolution on every point and was therefore declared out of order by the chairman. Comrade Lerner appealed against the ruling of the chair and the decision of the chair was sustained.

The following resolution was adopted by the Boston membership meeting by a vote of 102 for the resolution to 9 against:

Resolution Adopted by Boston Meeting September 27, 1925

"The Boston, District No. 1, membership meeting of the Workers (Communist) Party, section of the Comintern, after listening to the report of Comrade Lovestone, the representative of the C. E. C., hereby declares:

"1. The resolutions of the Parity Commission unanimously adopted by the fourth national convention of our party, lay down a correct basis for the work of the party members among the masses, thru which alone our party can grow into a mass Communist Party. We declare our wholehearted support to the resolution on the immediate tasks of the party, on trade union work, on the labor party campaign, imperialism, work among women, agricultural work and other major campaigns of our party.

"2. We welcome the action taken by the national convention for the liquidation of Loreism in our party. Our party has already reached the point of development where opportunistic deviations by leading members can no longer be tolerated. In the expulsion of Lore and several of his aides from the party and in the removaly of Comrade Askeli from the editorial board of the Finnish organ, Tyomies, the national convention indicated that the fight against opportunism will be intensified in our party. We pledge our wholehearted support to this campaign.

"3. The resolution on the Bolshevization of our party marks a new step forward for the American Communist Party. The thorogoing reorganization of our party on the basis of shop nuclei and the development of a centralized apparatus mark necessary and significant steps toward the Bolshevik centralization of our party and lay a sound basis for the party's carrying on real Communist work. We pledge ourselves energetically to take up the campaign for the reorganization in the least possible time.

Comintern Decision.

"4. The last resolution of the C. I. sent to our fourth national convention by the presidium of the C. I., declaring that, 'it has finally become clear that the Ruthenberg group is more loyal to the decisions of the C. I. and stands closer to its views,' lays the basis for the unification and development of our party. We declare our acceptance of the last resolution of the Comintern dealing with our party and that we will loyally support the C. E. C., elected on the basis of this decision in carrying on and intensifying the work of the party.

"5. This membership meeting of District No. 1 declares that the interests of the party demand the sincerest and most tireless executions of all decisions of the C. I. regarding our party. This is particularly necessary when Lore is openly working to descredit the C. I. and its decisions and to destroy the possibilities for building up a powerful section of the C. I. Especially at this moment, therefore, any attempt to question the character of or to discredit the latest C. I. decision or in any way to interfere with its successful execution would be playing into the hands of the Loreites and other enemies of the Comintern, would be a blow struck against the C. I. and its American section—the Workers (Communist) Party.

Approve Convention.

"6. We declare our approval of the unanimous decision of the national convention to accept and carry out without reservation the last resolution which the Comintern cabled to the fourth convention of our party.

"7. The Boston District No. 1 membership meeting declares its fullest endorsement of the Central Executive Committee and strongly urges all members to forget their past factional differences; to drop all factional strife, and to rally as one solidified, united Communist Party for new constructive activities for Communist campaigns, under the leadership of the Central Executive Committee chosen by the fourth national convention of our party."

Workers Party Dist. 5 Expels Joe Lang of McKeesport, Pa.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Oct. 4.—District Organizer Arne Swabeck of District No. 5 of the Workers Party addressed the following letter to Joe Lang of the McKeesport Hungarian Br., notifying him of his expulsion from the party for the reasons set forth:

The District Committee of District No. 5 is in receipt of a communication addresed by Joe Lang, member of McKeesport Hungarian branch, to the C. E. C. in which he in the most insulting manner attacks the C. I., its representative and the Bolsheviki in general, using a language absolutely unworthy of a Communist. We were also informed that Joe Lang transmitted a contribution to the discussion now taking place in the Volkszeitung which was published under the head "Loreism, Workers Party and the Volkszeitung" which is a direct polemic against the Workers (Communist) Party.

The C. E. C. in forwarding this communication to the District Committee asks that the District Committee take prompt action in the matter, and the District Committee unanimously carried the motion to expel Joe Lang forthwith from the party for reasons set forth above, to notify the respective party units accordingly and to ask the DAILY WORKER and the party press in general to give prompt display to this unanimous actien of the District Commitee of District No. 5.

PHILADELPHIA MEMBERSHIP MEETING ENDORSES PARTY REORGANIZATION AND C. E. C.

Two hundred and forty Workers Party members, together with a number of Y. W. L. members turned out Saturday, Sept. 26, in Machinists' Temple, Philadelphia, to a general party meeting to hear the report of Comrade Lovestone, together with a brief report of the convention by Comrades Jakira and Baker.

The meeting was opened at 7:30 p. m. by N. H. Tallentire, newly elected organizer of District 3, who introduced Comrade Baker followed by Comrade Jakira, who briefly reported on the national convention of the party. Tallentire, in introducing Comrade Lovestone, referred to Lovestone's record in the party, showing his association with the Communist movement from its inception, and his consistent line of policy thruout, which he still follows, "toward the masses," and indicated briefly Comrade Lovestone's splendid services for Communism in America.

Receives Ovation.

On rising to speak, Comrade Lovestone as C. E. C. representative, received an ovation, the meeting rising and singing the International. Lovestone's speech of one hour dealt with the inner party situation as it affects the reorganization of the party. Tracing the history of the Communist Party development from its origin thru the formative period, underground period, to the open day of Communism, the Workers Party of America.

"To the Masses."

The labor party policy, the speaker showed, as outlined by the C. I., leads "to the masses," and urged the membership to study and understand the underlying principles of the C. I. united front policy in order to advance the cause of Communism amongst the American workers.

Dealing with party reorganization, Lovestone stated that the process of the Bolshevization of our party is inevitably bound up with reorganization, as outlined by the C. I., on a shop nuclei basis. Explaining the obsolete character of the present territorial units, Lovestone urged all members to co-operate and speed up this work, that we may have an opportunity of clearing the last traces of social-democracy and Loreism in our party.

Support New C. E. C.

Comrade Lovestone urged all members without regard to pre-convention groupings, to rally to the support of the new central executive committee, and to carry out without reservations the latest decision of the Communist International, finishing by reading the resolution of the C. E. C. on the party question.

The chairman made a short appeal for active support of able members in reorganizing the party. A collection of $168.00 in cash and pledges was recorded.

Unanimous Decision.

Debate from the floor by Comrades Lena Rosenberg Yusem, Lyman, Toohey, Olken, Ball, Baker, and Tallentire, followed after which the resolution submitted for the central executive committee by Comrade Lovestone was by motion unanimously adopted, a poll of the house showing 239 members present and voting.

The resolution adopted by the Philadelphia district membership meeting was as follows:

The Philadelphia District No. 3, membership meeting of the Workers (Communist) Party, section of the Communist International, after listening to the report of Comrade Lovestone, the representative of the C. E. C., hereby declares:

1. The resolutions of the Parity Commission unanimously adopted by the Fourth National Convention of our party, lay down a correct line of Communist policy for our party. These resolutions provide the basis for work of the party members among the masses, thru which alone our party can grow into a mass Communist Party. We declare our wholehearted support to the resolution on the immediate tasks of the party on trade union work, the labor party campaign, imperialism, work among women, agricultural work and other major campaigns of the party.

2. We welcome the action taken by the national convention for the liquidation of Loreism in our party. Our party has already reached the point of development where opportunistic deviations by leading members can no longer be tolerated. In the expulsion of Lore and several of his aides from the party and in the removal of Comrade Askeli from the position of editor of the Finnish organ, the Tyomies, the national convention indicated that the fight against oppression will be intensified in our party. We pledge our wholehearted support to this campaign.

3. The resolution on the Bolshevization of our party marks a new step forward for the American Communist Party. The thorogoing reorganization of our party on the basis of shop nuclei and the development of a centralized apparatus mark necessary and significant steps toward the party's carrying on real Communist work. We pledge ourselves energetically to take up the campaign for the reorganization of our party as laid down by the C. E. C. and to give all possible help to the C. E. C. in effecting this reorganization at the earliest possible date.

4. The last resolution of the Communist International, sent to our Fourth National Convention by the Presidium of the Comintern, declaring that "it has finally become clear that the Ruthenberg group is more loyal to the decisions of the Communist International and stands closer to its views" lays the basis for the unification and development of our party. We declare our acceptance of the last resolution of the Comintern dealing with our party and that we will loyally support the central executive committee elected on the basis of this decision in carrying on and intensifying the work of the party.

5. This membership meeting declares that the interests of our party demand the sincerest and most tireless execution of all decisions of the Communist International regarding our party. This is particularly necessary when Lore is openly working to discredit the C. I. and its decisions and to destroy the possibilities for building up a powerful American section of the Communist International. Especially at this moment, therefore, any attempt to question the character of or to discredit the latest Comintern decision or in any way at all to interfere with its complete and successful execution would be playing into the hands of the Loreites and other enemies of the Comintern, would be a blow struck against the Comintern and its American section, the Workers Communist Party.

6. We declare our approval of the unanimous decision of the national convention to accept and carry out without reservation the last resolution of the Comintern cabled to the fourth convention of our party.

7. The Philadelphia District No. 3 membership meeting declares its fullest endorsement of the C. E. C. and strongly urges all party members to forget their past factional differences, to drop all factional strife and to rally as one solidified, united Communist Party for the new constructive activities, for Communist campaigns, under the leadership of the central executive committee chosen by the last national convention of our party.

Ask All New York to Be at International Labor Defense Ball

NEW YORK CITY. Oct. 4—International Labor Defense, New York section, announces a costume ball to be held on Saturday, Oct. 17, at the Lyceum, 86th Street and Third Ave., New York City.

This Ball is the beginning of a series of activities to be conducted by the I. L. D. in their campaign to help the class-war prisoners and their families. At the present time of blackest reaction, with the courts issuing injunction after injunction against the workers and the police clubbing strikers in the picket line, there is a crying need for a strongly centralized fight for the civil rights of the working-class. The I. L. D. is trying to fill this need, but it can do nothing without the concerted support of all elements of labor behind it. Every sympathizer must work to his utmost to make this work effective.

The committee in charge of the ball announces many novelties for the affair. Prizes will be given for the best and most original costumes; one of New York's finest orchestras has been engaged to provide the music; and there will be many surprises for those who attend. The Ball promises to be one of the brightest and most successful affairs of its kind ever held in New York District. Each worker should not only buy a ticket for himself, but should get a bunch to sell in his union or his fraternal organization. For further information, apply to the secretary of the I. L. D., Rose Baron, Room 422, 799 Broadway, New York.

Courts Asquits Polish Workers Charged with Communist Membership

WARSAW, (By Mail.)— The trial of Moushinski, Zatorski and Rappoport, a woman tailor, on charges of participating in the Communist Youth organization, ended recently in the Warsaw district court. On account of a complete absence of any evidence against them, the court acquitted all the accused, after they had each undergone three years of penal servitude.

The witnesses, all agents of the secret police, founded their charge on the fact, that the accused had a "Communist reputation."

Connecticut Takes Initiative in Shop Nuclei Organization

The active participation of our party members in the recent strike of 400 workers in the Sidney Blumenthal (Shelton Looms) plant has made it possible for our comrades to organize a strong shop nucleus there.

It is interesting to note that prior to the organization of this shop nucleus, the various party members working in this factory who were members in their different party branches never considered our party activities in the shop at their branch meetings.

The shop nucleus was organised after the Communist participation in the strikes at this plant, which were in force last January and June. The district executive committee is taking steps to help the comrades function in this nucleus. The employers in this instance are bitter enemies of organized labor, particularly militant organized workers.

This is the first shop nucleus organized in the Connecticut district. The comrades in the shop nucleus have won the confidence of many workers, as a result of their participation in the struggle of the employees in the Shelton textile plant, against the attempt of the bosses to force them to run more looms.

Dear Comrade:

Every militant working man and woman is mightily concerned about the danger which faces THE DAILY WORKER. A great many of them gave immediate response to the danger signal and thereby helped to overcome an emergency which without their support would have ended in disaster. The impending catastrophe was averted, but THE DAILY WORKER is very far from being safe.

There is only one way in which THE DAILY WORKER can be made safe and that is through the support of each one of the thousands of workers who depend on THE DAILY WORKER for leadership, inspiration and information in the struggle against capitalism.

SAVE THE DAILY WORKER.

Around this slogan every fighting, class conscious worker must rally.

We said that only by the unified efforts of all militants could THE DAILY WORKER be saved. That is true, but there are several ways in which each one may do his share:

> By donating money to help THE DAILY WORKER in its work. Perhaps you have already done so. If you possibly can do it again and get some other worker to help, too.
> By securing new subscribers to THE DAILY WORKER and The Workers Monthly. This is a task that everyone can perform with a little effort and by doing so you not only help to solve the financial problem, but also you strengthen THE DAILY WORKER by increasing the size of its army and strengthen the whole labor movement by increasing the number of well informed fighters within the ranks.
> By buying and reading some of the Communist literature published and sold by The Daily Worker Publishing Co. In this way you help THE DAILY WORKER financially and in addition you can with pleasure and profit to yourself, make yourself more effective a fighter in the labor struggle.

We know that you are willing to exert every effort to help save THE DAILY WORKER. We have suggested three ways in which this can be done.

Whatever way you can.
Every way if you can. Act now to save The Daily Worker.

Fraternally yours,

Manager.

ANDERSON TO TAKE APPEAL TO MEMBERS

Scores Johnston at His Hearing

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—(F.P.)—J. F. Anderson, former vice-president and recent candidate against Wm. H. Johnston for the presidency of the Int'l. Assn. of Machinists, announced on Sept. 30 that he would appeal to the membership against the decision of the general executive council which sustained Johnston's order suspending Anderson's membership. The vote in the council was 8 to 1. Ten per cent of the active lodges must second the appeal before it can be sent to a general ballot for decision.

A Pungent Statement.

Appearing before the council at Washington headquarters in response to a formal summons, Anderson read to the members a pungent statement in which he denounced the order against himself as tyrannical and in defiance of the will of the rank and file of the machinists.

He reviewed the history of the union's struggle to establish democracy in its own affairs, and demanded that any charge against him be tried by his own fellow-members in his own lodge, and not by the council which is his accuser.

Membership Rule Lost.

He declared that the disclosures of recent months concerning the elections held in 1920 and 1922 and 1924 have disillusioned the membership as to their own control of the organisation.

Johnston's demand that Anderson apologise to the council he characterised as "a ridiculous proposal for me to recant," and "adding insult to injury."

Campaign Issues in New York

clusive monopolies—each in a particular branch of service but very often having interlocking directorates.

Traction vs. Realty.

One of the contradictions inherent in capitalist development here arose. It was to the interest of the great traction trust that fares be increased so that their rate of profit rise. It was on the other hand of the greatest interest to the realty corporations that the fare be held at a low level so that they could continue fleecing the gullible with their land boom schemes from which they harvested millions. Thereby these two groups of capitalists were brought into active conflict.

The dominant party on the New York election scene is the democratic party. This city has not had a republican mayor since Seth Low who was a fusion candidate in 1902. It was therefore logical that the warring economic groups use their most energetic efforts that this party nominate a candidate for office who will favor the one or the other group. This was finally crystallized into the Hylan-Smith fight.

Who is Smith?

Alfred E. Smith is a director of the Electric Transport company which has interlocking directorates with the Interborough Rapid Transit company (operating New York subway and elevated lines) thru Cornelius Vanderbilt and Horace M. Fisher, which in turn has interlocking directorates with the New York Central, the Biltmore hotel, Armour and company, etc., ad infinitum. He is also a director of the Morris Plan company which has been fleecing the workers in loan schemes and is also chief shareholder and chairman of the board of directors of the U. S. Trucking corporation. He therefore represents the traction group. He supports Walker as candidate who while on the agricultural committee to prepare food control bills accepted fees from the meat trust.

Who is Hylan?

Hylan on the other hand is closely bound up with the realty interests. It is not permissable that while in office he himself should engage in business. However, the Sinnots, members of his family, are all owners of large insurance and realty corporations and we suspect that the mayor himself has more than just a sympathetic share in these enterprises. It is therefore logical that he should champion this great financial group against Smith.

Hylan's strength comes from Richmond, Queens and the rapidly growing sections of Brooklyn, because he used his office to build subways, bridges and to give the realty sharks every facility that the city could offer them. He got the endorsement of the Staten Island businessmen's league, a powerful organization consisting in a large measure of real estate men. He also got the support of the Five Cent Fare club, a temporary election organization which is being financed by the same group.

Walker's Record.

Walker (Smith's puppy) gets his strength from the greater aggregates of capital—from the public service corporations and the meat trust—thru men like Arthur S. Somers who is a director of the Brooklyn-Manhattan subway system. Because of his recent victory in the democratic party Smith becomes the angel of the great trusts and will undoubtedly gain substantial financial assistance from them when the problem of nominating a presidential candidate in 1928 arises. Already during the campaign period he got a suite of rooms and meals free from the Biltmore which is owned by the meat packers and the N. Y. Central which have interlocking directorates with the I. R. T. as has been shown above.

Millionaire Waterman.

Waterman is the clearer symbol of Wall Street. He is no mere hired servant of Wall Street—he is one of the crowd. The party feels that they must do something to prove that they can serve big business better than the democrats can and this is their method. Their candidate can be counted on never to yield to popular pressure as even the most loyal of the professional politicians must sometimes do.

The average wage in his plant and offices is $18 per week. He discriminates against Jewish employes hiring only enough to keep the charge of anti-Semitism from beign flung at him. He was chosen because he can lose nothing by being defeated as he undoubtedly will be.

Sky-Pilot Candidate.

The socialist party has this year completed its swing to the right. They chose Norman Thomas, a sky-pilot who has been using the socialist party as a splendid pulpit from which to preach to his lowly (in more respects than one) flock.

Several weeks ago a manifesto favoring Cal Coolidge's pet scheme, the world court, was published in New York newspapers and among the distinguished signers were Thomas W. Lamont of Morgan and company and Norman Thomas of the socialist party.

Hillquit for League.

Morris Hillquit, another bourgeois who is boring from within the ranks of the workers for capitalism came back from the congress of the Second International (incidently on a scab ship) in favor of a league of nations somewhat "democratized." The same league which the S. P. in 1919, when it still had some militant elements in it, called an organization of "blackguard reactionaries." The Burns Coal company whose leading lawyer and one of whose most influential politicians is our old friend Morris Hillquit, is importing coal from Wales to break the anthracite strike.

The successive betrayals that the socialists have committed in the past few years with an almost bewildering rapidity has so thoroly discredited them in the eyes of the workers class, especially in view of the recent needle trades struggle, that their vote will fall to a negligible point and I dare say were it not for the support that the petty-bourgeois cockroach shop and store keepers are still giving them, their vote would be very close to zero.

The Issues.

An extremely careful scrutiny of the program of the two major capitalist parties reveals not a single point which might differentiate one from the other.

They are conducting their campaigns on the purely personal basis that Walker can serve (Wall Street) better than can Waterman and vice versa.

The socialist party has taken the camouflage issue—the five cent fare—and is conducting their campaign on that basis. It is curious to note how close the socialist platform comes to Hylan's. The former advocates municipal ownership of the subways, the latter municipal control. If municipal ownership were accomplished it would have the effect of guaranteeing the profits of the present owners. Why? Because in order to take the subways over the city would have to float a bond issue and the same crew which owns them now would buy the bonds and get their profits anyway, in the from of interest on the bond loan.

The socialist party failed to make as its major issue the real problems confronting the workers, such as injunctions in strike, persecution of the foreign-born, the increase by 100% of the child laborers in the last three years alone, etc. Instead they show their confusionist character by fighting on the ridiculous camouflage issues proposed by the major capitalist parties.

Communist Candidate.

That each of the candidates symbolizes the character of the party that nominated him can very well be seen from the above. The Workers (Communist) Party as is fit for its class character and vitality, has nominated Ben Gitlow whose "jail" record speaks for the fighting makeup of the party that he represents.

The party program has refused to take up the fake issues that the capitalist parties have set forth but have entered the campaign on a program which ought to rally large masses of the workers because it meets their everyday needs.

Proposed Unity.

The Workers (Communist) Party has earlier in the campaign issued a call for a united labor ticket the organization of which was effectively blocked by the yellow socialists who have made it their special job to keep the workers from solidifying their ranks, even if only on particular issues. We now enter the campaign under our own banner, tho we continue our fight for a united labor ticket and a labor party. The enthusiasm displayed everywhere augres well for the added success that we are sure to achieve during this struggle. We hope to be able to count many new members and much new support before this campaign is over.

(The complete program of the party will be printed in another issue.)

ENRIGHT PLANS TO FINGERPRINT WORKING CLASS

Make Easy Frame-up of Radicals

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—Police Commissioner Enright of New York would outdo the French and German systems of ticketing and docketing citizens.

In an article in the Scientific American he urges universal fingeprinting, not only of aliens but of everybody, so that the police can keep tab on every man, woman and child.

Enright's plan is seen by the workers as a step towards a police authority to which the czarist system will be considered quite mild.

Fingerprints Forged.

This would allow police to frame up on many leading working class fighters, by taking the forged fingerprints and using them in such a manner as to implicate the worker in crimes for which heavy penalties would be inflicted.

Mexican Law Bans Foreign Landholding

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 4.—The proposed law, in accordance with the constitution, regulating foreign activities and possessions in Mexico, is certain to pass the Mexican chamber. The constitution provides that only Mexicans by birth or naturalization may acquire or exploit real property.

The only change effected by the proposed law will be that members of stock companies will be made subject to the same laws as individuals. One section of the law provides that all foreigners within one hundred kilometers of the border and fifty kilometers of the sea must dispose of their holdings within three years.

Soviet-U. S. Trade Increase.

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., Oct. 4—Trade with the United States during the last six months was several million dollars greater than for the whole year 1924, totalling $58,779,736. Of this amount, only $6,000,000 worth of goods was sent to America.

The chief imports from the United States and the percentages of each were: Cotton, 45 per cent; grain, 35; agricultural machinery and parts, 29 per cent.

teachers who escaped the bullets of the Roumanian bourgeoisie during the rebellion of September, 1924, are now brot to the bar.

Third Degree Peasants.

The accused underwent an inquiry—as only the Roumanian police know how to conduct—lasting a whole year. The material for the indictment against the accused covers 70,000 pages, and the indictment itself, which displays the "understanding" of the royal commissioner of the courtmartial in matters relating to sociological and national questions—this indictment covers 700 pages.

Not all the 1,000 accused, however are now on trial. Mercy was taken on a few, and over 200 prisoners, ownig to lack of "evidence" were released.

There now remains 350 prisoners to be sentenced. The prisoners are accused of "rebellion, robbery, murder and high treason."

These crimes are mentioned in the indictment. Officially, the rebels will be tried, and without doubt, be sentenced, for rebellion against the state system of the Roumanian bourgeoisie, for "complicity, with and aiding a foreign state"—which, in the present instance, is the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics towards which the Bessarabian workers and peasants are looking for help.

Importance of Trial.

But he who probes deeper into the conditions today existing in Roumania, and especially in Bessarabia, will have to agree with the folowing fact, that in reality this trial will decide the fate of the agrarian reforms, of the national question and of the relations with the Soviet Union.

The "agrarian reform" has been completed in Roumania in such a manner that the Bessarabian peasants have been expropriated, and the land which they had gained as the fruits of the victorious October revolution, was taken from them and given back to the former big landowners.

The national question has been so "decided," that the lesser nationalities have been deprived even of those rights which they enjoyed during the czarist regime.

The present trial has been brot about in order that, by means of a verdict against the prisoners, the idea of an agrarian reform and of freedom for the minor nationalities may be radically destroyed. The government wishes, by means of this trial to emphasize the fact that Bessarabia happens to be in the power of Roumania, and will stay in Roumania's power—even tho this be against the wish of the population, even tho Bessarabia was "stolen" by the Roumanians.

Fulfil Allies' Wishes.

The Roumanian bourgeoisie wants to know nothing at all about the rights of the Bessarabian population to self determination, and of its sympathy to the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics. This trial, now taking place in Kishinev together with court-martial, gendarmes, troops of occupation, must prove that the bourgeoisie has no intentions whatsoever to let Bessarabia slip from its clutches. It is an open declaration of its unwillingness to live at peace with the Soviet Union, and that it will in the future direct a policy in the first place defending the interests of the entente imperialists.

So we see that this trial is clearly directed against the Soviet Union.

Such are the intentions of the bourgeois government. But, whether the Roumanian government will after all remain victorious or not—whether it will be victorious in the near future—remains to be seen, against this victory speaks the present econimic and political situation of the country, especially in Bessarabia—the situation, which the bourgeoisie itself defines as follows:

Economic Bankruptcy Near.

Bogos, the late minister in Averesku's government, lord mayor of Kishinev, writes in the Roumania for the 22 ult.:

"The support shown by the government to the famine stricken sufferers is mostly nothing at all . . . The population refuses government aid, because the government maise is bad and dearer than the market maize . . . We are now economically on the edge of the precipice . . . An unimaginable terror is reigning . . . The peasants are fleeing en masse to the towns, where they receive the 'constitution.'" (25 lashes with a rubber whip).

The Aurora, organ of the peasants' party, adds: "This is simply preparing for the revolution."

The Tatarbounar trial is directed against all the peasantry and all the minor nationalities, who are carrying the struggle under similar heavy conditions.

Our feelings of solidarity are with the accused peasants and the whole Bessarabian population.

Teachers Honor Lenin.

MOSCOW, Oct. 4.—(Tass.)—The delegation of foreign teachers now visiting Moscow called on the Central Committee of the Teachers' Union where the Chairman of the delegation expressed his admiration for the achievements in economic and cultural life of U. S. S. R. The delegation laid a wreath on the tomb of Lenin with the inscription on red ribbon: "To our leader Lenin from the first delegation of Western teachers."

PRODUCTION OF KUSTAR WARE IN RUSSIA MOUNTS

Makes Up 40 Per Cent of Entire Industry

MOSCOW, Oct. 4.—(Tass.)—The Kustar (Peasant handicraft industry) production for this year can be estimated at 3,209,000,000 roubles, which constitutes about 40 per cent of the entire industry of the Union. Of this total sum 2,406,000,000 roubles falls to the share of the peasant kustar industry and 803,000,000 roubles to the town kustar industry.

The total number of people producing kustar ware reaches 3,120,000 men.

The kustar industry plays a prominent role in Soviet exports. The export of kustar goods in 1913 was estimated at 25,274,000,000 roubles. It has considerably fallen since the period war revolution. Thus, the last year's export of kustar goods has been estimated only at 1,800,000. It has shown again a considerable increase during this current year and according to preliminary estimates it has risen to 7,500,000 roubles. The kustar ware is being chiefly exported to England, Germany, Turkey and Latvia.

The organization of the kustar industry on the basis of cooperative societies constitutes one of the chief problems of the Soviet government. Up to the present time, about 20 per cent of the kustar-ware workers are involved in the co-operative movement.

Holyoke Weavers Continue Strike Against Wage Cut

HOLYOKE, Mass., Oct. 4.—Striking weavers of the Holyoke Worsted Mills, Inc., are still out, completing the fourth week of their fight against wage cuts. State conciliator Fred Knight, failed to settle the dispute.

Superintendent H. W. Cowan of the mill denies the charge made in the Central Labor Union that Holyoke weavers are receiving 30% to 40% less than similar workers in other mills. The mill refuses to take back all the strikers in a body as demanded.

A tag day to help the weavers is being held.

The A. F. of L. and American Imperialism

The delegates to the American Federation of Labor convention in Atlantic City, consisting for the most part of officials of the affiliated unions, and true to their character as the agents of imperialism in the labor movement are, even before the convention begins its sessions, reacting to the lead given by the state department in the exclusion of Saklatvala, Communist member of the British house of commons.

The departmental meetings held previous to the convention itself, such as those of the building and metal trades, have engaged in an orgy of red baiting. Working always on precedent in the best lawyer fashion, the departmental meetings have used the unseating of William F. Dunne by the Portland convention as a basis for war on every sign of progress in the unions and have upheld the expulsions of militants that have disgraced the labor movement in the past year.

American trade unionism is now at the lowest moral ebb ever reached not even excepting the belly-crawling war time period. American imperialism is extending its domination over the earth and its peoples. It is the slave master in a dozen different nations. It is preparing a new world war—a war on the workers' and peasants' government of Russia while the American labor movement stands alone as the only organization of trade unions opposed to the recognition of the first proletarian state.

War on the Communists by the officialdom of the American Federation of Labor is war on the only section of the American working class that is fully conscious of the dangerous path American labor is treading and which fights against all forms of treason to the working class expressed in compromise with and submission to the capitalists such as company unions, "labor" banking, participation in the capitalist parties by the labor movement, etc.

The war on the Communists in Atlantic City is the best guage of the imperialist character of the American labor officialdom.

China Gets a Trojan Horse

The powers, so dispatches state, have sent a note to the Pekin government declaring their profound desire to "settle the Shanghai incident," the massacre of unarmed workers and students, which began May 30 and continued for some weeks with British, American and Japanese troops butchering Chinese like so many chickens.

The imperialist powers give an appearance, at last, of having realised that the nationalist revolutionary movement cannot be met in the way old disturbances were settled, with cold lead and sharp steel and an arrogant domination of "superior" races.

But that does not mean that imperialism has surrendered and is going to quit China. By no means. Imperialism merely lays aside the weapons of armed struggle for a moment to try the weapon of diplomatic deceit and "superior" cunning.

Just as the imperialist powers have been striving in the west to unite the nations of western Europe against the Soviet Union, using all sorts of favors and threats alike against Germany and other recalcitrants who hold out, as may be seen in the proposed "security pact," so in China the imperialist powers have a policy of pretended consideration for the political independence of China, to try to break the bond existing and increasing between the Chinese workers and peasants and those of Soviet Russia.

But the trap, whether it works or not, will easily be seen for what it is when we look at the way that the imperialist powers diplomatize. Going formally to Peking uttering sweet words about friendship and a desire to "grant permission" some far distant day that China may be free of their "beneficient" domination, at the same time they are arming Chang Tso-lin and a host of mercenary generals to make war upon the Kuomintang government of Canton, the center of revolutionary nationalism, and to oppose with civil war if need be any further rapprochment of China and the Soviet Union.

Imperialism goes to Pekin with a lie on its lips, an olive branch in one hand and a dagger in the other. It would be well for Chinese to recall the old saying about suspicion attaching to enemies who come bearing gifts.

Doctor Berger Ventures a Diagnosis

Victor Berger, returning home from Europe, makes the remarkable discovery that "all Europe is sick." We hestitate to say that this is so solely because Vic has been there and because Europe has in its social intestines the fecal mass known as the Second International—altho this last condition has something to recommend it to one's diagnosis of Europe's illness.

Also, we think that Vic missed something. He didin't visit Soviet Russia, tho doubtless there would have been much to engage his time and interest there. So when he says "all" Europe is ailing, we remind him that he did not get out of the safe guardianship of the capitalist gendarmerie nor risk bearding the Bolsheviks in their den, and should leave out Soviet Russia from his reckoning; first, because he wasn't there; second, because Soviet Russia is the only "healthy" section of Europe.

But if "Doc Berger" wants to go into feeling pulses and taking temperatures, we would recommende him to do a litle diagnostic work at home. We ask you, Doc, what sort of purgatives, surgery or physio-therapy you prescribe for the illness of American economy —which seems to have escaped your observation? There are figures to show that the average wage of American workers is around $25 a week, or $1,250 a year on a very high estimate, while the lowest estimate for a so-called "living wage" put out by bourgeois economists is about $1,875.

We were going to ask you, Doc, what sort of surgical operation you recommend, but on second thot we recall that you don't believe in surgery, preferring homeopathy and christian "science" along with Ramsay MacDonald's "crawling, sniveling gradualism"—which is a way, we observe, of "progressing" so slowly that the proletariat goes running by you on the road to revolution with no more honor left your kind than gazing at its coattails and protesting at the violation of the speed laws.

The Riffians have been "crushed" every day for the last three weeks in the capitalist press but the war is still on ialism is a dagger thrust in the heart of the British empire.

Defend the Workers' and Peasants' State!

Our American imperialism is closely tied up with the world situation and sees in the fight against capitalist imperialism a fight against itself. The billions of American capitalism are at stake in every struggle against imperialism the world over, because American capitalism is spreading its investments over the entire world.

The Soviet Union is not only the rallying point of all oppressed and exploited peoples, but it stands as a constant inspiration for struggle and revolt for the workers of every capitalist country. The workers and peasants of Russia are triumphing in their struggle for economic reconstructions and as they improve their standard of life and build their Communist social order, they are creating an example which the workers of every capitalist country will follow.

There are many signs pointing to the fact that the imperialist capitalist powers are preparing for a new onslaught on the Soviet Union, in order to end the threat to capitalism which it represents. The negotiations with Germany for a security pact between Great Britain, France and Germany represent an alliance to fight the Soviet Union. The debt negotiations of our Washington government are an effort to clear the ground for united action against the Soviet Union.

The arrogant exclusion of Saklatvala from the United States, coupled with a threat of new persecution of the Communists, is a sign of coming fight against the Soviet Union as the heart of the world wide Communist movement.

This new fight to destroy the Soviet Union which is in preparation represents a great danger for the workers' and peasants' government. While the capitalist onslaught will be a great danger it also represents a great opportunity. The Soviet Union has the sympathy and support of tens of millions of workers who are not yet Communist. The attack upon the Soviet Union makes possible the rallying of these workers for a fight against the capitalists.

That is the immediate task before our party. We must initiate an immediate campaign to warn the workers of the preparation against the Soviet Union. We must rally the workers for a struggle in defense of the Soviet Union. We must take our stand beside the Communist Parties all over the world which have already begun the fight to arouse the workers for defense of the Soviet Union.

Our party must make this fight to rally the workers for defense of the Soviet Union its major task. Every party member must be mobilized for the campaign. Every party unit must participate actively and energetically in the work.

The program for this campaign is the following:

IMMEDIATE PROGRAM.

1. The celebration of the eighth anniversary of the establishment of the Soviet Republic shall be made the opening of the campaign for defense of the Soviet Union. In every city where we have a party organization mass meetings must be arranged.

2. We shall endeavor to organize united front bodies for the support of these mass meetings. The new attack upon the Soviet Union should be brought to the attention of all trade unions, co-operatives, workers' fraternal organizations and efforts made to secure the sending of delegates to a united front organization to support the celebration as the first step for the mobilization of the workers in support of the Soviet Union.

3. The party manifesto on the celebration of the eighth anniversary and the defense of the Soviet Union must be given a wide distribution. The party organization must distribute at least a million copies of this manifesto.

4. The DAILY WORKER, as the open defender and fighter for the Soviet Union must be brot before all the mass meetings and an effort made to have all supporters of the Soviet Union read the DAILY WORKER.

FURTHER PROGRAM.

1. The celebration of the eighth anniversary is only the opening of the campaign. The campaign must be carried further in accordance with the following program:

(a) Our objective shall be to create in every city and eventually to unite on a national scale an organization of all workers' organizations sympathetic to the Soviet Union for the "Defense and recognition of the Soviet Union."

(b) The united front bodies set up in support of the November 7 celebration shall be used as the nucleus for the creation of a broader united front organization.

(c) We shall immediately initiate and energetically carry on a campaign to secure the adoption of resolutions in defense and for recognition of the Soviet Union in

1. All local trade unions, central labor bodies, state federations of labor.

2. All workers' fraternal organizations, benefit societies, co-operatives, etc.

The resolutions adopted shall be given wide publicity. The resolution shall include the endorsement of a united front organization for defense and recognition of the Soviet Union and endorse the sending of delegates to such a body.

(d) We shall connect with the campaign agitation for a labor party as a means of uniting the workers here and to carry on a fight for a workers' and farmers' government of the United States.

Party Organization for the Campaign.

1. Each destrict and city committee shall make this campaign a special order of business and thoroly discuss the ways of carrying it out in their territory.

2. Shop nuclei and party branches shall devote a meeting to the discussion of the campaign and to the mobilization of the membership for all its phases.

3. Special meeting of trade union fractions shall be called to inform the members and mobilize them for the work in the trade unions.

4. The language sections shall call meetings of the fractions in the various fraternal organizations to prepare them for the campaign.

5. District organizers and city secretaries must send weekly reports to the C. E. C. as to the progress of the campaign.

Literature.

1. The party will issue a manifesto in leaflet form and we shall endeavor to distribute at least a million copies in the week from November 1 to 7.

2. "Russia Today," the report of the British trade union delegation, shall be circulated as widely as possible.

3. The party will immediately publish one or two additional pamphlets.

4. The party will issue stickers with suitable slogans.

Agitprop and Party Press.

1. The agitprop department shall prepare an outline for party speakers covering the new danger of Soviet Russia and the reasons why the workers must rally to the defense.

2. The agitprop shall mobilize the party press for consistent support of the campaign and shall furnish material for the campaign. The first publications shall be:

a) Publishing of party manifesto.
b) Publication of plan of campaign.
c) Publication of editorial on campaign to be furnished by the agitprop.
d) Regular news and publicity on all phases of the campaign.

Party Membership Campaign.

1. The party shall carry on a consistent appeal for membership in the Workers (Communist) Party in connection with the campaign.

Comrades! This campaign for the defense and recognition of the Soviet Union must assume greater proportions than any of the past campaigns of the party. It must be carried on with energy and vigor. We must show the metal our party is made of in this fight.

To work!

Fraternally yours,
C. E. Ruthenberg,
General Secretary.

Party stands for a workers' government. The republican and democratic parties have always given us a bosses' government. To separate the workers from the bosses, to unite them in a single labor party for the winning of control of the powers of government—this is the immediate aim of the Workers Party.

"To this end we proposed to the socialist party and other labor organizations that a joint convention of all workers' organizations be called to nominate a single united labor ticket. The socialist party rejected the proposal, thus making itself responsible for the continued division of the workers.

"In this connection it is interesting to compare the program of the Workers Party and the socialist party on the question of the courts and the police. The program of my party calls for the abolition of the use of injunctions in labor disputes, no interference with or limitation of the right of striking or picketing on the part of the city government, no use of the police against the workers in labor struggles, and the repeal of the criminal syndicalist law and the release of all workers imprisoned because of their activity on behalf of the working class.

"The socialist party, on the other hand, actually calls for 'the maintenance of an adequate police force.' In view of the fact that the city police are used by the bosses against the workers, 'an adequate police force' under capitalism can only mean a force adequate to break all strikes and break up all picketing lines no matter how many there may happen to be at the given time. The socialist party omits entirely the fundamental question as to who controls this police force and against whom it is used. What we propose is in reality a workers' police, that is to say, a police force organized by and under the control of a workers' government for use in the defense of the workers and against the bosses. The socialist party is so far away from the working class point of view that it forgets all together the role of government. The municipal government like the national government, must serve either the workers or the bosses. Under capitalism and with the administration of capitalist parties, it serves the bosses against the workers. Only under a workers' government would it serve workers. Thus, the demand for a labor party capable of rallying all the workers in a united fight for a workers' government is the central demand in the platform of the Workers Party in this campaign."

unions do not let a single opportunity slip by, to shatter the remnants of influence which the Polish socialist party still holds over the working masses. Recently this party of blacklegs suffered a new moral defeat. Not the defeat of the capitalists—they in reality were the winners having broken the strike of the 25,000 Warsaw metal workers, and giving them but a 10 per cent increase in wages instead of the 60 per cent to 100 per cent increase which was demanded by the trade union bloc, but of the Polish socialist party which lost this strike, because the trade union, which was directed by the bureaucratic Polish socialist party turned out to be isolated in the struggle and a united front in the form of a bloc was created against their union. The nationalist christian-democratic trade unions which joined this bloc did so out of hatred and competition against the Polish socialist party, and for once attempted to defend the workers' rights to the very end. But in reality, the chief guiding role in this strike was played by the opposition Metal Turners' Trade Union, which was composed of those elements which had been expelled by the Polish socialists.

The opposing "metal turners" not only did not allow themselves to be isolated in the strike, but they succeeded in organizing all the unions, with the exception of the Polish socialist party in a single bloc. According to their wont, the Polish socialist party went over to the other side as strikebreakers, but were suddenly confronted with the bloc, which demanded the further continuance of the strike, and which actually led the strike. The foul game of the menshevik blacklegs was shown up in all its glory. It was emphasized by the leaflets published by the Communist Party. The Warsaw committee of the Communist Party published three leaflets one after the other, exposing the treacherous role of the Polish socialist party and appealing for the prolongation of the struggle. The strike was broken. It was broken due to the open co-operation tof the mensheviks, capitalists and police.

And now they stoop to assassination. The Italian fascisti, against whom the Polish socialist party, in duty bound as socialists, thunder forth condemnation from their organs—these fascisti have found imitators in Poland—imitators, covering themselves with the red flag.

The assassins, among other things, lay claim to an historical precedent. In 1907 and 1908, when the class struggle in Lods took on a most fierce aspect, when the strike wave was followed by a wave of lockouts, and when the capitalists forcibly deprived the workers of their victorious gains—then the Polish bourgeois party, the national democrats, led their fighting groups against the revolutionary workers. Protected by the czarist police, the nationalists armed themselves and arranged a real pogrom against the social democratic and Polish socialist party workers in Lodz. Many of our comrades were then murdered by them.

How times have changed. These very "socialists" who twenty years ago were murdered by the Polish fascists, today have taken up this dirty role for themselves. And the "people's" unions lag far behind the Polish socialist party when it comes to meanness and cowardice. But the motives for the murders now are the same as they were twenty years ago —a pure fight for the interests of capital.

The Polish socialists, in August of last year, killed our Comrade Bialgo at a workers' meeting for the simple reason that they did not want the Communists to spread the strike of 200 Silesian workers to Warsaw, and thus increase the workers' chances of winning the strike. The murder of our comrade by the Polish socialists is not the outcome of political emotion, but the foul, intentional work of paid assassins hired by the capitalist class.

The Communists use the very same Polish Socialist Party Now …. TWO methods against these bandits, which the social democrats used in 1907. They are mobilizing the working class in protest against the foul methods of the social traitors, and are organizing a united front of the masses against the attempts to incite a fratricidal war. Their attempts to deprive the workers of their leader, the Communist Party in the class war thru assassinations of its members will not lead the Polish socialists out of their isolation, but will widen the gulf between them and the masses. The workers have protested against the bloody death sentences imposed by the bourgeoisie, against the working class. Still less can they calmly stand by and watch the socialist party of Poland carry on their work of destroying the revolutionary workers.

geois character of the socialist party, and compared the programs of the Workers Party and the socialist party in the campaign.

Unity Proposed.

"The Workers (Communist) Party wanted a united campaign on the part of the working class of New York against the capitalist parties," said Comrade Gitlow. "We proposed a united labor ticket and addressed a letter to the socialist party—inviting them to join us in a united campaign against the capitalist parties on the basis of a program containing demands of immediate interest to the workers of New York City.

"The socialist party ignored the proposal of the Workers Party and refused thereby to even consider a proposal of working class political unity and were therefore responsible for the fact that labor's forces in New York City in an important political campaign, are divided instead of united.

"That the socialist patry is no longer interested in the struggles of the workers is clearly apparent from the candidates chosen by the socialist party and the program adopted for their campaign. The standard bearer of the socialist party, Norman Thomas, is a minister in good circumstances and not a worker. The program of the socialist party has omitted all reference to the capitalist system and does not make an appeal to the workers directly but to the "citizens" and "public," of New York.

"There is nothing in the socialist party program that distinguishes it from a liberal, petty bourgeois program. In fact, the socialist party has so debased itself in the present campaign that it includes in its program an appeal for law and order thru the increasing of New York's police force."

The program of the Workers (Communist) Party, on the other hand, Comrade Gitlow stated, does not appeal to the "general public," but directly to the working class. "The program of the Workers Party," he said, "is a program which stresses the importance of the workers uniting politically to combat the political power of the capitalists by the formation of a labor party. The Workers Party has its own candidates in the field, due to the refusal of the socialists to unite in a united labor ticket. But the Workers Party takes the lead as it has in the past, in demanding working class political unity against the capitalist exploiters.

"The Workers Party enters the New York campaign also to carry on an effective fight against government by injunction," the Communist candidate for mayor continued, "particularly the recent injunction issued to the International Tailoring company against the members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers out on strike against that firm. We demand that the city government cease its interference with striking pickets, and the sending of police against strikers in labor disputes. I consider the breaking up of picket lines by the police and the issuing of injunctions against strikes to be one of the major issues of this campaign.

"The Workers Party also in this campaign will seek to mobilize the workers against high rents that the landlords are extracting from the workers and against the deplorable housing conditions now prevailing in the city. We demand in our program the construction of dwellings for the use of the workers, and rented to them without profits, the setting of a low rent scale, based upon the ability of the workers to pay, and the taking of power from the landlord to control the workers' living conditions by evictions, high rents, etc."

"In this campaign the Workers Party will carry on a fight against the traction interests and will seek to bring the lesson of the necessity of organization home to the thousands of workers who are underpaid and overworked on the subways and street cars and elevateds, and we will try to win the support of the workers for a move whereby the city take over the traction system and operate it in conjunction of a committee elected by the workers.

"The Workers (Communist) Party demands a workers' and farmers' government, the recognition of Soviet Russia, the building and strengthening of the trade unions, freedom for the colonial possessions of the imperialist Coolidge government, hands off China, the abolition of child labor, and the overthrow of capitalism, with the workers controlling industry.

"In this campaign the Workers Party will point out to the workers the nature of their struggle and will do everything in its power to prove that the Workers (Communist) Party is one party that fights all year around in their interests."

Peasant Dies After Beating in Prison by Secret Police

KISHENEY, Bessarabia, Oct. 4.—One of the accused peasants in the trial being held in Kishenev has succumbed to wounds inflicted on him by the Siguranisi (Roumanian secret police).

His death took place in the Kishenev prison hospital.

The Roumanian boyars are attempting to keep a veil of secrecy around the death of this peasant who was accused of "crime against the safety of the state" for his participation in the Tatarbounar uprising against boyar rule.

Political Prisoner on Hunger Strike in Roumanian Jail

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., Oct. 4.—According to reports received, Max Goldstein, a prisoner in the Roumanian prison of Doftani, is carrying on a hunger strike as a protest against the violence perpetrated against political prisoners.

His hunger strike has lasted so far 36 days.

In this prison, the political prisoners are fed only three times a week and are subjected to the most inhuman tortures.

Cappellini in Betrayal of Coal Strikers

ing of union miners becomes necessary.

The calibre of the reactionary crowd in the anthracite is very apparent in the letter that Rinaldo Cappellini, president of District No. 1 has sent to Michael J. Hugh, superintendent of police, Scranton Pa. This letter definitely proves that Cappellini and his associates in control of the United Mine workers in the anthracite are nothing but police informers against the workers. The letter is as follows:

Sept. 28, 1925.

Michael J. McHugh, superintendent of police, Scranton, Pa.

Dear Sir: Your action in breaking up the meeting at Washington hall, Scranton, Pa., Saturday, Sept. 26, of representatives of the Soviet movement of Russia, whose purpose is to destroy the orderly method of conducting the affairs of the United Mine Workers of America, incite violence and the destruction of our great laboe movement was taken up at a meeting of the district executive board, held Sept. 28, 1925, and it was unanimously decided the executive board of district No. 1, United Mine Workers of America, go on record commending your action very highly and thank you very much for the action taken in preserving peace and tranquillity in our great city.

We realize you are impartial in this controversy and your only desire is to promote the peace of the community and we are in hearty accord with you in this policy.

We again thank you and commend your action, and hope all public officials who have for their duty the enforcement of laws for peace and harmony follow your example.

Wishing you continued success, we are,

Yours truly,
RINALDO CAPPELINI
Pres., District No. 1 U. M. W. of A.
ENOCH WILLIAMS,
Sec'y. District No. 1, U. M. W. of A.

Miners Arrested.

Two progressive miners, Patrick Toohey and Alex Reid, who were conducing a fight in the anthracite to make the strike a struggle in the interests of the miners, have been arrested. Lewis' official supporters in the anthracite, Rinaldo Cappellini and others, immediately began to demand that the police arrest the progressives and that the authorities jail them. The authorities and the police acted upon the demand of these reactionaries. All meetings of progressive miners were prohibited in the anthracite.

Six Months' Jail for Progressives.

Alex Reid and Patrick Toohey, the leaders of the progressives, were sent to prison for six months on a charge of vagrancy because the reactionary officials of the United Mine Workers wanted them out of the way to permit Lewis to sell out the anthracite strike for the check-off.

The Lewis and Cappellini crowd in the United Mine Workers is a leadership that is a menace to the labor movement. It must be rooted out of the United Mine Workers' Union if the United Mine Workers is to become a real union fighting in the interest of the miners who belong to it.

Cappellini's letter to the superintendent of police in Scranton is a challenge to the progressive militant miners to build a rank and file movement in the miners' union that will drive Cappellini and his type forever out of the union.

Locarno Meet Directed Against Soviet Union

LOCARNO, Switzerland, Oct. 5 — The foreign ministers of France, Great Britain and Germany are gathering here for the conference they hope will create a solid block of Western imperialism against Soviet Russia. The so-called security pact to be signed by Briand, Chamberlain and Stresemann is being hailed in the European press as a final guarantee of world peace while, as a matter of fact, the convention, if it is signed, will pledge Europe's three largest capitalist powers to united warfare upon the workers' and peasants' republic.

Britain Is Leader.

The "security" proposals came from Germany but no secret is made of the fact that Great Britain inspired them. Britain is extremely worried over the "swing to the left" of the British working class, her extremely critical colonial situation, and the growing power of the Soviet Union. England, with the support of France, who herself is no better off, is coming to the Locarno conference to force Germany into a new entente against Russia.

Soviet Foreign Minister Tchitcherin's recent trip to Berlin and Warsaw is being viewed with the greatest fear by Briand of France and particularly Chamberlain of Great Britain. While Stresemann, German foreign minister, who arrived today, reassured the other powers that his talks with Tchitcherin included no political considerations and resulted only in a trade agreement that has been hanging fire for two years, at the same time he said "Germany is laboring under heavy burdens. We must maintain as broad relations as possible with the rest of the world. No nation can ignore the importance of Russia with a population of 160,000,000."

Germany Plays Carefully.

The central problem to be settled before the compact can be signed is Germany's eastern frontier. France is willing to make a settlement of the Rhine question if her puppet, Poland, is accorded proper consideration in the East. Germany will hold out for concessions in securing her eastern frontier and will doubtless use her Russian agreement as a persuader. This situation is further complicated by Tchitcherin's visit to Warsaw where he was well received. Ger-

GERMANY WILL SEND ENTIRE INDUSTRIES TO UNITED STATES

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—Emigration not only of skilled workmen but of entire industries from Germany, reported today in cables to the department of commerce, is becoming a source of worry to the German government.

Figures disclosed that for the first six months of the year emigration from Germany was 30,349, a material increase over the same period of 1924.

Contracts have been closed between several German corporations and the Bethlehem Steel company and Dupont interests, for the transfer of entire German industries to United States, officials said.

The Bethlehem company virtually will finance a branch of the German Mortonenwerk Mannhein, which is to manufacture motors in United States under the German patents and with the entire personnel of the home works.

COOLIDGE HOPES TO BOLSTER UP 1926 ELECTION

Worried About Fight in Central States

STORRS, Ohio, Oct. 5.—President Coolidge's special train that passed thru here this morning on its way to the American Legion convention is going thru the Ohio and Mississippi valleys for more than just the trip to Omaha. While the visit to Omaha has its importance, the real purpose of the presidential trip is to lend assistance to Coolidge's partisans in the central states who are up for re-election in the congressional run of 1926.

The Iowa situation is especially complicated by the election contest now going on between Broohart and Steck for the corn state senatorship. The administration leaders know that even if Brookhart is beaten in the present contest he will run against the other old guard Albert S. Cummins who will seek re-election in 1926. The president hopes to have some influence there and in Missouri, always a doubtful state, where republicans face a hard fight to elect a successor to the late Senator Seldon Spencer.

Lifting of S-51 Peril to Divers

NEW LONDON, Conn., Oct. 5.—A final effort was to be made today to remove additional bodies from the hull of the S-51 in her grave off Block Island. The increasing danger to the divers is expected to cause the immediate search for bodies to be halted and lead to the turning over of operations to a salvage crew.

The divers have experienced a number of narrow escapes from death. In cutting thru the hatch of the torpedo compartment, "Tug" Wilson, navy diver, became tangled up in the radio wires of the wrecked submarine. William Reed, another diver, went to his rescue and succeeded in freeing him. When Reed's suit began leaking he was forced to signal for a quick hoist to the surface.

AMSTERDAM INTERNATIONAL REFUSES TO AID THE STRIKING CHINESE RAILWAY WORKERS

BERLIN, Oct. 5.—(W. I. R.)—The workers of China need not look to the International Federation of Trade Unions for aid in their struggle against the imperialist powers that are attempting to shackle China. The International Federation of Trade Unions has no aid to offer. All it doles out is sympathy to the struggling workers. The workers of China can look for aid but in one quarter, they can look for aid from the Workers' International Relief.

Attempt to Wake Amsterdam.

After many months of sending telegrams and communications to the International Federation of Trade Unions, this is the answer to an appeal to

HILLQUIT AND THOMAS, ARCH ENEMIES OF WORKNG CLASS, OPPOSE COMMUNIST GITLOW

By SYLVAN A. POLLACK

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—In the latest issue of the New Leader we find a letter from Morris Hillquit trying to "explain" in true lawyer's fashion his trip from Europe on the scab-run ship, the Majestic.

He says that he was told that it was just a minor disagreement in the engine room which would be settled before the boat left. When the question of a strike is raised, he says that if he had known there was one, he would have looked into the matter and on the basis of his investigation would have decided whether he would have sailed or not.

Legal Twisting.

This is a fine example of legal twisting and squirming with a vengeance! More than that, it shows that Hillquit does not see the question from a working class point of view, but as a petty-bourgeois liberal who, if he felt that the workers were justified in their demands he would support them, otherwise he would not.

But what can one expect from a lawyer for large corporations and labor bureaucrats, such as the Burns Brothers Coal company, and the Sigman machine of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union. His connection with the Burns Brothers Coal company is enough to brand him for what he is, an enemy and traitor to the working class. Today Burns Brothers is making arrangements to bring coal from Scotland to help break the anthracite strike in Pennsylvania and Hillquit is a heavy shareholder as well as the attorney of that corporation.

He has just returned form the congress of the Second International which was held at Marseilles, France, where the League of Nations was indorsed, which in 1917 was called by the socialist party, of which he is a member, the black international.

What has changed its color in the last eight years that Hillquit now accepts it?

Endorse League of Nations.

He returns to New York a short time after his colleague, the Rev. Norman Thomas, socialist candidate for mayor of New York City, has signed a declaration jointly with such people as Mr. Lamont of the House of Morgan, Bishop Manning and others, urging the United States to enter the world court, and instrument of the League of Nations and international capitalism.

These two men, Hillquit and Thomas, socialist candidate for mayor in New York, are two fitting examples of what the socialist party has degenerated to—strikebreaking and indorsement of the League of Nations.

In opposition to this motly crew we find the Workers (Communist) Party candidate for mayor, Ben Gitlow, trade unionist who has served twenty months in Sing Sing for fighting for the working class and is today in the shadow of returning there to finish his sentence, the United States supreme court having upheld his sentence.

For Comunist Party!

LIGHT FRENCH TERMS DON'T HELP BRITAIN'S U. S. DEBT PAYMENTS

LONDON, Oct. 5.—Great Britain has no legal claim upon the United States for the revision of its debt funding agreement, because of the light terms granted to France in the temporary Franco-American agreement, the foreign office stated today.

The foreign office stated that Great Britain did not obtain from Secretary of the Treasury Mellon an agreement that the terms for Great Britain would be lightened if the United States granted more favorable terms to any other debtor.

Britain Has Little Joy Over Result of French Debt Pow-wow

LONDON, Oct. 5.—British diplomats are not altogether happy at the outcome of the French debt negotiations. They feel that Britain has been left holding the sack by the proposal of the United States.

Britain is held to the agreement made between Churchill and Joseph Caillaux, which provided that the French debt to England should be payable with $10,000,000 the first year and increasing to $62,500,000 after the fifth year—on the condition that if an agreement less favorable to France was made with American, the British claims on France would be increased accordingly.

Now that no final settlement with America can be made, under the Coolidge proposal of a five-year temporary payment of one per cent on the $4,000,000,000 French debt to America, the result is that while Great Britain will get only some $60,000,000 annually from France, England will have to pay $200,000,000 annually to America for money borrowed, a considerable amount of which was reloaned to France.

Irish Demonstrate in Capital

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.— Sympathizers of the Irish republic picketed the interparliamentary union at the capitol today, carrying banners denouncing the union's action in refusing to seat Miss Mary McSwiny, prominent republican advocate. One banner denounced Americe for admitting delegates who have "done to Ireland what Benedict Arnold tried to do to the United States."

GREEN PRAISES GOMPERS AS HE OPENS SESSION

Dull Speeches Precede War on Left Wing

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Oct. 5.—Declaring that he preferred the philosophy of Samuel Gompers and the trade unionism that Gompers preached, rather than the vague theories that are offered as a substitute therefore, William Green, former secretary-treasurer of United Mine Workers of America, opened his first convention as president of the American Federation of Labor on Steeplechase Pier here today.

This attack, made in Gompers' memory, was the first assault in the convention against the progressives in the organized labor movement, who have been making big inroads on the reactionaries' positions in some of the strongest unions since the last convention.

Green made the attack after a careful preliminary tribute to Gompers, concluding with, "He kept the faith, so we will keep the faith." Green announced that a special day will be set aside for memorial services for Gompers.

Both Divine and Humane

The opening of the convention was more than usually dull, with local and state politicians passing it by. Both the mayor of Atlantic City and the New Jersey governor sent substitutes to address the delegates.

President Arthur Quinn of the State Federation of Labor did likewise. Quinn's substitute welcomed the delegates, "because you are a humane institution," this state labor spokesman also proclaiming that the American Federation of Labor is of divine as well as secular origin and therefore it cannot fail.

Loves the Government—But Not Its Injunctions

In his speech President Green also made a plea for organization and attacked those courts that cripple labor activities declaring, we love our government! we love America! we love its history and traditions! but we claim the right to criticize the courts that ally themselves on the side of employers. He also said the federation was just beginning to fight for the children of America.

Credentials committee report showed 389 delegates seated from 99 international and national unions, 4 departments, 25 state federations, 57 central labor unions, 21 local trade and federal unions, and 7 fraternal delegates.

Stinnes Credits Are Extended

GERMAN LABOR FAKERS VISITING A. F. OF L. CONVENTION TO GIVE BACKING TO WAR ON COMMUNISTS

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Oct. 5.—Bringing the "delegation of 15" trade union officials of Germany to the United States and featuring them as an attraction at the American Federation of Labor convention that opened here today, was no doubt carefully planned as an anti-Communist move.

This is the only conclusion that can be reached after a visit to the delegation quartered at the Ritz-Carlton, or "The Ritz," as the hotels by this name in the great cities of the United States and Europe are known.

Sam Gompers may rest easy in his grave. These are all social-democrats who where on the side of the kaiser during the war, and they are all against the Communists now.

Coolidge Welcome Socialists

The delegation came to Atlantic City direct from Washington, D. C., where these socialists were well received at the nation's capital. There was a reception for them at the headquarters of the American Federation of Labor. But that wasn't all. They were received by Cal Coolidge himself, the president declaring that he was glad to meet these spokesmen of German workers, only a few days after Shapurji Saklatvala, Communist member of the British parliament and spokesmen of British workers, had been barred from landing with Cal's official sanction.

Secretary of Labor Davis went a little farther. The Pittsburgh millionaire was host for these socialists at luncheon, leaving a good impression upon them.

The members of the delegation have reached what seems to be an ironclad pact among themselves not to talk for publication. Very little has appeared about them, even in the capitalist press.

Tarnov—Anti-Communist Leader

There is Schumann of the transport workers, Scheffl and Johade of the railway men, Huseman of the miners, to mention only a few, who acknowledged Tarnov, of the woodworkers as their chosen spokesman. But Tarnov is reserving himself for the speech that he will make to the convention of behalf of the whole delegation. In Germany Tarnov led the war of expulsions of Communists from the unions.

Kurt Heidig, secretary of the Allgemeiner Freier Angestellten Bund, known as the "Afa Bund," was the only one who would give his views at any length. His organization is a federation of 14 unions, with 600,000 members including municipal workers of every description. He stated truly when he said, "You have nothing like it in the United States."

Heinig is a typical German social-democrat i. e., trade union official. He has read Carl Legien's book on the latter's trip thru the United States in 1909 and he will doubtless duplicate this feat by writing a book himself upon his return to Germany.

Heinig spoke fluently of the Dawes plan and the proposed "security pact" and of the visit of the delegation of German rank and file workers to the Soviet Union, and in these matters he

Indians Take to War Path as Protest

KINGMAN, Ariz., Oct. 5—Swearing vengeance against white men if the penalty of death is carried out, against George Dixon Sujynamie, young member of their tribe, who has been sentenced to be hanged at the military reservation near Prescott on October 10 for murder, a number of the members of the Walapai tribe have taken to the mountains in a threat to go on the war path.

Sujynamie is a graduate of the Sherman Indian school at Riverside, Cal., and also attended the Haskell Institute, starring in athletics at both institutions.

LABOR FAKERS AID TAMMANY IN N. Y. ELECTION

Also for Injunction Judge Churchill

By BERT MILLER

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—This is the time for clear thinking on the part of the workers of New York. The election campaign with its conflicting forces pulling in many different directions offers fertile soil for confusion in the minds of those who labor.

On the one hand we are faced with the possibility of the election of Frank Waterman, a millionaire fountain pen manufacturer employing thousands of workers under non-union conditions at starvation wages. Waterman represents the republican party and the large financial interests of the city—the most powerful and aggressive enemies of organised labor. Notwithstanding these facts he will undoubtedly receive the support of such labor leaders as Ryan of the longshoremen, who supported the strikebreaker Coolidge last year.

Labor Reactionaries for Tammany.

Another alternative is the election of "Jimmy" Walker, lawyer for the beef trust and the milk trust. "Jimmy" is the name which is used as a means of giving this representative of big business a proletarian coloring, and in order to serve as a bait for the deluded workers who still follow Tammany Hall. "James" is the proper term for this servile lackey of Wall Street. Walker is now receiving the full support of Tammany's machine in the Central Trades and Labor Council. This machine, headed by Sullivan, is seeking to fasten the claws of the Tammany tiger upon the back of the workers for four more years in return for the rich political plums which will be handed out after election day.

Fakers Sell Out Workers.

Utterly disregarding the interests of labor, they drag the workers ruthlessly, year after year, into the fatal swamp of "non-partisan" political action. They raise the outworn slogan of "Reward your friends (the democrats) and punish your enemies," in spite of the open contempt for the workers displayed at the entire democratic national convention, in spite of the scrapping of the entire program of even welfare legislation by Gov-

OPENING SESSION OF THIRD Y. W. L. CONVENTION ACCEPTS CREDENTIALS; ORGANIZES TO SOLVE PROBLEMS

The third national convention of the Young Workers (Communist) League in its opening session Sunday, at 1902 W. Division St., showed a decisive majority of the delegates to have been elected in support of the former minority of the National Executive Committee. The orientation of the youth convention at its beginning is in favor of the present majority of the Central Executive Committee of the party by a count of 29 to 22. On the vote accepting the report of the majority of the credentials committee the vote was 29 to 20.

Comrade Nat Kaplan, member of the National Executive Committee of the league, in making the report of the majority of the credentials committee, stated that the report took into consideration a deep-going crisis

A. F. OF L. EXECUTIVE COUNCIL LIKE THE BANKERS' ASSOCIATION MAKES ATTACK ON COMMUNISTS

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

CONVENTION HALL, Atlantic City, Oct. 5.—With the echoes of the attacks on Communism by the American Bankers' Association here having scarcely died away, the anti-Communist attack in this convention hall on the "Million Dollar Municipal Pier" of this much advertised seaside resort was taken up anew this afternoon in the submission by the executive council of its report to the 45th annual convention of the American Federation of Labor.

The satisfaction of the bankers in their struggles against the Communists, according to interviews secured by B. C. Forbes, of the Hearst press, developed from reports in their own press concerning action by the British labor party congress on Communist measures. Readers of the DAILY WORKER already know whether they are entitled to any comfort from this source.

No doubt it is because the A. F. of L. regime, as represented in its executive council, is fully aware of the growing strength of the Communists, and their continued success in reaching new masses of workers, that a big section of its annual report to the annual convention appears under the heading, "Warning Against Communist Activities."

Manufacture New Slogan

The slogan of this latest broadside against the militants in the trade unions constitutes the tail end of the chapter. It is, "Caution Saves Serious Mistakes!"

Yet this latest alarum against the Communist is merely a repetition of the form letter issued recently by the Chicago Federation of Labor, which sought to frighten the workers into hostility against such recognized and accepted organizations as the International Labor Defense Council, the American Negro Labor Congress, the Irish Workers' and Peasants' Famine Relief Committee, the International Workers' Aid and the Workers (Communist) Party.

Sample of the A. F. of L. Hysteria

The kind of stuff that goes over among the delegates attending A. F. of L. conventions may well be judged by the conclusions offered, in referring to the above organizations, as follows:

"These choices of field activity are indicative of the methods of the Communists. They seek out those races and groups with grievances and foster discontent in the hope of inciting uprisings and riots."

These sentences brought smiles to the faces of some of the fraternal delegates from foreign countries, notably Great Britain and Germany.

Then followed the usual stereotyped list of agencies thru which the Communists are charged with carrying on their propaganda, concluding with "The DAILY WORKER, a daily newspaper," while the volume of fairy stories published by the DAILY WORKER Publishing company also receives attention.

The report solemnly declared, "We warn all trade unions, against the above activities and publications."

$8,146.52 for Gompers' Funeral

It was six years ago that the American Federation of Labor last met at Atlantic City, the year after the war, and this fact is given notice in the first paragraph of the report. The death of Sam Gompers is held to be the crucial event in the history of the A. F. of L. during the past year. In the financial report the "Funeral Expenses of President Gompers" are put down as $8,146.52 while an added item under expenses is "Estate of Samuel Gompers, $1,274.08."

Another interesting item under finances is the revelation that $40,000,000 of the funds of the A. F. of L. are invested in "Liberty Bonds" of the United States government, with $15,000.00 similarly salted away in the "Victory Bonds" of the Canadian government.

Membership Is 2,878,297

The membership figures for the present year barely top the low figure of last year, the worst since the close of the war. The official chart issued appears in another column showing this year's membership figures to be 2,878,297 as compared to 2,865,799 last year. The high figure was 4,078,740 members in 1920.

Can't Forget Wilson

The executive council's report includes everything from the "Woodrow Wilson Memorial Building Fund" and the "Geneva, Switzerland, Labor Office Room Fund," thru the whole list of jurisdictional disputes, to the final question, "Shall Labor Day lose its distinctive character and become a mere holiday for general meaningless purposes and for the exploitation for private profit?" Which is a confession in itself.

But nowhere does the clear line of the class struggle manifest itself. The Wilson Memorial Building has received $149 from labor up to the time of making the report; while the sum of $1,455 has been raised to furnish a room in the International Labor Office Building at Geneva, Switzerland, the labor ante room to the league of nations, the "black capitalist international."

The attitude on various question contained in its report, and that the executive council will urge before the convention, may be summarized as follows:

Where the A. F. of L. Stands

Company Unions.—We shall first collect data on company unions and then on the basis of this information plan further investigation and how best to secure the co-operation of research agencies to institute helpful inquiries and investigations.

Employers' Insurance.—A number of national and international unions authorized a committee to organize a Union Labor Life Insurance company to be controlled by trade unions.

Employees Ownership.—It is possible that an agency or agencies, controlled and directed by the trade union movement may be developed to gather and supply to the members of organized labor information regarding the value of investment securities.

Labor Banks.—The A. F. of L. is now engaged in making a survey of labor banks.

Union-Management Co-operation.—A demonstration of the practicability and the value of this union function occurs in the Baltimore and Ohio (The "B. & O." Plan) developed in union management co-operation which has passed the experimental stage. The development itself must be carried on in the spirit of an educational undertaking.

Wages.—We urge upon wage earners everywhere that they oppose wage reductions.

Union Label and Organizing Campaign.—Campaign planned.

Organization of Women Wage Workers.—Plan being worked out.

The Strike of Railway Shopmen.—Owes debt of gratitude to strikers on the Pennsylvania and Long Island railroads.

Some Jurisdictional Disputes

Steam Engineers' Extension of Jurisdiction.—Request of the International Union of Steam and Operating Engineers for extension of jurisdiction over marine engineers granted.

Teamsters—Railway Clerks. — No reply from Brotherhood of Railway Clerks as to Teamsters' Union carges that it has violated the decision of the El Paso convention.

Machinists and Blacksmiths vs. Street & Electric Railway Employes. Efforts still being made to reach settlement.

Coopers—Carpenters.—Agree to settle disputes among themselves.

Coal River Collieries Company—Mine Workers.—All charges upheld against the Coal River Collieries company, 70 per cent of the stock of which is owned by members of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers. Miners are justified in demand that Jacksonville scale should be paid.

A. F. of L. Non-partisan Political Campaign.—The executive council believes that as a result of its non-partisan political policy the launching of third party movements has been proved wasted effort and injurious to the desire to elect candidates with favorable records.

And so on ad nauseum, especially in listing a host of bills before congress, which it is claimed the A. F. of L. either carried or defeated. At least that is the impression given. The making of Lincoln's birthday a legal holiday in the District of Columbia is listed as a "bill favorable to labor" that failed to pass.

Other matters touched on are the Panama Canal Zone, child labor, railroad labor legislation, with an especial attack on the railroad labor board, injunction abuses, legal information bureau, education, the labor press, labor's memorial Sunday, labor Sunday and Labor Day.

Its International Relations.

Discussion of international relations is confined to the Pan-American Federation of Labor, and China. There is no mention of either the Amsterdam or the Red Trade Union Internationals.

There is no mention of the question of world trade union unity, recognition of the Union of Soviet Republics or similar subjects that engage the attention of the workers in other countries.

French and Belgians Extol Russ Prisons

MOSCOW, Oct. 5.—(Tass)—Having visited prisons in Moscow the Franco-Belgian Workers' Delegation declared as follows: "The Franco-Belgian Delegation is pleased to note that the regime of convicts here ought to be taken as an example for all other countries because Moscow prisons under the guidance of Governors and administration have only one purpose: to teach convicts to work and change them into men capable of collective social intercourse. (Signed) Toledo, Roget, Campion, Chapoin and others."

GERMANY SIGNS PACT FOR TRADE WITH THE WORKERS' REPUBLIC

BERLIN, Oct. 5—The German cabinet has agreed to sign a trade treaty with Russia as soon as it is placed in final form by economic experts. This was the one tangible result of Soviet Foreign Minister Georges Tchitcherin's visit to Berlin.

The treaty will be the most complete any nation has yet signed with Soviet Russia. Various paragraphs of its text deal with the right to settle economic problems, navigation and railroad affairs, taxes, protection for trade, arbitration, and consular matters. A German delegation, headed by an economic expert, Herr von Kerner, will leave immediately for Moscow to complete the treaty.

GERMAN LABOR FAKERS VISITING A. F. OF L. MEET

certainly set forth the views of the whole delegation.

"The Dawes plan is good," he said. "It is helping to bring peace to Europe. Germany will be able to meet its terms for five or six years."

"And after that?" I asked.

"After that nobody knows. Not even Dawes himself knows what will happen," he answered.

"Nor Morgan."

"Not even Morgan."

When asked to explain why the British workers were opposed to the Dawes plan now more than ever, he declared that this was due to the growing army of unemployed in that country. The British blamed the jobless crisis on the Dawes plan, but Great Britain seemed to Heinig to be a country far away, with which German social-democrats were not much concerned. And anyway, the Dawes plan was only one of these contributing causes to British unemployment.

Peace, Blessed Peace—Between Classes

And the security pact that is now up for discussion at Locarno, Switzerland. The delegation is in favor of it, because, it, too, will help bring "peace" to Europe, to quiet the storm stirred up by the war. Anything that tends in this direction is looked on with favor by these German socialists.

Heinig declared the German social-democrats to be opposed to the Franco-British proposal, however, that the armies of the league of nations be allowed to cross Germany to the eastwards, to bolster Poland and the Baltic states in the looming war against the workers' republic. But this opposition does not grow out of any sociall-democratic desire to protect the Soviet Union. Heinig stated the reasons when he said, "We can't have French armies on German territory," betraying the vaterland brand of German socialists.

In fact Heinig held to the view point that the Soviet union would be the aggressor in the East against the capitalist nations, instead of exactly the contrary. This anti-Soviet attitude came out more clearly in the discussion of the German delegation's visit to Russia. Heinig declared this trip to be a "Communist swindle," but what irked him most was the fact that this delegation, going to the workers' republics, was made up entirely of "unknown workers," from the shops, and not well known trade union officials like the make-up of the present delegation to the United States. This formed the basis largely of his attempt to belittle their trip and their report which was favorable to Soviet rule without exception. Heinig, of course, admitted that he had never been inside the Soviet Union.

The delegation expects to remain here only until Wednesday. Then it will break up and scatter to different sections of the country. Edward A. Wieck of the Illinois coal miners has had the direction or the delegation up to this time. He will have charge of the miners' delegation when it leaves here.

John Hays Hammond Pleads for Scabs to Break Coal Strike

NEW YORK.—(FP)—Lowering the standards for anthracite miners is the proposal to Pennsylvania given by John Hays Hammond, chairman of the former United States Coal Commission. Hammond outlined his plan to the industrial relations section, National Civic Federation, suggesting that an extra session of the Pennsylvania legislature could repeal the state law requiring a worker to serve two years as helper to contract miners before becoming qualified as a miner himself.

Proposes Scabs.

Hammond asserts that the law and complete unionization of anthracite mines gives the United Mine Workers virtual monopoly over hard coal mining labor. He charges that competent bituminous miners are excluded from anthracite fields because of the law, which he declares is "discriminatory, and indefensible." Hammond thinks that there are bituminous miners eager to take up strike-breaking in Pennsylvania anthracite fields if the state law would give them a chance.

China Discussed.

"Dear Comrades,

"The present happenings in China were thoroly discussed by our Executive Committee at its meeting on the 17th and 18th of August, and due consideration was given as to whether an international relief action could be organised.

"We need not emphasize that the International Federation of Trade Unions takes the greatest interest in the development of affairs in China, and that it rejoices to see that the Chinese workers are becoming conscious of their rights as men, and are taking up the struggle against their oppressors. It trusts that the Chinese workers, by building up a strong trade union movement and by carrying on an unceasing conflict thru this means, may be able to obtain an improvement in their wretched position. We wish the Chinese working class every success in their endeavors.

We Give Sympathy.

"The International Federation of Trade Unions will always be very pleased to support the Chinese workers in this struggle. At the moment, however, it is unable to help financially by undertaking an international relief action—partly because the uncertainty as to conditions in China, partly because of the economic condition in the countries affiliated to the International Federation of Trade Unions.

"We hope, however, that it may be possible for us, now and in the future, to be of service to the Chinese workers in other ways, and hope therefore to have further news from you.

"With cordial wishes for the success of the Chinese trade union movement," etc.

The wording of this letter is that of the Amsterdam translation.

Refusal After Investigation.

This letter of the International Federation of Trade Unions came after the sectrariat of that body had sent a letter to China to find out whether the conditions described by the Workers' International Relief were correct. The answer they received from China showed that the conditions were much worse than even the Workers' International Relief had portrayed.

Upon receiving this letter from the Amsterdam International copies of their answer to a call for relief of Chinese workers were sent to all newspapers in the country. The Rote Fahne, Communist organ, attacked the tactics of the International Federation of Trade Unions in an article headed: No Farthing For Relief—but Fraternal Greetings. Organize the Relief For China."

The Vorwarts immediately made the charge that the letter was false which necessitated the photographing of the letter and publishing all the documentary evidence which the Workers International Relief had on hand in the German press.

Rally Around W. I. R.!

The contents of this letter show to the workers of the Far East that there is only one relief organization that is intending to aid the workers of China in their struggle and that is the Workers' International Relief.

Communists Get the Am. Legion Panicky

OMAHA, Neb., October 5.—"Communism is increasing rapidly in the United States and is promoting propaganda that will fast undermine the nation if drastic steps are not taken to prevent it," declared the American Legion Americanization commission meeting of the national American Legion. It was estimated that there are not less then 1,000,000 Communists in the U. S. and that the movement is being fostered thru the medium of the youth and the Negroes.

Greater Mergers Mean More Militant Battles For the Working Class

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, new mergers in the food industries mean new increases in the cost of living, new and greater attacks on the workers' standard of living in these industries, with all the resulting savings in economies of management going as ever in profits to the parasite stockholders.

This is especially true of the acquisition by the Ward Baking Co. of the General Baking Co., creating the greater bread trust, with its sugar refineres, flour mills, dairy companies and bakeries in all sections of the country. The sales of the two corporations now approximate $100,000,000 annually.

The Ward corporation has won its present victory over its competitors thru years of clever dealing. It has successfully overcome local prejudices in all those centers that it has invaded. This same shrewdness, born of an attempt to anticipate and overcome public opposition, is revealed in the fact that bread prices were lowered on the eve of the announcement of this new merger. Thus the public is led to believe that monopoly means cheaper bread, whereas, in fact, cheaper prices merely operate as a weapon to kill off small competitors, making the raising of prices in the not distant future an easier task.

The Ward corporation is an "open shop" concern. Its bread factories in Chicago were at first unionized, but the bakers' union has since been ousted, with the plants now operating on an anti-union basis. This will be the policy of the merger.

The value of Ward and General Baking shares have gone up on the stock market, and the only explanation is that thru the merger many savings will be effected that will result in growing profits. No mention, of course, is made of higher prices later on, according to the well-known business principle of "all the traffic will bear."

• • • •

Similar developments are revealed in the acquisition of the Liberty Yeast Co., by the Fleischman corporation, and of the merging of 27 canneries operating in the southeastern Alaska territory, where the fish trust, with the aid of Secretary of Commerce Hoover has been steadily building its power, while the workers in its employ suffer the worst exploitation.

• • • •

Just the other day another shipment of newsprint paper was received by the DAILY WORKER from the Spanish River Pulp and Paper Mills, Ltd., that has three mills in Canada, where much of the newsprint used in the United States comes from. Now comes the news, however, that this company is to be swallowed by the Abitibi Power and Paper Co., Ltd., along with another paper concern. Over in New England, similar consolidations are taking place.

When the first stages of such mergers were being perfected a quarter of a century ago, under the direction of the great Wall Street bankers, including the elder J. Pierpont Morgan, there was a great noise in Washington. "Teddy" Roosevelt in the white house at Washington was just beginning to warm up as a trust buster, while the Sherman anti-trust law was being brought into action.

Today, however, all is quiet in Washington. The Coolidge administration looks with approving eyes on these business consolidations, the state legislatures are quiescent, the interstate commerce commission lends a helping hand and the courts have nothing to say. The era of greater consolidations develops unchallenged.

Not even from the camp of organized labor, the annual convention of the American Federation of Labor, does there go forth a challenge, declaring for militant struggles for the organization of the workers in these industries. Against the amalgamation of dollars, there is no counter move for the amalgamation of workers' organizations, in order that they may be the better able to carry on the struggle.

The official labor regime leaves it to the workers themselves, in most cases completely unorganized, to develop these struggles. This they will be forced to do for their own protection, or face a gradually lowering standard of living.

REGISTER NOW TO VOTE FOR WORKERS PARTY CANDIDATES

REGISTRATION week begins in New York City October 5. Polling places will be open daily Oct. 5, 6, 7, 8 and 9 from 5 p. m. to 10:30 p. m. and on Saturday, October 10, from 7 a. m. to 10:30 p. m. for the registration of voters.

All voters must register to be able to vote. No one can vote unless they register.

Register early. Don't wait for the last day.

THOSE ELIGIBLE TO REGISTER AND VOTE

All citizens by birth or naturalization of 21 years and over, who have resided for 4 months and will be in the election district 30 days on election day (November 3).

HOW TO REGISTER

Go to the nearest polling place to the place where you live and inquire if that is the poll for the election district in which you reside. Give your name and address to the election inspector, who will write it in register. You will then sign your name to the book. The clerk will give you an enrollment blank, on which are the emblems of the three official parties. But one does not have to enroll. The only thing the enrollment means, is, to have a right to vote at the primaries. But since our party did not poll sufficient votes at the last election the primaries do not affect us, because we are not on the ballot as a regular party, but as an "independent political nomination" by petition.

Those who do not enroll, leave the slip blank, fold it and hand it to the clerk who will place it in the ballot box.

Don't fail to register on any one of the registration days. First voters must also have a certificate of literacy.

many fears a Russo-Pole agreement as much as Great Britain and France.

Depends on Germany.

The danger of a western accord against the workers' union hangs ominously over the Locarno conference and represents the beginning of a concerted attack on the Soviet Union.

LOCARNO, Switzerland, Oct. 5.—Friendly gestures, indicating that Germany is on an equal footing with the allies in the negotiation of a security pact, were made today at the formal opening of the security pact conference here.

Austen Chamberlain, British foreign minister, proposed that there should not be any formal presidency of the conference.

"We should meet on a footing of perfect equality," said Chamberlain.

This move was understood to have been taken because German delegates feared that M. Briand might be made the president and dominate the conference.

"I am most favorably impressed," said M. Briand, French foreign minister, after the first session of the conference, when asked to comment on the trend of the negotiations.

The jurists will meet this afternoon, when it is expected that the work of drafting a proposed pact will be undertaken.

RED INTERNATIONAL OF LABOR UNIONS

(R. I. L. U.)

THE T. U. E. L.

Represents the Left Wing of the Labor Movement. Its Purpose is to Strengthen the Labor Unions by Amalgamation of Existing Unions, Organization of the Unorganized, and by Replacing Reactionary and Class Collaboration Policies with a Unified Program for the Transformation of the Unions into Organs of Revolutionary Class Struggle for the Overthrowal of Capitalism and the Establishment of a Workers' and Farmers' Government.

A. F. OF L. FAKER WHO LOST HIS PIE-CARD CALLS UPON ALL HIS FELLOW FAKERS TO HELP HIM GET IT BACK

Heated discussion developed in the headquarters of the T. U. E. L. when the following circular letter was discovered in the mail. The discussion arose over whether it was the funniest, or only one of the funniest things run across in a long time. Then the debate shifted as to whether or not a relief committee should be organized for the downtrodden and oppressed labor fakers, thrown out on to a cold, cruel world by heartless open shop bosses in the executive council of the American Federation of Labor whose specialty is grinding the faces of the poor organizers who were left behind when Sammy died. Here it is:

EMMET T. FLOOD.

[illegible] N. Francisco Ave., Chicago, Ill.

To the Delegates Assembled at the Atlantic City Convention of the American Federation of Labor, to You I Appeal for Economic and Social Justice.

On January the first, nineteen hundred and three, I received a written request from the late President Samuel Gompers to meet him in conference at Washington, D. C.

On my arrival there, he advised me that the executive council had decided to appoint me as one of their general organizers, a position which I accepted.

For twenty two and a half of the best years of my life I have given to the toiling masses of America, almost from the beginning I have received letters of praise for my efforts and success from the late President Gompers and Secretary Morrison, and in almost every letter I have received from President Green during his short term in office he has favorably commented on my work as ageneral organizer. I think my ability to serve in that capacity is well known to the labor movement in America.

A Slave to an Ideal.

The late President Gompers and Secretary Morrison were both aware of the fact that I had several positions offered to me at an increased salary over that paid by the Federation, but the American Federation of Labor was an ideal to me and I had a desire to remain in the service as long as health would permit.

On June 23rd, 1925, I received a letter from President Green in which he stated in "His Exalted Position" he had decided to discharge all the organizers of the A. F. of L. and made a stipulation that any organizer who wanted his job back must make an individual application.

Lockout—And Boycott, Too!

On August 5th, Mr. Green again wrote me and informed me that as far as I was concerned the lockout was permanent, so I am not only being locked out but I am being boycotted from ever obtaining a position at a trade that I have served it for nearly twenty three years. I understand that six of the oldest and most efficient organizers of the A. F. of L. have suffered the same fate.

By Mr. Green's actions he has established a lockout for the employes on the A. F. of L., created an open shop, put into effect the boycott abolished seniority rights and abolished any possibility for old age pension for faithful workers in the service of the A. F. of L. and has violated every principal of the trade union movement.

My discharge from the official staff of the A. F. of L. comes at a time when six of my eleven children are of school age and are in absolute need of my assistance and my home is mortgaged for all that it can stand, furthermore, you are aware of the fact that the salary of the organizers never was large enough to lay away sufficient funds to take care of a situation in which I now find myself.

Discovered—A Constitution.

I am very familiar with the constitution of the A. F. of L. and in no part of it does it give the president the right to do the thing which is complained of in this letter.

I ask that you use your efforts as a delegate to the Atlantic city convention, so that this convention may take some action to redress this serious and unjustifiable wrong afflicted on the old and faithful organizers of the American Federation of Labor.

With best wishes, I remain, sincerely and fraternally yours,

HOTEL WORKERS, ORGANIZE YOUR RANKS TO FIGHT!

N. Y. Amalgamated Union Invites You

By JOSEPH MARES

(Progressive Committee, Amalgamated Food Workers)

NEW YORK CITY—The time is ripe, and the moment has come to wake up. The bosses see our weakness and fear of their weapons and begin to enslave us more day by day. The hours of work increase daily, and the wages and day off decrease everywhere. Our duty is to rally our forces and, instead of weakening we must present a strong front and fight back with more strength and courage than ever.

The field is open to every one, and the army of hotel workers is increasing rapidly; don't remain behind and wait until the last moment, because it may be too late, and all the probabilities which we have today for a sure victory may turn against us, thanks to your lack of activity.

We have all the aces in the deck, which means to say that the game is ours if we stick together and attack our oppressors without fear with the amount of courage required. Do not forget this, we are going to beat them with their own weapons because we feel sure of this method, which by experience in other parts, brought us many victories.

Do not complain about your conditions, because they are the ones you make by your own negligence. Organize, be a man and show the bosses that you still live and think about having human and decent conditions.

Two years ago, one of our comrades fell dead in the dining room of one of the biggest hotels in this city from overwork and bad food. But the management of the hotel, trying to avoid the trouble which might have come to them, instead of sending him home, sent him to the hospital, and managed to state that he died in the same of some disease of the lungs.

This was untrue. When the man fell in the middle of the dining room, he died instantly of a cardiac attack, which was caused by the paralysis of the heart by excitement or over work.

Unfortunately, most of the people who frequent the hotel and restaurants, take the waiters for dumbells (in the instance of being unorganized, they are correct) but people ignore the fact that among the waiters there are a lot of boys, who devote the few hours they have off in studying how they will be able to emancipate their class.

So don't let the skunks and supporters of the boss, bluff you, and don't fail to answer to the appeal of those who fight in the rank of the unions for decent human conditions, and come to the union, the only place where you can find relief. The hotel Workers' Branch is at 133 West 51st St., New York City.

The union's fight against open shops continues with success. Six shops recently signed for union conditions.

EXPULSIONS NOW WITHOUT A SIGN OF JUSTIFICATION

Trade Union Communists Have No Rights

By J. L. COOPER

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—On July 20, Brother E. Steinberger, a member of the Bookkeepers, and Stenographer Union, Local 12646, brot up charges against me accusing me that my "conduct at the regular meeting of the union was unbecoming members of this union."

The specific points of the charges read as follow:

1. "At this meeting the trial committee elected at the June meeting in the case of George Primoff on the charges of being a member of the Workers Party, a Communist organization and a member of the Trade Union Educational League, reported finding the defendent guilty.

2. "Chernow and J. L. Cooper as members of the trial committee submitted a minority report, exonerating Primoff and demanding a dismissal of the charges."

All Opposition A "Crime"

So my first offense was, that I submitted a minority report in Primoff's case and the second crime I committed was, that I tried to exonerate Primoff and demanded to dismiss his trial. Probably it would not surprise me, if these charges were brought by a Tammany Hall man or a republican, who never pretended to be a friend of the workers and who by the nature of his party had to prosecute any member that looked like a "red" by his active participation in the union. But the charges were brout by a socialist, "who was ready to give his life for the labor movement" (as long as it serves his purpose) and the verdict was supported by socialists.

The trial committee decided that to submit a minority report is not a crime and I should not be expelled on this charges. Neither could Steinberger prove that I acted as an attorney for Primoff though I did try to exonerate Primoff on the basis that he was not given a fair trial.

A "Fair Trial" Another Crime

My demand for a fair trial in the case of a Communists was considered by our brothers—socialists a terrible crime. But they coult not expell on such charges so they changed the nature of the case and expelled me because I am a member of the Workers Party of America.

At the membership meeting of the union I quoted the Workers Party resolution on our work in the trade union, the resolutions of the 5th congress of the Comintern in which it is stated clearly that the Communists must build the unions, they must strenghten them and work for amalgamation and organize the unorganized.

Innocent—But Guilty Anyhow

It is true I admitted that I am a member of the W. P. of A. and confessed that I am proud of it, because the Communists are the only ones who sincerely and energetically work in the union for the benefit of the workers. I brought in facts by which I proved that while I, a Communist, tried my best to support any organizational plan in the union, the accuser Steinberger and some other brothers of his type hampered the work, they fought against any plan that would really be usefull for the union. My witness, the president of the union openly declared that up to Primoff's trial I was one of the best union members. The only crime I committed is that I defended a Communist.

None of the socialist stars of the union could give any argument to disapprove my statement in regards to the role of the Workers Party in the labor movement, none of them dared to deny the president's admission that I was one of the best unionists. Very few participated in the voting, because they could not expel me, but were afraid to vote against the decision, because that would mean a new trial and another month would be lost.

The Bookkeepers' Union leaders proved how much they care for their union and where they could put any one who will dare to be active and question their ability

Butte Labor Unions Think Single Girls Should Have the Jobs

BUTTE, Mont., Oct. 5.—The Silver Bow (Butte) trades and labor council recommends to all local unions that they follow the example of the Butte clerks' union and bar married women from membership.

The recommendation is supposed to be an answer to the practice of many Butte firms of giving job preference to married women, making it harder for girls and single women to get employment. In some cases man and wife are given jobs by the same house. The council takes the position that when there are not enuf decent jobs to go around the girls that have no provider should get the first chance.

Compare British Unions To the A. F. of L. Meet

WHILE the highest councils of labor union reaction are meeting in the convention of the American Federation of Labor at Atlantic City, it will be a good comparison for American workers to read an account from the Sunday Worker of London, England, of the end of the first day's session of the British Trades Union Congress at Scarborough on September 7. The account is as follows:

THE day ended with a big fight on a most important resolution on the aims of trade unionism. By many delegates this was considered as an open challenge to the policy of Mr. J. H. Thomas, E. Joseph (Tailors and Garment Makers) moved:—

That this congress declares that the trade union movement must organize to prepare the trade unions in conjunction with the party of the workers to struggle for the overthrow of capitalism.

At the same time congress warns the workers against all attempts to introduce capitalist schemes of copartnership, which in the past have failed to give the workers any positive rights, but instead have usually served as fetters retarding the forword movements.

Congress further considers that strong, well-organized shop committees are indispensable weapons in the struggle to force the capitalists to relinquish their grip on industry, and therefore pledges itself to do all in its power to develop and strengthen workshop organization.

THE mover argued that the resolution was of a revolutionary nature. Better conditions could not be secured within capitalism. The congress was being asked to declare that the aim of trade unionism was the destruction of capitalism.

Harry Pollitt (secretary of National Minority Movement) seconded, and declared that—

Any attempt to secure better wages and conditions nowadays immediately became a revolutionary fight in which unions were faced with the political struggles. When capitalism had been overthrown the conditions of life would depend greatly upon the trade unions, and these committees would do much to fit them for their duties.

THEY would see from the report of the negotiations with the Russian trade unions that the general council had agreed in other language with what the first paragraph of the resolution stood for.

The second paragraph was aimed at those who, as the president had said, were now trying to effect collaboration with the employers now that capitalism was in a bad way.

The third paragraph contained the only solution for the difficulties of reorganization which they had been discussing. They should now begin to organize for the control of production.

MR. SEXTON (Dockers) replied to Pollitt, and said the resolution was thinly-veiled Communism.

Frank Lemaire (Compositors) and Annie Loughlin (Garment Makers) spoke in favor of the resolution, which was carried by 2,466,000 votes to 1,218,000.

HOWAT'S LOCAL MINERS' UNION RAISES PROTEST

Also Calls for Trade Union Unity

MULBERRY, Kansas, Oct. 5.—The Kansas miners are among the most militant workers in America, and one of the best locals in this respect is that to which the old fighter for the miners, Alexander Howat, belongs. The following is a resolution passed by Howat's local in protest at the barring of Shapurji Saklatvala from the United States:

We Protest

"We the members of Local 2397 U. M. W. of A. Mulberry, Kans., in meeting assembled, protest the nefarious act of Secretary of State Kellogg in debarring Shapurji Saklatvala, champion of the freedom of India from the grip of imperialism and a representative of militant labor in the parliament of Great Britain, from landing in the United States of America.

"This but demonstrates, that the imperialists of the world are one when it comes to an attack on labor. It is our opinion that this act, at this time, is but a forerunner of a wholesale debarring of progressive labor leaders, not alone from America, but from all imperialist nations.

Call on Other Locals to Act

"We call upon our fellow miners in every local union to join us and the millions of other workers in this protest. It is high time that American labor assert itself and answer the call of our brothers, in other lands, for unity. This debarring of Saklatvala is but an addition to the open shop drive to crush organized labor and stop its forward march toward international brotherhood. It is a timely warning and a test by the imperialists to see how far they can go, in the open, against those who dare champion our cause.

District 14 Takes Lead

"In making this protest we are sure that we speak for more than our own local, of District 14. It was here that men and women struck, marched and went to jail against the outrageous industrial court law. It was here that one of the guns of the exploiters was spiked.

"We say to our brother workers everywhere that District 14 shall never stand by and allow outrages at home or abroad to be perpetrated against labor. The cause of Saklatvala is our cause. The freedom of all oppressed people is our mission as well as his and we pledge ourselves at all times to this end that all the chains of slavery shall be broken and all the workers of the world shall be free.

"Signed,

Alexander Howat
L. H. Maxwell
Joe Bierbrodt
S. T. Wakefield."

Health Head Hangs Self When Workers Can't Get Increase

BOSTON, Oct. 5.—Worried at the state's refusal to grant wage increases to his subordinates in the public health department, Dr. Eugene R. Kelley, state commissioner of public health hung himself in the attic of his home.

Glove Workers Organize.

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—The first glove workers' union in New York City is being organized. Canvas and jersey gloves are made by the firm with which the union is signing a closed shop agreement. A 44-hour week, increased wages, roomier workrooms with more light and air and electric fans and 10-minute rest periods in the morning and afternoon are the improved conditions won by the union workers. Gloves made by the union workers will bear the union label.

Sweatshop Probes Reveal Violation of Labor Statutes

GARFIELD, N. J., Oct. 5.—Sweatshops where minors are improperly employed in clothing manufacture were investigated by truant officers in Garfield.

Nine children in one shop told the officers that they worked from 8½ to 9½ hours daily without work papers. They said they attended continuation school.

Minors are not supposed to be employed over eight hours daily.

AN AGREEMENT TO GET BASIS FOR NEW FIGHT

Green "Settles" Craft Squabble as Usual

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Oct. 5.—President William Green of the American Federation of Labor announced that an agreement had been reached in the jurisdictional dispute between the Bricklayers' and Plasterers' Unions, which has tied up $250,000,000 in construction thruout the country.

The agreement which was signed by the officers of the unions and Mr. Green, provides that hostilities shall cease immediately and that all work shall be resumed at once. A number of points at issue will be submitted to a tribunal, whose decisions are supposed to be accepted by both unions, but which will only be grounds for a new squabble.

Both parties agreed to the reestablishment of the 1911 agreement, which had been abrogated. A meeting of the two executive boards will be held at the earliest possible date to create the tribunal which will adjudicate the disputed issue.

RAILWAY MEN TO VOTE ON STRIKE FOR WAGE RAISE

Insist on 5 Pct. Granted by Rail Board

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—Locomotive engineers and firemen on the Western Maryland Railroad, from Baltimore to Cumberland, are taking a strike vote, due to the fact that the company has for the fifth time refused to pay the 5 per cent wage increase authorized by the railroad labor board and paid by all other Class 1 roads.

Reports are that a large majority are voting to quit work.

Meanwhile the Western Maryland has published advertisements calling for strikebreakers, stating that it understands the strike vote is in progress. It suggests that "Only men who desire permanent positions need apply."—thus threatening the same permanent blacklist against striking engineers and firemen that it has maintained against the thousands of shopmen who struck two years ago. The company turned its shop work over to contractors, and it former shopmen were not re-employed, because they refused to accept the contract scheme which permitted the company to evade payment of shop wages fixed by the rail labor board.

ATLANTIC CITY, Oct. 4— Settlement of the jurisdictional dispute between Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers' International Union and the Operative Plasterers' International Association seemed probable after conferences held by the union heads and the president of the American Federation of Labor.

MAINTENANCE OF WAY UNION TAKES BACKWARD STEPS

Adopts "B. & O. Plan"; Kills Amalgamation

DETROIT, Mich. Oct. 5.—Complete surrender to the railroad companies' attempt to make labor unions into company unions is the essence of the action of the United Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employes triennial convention just ended here. The union by resolution makes an offer for class collaboration with the railroad management.

The resolution specified approvingly as an example the infamous "B. and O. plan" which is destroying the shopmen's unions and which is one of the leading issues upon which Wm. H. Johnston (B. and O. Bill) of the International Association of Machinists was repudiated by the I. A. M. membership in the recent election—although Johnston still clings to office by having stolen the election.

Another resolution, which indicates the reactionary policy of the union leaders was a condemnation of "Communism as we understand Communism." This went along with a report showing a tragic loss of membership—and a proposal to build a 14 story building in Detroit where the union owns considerable values in real estate.

Amalgamation and other progressive measures seem to have been completely lost, in the welter of class collaboration resolutions and speeches, though the Maintenance of Waymen's Union was one of the first large unions to endorse amalgamation for the railway industry.

F. H. Fljozdal will be president for another three years. E. E. Milliman was re-elected international secretary-treasurer. Canada has two men on the executive board, W. V. Turnbull of Montreal and E. J. Turnbull of Toronto. The other vice-presidents and C. E. Crook of Detroit, A. F. Stout of Chicago, T. C. Carroll of Covington, Ky., and H. Hemenway of Detroit. Other executive board members are W. O. Beaver of Denver, F. M. Sillik, Ames, Iowa, John F. Towle of Roxbury, Mass., and George H. Davis of Covington, Ky.

Misfortune Pursues Miners in Perfectly "Safe" Scab Mines

By REGINA MYROSKI

MOUNDSVILLE, W. Va., Oct. 5.—Last week two miners died as the result of injuries sustained while scabbing for two of the local mines. Gus Moore of Bellaire, Ohio was killed instantly under the fall of a stone at the Parrs Run Mine, this city, while John Halesky of Glendale, W. Va., only 19 years old, was injured at the Hitchman Mine, McMechen, W. Va. One of his legs was amputated in an effort to save his life, but in vain.

The two above accidents of course were due to the extremely safe conditions of most of the scab mines in northern West Virginia. Although the death of these two miners has caused great sorrow at their homes it cannot be said that such is the effect on those owing and operating the mines. What care the capitalists for the death of two of their unprotesting slaves so long as it does not affect their pocketbooks and does not detract from their profits?

MEXICAN LABOR ATTACHE VISITS SOVIET MILLS

Textile Industry Is Given His O. K.

It is known that the Calles government of Mexico, in exchange for the political support of the leaders of the Regional Confederation of Labor of Mexico (C. R. O. M.) in practically turning over the Mexican masses as subjects to Wall Street imperialism, agreed to give the "Mexican Gompers" (Luis N. Morones) a cabinet position and to appoint, along with every minister to foreign nations, a "labor attache."

This institution is about the most malodorous incident of class "harmony" we know of and we are not certain what qualifications one must have to be a "labor attache" of a Mexican minister, but if we don't miss our guess, the writer of the following article, who is "labor attache" to the Mexican minister at Moscow, is liable to be recalled if he keeps up writing as follows:

"MOSCOW, August 19, 1925—Thanks to comrades of the Textile Workers' Union, I obtained an opportunity to visit some textile mills in Moscow and district.

"I looked over the 'Kalinin Mill,' producing woolen fabrics lying some distance southeast of the Red capital. I saw the first model dye works and cotton spinning mill employing over 3,000 men and women, which lies to the east of the city.

"I visited a lace factory on the other side of the Moskva river to the south west of Moscow. I likewise saw the biggest mill, the 'Dyedo-Guchkovsky,' thaity versts out. The technical equipment of the mills is in every sense of the word up-to-date; the most of the machinery is British.

"Despite my having visited, comparatively speaking, only a few Russian mills, I have obtained a certain definite impression as to the intensive growth of the textile industry which is, nevertheless, not yet in a position to satisfy all the demands of the Russian market. At the moment a considerable amount of piece goods are still being imported from abroad.

"The hygenic and sanitary conditions, the running of the works, protection of labor, the whole spirit reigning in the Soviet mills, are such as can only cause the workers in other countries to envy the lot of the employes in them.

"Wages are calculated in accordance with prevailing market prices and completely answer to the needs of the textile worker.

"Women enjoy the same rates with the man for the same work, while there are, furthermore, special labor protection regulations applying to them.

"With regard to the labor of young workers, I may say that in not one of the mills I visited did I see either boys or girls under sixteen years of age. Such a state of affairs naturally serves as an excellent means of preventing the worker from exhausting his physical powers by undertaking work at too early an age.

"The trade union representatives work in close contact with the mill management which is appointed by the competent organs of the Soviet government.

"The peaceful working together of these two factors in industry is the best refutation of the view prevalent in capitalist countries that if trade and industry are to flourish, there must be no interference on the part of the trade unions in questions connected with factory administration.

"I consider the following as the two most essential gains won by the unions: Direct participation of the unions in administration, and prohibition of child labor under 16.

"I am thoroughly convinced that the Soviet workers will continue to march along the road they have already set out on, while serving as a constant example to their fellow workers of the whole world. (Signed) M. Martinez, Delegate of the Regional Confederation of Mexico."

It might be said in addition that the Textile Workers Industrial Union of Russia has 621,000 members, which strength—when reached by the American "split-to-pieces and killed-one-at-a-time" textile "unions," may entitle McMahon and the other fakers to open their traps about Soviet Russia and its labor unions.

DETROIT MEMBERSHIP MEETING UNANIMOUSLY ENDORSES DECISION OF COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL

DETROIT, Oct. 5.—The Detroit meeting, held Sunday, Sept. 27, to discuss the Bolshevization and reorganization of the party on the basis of shop nuclei, 286 members being present, passed the following resolution unanimously:

"The Detroit membership meeting accepts the report of the representative of the Central Executive Committee on Bolshevization and reorganization and promises to give united support to the Central Executive Committee in this campaign and in the general party work.

"We give our full confidence to the Central Executive Committee in the spirit of the decision of the Communist International received during the convention regarding the party leadership.

"The decision of the Communist International which is the basis upon which the new Central Executive Committee was unanimously elected puts an end to all legitimate further controversy.

"We declare our earnest intention to vigorously support the Central Executive Committee in its efforts to carry out the many tasks ahead of us and to support with equal energy the policies laid down for our party by the national convention.

"Resolved: That we accept and endorse fully the decision of the Communist International and all the actions of the convention. We endorse the expulsion of Lore from the party and the removal of Askeli from the editorship of Tyomies and pledge our fullest co-operation in the struggle against the right wing within our party. We greet the determined attitude taken by the convention on the Bolshevization of our party and the recognition by the convention that the reorganiaztion of our party on a shop nuclei basis is a real advancement of our party towards Communist maturity.

"We pledge the Central Executive Committee our fullest support and co-operation in carrying out all decisions."

In the discussion of the resolution, four of the members present spoke against its adoption. These speakers argued that an appeal was being taken against the decision of the Communist International in the belief that the Communist International had acted upon misinformation; and that as supporters of the appeal they would be unwilling to vote an endorsement of the decision of the Communist International, altho they were willing to accept it and carry it out.

The representative of the Central Executive Committee, Comrade Minor, in closing the debate, declared that a part of the process of Bolshevization consists in bringing about a condition in the party under which no one would be willing to propagate the idea that the Communist International acts upon misinformation. The propagation in the party of the idea that the Communist International acts upon misinformation, said Minor, leads inevitably to the conclusion in the minds of members that the Communist International acts in an irresponsible way, that the Communist International cannot be depended upon by the American section for guidance. He commented that the minutes of the session of the presidium of the Comintern Executive of about a year and a half ago, showed that Comrade Zinoviev at that time forecasted the coming inevitable exit of Lore from the party, for Lore was beginning his propaganda with the claim that the Communist International acts in American affairs upon misinformation, that the Comintern leaders do not understand American conditions. Minor asked the membership not to take the position that the Comintern "acted upon misinformation," but to believe that the Comintern has acted in a responsible manner as the most reliable guide for the revolutionary workers in America and in all other countries of the world.

The vote thereupon being taken, all present voted for the Central Executive Committee resolution and the chairman, Comrade Edgar Owens, declared the decision to be unanimous.

Problems of the Reorganization of Our Party

By H. PURO,
Editor of the Eteenpain.

Reorganization of our Party along the lines of shop nuclei and street nuclei (international branches) is one of the biggest tasks that our Party has ever had.

Undoubtedly we will face many difficulties before this work is accomplished. But we simply must have one solid unified Party in this country in order that we may be able to conduct the class struggle of the American working class and in order that we may ,in the near future have the working class conquer the economic and political power.

We can no longer tolerate the present federation and geographical basis of our Party. This very form of organization offers fertile soil for different views and different kinds of actions in the Party matters and places different sections of the Party membership too far away from Party life. Our Party, in the present organizational form, is too loose for functioning as an effective apparatus. In order that it may be able to conduct the class struggle, it must be centralized so that the membership may be quickly mobilized for every occasion.

Now then, the question arises; how can we best realize our reorganization plan? In the language sections of our Party there are more difficulties than in those sections where the whole membership is English speaking. Especially in some large sections like the Finnish Federation, where there are some branches as large as from 200 to 400 and even 600 members, consisting of workers of many trades and occupations and large numbers of housewives and servant girls. In these branches reorganization presents the most difficult problems and cannot easily be carried out. In the big branches reorganization is so much more difficult, because in them there are always elements who are more nominally members than really active ones.

We find in the large branches many theoretically backward members, who have become members of our Party rather to express their sympathy thereby and in order that they may have the benefit of the social and cultural life, which these branches offer them. In these branches, if we will not find some special ways and means to deal with them, we may lose most of our present members. In any case we lose some of our present membership, but we may be able to save them for our sympathetic organizations (Workers Clubs) and later win many of them back to the Party.

Also in many of the small towns and agricultural communities, there is only a Finnish Branch. There, also, the process of reorganization meets with difficulties. However, even in these places new organization form, even if branch can be only nominally turned into international branch, but really remains Finnish branch, they will become directly connected to the Party and therefore closer to it. In many instances these branches will be broken up into several shop nuclei and street nuclei.

In many localities the membership of the branches is so divided in their industries, that they can at first only be organized in the international branches. Even this will be a great step forward from the present language form of organization and can later, when conditions change, be easily transformed into shop nuclei. Of course the language difficulty is a big problem in the functioning of members in these international branches. But a great bulk of Federation members have already so much knowledge of the English language that they may easily learn more and the new form of organization offers them better possibilities than ever before.

In many industrial centers, however, where Federation members are working mainly in one industry, reorganization is a comparatively easy matter. In such instances their employment has already laid the ground work for our organization. We simply must organize our comrades for their Party work and instruct them how to carry on their activities.

Of course, because there are among the many nationalities of workers in this country, very few members in the Party in many shops there can be found Party members who all speak the same language. In these cases it takes some time before a really effectively functioning Party unit could be built. But after our comrades will learn how to approach their fellow workers in the shop, they will become more and more effective in their work. There is no doubt that the Party will assist them in every possible way.

I think that in many places reorganization is much easier than the comrades may believe, so that we must not think that the C. I. has given our Party an impossible task, which cannot be fulfilled. This, however, does not mean that we shall hide from ourselves all the difficulties and therefore think reorganization as an easy matter. The greater the task is and the more difficulties there are, the harder we must grasp this work and carry it out unitedly.

Of course only mechanical reorganization is not sufficient and does not mean very much. If we cannot organize our members into newly organized units for their functions, we are lost. So it is absolutely necessary, in the question of reorganization, to carry out a very effective ideological campaign in order to teach our members what reorganization really means. Therefore, bolshevization propaganda must go hand in hand with reorganization work and in many instances, it must go before it.

Our Federation membership must become convinced that reorganization and bolshevization of our Party means to Americanize them in the bolshevistic sense of that word. They must realize that, hitherto, they have been members only of some kind of by-organization and that reorganization means to bring them closely to the fold of the revolutionary party of American workers as full fledged members. Our members must admit that, at present, in the Federation branches which are more like clubs, Party activities have suffered. Party members must have a separate apparatus, thru which they can plan to carry out the duties of the Party. Workers clubs and other sympathetic organizations are good and necessary of course, in order to help us maintain connections with the masses, but they cannot function as Party basic organizations, as Party units.

It is, however, clear that we can never carry out reorganization by a theoretical and ideological campaign alone. We must, without further delays and hesitation, start actual reorganization work at once.

In the process of that work our ideological campaigns will assist and become understandable for the membership. So far as our Party and its various language sections are progressing in this difficult work, so much more experience we will get, and our seemingly impossible task becomes comparatively easy.

Towards those cases among our membership in which we find that they are not yet fully ripe and ready, we must have some patience and not handle them too ruthlessly, but try to explain the matter. Entirely different methods, of course, should be used where conscious opposition to reorganization is raising its head. We cannot tolerate this in this great crisis which is confronting our Party in its reorganization and bolshevization work.

Comrades, let us go into this work wholeheartedly. Let us show in the process of this task that we are worthy to be called Communists. If we go into this work in this spirit, then we surely will accomplish it successfully.

Shop Nuclei Lead to a Bolshevik Mass Party

By S. JONAS.

(Shop Nuclei Organizer Brownsville Section).

When the question of reorganizing and Bolshevizing the party comes up, we understand that it means that the Workers Party, instead of being the small organization that it has been up till now, will become a Bolshevik mass party. This can be accomplished only when we make use of the daily struggles which come up before the workers in the shops and combine these activities with the political struggles which the party carries on and make them a daily issue, among the workers in the shops. This work can be carried on effectively only thru the means of shop nuclei.

The following are a few examples to illustrate how the work has been carried on by the shop nuclei in the Brownsville section of New York City.

In the Freiheit of June 10, there appeared an article which showed how the two shop nuclei of Brownsville made use of the slogan not to work the first of May and how the comrades made it a shop issue. Not only did these factories not work, but the shop nuclei took advantage of the opportunity of carrying on Communist propaganda in connection with the first of May.

A second instance was when the workers of one factory went out on strike for the recognition of the union. In this factory there was only one party member. The section organizer immediately called a conference of the party members including two sympathizers and organized a shop nucleus. In spite of the fact that the comrades had not had the necessary experience, they succeeded in having the strikers invite party comrades to address their shop meetings. These party members have greatly influenced the strikers. When the DAILY WORKER carried a report of the strike activities in Brownsville, these strikers spread hundreds of copies of the DAILY WORKER. The strike was a stubborn one and if not for the members of the other shop nuclei who helped the strikers financially and organized many street demonstrations, it is quite probable that the strike would have been lost. With the help of the shop nuclei the strike was won after a struggle of 18 weeks. This activity won over many workers because the shop nuclei carried on their daily struggles.

The shop nuclei also made use of the sentiment of the workers for amalgamation, pointing out to the workers that only the Workers Party is sincerely interested to amalgamate the unions and that all the others are really fighting against amalgamation and are not more than indifferently progressive.

That the shop nuclei serves as a means of gaining members for the party can be proved by the fact that in Brownsville which is anything but an industrial center, there already exist seven shop nuclei with a membership of 32, only eight of which were members of the party before the organization of the shop nuclei.

The shop nuclei are also effective in the organization of the Trade Union Educational League into a mass organization. It is a fact, that a year ago, when the sentiment for amalgamation in this trade was much stronger than at the present time, only ten members would come to a meeting of the T. U. E. L. At the present time, from 40 to 50 members come to the meetings of the T. U. E. L.

It is also interesting to note how the shop nuclei are organized to carry out the party work in the shops. Of course the organization of shop nuclei in those shops where three party members were employed was not difficult. The three members met and organized a shop nucleus. They elected an organizer and secretary and immediately started to function as a nucleus to carry out the work in their shop. An important duty of each member being the instruction that each meber gives to a certain number of workers in the shop with the purpose of drawing them into the nucleus.

The work however, was much more difficult in those shops where only one party member worked. In those cases, the section organizer together with the party comrades had many conferences with the sympathizers explaining to them that if they supported the Communist position in the unions, helped the Workers Party financially and are sympathetic to the Communist movement, there is no reason why they should not become members of the party and work out the plans which they carry out. This propaganda was successful and in four shops where only one party member had previously workers four shop nuclei were formed. In one shop where not even one party member had previously worked a shop nucleus was organized. In another shop where one member worked but who was against shop nuclei and therefore did nothing to help in the work, a nucleus was organized by explaining to the sympathizers the necessity for this nucleus. In the last two nuclei, the section organizer took into consideration the fact that these comrades had had no experience whatever and appointed old party comrades as organizers for these two shop nuclei to carry on the work.

In illustrating how active the members in the shop nuclei are, it is interesting to note that in five shops where shop nuclei are functioning, the general shop chairmen are members of the nuclei. So that the nuclei are actually in control in the shops and all the questions which are taken up at the shop meetings are first discussed at the shop nucleus meetings.

Four members of the nuclei are also members of the joint council of the unions to which they belong. Eight are members of the executive boards of the unions.

The shop nuclei are already fathering material for the publication of shop papers. They have already started work on the organization of a branch of the International Labor Defense which will include a majority of the members in the shops where there is a shop nucleus. The chairmen will be instructed to take up the question of labor defense at the shop meetings.

N. Y. Party Activities

Downtown English Branch Discussion.

Every comrade in the Downtown English branch of the Workers Party ought to be present next Wednesday evening at the regular meeting, as it will be one of the most helpful gatherings the branch has had this year. The new left developments in the labor movement in England will be discussed in the educational propaganda. Besides we are in the heat of the city campaign and this will be thoroly gone into.

The discussion will be opened by Comrade George Siskind, who will review the Scarborough and Liverpool conferences in England, and his and other talks will enable all the branch comrades to get a splendid idea of the present situation in Great Britain.

Comrades should realize the opportunity to understand the Communist viewpoint of the recent portentous work of the British C. P. and be on hand.

RE-ORGANIZATION COURSE FIRST ON CURRICULUM OF NEW YORK WORKERS' SCHOOL

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—Training for Communist leadership and training for Communist membership are the central aims of the New York Workers' School which will open its fall courses beginning about the middle of October. The school at 108 E. 14th St., under the control of the Workers Party,—will be a training center not only for the New York membership and its most active elements, but also for the entire eastern district of the country. Non-party members also, in fact all progressive elements of the working class will find in the school some course or courses which will make them better militant fighters on behalf of their class.

Reorganization is the order of the day in the party. It is no less the order of the day in this educational work than in other fields.

The school has for its most immediate task to direct and initiate a simultaneous course in every shop nucleus so that within a period of three to six months, every member of the party in New York will have been educated in "The Fundamentals of Leninism." In order to prepare the enormous staff of instructors or rather group discussion leaders to direct this work in all of the nuclei simultaneously, there will be a shop nucleus training course in the central school. To this course every shop nucleus will send a leading comrade, preferably its organizer, and this comrade will be trained to direct the discussion within his nucleus. The course will include such fundamental problems as: What is a party; the role of the Communist party; its structure and organization; class division, class differences and class struggle; party leaders, masses, class Bolshevization; work in the trade unions; Communist electoral campaigns and parliamentarism; theory and practice of the united front; Loreism and other pressing party problems. In addition to the topics suggested above, the course will include the thoro study of the theoretical basis for the decision of these problems and a study of the practical measures for bringing the conclusions of the course to life in the daily work of the party.

For active trade unionists, party functionaries and leading comrades generally there will be a special training course to which only a limited number will be admitted on the basis of examination. The examination will consist of a presentation by the candidate not only of his previous study but, and this much more important, a presentation of evidence that he is really an active party worker.

The training course will consist of a course in "Marxism-Leninism" extending over a period of six months, instructor, Bertram D. Wolfe; a course in "Party History Structure and Problems," three months, instructor, William W. Weinstone; and a course in "Our Work in the Trade Unions," three months, instructors, Ben Gitlow and Bert Miller. All comrades taking the training course will take the "Marxist-Leninism" course for the entire period of six months and for the first three months, either the trade union course or the course in "Party History Structure and Problems" taking the other one during the second three months. These courses will be so arranged that the comrades will not have to spend more than one night a week at the school.

Another group of courses of fundamental importance this year are the English courses. Not only will there be great numbers of nonparty workers anxious to take these courses in English but in addition there will be perhaps even greater numbers of members of the various language federations anxious to prepare themselves for active participation in the shop nuclei or international branches of the reorganized party in which English will be the official language used.

To take care of the entire foreign-speaking membership of the party as well as other workers desirous of perfecting their English, a large staff of English teachers has been recruited and many courses in elementary, intermediate and advanced English will be given. Many of these courses will start the week of Oct. 12 simultaneously with the beginning of the definite reorganization of the party.

Other important courses in connection with English literature and public speaking will be offered. They include "Workers Correspondence (a course in Proletarian Journalism;)" elementary composition; elementary public speaking which will include parliamentary law and other details necessary to speaking at meetings of the party, unions and other workers' organizations; political issues and their presentation (a course in advanced public speaking); and various courses in literature. Probably the most interesting of these is a course to be given by Moissaye J. Olgin entitled "The Living Revolution," a study of the reflection of the Russian revolution in Russian literature. Other courses to be offered during the school season are a course in political economy; a study in Marx's Capital; the economics and politics of the era of trusts (imperialism); historic materialism; a study of socialist philosophers; the fundamentals of Communism; etc.

The school will have branches or annexes in all sections of the city in which the fundamentals of Communism and English courses will be offered and in which there will be public forums on Sunday nights.

The bulk of the courses mentioned above will begin the week of Nov. 8 but registration is now open for them, and some of the courses begin the week of Oct. 12. The average fee charged is $2.50 for a three months course of one night a week. Those interested in training themselves for a more active and more effective work in the trade unions, in the party and working class organizations generally should register at once at the school headquarters. A printed bulletin of courses will be mailed free upon request. Address the Workers School, Room 34, 108 East 14th St., New York City.

Details about the eastern district training course will be announced later.

"LOONEY GAS" MANUFACTURE TO BE PEMITTED

DuPont Confident of Whitewash

By ESTHER LOWELL,
Federated Press Staff Correspondent.

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—The DuPonts are not manufacturing tetraethyl lead, the poison used to treat gasoline in making the motor fuel ethyl gas, but the DuPonts expect to begin making tetraethyl lead again "as soon as the government investigators report favorably," their representative at the national exposition of the chemical industries has told many of those viewing the exhibit. According to his statement the DuPonts expect to be whitewashed by the committee dominated by the U. S. public health service to investgiate the deaths of 11 workers employed in making tetraethyl lead and thyl gas.

Organized labor will have a chance to consider whether the DuPonts, Standard Oil and General Motors companies are being whitewashed by the government when labor's representative and the directors of the Workers Health Bureau attend the conference at which the tetraethyl lead is made public.

Six Negro Workers Killed in Railway Tunnel in Virginia

RICHMOND, Va., Oct. 5.—Tom Mason, engineer, is believed to have been killed, and six Negro workmen are missing, as the result of a cave-in of the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad tunnel at Church Hill which trapped more than two score men engaged in reinforcing its walls.

Most of the workmen, however, dug themselves out and crawled to safety, but police officials declared there was little hope for any remaining in the tunnel. Gases drove the rescue workers from the tunnel shortly after nightfall and it was believed those entombed could not survive the poisonous fumes.

No Ships to Egypt.

MOSCOW, Oct. 5.—(Tass).—The Soviet Commercial fleet issued orders prohibiting the landing in Alexandria to the soviet steam ships of the eastern line owing to systematical attempts on the part of British authorities to pick quarrels with soviet vessels and to the compulsorily embark on the S. S. "Chicherin" citizens deported from Egypt.

POLISH TERRORISTS PREPARE BLOODY BATH FOR WORKERS WITH SOCIALIST PARTY AID

By G. STAVSKI.

WARSAW, Oct. 5.—The fearless fighter of the British laboring masses, Lantsutsky, who has only just been sentenced to 3 years hard labor in Lodz, will in a few days, for the third time, stand before his judges, consisting of Polish nobility and gentry, in Warsaw.

One would think, that there is nothing more foul than, after the bloody debauch of the field court martial—to frame up so swiftly new deeds of unheard-of terror. One would think, that the blood of those latest victims of the Polish secret service, murdered in the citadels of Warsaw had not yet cooled down. One would think that even in their own interests,—in the interests of this band of wolves—a breathing space would have been advantageous in this work of assassination. No wonder, that the Polish socialist party organ Robotnik has been sounding an alarm for the past week. In a poorly hidden cry of alarm, it points out the stormy protests of the widest circles of European public opinion against the crimes of Polish justice. And when the Polish socialist party, the faithful and sensitive lackey to the bourgeoisie, becomes restless—this is without doubt a symptom of a great moral blow from the outside against the foul regime of the Polish Republic.

And yet the governing clique is framing, one after another, at increased speed, trials against Lantsutsky. Having washed their bloody hands, the bourgeoisie, this time behind the shield of a "normal trial," is enacting its next crime—this time, however, in white gloves Lantsutsky's name, is repeated by millions with a fervor of sympathy and love. This sympathy was embodied in the protests of all that was best in the laboring masses in many countries against the spoilation of the police in Poland. Botvin has fallen—Gibner, Knievski and Rutkowski have fallen—but with all the more enthusiasm do the glances of the Polish masses go up to the building of the Mokolov Barracks in Warsaw. All the more readily and warmly is the hand of fraternal aid outstretched, to the comrades imprisoned.

With a similar cynicism to that which was displayed in the Lodz trial, have been framed up the two "indictments" against Comrade Lantsutsky in his trial in Warsaw. The "accused" is, amongst other things, "accused" of, that: at his open, deputies' meeting where he gave a report of his activities, he dared to prove, that "the only way out of the position was by overthrowing the bourgeois system." "The accused" dared "to criticize the activities of other labor organizations" (the treacherous Polish socialist party): The prosecution has another "trump" up its sleeve. It has fished up and old open letter written by Lantsutsky to the president of the council of ministers, in November, 1922! In his brilliant letter, Lantsutsky in the name of all those striving for the better future of Poland, scornfully challenged the "democracy," showing up all the foulness of the "democracy," showing up all the foulness of the bourgeoisie and landowners, who had by means of bribery and deceit framed up "free" parliamentary elections. The accused, you see, will not stoop to deny his own official, legal act—this accusation will be read and accepted smothly and without unnecessary hestitaiton.

On the other hand, the present moment appears to Polish justice as most handy to plant a blow as heavy as possible in the back of the Communist fraction in the sejm. The governmental black hundred Retch Pospolita for a long time has been leading a wild campaign in this direction. In its blind, powerless rage, the Retch Pospolita from day to day libels the members of the Communist fraction, inciting the ever ready secret service to new deeds of provocation. The Retch Pospolita has good grounds for counting on the aid of the Polish socialist party—this same Polish socialist party which pointed its rifles against the breasts of, and shot down, the workers—arranged the slaughters of workers in Warsaw, and thus ressurected damned memories of the shameful deeds of the ruffians of 1907.

With fearful and fresh memories has our dear friend, Comrade Lantsutsky, appeared before his judges—bankers and profiteers. He does not appear before the sorry figures of the Warsaw court to defend himself.

He Will Accuse.

He will accuse this system of outrage and oppression, this system of gendarmes, spies and warders—this fatherland of such assassins as Pointkevitches and Tsekhnovkis. Firmly, fearlessly and surely will Comrade Lantsutsky throw forth in the court room the victorious slogan, so bravely pronounced by Gibner, Botvin, Rutkowski and Knievsky on their way to execution—Long Live workers' and peasants' Poland!

Indians Roast House Committee.

WASHINGTON. (FP)—Assiniboine indians on the Fort Peck reservation at Wolf Point, Montana, have registered a sharp complaint against the conduct of Congressmen Cramton of Michigan, Leavitt of Montana and Murphy of Ohio, comprising a part of the House committee on Indian affairs, when the three visited the reservation last July. Preparations had been made to present the grievances of the Indians against Commissioner Burke of the Indian Bureau, himself a former congressman from South Dakota and known as an enemy of the Indians' plans for economic betterment.

According to this complaint, Burke had personal charge of the visit, and heard through their attorney. No inspection of the Indians' homes was made, and the climax of the Indians' disillusionment was reached when Cramton made a speech in support of Leavitt's candidacy for re-election. There are 7,500 Indian votes in Montana, most of which are in Leavitt's district, and he is apprehensive lest they be all cast against him next year.

CHEKA FOILS PLOT TO KILL JAP DIPLOMAT

Rupture with Japan Is Averted

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., Oct. 5.—An attempt to assassinate the Japanese ambassador Mr. Tanaka and thus cause a rupture between the governments of Soviet Russia and Japan was frustrated by quick action on the part of the Bolshevik cheka.

Six Chinese were implicated in the attempt of an "international" organization which had promised immunity to those implicated in the attempt and to make officers of them upon their return to China.

Assassination Plot Hatched.

The leader of the plot Tin Shih-Shen upon being arrested claimed that a man had called at his home and told him that if he could arrange the assassination of the Japanese ambassador in Moscow he would receive a large sum of money.

Tin Shih-Shen called upon another former Chinese merchant, Wan Shu-Wha, who has no occupation at the present time and arranged for the murder promising transportation to China and then the raising of Wan Shu-Hwa to the rank of an officer.

Gets 30 Roubles.

Wan Shu-Hwa received thirty roubles on his premise to Tin Shih-Shen to carry out the murder. Tin Shih-Shen promised to get the "international" organization that he represented to bring pressure to bear on the Soviets to release the murderer if he were arrested for committing the crime.

Tin Shih-Shen then procuted a small Browning revolver for the murder and gave it to Wan Shu-Hwa.

Cheka Nips Plot.

Everything was held in readiness for the murder and it would have taken place if it had not been for the activity of the cheka. The cheka nipped the plot in the bud and thus an attempt by the "international" organization to create strife between Japan and Soviet Russia was averted.

Capitalist Press Hysterious.

The capitalist press of Europe is trying to make big capital out of the fact that a number of Chinese were arrested in the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics. Scare head-lines appeared in the press announceing "Soviet Russia Arrests Six Chinese Students." This attempt on the part of the capitalist press of Europe to create ill feeling between the Chinese workers and Soviet Russia will also fall as the workers of China realize that this attempted assassination was planned by the military dictators of China as a move to create war between Soviet Russia and Japan. The imperialist lackeys in China would then easily crush the Canton government and reestablish the monarchy in China.

It was intimated by those arrested that this organization had connections with the great powers of Europe that were using the monarchist general, Feng Tso-Lin, as their tool.

AMERICAN NEGRO LABOR CONGRESS REPRESENTS WORKERS; SANHEDRIN REPRESENTED PETTY BOURGEOISIE

By HAYWOOD HALL
American Negro Labor Service

The American Negro Labor Congress which convenes in Chicago Oct. 25th, marks a new epoch in the history of Negro labor. It will be the first time in world history that a similar body has been formed.

In consideration of the fact that 98 per cent of the Negro group in America are wage workers and farm workers, this body will be more representative of the race than was the Sanhedrin, which met here a little over a year ago. The Sanhedrin was strictly a petty bourgeois group and its interests were with those of the Negro petty bourgeoisie and not with that of the great Negro proletariat. This was shown by the fact that during the whole time convened only a small portion of its time was allotted to the important question of Negro labor. This question should be paramount with any group that professes to have the welfare of the Negro at heart.

The Negro is beginning to realize that organization is the only way to effectively combat the forces that are at work against him. The realization of this fact by the Negro workers is beginning to be a source of anxiety to the capitalists and their henchmen of the daily press. That this awakening of the Negro masses is a source of growing concern among the capitalists has been amply demonstrated by articles and editorials of these same capitalist newspapers.

The policies these papers pursue when they do mention the Negro at all (and that is usually to magnify some petty crime than an individual Negro commits as a racial stigma) has been to use a sarcastic and ironic tone, always trying to belittle any attempt on the part of the Negro at self-assertion. These policies will be continued as long as the Negro remains unorganized. But now that he is beginning to learn the proper solution of the problem, that is, organization in the proletarian movement of the world, their concern becomes apparent. These articles also show that they have woefully underestimated the intelligence of the Negro masses.

The Negro should not be fooled by the hypocritical attitude adopted by these papers in their willingness to offer advice. He should see that their advice to him to follow their old leaders is a terrible indictment against these same leaders. Therefore, the only safe policy for the Negro to pursue is that policy which is in direct opposition to this advice. We have great cause to doubt the sincerity of this advice by the lateness of its appearance.

Self preservation has forced the Negro into his present position, and no force at the command of the capitalists can keep him from taking his rightful place among the proletariat of the world.

LIBERTY RULING ASKED OF U. S. SUPREME COURT

Bar Association Head Raps Tennessee Law

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Oct. 5.—"We have had a great many decisions on what congress or a state cannot do in regard to life and property but few in regards to liberty" said Chaster I. Long, president of the American Bar Association, speaking on the Tennessee evolution law and other restrictive "educational" measures before the Missouri Bar Association. He declared that national freedom of learning is in peril.

"In Nebraska and Iowa, laws were passed that no one should teach any language in the schools except above the eighth grade," the speaker said, "In Ohio, no teacher could teach German below the eighth grade and Oregon passed a law that destroyed all private schools between certain grades. Education was to be controlled by the state.

"The supreme court of the United States said these states deprived a teacher of his liberty. In Tennessee, the state says you cannot teach any subject in the public schools that differs from the story of the origin of man as told in the bible."

POLISH WORKERS INSPIRED BY U. S. DEMONSTRATIONS

White Terror Protest Proves Solidarity

When Count Alexander Skrzynski, minister of foreign affairs of the white terror government of Poland visited Chicago, the Workers (Communist) Party organised a demonstration, and the Chicago Conference to Aid Political Prisoners in Poland, issued an open letter to Skrzynski condemning his government for murdering hundreds of workers and imprisoning 8,000 workers and peasants.

News about this reached the workers in Poland thru the Polish Communist daily Mlot (The Hammer), published at Minsk, the capital city of the White-Russian Soviet Republic. This paper is circulated in Poland illegally. Mlot gives a full story of the demonstration and mass meeting at which Comrades Lewis, Engdahl, Gebert and Stolar spoke.

Mlot point out that this demonstration has proven the international solidarity of the workers, that the workers in Chicago are helping the workers of Poland in their struggles, calling attention to the fact that Polish workers in Chicago participated in the demonstration, proving that Count Skrzynski was not able to fool them with patriotic buncombe.

The demonstrations made in America for aid of Lantsutsky were also an inspiration to the workers of Poland.

Big Tractor Demand in Soviet Russia

MOSCOW, Oct. 5.—(Tass)—One of the urgent questions of agriculture in the U. S. S. R. is that of tractors. According to the data of the people's commissariat of agriculture, there are about 7,500 tractors in the territory of the Union; 6,000 were imported from abroad, 1,000 prepared in the Union and 500 left over from the pre-war time.

The territory of the land ploughed by tractors amounts to 675,000 hectars, while the whole territory is 888,441,000 hectars. This shows how many tractors are needed by Soviet peasants. The demand is enormous and up to May 1 various peasants' co-operative societies and organisations have made 20,000 applications for tractors. It is expected that the demand will be much greater in the next year in view of the excellent crop this season.

The Locarno Conference

The eyes of the capitalist world are focused on Locarno, the little Swiss city where the foreign ministers of France, Great Britain and Germany will try to reach an agreement which will still, for a time at least, the conflicts arising out of the Versailles treaty and cannot crush German capitalism and live themselves.

The victorious imperialist nations, France and Great Britain, have been humbled somewhat by the cold and obvious fact that they cannot crush German capitalism and live themselves.

The Dawes plan represents the attempt of American imperialism to reconcile the European antagonism and prevent the rise of the revolutionary tide. To the amount of some $10,000,000,000 in actual loans to governments and a still larger amount in the form of commercial obligations, American imperialism is compelled to force some measure of stabilization.

But the Dawes plan is admitted even by its most ardent admirers to be nothing but a temporary procedure. There is needed something more permanent—and more drastic.

Just as the victorious nations cannot stabilize their national economics without German participation so is it impossible for European capitalism as a whole to rebuild itself while the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics remains to challenge capitalism and inspire millions of workers and peasants thruout the world with the actual accomplishment of victory attained.

The "security pact" which France, Great Britain and Germany will try to establish in Locarno is directed at the Soviet Union. Germany wants the revision of her eastern frontiers, the return of the coal fields of Silesia, the liquidation of the Danzig corridor—measures that will restore the possibility of her economic supremacy in central Europe.

These demands run counter to the ambitions of French imperialism. If granted they will alienate the ring of little allies which France has been organising and financing while her own treasury faces bankruptcy. Great Britain covertly supports the German proposals because they weaken France, her most dangerous enemy in western Europe.

But the alienation of the little Entente states of Poland, Roumania, Jugo-Slavia and Czecho-Slovakia while it weakens France, strengthens not only Germany but Soviet Russia. Great Britain was forced to allow the use of these states by France against Germany, but her major reason for allowing and encouraging their formation was to use them against the Soviet Union.

In the north, Great Britain has built a little ring of anti-Soviet governments for her own purposes—Finland, Latvia and Lithuania. Of these Lithuania has her own grievances against Poland arising over disputed territory.

It is clear that France and Great Britain, quite apart from their own conflicts, have anything but clear sailing in the Locarno conference. One of the best evidences of this is that on the very eve of the conference, the German Foreign Minister Stresemann and Georges Tchitcherin, Soviet minister, have signed a trade agreement whose clauses are not even known to the allied governments—at least they are not known thru the usual diplomatic channels.

The view of German capitalism is expressed by Stresemann in an interview published yesterday wherein he says that "Germany must look to the east as well as to the west." The allies demand the right to transport troops across German territory in event of war on the Soviet Union and to this proposal it is very probable that Germany will not accede altho it is the very heart of the security pact. It is doubtful if any German government which agreed to this proposal could last 24 hours.

Nevertheless some agreement that will bring Germany into the League of Nations probably will be reached and this agreement will mark one more step in the imperialist alliance against the workers' and peasants' government of Russia. Great Britain and France faced with the rising proletarian power Soviet Russia are unable longer to pick and choose. Germany will therefore receive substantial concessions.

The result will be a trend in the border states to more friendly relations with the Soviet Union caused by the increasing difficulty, in view of the double crossing by their former protectors, which the governments will have in arousing warlike sentiment among the masses against Soviet Russia.

American workers must not forget even for a moment that altho the participants in the Locarno conference are labeled "France," "Germany" and "Great Britain" it is the House of Morgan and the American government, sponsor of the Dawes plan, which are pulling the strings and making the puppets dance in Locarno.

The most powerful and unrelenting enemy of Soviet Russia is the imperialist master of the world outside the Union of Soviet Republics—the United States of America.

Purcell's Visit

A. A. Purcell, left wing British trade union leader, who is chairman of the International Federation of Trade Unions and organizer of the Anglo-Russian World Trade Union Unity Committee, has arrived at Atlantic City in his capacity of fraternal delegate to the A. F. of L. convention.

He is to make a speaking tour which will take him to the principal industrial centers and the rank and file of American labor must give him a welcome that will show to fakerdom the essentially healthy working class character of the organized workers of the United States.

We must make Purcell's tour a turning point in the struggle of the left wing by bringing to thousands of workers the militant message he has for them.

Purcell will be the target of abuse by the traitorous officialdom of the A. F. of L. and their masters, the capitalist class, while he is in this country. The mass of American workers, however, have not been so debauched as yet that Purcell will be left to fight his own battles.

Great Britain is reported as "puzzled by the French debt settlement." There is no mystery about it. The settlement means simply that Wall Street is going to collect the German reparation payments.

CRIBBEN PLANT USES DICKS TO BREAK STRIKE

Truckload of Scabs Is Imported

As the strike of the metal polishers and buffers enters the third week, the Cribben and Sexton company, Sacramento Blvd. and Chicago Ave., has resorted to the use of detectives and gunmen to terrorized the pickets.

Import Gunmen

A truckload of this riff-raff was brought into the polishing room in an effort to scare the strikers into submission. Detectives have been placed at the doors of the employment office, the main office and around the plant. Attempts are being made to drive the union pickets away, for since the picket line has been established the company has been unable to get any unemployed workers to answer their ads. The unemployed workers get as far as the picket line and on hearing that a strike is on, they leave without going to the main office.

Strikers Laught at Threats

This company has tried every means at its command to force the strikers into submission. First they threatened the men with revoking the insurance policies, which the company has issued them. Then they threatened the men with arrest. This attempt not being successful was followed by an attempt to threaten the wives and sisters of the strikers. A letter, which has been printed in the DAILY WORKER, was sent to all the wives and sisters of the strikers telling them that the insurance policy they hold will be of no value unless they can persuade their husbands and brothers to return to work within a certain time. This method is now being followed with the importation of sluggers and detectives.

No Stoves Coming Out

In spite of the load of riff-raff brought in by the company the polishing room is not turning out any work. The company is desperate as it realizes that it must turn out the stoves this month if it wishes to meet the demands of the winter trade. A large order of ranges must be delivered to the Standard Oil Co. before the close of October. The order will be cancelled if the stoves are not forthcoming.

Molders Protest

The workers in the foundry have protested against the bringing in of scabs thru the molding room. They have told the bosses that they don't want to have these scabs strolling thru this department. Some have told the boss that they will refuse to work in the foundry if the firm persists in having the scabs walk thru the molding room. The molders are the only organized body in the shop and express their sympathhy with the polishers, if it were not for the contract which they have entered into with the bosses, they also would walk-out.

Polishers Demands

The polishers insist on their four main demands: First, recognition of the union; Second, recognition of their shop committee; Third, re-adjustment of piece prices so that it will be possible to make $1.10 per hour; Fourth, retention of the $1.00 on hour scale for day work.

Finn Warship In Trouble

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 5.—Hope that the Finnish warship reported sunk in the gulf of Bothnia with loss of forty-five sailors and two officers, may still be afloat was expressed in marine circles today on receipt of reports that flare signals had been seen in that part of the gulf where the vessel was last seen.

Third Y. W. L. Convention in Opening Session

in the Young Workers (Communist) League. In the question of the seating of some of the delegates supporting the former Foster group of the party, said Comrade Kaplan, the credentials committee had exercised some degree of leniency, considering that the overcoming of the crisis was more important than the rigid application of the formally correct rules which would have excluded some of these delegates. In the interest of the unification of the league he therefore recommended that the majority report on credentials be accepted.

Comrade Max Shachtman in reporting for the minority of the credentials committee, disputed Comrade Kaplan's claim that the majority of the credentials committee had been lenient in considering the claims of those supporting the former Foster group. Comrade Shachtman characterized the majority credentials report as "a brazen piece of trickery," and declared that the supporters of Comrade Kaplan did not have the majority of the league membership behind them. Comrade Williamson also spoke in favor of the minority report on credentials.

Comrade Jack Stachel closed the debate in behalf of the majority of the credentials committee. He declared that the statement of Comrades Shachtman and Williamson regarding the voting of the membership could not be maintianed in the face of the actual figures of the membership and of the voting branch by branch, and was in effect an attempt to discredit in advance the incoming National Executive Committee. Comrade Stachel quoted figures to show that on the estimate of the total membership of the league as 1,900, the former majority of the N. E. C. of the league could not claim more than 600 supporters and would have to grant that the present majority of the convention delegates represent 1,300 of the members. On the basis of an estimated total membership of 1,800, he said, 1,200 of these are supporters of the present majority of the convention delegates, and only 500 supported the minority of the delegates.

Preceding the vote on credentials, Comrade Herbert Zam moved to make the acceptance of the majority credentials report unanimous.

Comrade Schachtman thereupon took the floor to ask the party delegation to state whether or not the party C. E. C. would consider a vote against the acceptance of the report to be a violation of discipline, since the party delegation had recommended the acceptance of the report.

Comrade Jay Lovestone, on behalf of the party delegation, replied that the Central Executive Committee of the party recommended the acceptance of the report; that this is to be considered only as a recommendation of the party to the Y. W. L. convention, and that a vote against the report would not be considered a violation of discipline.

The convention accepted the majority report of the credentials committee by a vote of 29 to 20.

Zam Elected Chairman.

Comrades Herbert Zam of New York and John Williamson of Chicago being nominated for permanent chairman, Comrade Zam was elected. Comrade Stachel then moved that Comrade Williamson be elected unanimously as vice-chairman, and this was done.

Yusim of Philadelphia Secretary

For permanent secretary of the convention Comrade Morris Yusim of Philadelphia, Sarah Whiteman of Philadelphia and Ronkkonen of Superior were nominated. Comrade Whiteman declined. Comrade Yusim was elected.

Greeting from Jailed Communists.

Jack Stachel then read a letter from Comrades Pat Toohey of the league and Alex Reid of the party, written from the jail at Scranton, Pa., where they are imprisoned for their participation in the strike of the anthracite miners. The letter reads:

"To Y. W. L. National Convention:

"Revolutionary Communist greetings to our Third National Convention. So sorry I am forced to be absent but am contented to know your decisions will lay the foundation for a mass organization in America of the exploited youth. Think of us sometimes.

"PAT TOOHEY,
"ALEX REED."

Young Coal Miner Addresses Convention.

Tony Wishtart, a young coal miner from Wheeling, West Va., and a delegate to the convention, then spoke. Comrade Wishtart described the hard situation of he coal miners now on strike, and asked the convention to register its support of the fight and to send its greetings to Pat Toohey and Alex Reid. The resolution published in yesterday's DAILY WORKER was unanimously passed with modifications.

Bedacht Reports for Party.

Comrade Max Bedacht then delivered the report to the Young Workers (Communist) League from the Workers (Communist) Party of America. After greeting the youth convention in the name of the C. E. C. and the party, Comrade Bedacht gave a vivid presentation of the world situation that faces the revolutionary movement of the proletariat today. Describing the tremendous concentration and preparation of the world forces of capitalism against the working class and for the further conquest of colonial peoples, he declared that at no other time was it ever so necessary as now to unite the ranks of our movement. In the impending bloody struggles between the capitalist governments for the re-division of the spoils of imperialism, he said, the United States represents by far the most powerful and aggressive of these predatory governments. Therefore it is doubly necessary for the Communists of America, and especially the Communist youth, to unify and clarify itself in preparation for its serious duties in the coming sharpened struggle.

The imperialist powers recognize its greatest danger in the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics, said Comrade Bedacht, and are preparing for a united struggle to crush the workers' revolutionary state. But the task of defending the workers' Soviet Union, said the speaker, is not the task of the Russian workers alone, but also of the proletariat of theentire world. The capitalist government of the United States will be able to put up the strongest force on the imperialist side of this fight, and the Communist workers of America must accordingly recognize their supreme duty, not only to organize and unify themselves, but also to mobilize the entire working class for the defense of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics.

In the United States, said Comrade Bedacht, we are confronted with the great difficulty which arises from the fact that the American working class has not yet crystallized its class consciousness. In this respect it is something like fifty years behind some of the European countries, tho this does not mean that we commence only fifty years from now in our Communist task. The capitalist development in the United States has advanced further than the capitalism of any other country, thus clarifying the class struggle to a degree where capitalism can no longer befog the consciousness of the working masses. Our foremost problem, to which all else must be subordinated, is the hastening of the development of the class consciousness of the American proletariat. The struggle can be successful only if it is a mass struggle.

ernor Smith, the result of years of effort on the part of the organized labor movement. They do not hesitate openly to sell the labor movement to its sworn enemies and simultaneously to stiffle every effort on the part of the workers to launch a labor ticket and a labor party.

Labor Officials for Injunction Judge.

The last eight years under Tammany Hall has been characterized by the most flagrant disregard of the interests of the toilers of the city. Judge Thomas Churchill, one of the idols of the democratic party, indorsed by the Central Trades and Labor Council, has been responsible for an injunction against the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, which injunction is of so sweeping a character that today it threatens the very life and existence of every labor organization in the city of New York. The city employes have been treated shamefully under the Tammany administration, whenever they have sought to improve their conditions. The prevailing scale of wages is being violated by the city in numerous instances.

Pickets and strikers have been brutally assaulted by the police and the courts have handed down heavy sentences on the flimsiest evidence. This has been particularly true in the case of the foreign-born workers, especially in the needle trades.

Socialists Afraid to Fight Smith.

What has been the attitude of the socialist party under these circumstances? the socialist officials in the trade unions have not dared to take up the cudgels against the Tammany Hall labor bureaucrats in behalf of independent action. In the Central Trades and Labor Council, in the so-called "labor fusion" convention and in the socialist-controlled labor press, they carefully avoid giving Jimmy Walker's faithful henchmen any offense. In fact the relations between these two groups of labor fakers has been more than friendly in their policy of misleading the workers.

When faced with dissatisfaction and open rebellion in the I. L. G. W. U. it was Governor Smith's commission which stepped in and by its action lined up the state government on the side of the officials of the right wing and the employers against the garment workers and closed the door to the possibility of a strike for their demands. Thruout the conflict between the left wing and right wing, the courts and the police were repeatedly used in behalf of the officials against the mass of the revolting members of the union.

Socialists Serve Employers.

Under these cirumstances the leaders of the socialist party definitely determined to split the forces of the labor movement on the political field and thus render valuable service to the employers. They have proven themselves to be the enemies of the unity of the labor movement.

In spite of the offer made by the Workers Party for a united labor ticket, they have decided to follow a sectarian policy under their own banner camouflaged under the name of the "labor fusion ticket, which deceives no one. Due to this suicidal policy, labor stands divided and weak in this election campaign before the powerful onslaughts of the parties of big business.

Workers' Party For Labor's Unity.

In this situation the Workers Party has frankly stated its case before the workers. It has shown the urgent need of unity of labor in the present campaign. It has openly and publicly declared its willingness to withdraw its slate of candidates in favor of a united labor ticket. This offer is still adhered to, in spite of the refusal of the socialist party to recognize its duty to the workers. The Workers Party has come out with a demand for a united labor party.

It has come out with a thorogoing working class program reflecting the actual needs of the workers of the city, with a genuine working class ticket headed by Ben Gitlow, a member of the Cutters' Union, Local No. 4 of the A. C. W. A. The Workers Party has shown that it understands the present needs of the workers and that it is willing to fight for their demands. The Workers Party deserves the support of every honest, intelligent worker in the present election campaign.

FINK'S ATTEMPT TO FRAME UNION PICKET FOILED

Try to Get Striker for Arson

An attempt to frame-up one of the union pickets in front of the Chicago Plating Works, formerly known as the Cooperative Plating Co., 351 W. Superior St., on a charge of arson was frustated by the union picket upon discovering a bundle of old rags and burning cigarettes in a hallway across from the struck shop.

Dicks Harass Strikers

The Chicago Plating Works has hired a number of private detectives to harass the pickets as they attempt to make known to unemployed workers that a strike is on.

The pickets have to keep walking in front of the shop all day long carrying a heavy banner. They are not allowed to stop on the sidewalk. If they stop, the detectives force them to keep moving.

Use Hallway

The wife of a union man in the neighborhood offered the use of her hallway to the pickets for a resting place when they become tired. The pickets walk into this hallway, rest-up a little, then go out on the line to carry their banners. The private detectives have tried to bring pressure to bear upon this kindly woman to keep the pickets out of the hallway.

After the union picket had finished a lunch brought him by the business agent of his local, he cleaned out the hallway and went back to the picket line. The private detectives that had been sent down to harass him were milling around the doorway of the house. A short time later, that day, the picket walked into the hallway and found the hallway strewn with dirty rags. Smoking cigarettes were thrown upon the rags. The union picket fearing fire might result, threw the rags out of the hallway.

The union officials claim this act was committed by the private detectives in an attempt to frame-up the pickets that are picketing the shop. The union notified the west Chicago police of the attempt on the part of the dicks.

Jacob Branovitch, financial secretary of the Workmen's Circle, Branch 385 was called before a trial committee of the Workmen's Circle for refusing to join the strike and the Polishers' Union. The trial committee decided that he must immediately join the strike and join the union. Failing to comply with the demand of the Circle will meet expulsion from the Workmen's Circle.

The strikers at the Chicago Plating Works are still out and intend to remain out on the line until the company refuses to handle the struck work of the Cribben and Sexton Co.

DEFEND WORKERS' GOVERNMENT OF SOVIET RUSSIA!

A Call Addressed to All Lovers and Supporters of the First Workers' Republic.

For eight years the workers and peasants of Russia have defended their government and their right to abolish the exploitation and oppression of the capitalists.

They have fought the armies of the czarist generals, who sought to re-establish the rule of robbery and autocracy in Russia.

They were forced to fight all the imperialist governments, including England, France, the United States, which sought to destroy their government, becuase the capitalists feared the effect of the example of the workers' rule in Russia upon the workers these capitalists were exploiting at home.

The workers and peasants are no longer ruled by capitalist agents. Injunctions are not issued against the workers in Russia, but instead they are issued against the enemies of the workers.

Because the Soviet Union is the inspiration of all oppressed peoples in the struggle against imperialism, because the labor unions of the Soviet Union are creating a mighty weapon against capitalism in the trade union unity, because of the glorious example of the workers' government creating a better life for the workers and peasants which exists in the Soviet Union, international capitalism is again moving to destroy the achievements of the workers and peasants of Russia.

The American workers must unite with the workers of other countries for the defense of the Soviet Union and the workers' interests. Every workers' organization must place itself on record for the defense of the Soviet Union and the workers' interests. Rally to the defense of Soviet Russia!

"RECOGNIZE SOVIET RUSSIA!" is the rallying call for the 8th anniversary demonstration. Let us deliver this message to the millions of uninformed American workers.

The Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party has issued a four-page manifesto, an address to the working class of this country. This manifesto must be placed in the hands of every worker. No others than the true lovers and supporters of the first workers' republic will do this—you must do it

Use the coupon below and order a supply immediately for free distribution in the work shops, factories, mills, mines—everywhere! Every branch of the Workers Party must do its share—act now!

M. T. W. MEETS IN CONVENTION AT NEW YORK

Delegates Stress Need for Co-operation

NEW YORK CITY, Oct. 6.—The most outstanding difference between the convention of the Marine Transport Workers' Industrial Union of the I. W. W. which opened here Thursday, and the union's past conventions is the determination shown favoring a policy of internal discipline and co-operation with all forces locally, nationally and internationally against the employers.

Delegate Shultz of San Francisco was elected chairman and Francesan of Buffalo the secretary. The other delegates seated were Ross of Chicago; Hooley of Houston, Texas; Hooper of New Orleans; Molendyke of Mobile, Alabama; Larson of Norfolk, Va.; Gibbons of Baltimore; Varleck of Philadelphia; Fenton of New York; and Rohm of Brooklyn.

Three G. E. B. Members Attend.

William Drennan, member of the general exective board of the I. W. W. from the M. T. W. was in attendance, as were two other G. E. B. members, Matson of the Metal Miners and Hendrickson of the Building Construction Workers.

The convention was originally scheduled to meet on Sept. 15, but was postponed to use the delegates who were arriving in New York at that time, in the activities of the big strike which has now ended with an organization drive, in preparation for future struggle.

The convention expedited some work by disposing of some resolutions without refering them to committees, where there was no difference of opinion. Among these was the resolution of greetings and a pledge of support to the members of the I. W. W. imprisoned for the movement. This resolution stated in conclusion that—"We pledge our every effort to use our economic power and all other honorable means to free our fellow workers incarcerated in the bastiles of the master class."

Drennan Chosen Acting Secretary.

Edmund Jeppson, who as a member of the general organization committee had taken over the office of secretary-treasurer when his predecessor had quit, submitted his report and resignation from office, which were accepted with a vote of thanks for services rendered.

William Drennan was chosen by the convention to act as the union's secretary-treasurer until the office is filled by an election. Drennan, Fenton, Francesan, Hooley and others all stressed in their preliminary speeches, the purpose of the union leadership to build the M. T. W. upon a policy of good discipline and to strive for solidarity and co-operation, locally, nationally and internationally.

COMMUNIST SOLDIERS TREATED WORSE THAN OTHERS IN ALCATRAZ

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Oct. 6.—Crouch and Trumbull, Communist soldiers serving sentences in Alcatraz prison, were visited by Austin Lewis, their attorney, who is retained by International Labor Defense. Both are in good spirits and healthy but complain of partial treatment. Crouch was denied the privilege of taking a university extension course in Russian. Both class war prisoners work in the laundry. Lewis is awaiting court records from Honolulu to proceed with the legal fight here.

160 MILLIONS OFFERED U. S. BY SOVIET GOVT.

"Greatest Offer in History," Says Gureivich

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, Oct. 6.—M. Gurievich, head of the foreign department of the supreme council of national economy, has issued a statement in which he reveals the details of a $160,600,000 offer to American businessmen, the the total amount to be spent in a period of one year and to be followed by future business dealings that in the next five or six years will involve the expenditure of $2,000,000,000. The statement is prefaced with the observation: "We wish to make American businessmen the greatest offer in business history."

Tremendous Industrial Development

As a result of an especially favorable harvest, the best since the revolution, and a general improvement in conditions within Russia, the Soviet government has worked out a program of industrial development that within the next year will bring industry up to within 90 to 95 per cent of the pre-war standard and future years will far eclipse anything ever experienced in the history of Russia.

Machinery required for this development includes 20,000 tractors, $12,000,000 worth of oil equipment, $35,000,000 worth of metallurgical machinery, $20,000,000 worth of copper, brass, zinc and electrical equipment, six to seven millions in machinery for coal mining, and from four to five million in machinery for rubber industries.

Must be Based on Credits

The statement of M. Gurievich says: "We regard America as the best market for tractors, agricultural, oil, electrical and coal machinery as well as for most of our metallurgical equipment, copper and other metal. But we cannot place orders without credit, which America refuses to give."

He exposes nicely the stupidities of the American bourgeoisie, when he points to the fact that most of the credits extended to Russia by other countries, particularly Germany, actually are financed by money provided by American capitalists. German industrial concerns, for instance, obtain orders from Russia, then with the contract as security, borrow money from American concerns, for which they pay 4 or 5 per cent, and charge Soviet Russia 9 per cent, thereby frequently making a clear profit of 100 per cent without any risk.

Use American Money For Power

Various European nations, anxious to rehabilitate themselves, use American money advanced on Russian securities, in order to get a firm foothold in that country, says M. Gurievich, adding that he prefers to do business with Americans directly.

He also warns the American investors and industrialists that if they fail to seize this opportunity to secure Russian business that they will not be considered in these particular lines in future, because if Russia begins with German, British or French machinery it will not be possible thereafter to switch to American. It is a plain business proposition of their accepting the offer now or letting the busi-

Platform of the Workers (Communist) Party

New York City Elections 1925

PREAMBLE.

The Tammany administration of the last eight years, like that of the republican-fusion administration which preceded it, has been devoted exclusively to the interests of the propertied classes of the city of New York. Under them, the conditions of the workers have grown intolerably worse. Food costs have sky-rocketed to enormous heights, overcrowding increases, dwellings are not repaired, new homes are not built except to rent at prices out of reach of the workers, and housing conditions go from bad to worse. Subways are jammed to suffocation. In the public schools the children are herded like cattle and are given part-time instruction by poorly paid teachers. The public school system has become a huge machine for turning out willing slaves for big business.

The police and courts are being used on an ever-increasing scale in the interest of the employers and against pickets and striking workers. Injunctions against picketing, supplemented by the use of the police club against the pickets, put the government of this city at the service of the employers as an organized strike-breaking machine. The treasury of the city remains at the service of grafting contractors and corrupted officials. Such are the "blessings" of any municipal administration under the rule of the capitalist parties, whether the particular servitor of big business in the city hall be selected by Tammany or the republican machine. Only a workers' government can eliminate these evils.

Waterman and Wall Street.

To make it doubly clear that the municipal administration will continue to faithfully serve the propertied classes, both capitalist parties have nominated frank and open servants of big business. Mr. Waterman is no mere hired servant of Wall Street. He is one of the Wall Street crowd. He is a millionaire in his own right, having enriched himself by the exploitation of labor. He may be counted upon to faithfully serve himself and his friends, by making the city government more obedient than ever to Wall Street.

Walker, the Traction Tool.

Walker is a hired tool of big business. He has already demonstrated that his loyalty to capitalism may always be depended upon in return for moderate fees, by his acceptance of payments from the meat trust at the same time that he was a member of the senate committee on agriculture which prepared measures dealing with the sale of food stuffs. It was as the servant of big business and the traction interests that he made his campaign to replace Hylan. This does not mean that Hylan was a less faithful servant of the bosses, but he represented not only the interests of property in general, but more specifically interests of smaller business and of the suburban real estate ring that was fighting the traction trust because a five cent fare is necessary for speculation in suburban real estate. For the rest, Hylan has done what Walker and Waterman will do: Put the courts and police at the service of the bosses to break strikes and the whole city machinery at the service of the propertied classes as against the workers.

For a Workers' Government.

The nomination of the candidates of big business on both capitalist tickets and the continuous use of the machinery of the government for the bosses and propertied classes against the workers, is a challenge to the workers of this city to take the government into their own hands.

This challenge finds them largely unprepared. In contrast to the power-

SUPER TRUST IN BREAD FORMED BY THREE COMBINES

One of Three Charged Under Clayton Act

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 6.—Two members of the federal trade commission have made public the charge made by the commission against the Continental Baking company, one of the three big baking concerns whose amalgamation into a gigantic bread trust controlling 157 big bakeries in the large cities thruout the country, was announced yesterday.

Super Trust With $400,000,000 Capital.

The charge, which is supposed to be kept secret under the majority ruling of the federal trade commission, but which is given out by Huston Thompson and John F. Nugent regardless of the secrecy rule, charges the Continental Baking company with violation of the Clayton act restraining competition. The announcement of the amalgamation of the three companies, the Ward, the General Baking and the Continental, is supposedly the provocation given the two commissioners.

Incorporation papers have been filed in Baltimore, Md., for the new corporation to be known as the General Baking corporation. The company represents a capital investment of $400,000,000.

Ward to Be Head.

William B. Ward of the Ward Baking company is expected to be the chairman of the new company after it has been consolidated.

The new company will have a combined sales volume of over $200,000,000 and the profits will be above $22,000,000 annually, and will control 10 per cent of the bread production in the country.

Control Raw Materials.

The combined corporation will control immense holdings of wheat land, flour mills, sugar refineries and dairies.

TCHITCHERIN PINS ANTI-SOVIET PACT ON GREAT BRITAIN

Germany Grants Large Credit to Soviets

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BERLIN, Oct. 6—Before leaving Berlin for Wiesbaden, M. T. Tchitcherin, commissar for foreign affairs of Soviet Russia gave an interview to the press, the leading remark of which was the statement that the imperialist powers—"whole security policy is directed altogether against the Soviets."

British Plot War

For two hours Tchitcherin was bombarded with questions by newspaper men of twenty nations, and he plainly indicated that the controlling imperialist powers in the league of nations are intending ultimate war against the workers' republic.

"British high finance is seeking an excuse for ultimate military measures against us, and France, too, the wind has changed."

Concerning the rumored security understanding between the Soviet power and Poland and other border states, Tchitcherin said:

No Impartial Arbiter Possible

"We cannot see the value of arbitration traties for Soviet Russia, since the fundamental difference between our political structure and that of the imperialist powers bars us from finding a really unbiased arbiter. Either the arbitral judge would favor our system or he would be against it. Non-aggression compacts are feasible, perhaps, but I cannot see much use in them. If one wants to make war, one will not be prevented by a non-aggressive pact."

"The present negotiations with Germany are still in the dark and no one knows where they will lead," he added, and even though Article 16 of the league of nations' covenant was interpreted so as to relieve Germany of

TARNOW, GERMAN EXPULSIONIST, TALKS OF UNITY TO A. F. OF L.; PURCELL TO SPEAK WEDNESDAY

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

STEEPLECHASE PIER, ATLANTIC CITY, Oct. 6.—Gestures of international trade union unity, exchanged between Fritz Tarnow, of the Woodworkers' Union fo Germany, speaking for the German delegation of fifteen visiting this country, and William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, furnished today's convention episode.

The gestures brought forth no enthusiasm from the delegates. The only time that they were raised out of their lethargy to any appreciable extent was when the German "socialist" labor official, Tarnow, assured these American democrats and republicans, who have taken their stand for "non-partisan" political action, that the power of the Communists in Germany had been overcome, claiming that the Communist waves were receding.

A Tarnow Speaks of Unity!

Tarnow called them Bolshevist waves, saying that, "Bolshevism was a very good religion for desperate and starving people," but that the German trade unions do not mean to drive the workers to desperation.

Tarnow did not mention the war, during which these German trade union leaders supported the kaiser, the war that brot on the resulting misery to the masses of the German workers. He merely said that the war had resulted in depleted union treasuries and reduced memberships which they were now trying to rebuild. He did not admit that his campaign of expulsion of Communists from the German unions had nearly wrecked the unions instead of building them, however.

Tarnow also dodged all mention of the role of the German "socialists" in the reichstag, the fact that all members of the delegation are socialists being ignored completely. They were only trade unionists and as nearly as possible spoke only the language of American trade unionists.

Tarnow made strong defense of the German capitalist republic claiming that only fools and political blockheads believe it possible to reestablish the old monarchial system. He declared it was the duty of the German trade unions to defend democracy within the republic.

Afraid to Mention R. I. L. U.

The trade union unity gesture came in an invitation to send delegates to the next German trade union congress, no mention having been made however, of the unity struggle between the Red International of Labor Unions and the Amsterdam Trade Union Iinternational.

President Green made a flowery speech in reply using the old expression so familiar to Gomperism that the German delegates had "kept the faith." In his return unity gesture, Green said, "We want to promote and intensify the friendship now established between the workers of Germany and the United States; to promote the good will and solidarity of the trade unions of the world."

Similar gestures were made, however at the El Paso convention last year, when Gompers was still at the helm, and Peter Grossman came as the lone German delegate, but no American delegate was sent to Germany.

No one seems to know even now whether these gestures will result in concrete action at this convention.

Conflict with British.

In fact, another angle of this trade union unity question could be visualized on the platform as A. A. Purcell and Ben Smith, the two British delegates, listened to the German, Tarnow.

The Germans are wholeheartedly

MORRISON FROWNS UPON RED WRITERS AT A. F. OF L. MEET

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Oct. 6.—Communists are not popular at this, as well as at past, conventions of the American Federation of Labor, with the result that both J. Louis Engdahl, of the DAILY WORKER, and M. J. Olgin, writing for both the Novy Mir (Russian), and Freiheit (Jewish) Communist dailies of New York City, are without the badges handed out to the capitalist reporters at the press tables.

Both Engdahl and Olgin applied at the office of Secretary Morrison for their press badges.

"Is that the Communist daily in Chicago?" asked Morrison, as he looked over Engdahl's application.

Engdahl replied that it was and Morrison frowned and declared the application would have to be held up and considered.

"What is the objection?" asked Engdahl.

"Well," said Morrison, "there is a lot of ill feeling about the DAILY WORKER," and would offer no further explanation. Morrison is still considering.

Olgin handed in his credential for Golos Truba (Voice of Labor), the official organ of the Council of All-Russian Trade Unions, for which he also writes. Secretary Morrison was out, but Olgin was received by a clerk in the office, who held up the application for press privileges.

Later Olgin suffered the same experience with Morrison that Engdahl had previously met with.

But both Engdahl and Olgin still occupy places at the press table, however, minus any press badges.

Engdahl will speak Sunday night, October 11, in Philadelphia, on "The American Federation of Labor Convention."

Move to Reconcile Living and Orthodox Churches Collapses

MOSCOW, Oct. 6.—Efforts to reconcile the two factions of the Russian church were on the verge of a breakdown as adherents of the two churches engaged in a bitter exchange of charges today.

A conference of the bishops of the living church was called to foster a peace movement between the living church and the old Russian orthodox church, but the effort did not meet with success. Metropolitan Peter of the old church refused to attend the conference and meet with the bishops of the living church.

FINANCIAL BLOCKADE OF THE SOVIET UNION IS COLLAPSING

STOVE MOUNTERS ORGANIZATION DRIVE SUCCESS

Struck Cleveland Shop to Settle

By Worker Correspondent.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Oct. 6—Three months ago the International Stove Mounters' Union sent an organizer to Cleveland for the purpose of organizing a stove mounters' local. The union has so far done good work. It has organized approximately 100 men into Local No. 29, which on Monday, Sept. 28, was successful in calling a strike of the Economy and Champion Stove Works which was effective almost 100 per cent. The mounters' wages ranged from 60 to 67½c per hour. The men are asking a 15c increase and recognition of their union.

Plant Settles.

At the time of writing it is reported that one of the plants is alread at the verge of settling and it is reasonable to believe, because of the close relationship of the one plant to the other, that the other will also accede to the demands of the workers.

This strike marks the opening of a vigorous campaign to organize all the stove shops of this city.

HOPE TO FLOAT $500,000,000 LOAN IN U. S.

Germany to Ask for Money in Chicago

CHICAGO, Oct. 6.—Nations abroad are going to seek loans totalling $500,000,000 from this country, and Germany wants to have her manufacturing cities financed and expects to float all her loans in Chicago.

Those are some of the observations of former Senator James Hamilton Lewis, who arrived at his home here today from Europe where he visited the league of nations as counsel for a group of small nations seeking recommendations for loans from the United States. Poland, Greece and Roumania, three of the nations in this group, will ask to borrow $200,000,000, he said.

"Germany expects to borrow the money she needs in and around Chicago, where the Germans of America have their large properties."

FAULTY BRACING IN R. R. TUNNEL CAUSED DEATH OF SEVERAL WORKERS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

RICHMOND, Va., Oct., —Faulty bracing caused the collapse here last week of the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad tunnel in which several men were entombed and more than 100 workers narrowly escaped death, the state corporation commission was advised today in an official report. Efforts were renewed today to recover the bodies of Thomas J. Mason, engineer of the work train, and several Negro laborers who were entombed.

LEGION MEET HEARS WAR SPEECH DISGUISED AS PEACE TALK, BUT IT KNOWS CAL DOESN'T MEAN IT

CITY AUDITORIUM, OMAHA, Nebr., Oct. 6.—Demobilization of racial antagonisms, fears, hatreds and suspicions are necessary if the world is to avoid another war, President Coolidge declared here today in a speech before the American legion convention. The president made a plea, which was indirectly intended for the whole world for tolerance, thus exemplifying the fact that when imperialist diplomats are planning war they begin strong propaganda for peace.

Intellectual demobilization is as necessary as military demobilization, the president said, and he pleaded with the legionnaires to take the lead in wiping out "national bigotry." He failed to advocate any "tolerance" toward labor by capital, however, and stuck to religion.

There were twelve thousand wildly enthusiastic delegates in the city auditorium and they gave the president a remarkable welcome, it being nearly a quarter of an hour before their demonstration subsided sufficiently for the president to speak. They showed that the demonstration was well planned beforehand.

The president scored the American trend towards religious intolerance and condemned the efforts of the military to usurp the power of the civilian to dictate in the matter of national defense.

The president extolled republican efforts in behalf of federal economy and pledged a continuance of this policy.

"Our government was costing almost more than it was worth," he said, "but the government expenditures have been cut almost in two, taxes have been twice reduced, and the incoming congress will provide further reductions."

As the president concluded there was a burst of cheering that subsided as the various state delegations began local demonstration. The commander, Drain, expressed the appreciation of the legion for his visit.

Then Dr. Sherwood, state commander of Texas, was recognized to present the president with a Texas "ten gallon hat." It was presented and the president wore it while the convention howled its glee.

In the afternoon, the president and his party stood for several hours in a drizzling rain and reviewed the greater portion of the legion's parade.

for the Dawes plan. The British are bitterly against it.

"Sure, the Germans are for the Dawes plan. It gives jobs to German workers, but it takes jobs away from British workers," said Smith later.

The Dawes plan uses part of the world trade union movement as a club against another part of the trade union movement. No mention was made of the Dawes plan in the executive report to this A. F. of L. convention.

Purcell Speaks Wednesday.

President Green said that it was at his request that the German delegation was in attendance at the convention. In their tours of the country the Germans will be under the careful guidance of the officials of the various international unions. They will see American labor conditions thru the eyes of the official A. F. of L. regime.

Smith and Purcell address the convention Wednesday afternoon.

CHIEF U. S. DETECTIVE DARK HORSE CANDIDATE FOR LEGION COMMANDER

(Special to The Daily Worker)

OMAHA, Neb., Oct.—All doubts as to the anti-labor character of the American legion should vanish in view of the fact that at the legion's convention here, the strongest dark horse candidate for national commander of the organization is Col. William ("Will Bill") Donovan, who is now chief of the investigation bureau of the United States department of justice. Besides this nabob of finks there are some five candidates, but when Coolidge addresses the convention tomorrow, "Wild Bill's" stock is expected to be boosted considerably.

ness go to foreigners, operating with American money.

Slams American Debt Claim

The statement considers the objection raised by certain American capitalists to the effect that they will extend no credits to Russia because of the Bolshevik repudiation of the American debts. He reminds the objectors that Tchitcherin has already replied to President Coolidge's message that the Soviet Union was ready to begin negotiations immediately to settle not only the national debt question but the private claims of American nationals. The only stipulation involved in such a discussion of debts was that the counter claim against the vandalism of the American soldiers in Siberia under President Wilson's regime be also placed on the order of the day.

This statement issued by the head of the foreign department of the supreme council of national economy will undoubtedly be used in the American congress by those spokesman for the industrialists who have been carrying on a fight for the recognition of Soviet Russia.

Small Swindle Suit Involving Million Before State Court

When the state supreme court meets for its October term at Springfield the most important item on its calender will be the handling down of a decision of the famous suit to recover $1,000,000 in interest on state funds that are alleged to have disappeared while the present Governor, Len Small, was state treasurer.

The case has been in the hands of the court since June and upon the final decree rests the fate of Small and his political followers. It is hinted in various quarters that the governor's party as well as the opposition are so very much interested in the case that they may be attempting to use old political ties, business and social relationships and other means to influence the decision of the justices of the state court.

Japan and England Want Fat Job of Customs Collector

PEKIN, Oct. 6—The Japanese delegation will be numerically larger than any other delegation in the coming Pekin parley, where Japan is going to demand that England turn over the fact job of inspector general of customs to her.

England, on the other hand, refuses to give up this cushy berth, as many pounds now flow into the coffers of the British lion. Under the Japanese plan, the customs receipts would go thru Japanese banks, thus enriching the Nippon treasury.

Tho it will be a fight over the right to collect the receipts in her territory, China will be given little consideration in spite of the large delegation she is also to send into the conference.

British Parliament Member Urges a New "Disarmament" Meet

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6—Calling of an international disarmament conference was urged upon President Coolidge today by R. S. Hudson, British M. P., in a speech to the interparliamentary union.

Hudson's proposal was loudly cheered when he declared that Great Britain was ready to meet other powers in a conference to reduce both land and sea armaments.

MOSCOW MUSICAL STUDIO ARRIVES ON DECEMBER 14

To Be in New York Seven Weeks

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—The Moscow Art Theatre Musical Studio will open its American engagement in New York City, December 14, according to Morris Gest, who has booked them for a seven week engagement, at a theatre that as yet has not been determined.

To Give Five Productions.

The Moscow Art Theatre Musical Studio will give the entire repertory of five productions it has made since its opening in May, 1920. The five productions will probably be given at intervals of a week apart as was the Moscow Art Theatre dramatic repertory. The Moscow Art Theatre Musical Studio will present Lecocq's "The Daughter of Madame Angot," Aristophanes's "Lysistrata," with music on Greek themes by the modern Russian composer Reinhold Gliere; "Carmencita and the Soldier," with the Bizet music for "Carmen," and a wholly new libretto drawn direct from Merimee's story by the Russian poet Constantin Lipskeroff; Offenbach's "La Perichole," and a triple bill from Pushkin entitled "Love and Death," featuring Rachmaninoff's short opera "Aleko" and including also Arensky's "The Fountain of Bakhchi-Saral" and Gliere's mimo-drama "Cleopatra."

Original Settings.

The original stage settings for all of these productions will be brought intact with the company. Among these settings will be represented the work of Maria Gortinskaya, Pierre Kontchalovsky and Isaac Rabinovitch.

Among the leading players in the company will be Olga Baklanova, one of the outstanding dramatic and vocal talents in Russia's younger generation; Vladimir Lossky, Leonid Baratov and Ivan Velikanov, who appears in many leading roles opposite Baklanova.

Bring Entire Company

The company, which includes 105 persons, will bring its own conductors, Vladimir Bakaleynikov and Constantin Shvedov, and its own chorus-master, Yelena Skatkina. In the executive staff will be Yakov Gremilavsky, one of the greatest living masters of makeup, who has been associated with the Moscow Art Theatre since its foundation in 1898. The administrative staff will be headed by Dr. Sergei Berthensson and Dr. Leonid D. Leonidov, who served in a similar capacity with the dramatic company during its two seasons on our stage.

From Leningrad to Berlin.

The Leningrad season of the company, which has been a huge success ever since its opening early in September, is now drawing to a close and preparations are under way for transferring the personnel and productions to Berlin, where a season of twenty performances will begin in the middle of October. Nemirovitch-Dantchenko will arrive in advance of the company to consult with Morris Gest and conclude all arrangements for the New York engagement.

Tchitcherin Pins the Anti-Soviet War Pact on British Financiers

the obligation to permit military expeditions to cross Germany to attack Soviet Russia, still the league was governed by the same hostile forces as before and they would find a way to evade it.

Germany Still a Subject Nation

Moreover, Tchitcherin discounted the idea that Germany, by its membership in the league, could vote down any war on Soviet Russia. "Unanimity is not always necessary in the league's decisions. Germany may be drawn into anti-Soviet schemes against her will." He repeatedly accented the hostility of Great Britain toward Soviet Russia and mentioned that Britain was trying to get a naval base in the Baltic from Esthonia.

Tchitcherin remarked on the improvement of trade relations with America, but added:

"President Coolidge still appears to be opposed to recognition, but his position is dictated rather by considerations of domestic politics than by international or economic motives."

Germany Grants Credits to Soviet

Before the interview Tchitcherin issued a statement on the economic situation in the Soviet Union, showing that the present grain crop would be 87 per cent of the exceptionally large 1913 yield, allowing large exports.

From other sources the correspondents learn that German financiers have granted a credit to Soviet Russia of 100,000,000 marks, or approximately $25,000,000.

The Supreme Council of National Economy has sent a circular to all economic organs, pointing out the great importance for Russian industries of the utilization of inventions and improvements. All inventions and improvements tested in the factories must become national property.

The A. F. of L. Convention Betrays Itself by the Company it is Keeping

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the "Fat Boys," as the majority of delegates to American Federation of Labor conventions have come to be known, are in session on Steeplechase Pier, that juts the sands and out into the sea at this watering place of the parasite rich in search of jazz.

Much could be written as to why two A. F. of L. conventions have been held here in six years. In 1919, the delegates still drunk from their orgy of jingoism, trying to help Wilson win "the war for democracy," gathered here and rubbed elbows with the war profiteers. They were calloused against the militant call of the Russian bolshevik revolution, instead beginning the drift that has resulted in the present war on the Communists and militants generally in the trade unions, in the bitter attack on every indication that the government at Washington looks with any sympathy upon the recognition of the Union of Soviet Republics, and the running away from even the slightest phase of the class struggle.

• • • •

The A. F. of L. delegates, therefore, come here on a par with the business men who frequent this seaside resort. For are they not in the insurance business, are they not also bankers, do they not also believe in "company unions," differing only slightly as to the brand, and do they not seek to bridge and eliminate the chasm between the master and slave class under the wages system with their class collaboration schemes? Among the first to congratulate the plasterers' and bricklayers' unions on the settlement of their jurisdictional dispute were a couple of New York contractors.

• • • •

Labor organizations in their militant infancy do not come to resorts for idlers like Atlantic City to hold their conventions. They meet in the centers of struggle, where the workers can be enthused for greater efforts. They go where the men and women of labor are standing erect facing new battles, not where the most familiar sight is that of the American rickshawman bending his back pushing a wheelchair, freighted with bejeweled capitalist human swine, along the boardwalk.

• • • •

Four cities are seeking next year's A. F. of L. convention, and they are typical. They are Los Angeles and Sacramento, Calif., Birmingham, Ala., and Detroit, Mich.

Judged by all its present characteristics, the convention should vote to go to the moving picture factory on the Pacific Coast, where only the merest echoes of the class clashes in the great basic industries are heard.

The A. F. of L., in its present mood, would be uncomfortable in Birmingham, Ala., the Pittsburgh of the South, steel and coal center of industrialized Dixie. This is the "open shop" home of Oscar Underwood, perennial candidate for the presidential nomination at the hands of the democratic party, the same party that William Green, president of the A. F. of L., like the late Gompers, adheres to. The steel workers and the coal miners are unorganized, as are the lumber workers. A rich field to raise the standards of organized labor. There would also be an opportunity to study the question of the relations of Negro and white workers. But such things are foreign to these labor bankers and insurance magnates.

• • • •

There is also Detroit, that has a kernel of militancy in its local labor movement. President James O'Connell, of the Metal Trades Department, devoted a full page of his report to the organization of the auto workers. Detroit labor would be glad to have an A. F. of L. convention raise the cry for unionization in the auto industry. That would have been a good place to hold this year's A. F. of L. convention. The bosses would then have something to fear. But the answer is found in O'Connell's own report that points out all the jurisdictional barriers that would arise thru a multitude of unions claiming the members that would thus be brought into the ranks of organized labor. He paints the picture as hopeless.

• • • •

These are some of the reasons why this A. F. of L. convention is meeting in Atlantic City, where ease and comfort abound, if you have the price to pay. As the A. F. of L. changes, when the time comes for its Scarborough, then it will choose a different place in which to hold its annual gathering.

had previously been customary should be elected; and that the Communist custom of placing on the executive committee several workers who continue to work in the shops while serving on the committee should be followed. It had been agreed before the convention, he said, that the new executive should be constituted of 21 members with an equal number from each of the two leading groups in the league, and he recommended that the number be ten for the present majority of the convention (the former minority of the N. E. C.) and ten for the minority of the convention (the former majority of the N. E. C.), with the representative of the Central Executive Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party as the twenty-first member of the N. E. C. of the league.

The suggestion of Comrade Stachel being accepted, the new National Executive Committee of the league was unanimously elected as follows: Sam Darcy, Sam Don, William Herberg, Nat Kaplan, George Papcun, H. V. Phillips, Al Schaap, Jack Stachel, Pat H. Toohey, Herbert Zam, Max Schachtman, John Williamson, Max Salzman, Peter Shapiro, Joseph Angelo, Sam Winocur, Morris Schindler, Valeria Meltz, John Harvey, William Schneiderman.

In addition there were elected 14 alternates as follows:

Alternates.

Emma Blechschmidt, Ralph Fisher, Dominick Filani, Nat Kutisker, Sam Milgrim, Julius Rubin, Anna Thompson, Tony Wishtart, Ben Rubin, Zelecko, Norman Bernick, Jack Reynolds, Gilbert Greenberg, G. Allard.

Communist Soldier-Rebel Elected Honary Member of Youth League Executive.

At this point Comrade Nat Kaplan arose and nominated Paul Crouch, the young Communist soldier now in the United States military prison at Alcatraz, to be an honorary member of the National Executive Committee of the Young Workers (Communist) League of America. The nomination was received with a pandemonium of cheers. Comrade J. P. Cannon then spoke on the nomination, declaring that Comrade Crouch is a true young Communist and would be a worthy addition as an honorary member of the new leading body of the Young Workers (Communist) League. After the prison term of Comrade Crouch shall have ended, said Comrade Cannon, there is no doubt that Comrade Paul Crouch will not fill merely an honorary but an active capacity among the leadership of the revolutionary Communist youth.

Comrade Crouch was unanimously elected.

ITALY TO BUILD GREAT FLEET OF SMALL VESSELS

Super - Submarines on Navy Program

ROME, Oct. 6.—Italy is considering a new naval building program, as the result of observations of recent naval manouvers, according to reports in reliable quarters here today.

Italian experts, it is claimed, are convinced that the battleship has lost its efficiency as a fighting force. This opinion has been strengthened by the maneuvers when all vessels of the battleship class were either "sunk" or "disabled" by submarines and aircraft.

The projected new building program, it is said, will consist in the main of destroyers, fast motor-torpedo boats, and submarines. Coincident with the change in the naval building program a great expansion of the naval air fleet is also proposed.

Among the new submarines planned is one which will eclipse the British X-1, heretofore regarded as the most powerful underwater unit in the world. The proposed Italian ultra-submarine will displace 3,000 tons, and is to have six diesel engines of 6,000 horse-power, with a surface speed of 21 knots. This giant craft will be armed with six inch guns mounted in triple turrets, which can be entered from the conning tower.

GARY STEEL MILL 'SAFETY' SYSTEM CHAINS WORKERS

Meeting Proves Agent's Speeches Are Bunk

By Worker Correspondent.

W. P. Gleason, general superintendent of the Gary works of the U. S. Steel Corp. is waging a campaign to decrease accidents from the hundreds that happen yearly to none. This campaign is being carried on not because Mr. Gleason cares anything about the thousands of workers who slave, but to cut down the compensation which the corporation must pay all injured men.

Special agents of the corporation call safety meetings about every two weeks which all workers must attend and there swallow the bunk that the agents give them. At these meetings the workers are given the "great opportunity," as the agents call it, to discuss the best way to prevent accidents and turn out more profits for the steel barons. After the workers are given a chance to report on the conditions, the agent takes the floor and begins to speak.

Should be Glad to be Exploited.

The meeting which I attended at the plate mill, the agent, in his lengthy speech did not mention one word of safety work for which he is supposed to be hired and paid for. Instead he began with bunk of how much the Gary corporation was doing for its men, etc. He said, "You men ought to be glad that the Gary works of the U. S. Steel Corp. gives you the opportunity of coming here to work and and make a living for yourself and your families. In other parts of the country the mills are down, (he stamps his foot as he repeats this word) but we are running our mills here giving you a chance to work and live, and yet some of you are not thankful, you go about your work carelessly."

Pink Slip for Injured.

Because a Negro worker cut his arm very severely and was not able to work the safety man put all the blame on the worker. He said that if the man had been careful he would not have cut his arm with the sharp piece of scrap as he did. But because he was careles the company must pay him wages for coming here and doing nothing.

"All right, men," he said, "we will let this man come to the mill and do nothing, and get paid for it, but from now on if any man is hurt and it is his fault thru carelessness we will not pay him for the time he loses and we'll also give him the pink slip." This means that he will be fired.

Men Laid off While Repairs are Neglected.

A crane man reported that water was leaking on the stairs to the crane, and in the winter it froze and it was imposible for a man to go to the crane without falling. This report was made a year ago and at the last meeting he reported that the stairs were not fixed up yet.

The excuse that the safety man gave for this was that the boiler shop was too busy and could not fix them. He also reported that 11,960 men were no the pay roll in August, whereas in normal times the mill employed 18,000, meaning that one-third of the men have been laid off, and yet the safety work was not carried on.

This is all due to non-union conditions in the steel mills. Had the workers been organized they could demand safety devices and get them. But not being organized if a man makes a complaint he is fired, and someone else takes his place.

RUSS WORKERS PROTEST AGAINST ROUMANIAN BOYAR ATTEMPT TO MURDER TATARBOUNAR PEASANTS

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., Oct. 6.—On the 20th of September the first anniversary of the southern Bessarabian peasants insurrection, a mass meeting of protest took place in Moscow against the trial in which 500 Bessarabian peasants are accused.

A member of the Central Committee of the Roumanian Communist Party, Dobrazhanu, who has recently arrived in Moscow, described the despairing situation of the outlawed peasants in Bessarabia. The meeting decided to request the Peasants International to issue an appeal to the Roumanian peasant organization to prevent the murders of the Tatarbounar peasants at the trial at Kishenev, Bessarabia.

Odessa Demonstrates.

A mass demonstration in which 15,000 workers took part, took place in Odessa against the process in which the participants of the Tatarbounar uprising are accused.

Peasant Speaks.

A Bessarabian peasant who had just arrived a few days previous to the demonstration from Bessarabia, and who was one of the active participants in the insurrection, gave the details of the medieval tortures inflicted on the peasants by the Sigurantsi (Roumanian secret police). He pointed out that during the eight years of Roumanian occupation, no less than 135 peasant insurrections have taken place in Bessarabia. Further acts of desperation on the part of the Bessarabian peasants may be expected as long as the reign of terror instituted by the Roumanian boyars continues.

FAMOUS RUSSIAN POET RETURNS TO CHICAGO OCT. 20

Mayakovsky Will Give Last Lecture Here

Altho he was supposed to leave this week for Soviet Russia, the famous Russian poet Vladimir Mayakovsky yielded to the request of his Chicago admirers to give another lecture in Chicago. He will speak here on Tuesday, Oct. 20, at Schoenhofen Hall, corner Ashland and Milwaukee Aves. Fear is expressed that the hall may be too small, but this was the only hall that was available for this date. There is room for over a thousand people.

The enthusiastic crowd that wildly cheered Vladimir Mayakovsky at his last lecture is expected to pack this hall also. An attempt will be made to arrange also a banquet with the famous guest.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SHANGHAI, Oct. 6—A strike that may paralyze the Shanghai customs service, loomed today when Chinese customs junior employes now organizing a union declared they would walk out unless their demands were granted. An inquiry into the union activities of the employes is now under way. The Chinese government officially announced it would not participate in this inquiry.

NEGRO LABOR CONGRESS HEAD REPORTS GLOWING PROSPECTS FOR COMING CHICAGO MEET

By LOVETT FORT-WHITEMAN, National Organizer.

The date draws near for the opening of the American Negro Labor Congress at Chicago October 25th. There are many reasons to believe that this day, the 25th of October, will bring a new page to the history of the Negro in this country and the American labor movement. Having recently returned from a tour in the east and middle west attending conferences of the various local committees of the American Negro Labor Congress, I cannot help but feel a glowing satisfaction with the wide response and active participation of the Negro workers of the mines, steel mills, factories, railroads, etc.

Local Conferences

In witnessing the local conferences which have taken place, those conferences having for their purpose the electing of delegates to the American Negro Labor Congress at Chicago, the national organizer feels justified in saying that Chicago will witness a conference of labor in this city, numbering some 500 delegates and representing hundreds of thousands of organized proletarians of the race. It has indeed been quite gratifying to note the fine spirit of solidarity manifested between white and black workers at many of these conferences, where many white unionists were elected as delegates to the congress by their respective organizations. This is one of the aims (realized yet only on a small scale) for which the American Negro Labor Congress is being called: To establish in the minds of both the white and black workers a spirit of amicability and class solidarity.

The middle west embraces one of the most important sections of the industrial life of the nation. It is in these parts where hundreds of thousands of Negroes have come up from the south and settled during and since the war. They recognize that, having left a most miserable system of racial persecution in the southern states, they now find themselves under the most painful system of industrial exploitation. Having been less fed up on the teachings of the capitalist press, capitalist institutions of learning and other agencies of public opinion, they ever stick close to the realities of life and clearly understand their needs and social degradation of their race.

All Workers Assemble.

Thousands of Negroes in the iron and coal mines of Alabama, steel mills of Pennsylvania and Ohio and Illinois, coal mines of the Virginias, great turpentine distilleries of Georgia and Florida, cotton and sugar plantations of Arkansas and Texas, Louisiana and Mississippi have been aroused by the urgent call for a congress representative of American Negro labor, and their delegates are coming —coming in great numbers, to lay before this body the grievances daily weighing heavily upon the life of this great mass of black workers and to formulate forthwith plans of organization and methods of combat for the liberation of their class. Each day, everyone promoting the American Negro Labor Congress notes a growing uneasiness in the ruling class of this country in contemplation of the coming American Negro Labor Congress. They cannot help but feel that when the Negro workers, the most exploited, plundered and oppressed of all workers in America, are beginning to organize on class lines and with the aim of establishing the idea of class solidarity not only with the white workers of this country, but with all the workers of the world regardless of race, color or clime, indeed a new day is dawning for the oppressed.

To Mobilize Negroes.

The aim of the American Negro Labor Congress is to mobilize and to co-ordinate into a fighting machine the most enlightened and militant and class-conscious workers of the race in the struggle for the abolition of lynching, jim-crowism, industrial discrimination, political disfranchisement, segregation, etc.

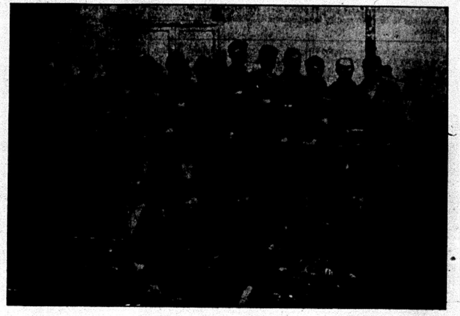
The American Negro Labor Congress will assume an attitude of helpfulness toward the many groups in every part of the country which are at present agitating a nation-wide campaign for shorter hours of the working day for both men and women.

And in view of the many futile appeals to our national congress at Washington to make lynching a federal crime, the American Negro Labor Congress shall propose that the seat of action be changed to the masses themselves and shall endeavor to stimulate and promote the organizing of inter-racial committees thruout the nation with the aim of bringing about a better feeling between black and white workers as a remedy against lynching and race riots. Racial antagonism arise from class exploitation. Racial antagonism is not an inherent thing in the make-up of the individual.

Congress Composition.

The American Negro Labor Congress will be composed of delegates from the various Negro labor unions, from mixed unions (white and black), from unorganized factory groups of Negro workers, of representatives from groups of Negro agricultural workers, and of individual advocates, both Negro and white, who are well-known for their championship of the cause of the Negro working class in particular.

Tatarbounar Peasants on Trial at Kishinev



THIS photograph shows 48 of the Tatarbounar peasants now on trial at Kishenev. Bessarabia, for participating in a peasants' revolt against the rule of the Roumanian boyars. If you will look closely you will see they are tied one to another by ropes and chains at the elbows. They are driven around in large squads with armed police as escorts. The charge against them is "crime against safety of the state," punishable by death or life imprisonment.

CHINESE LABOR WAGES WARFARE ON ALL FRONTS

Native Bosses Find the Workers Militant

MOSCOW, Sept. 10.—(By mail.)—Recently the strike movement in China has spread to Chinese undertakings also. The printers, railwaymen, post and telegraph employees and the textile workers in several industrial centres have put forward a number of demands, increase of wages, the eight hour day, vacations, the recognition of the unions, etc.

In this connection the strikers stress the fact that the strike movement in the Chinese undertakings is purely an economic one and not as is the case with the foreign undertakings, political. The working class is marching at the head of the movement for national freedom and bears the chief burden of the struggle against the one-sided agreements and for customs autonomy.

At the same time the working class is carrying on a struggle for the betterment of its own conditions of life. An appeal of the Shanghai Trade Union Council points out that wages have remained stationary for ten years despite an increase in the cost of living amounting to a 100 per cent. For this reason the Chinese employers must grant the demands of the workers, otherwise strikes will be declared.

On the one hand the national revolutionary struggle is intensifying against England and on the other it is developing the class war. A number of strikes have already ended with victory for the workers.

Legion to Consider Staying in Politics

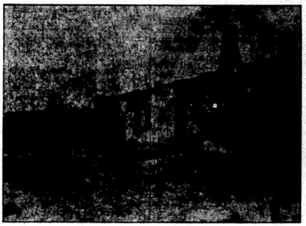
OMAHA, Nebr., Oct. 6.—Three big questions are going to enliven the sessions of the seventh national convention of the American Legion, opening here today. In order of their importance, in the minds of the legionnaires, they are:

1. Shall the legion amend its constitution to eliminate the article keeping the organization officially out of politics and political questions?
2. Shall the legion, by official resolution, go on record favoring the modification of the Volsted act?
3. Shall the legion, backing Col. "Billy" Mitchell, offer an official resolution urging an independent air service?

Complete Works of Tolstoy.

The state publishing department of the U. S. S. R. has granted one million roubles for the publication of the works of Leo Tolstoy. This edition, estimated to be 92 volumes, will be published on the occasion of the centenary of the author's birth in 1928.

After a Sigurantsi "Visit"



THIS photograph shows a picture of a peasant's home that was raided by the Sigurantsi (Roumanian secret police) in Tatarbounar, southern Bessarabia. The interior of this house was made a total wreck. This home fared much better than many in the surrounding neighborhood. In the reprisals following the peasants' revolt, many peasants' homes were broken into, their possessions destroyed or stolen, their wives and daughters raped and those who were most active in the formation of a Soviet republic murdered.

BUILDING INDUSTRY IN FAIR WAY FOR WINTER WORK; CHICAGO LEADS

The survey of the building industry made by S. W. Strauss and company, indicates that considerable work is ahead, both in Chicago and thruout the country. The survey states:

"Chicago continues to keep abreast of its former building records. The valuation of building permits issued in September being larger than those issued in the same month last year."

In some middle western, Pacific and southern cities the usual fall let up has begun. In Florida, however, activity continues and in other sections of the country the autumnal decline is not likely to be so much as usual, in view of the record breaking issue of permits recently especially during August.

Find Armored Skeletons.

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Oct. 6.—Nine skeletons, one of them encased in armor, have been unearthed from an old mound three miles north of Walkerton, in St. Joseph county. Estimates of the age of the mound are 500 years. The bones were uncovered at a depth of 12 feet, the skeletons lying like the spokes of a wheel from the hub, the heads together. With the bones were three pounds of ore believed to be white gold.

Unemployment Figures Get Soft Pedal from U. S. Bureau Director

WASHINGTON, October 6.—(FP)—Francis I. Jones, director of the U. S. unemployment service, has lately accepted an order from Secretary of Labor Davis that he cease to gather and publish unemployment statistics from the state of Illinois. He is instructed to accept the unemploymen figures reported by the state labor department.

"It is true that I secured my unemployment figures from chambers of commerce, bankers, securities to plant managers, and other people who knew," Jones told The Federated Press. "The Illinois people thought I was too conservative as to the number of people out of work. Now, it is my view that while the figures should be stated, they should be stated in such a way as to soften the bad news they may contain. Talking hard times makes hard times. My policy is to report unemployment but not to keep harping on the seriousness of its possibilities."

Jones was disputed as to the accuracy of his reports, at a recent convention of unemployment statisticians at Salt Lake City, and complaints were made that he had caused a swarm of migratory workers to enter Louisiana and Oklahoma at harvest time when there was a surplus of farm labor available in those states. Cotton pickers were needed in certain areas, but the state authorities tried to make Jones understand that cotton pickers are skilled workers and must be found in the cotton belt.

Moscow Industries Run Without Loss.

This year, for the first time, since the revolution, Moscow industries are run without a loss. Against the 77 thousand workers employed last year, there are at present 100,000 workers, and the number of workers in all Moscow enterprises is 350,000.

NO. 3 PRESSMEN BATTLE BERRY IN FEDERATION

Lose Seats But Gain Friends in C. F. of L.

The strikebreaking activities of "Majah" Berry and his associates were denounced by a number of delegates at the last meeting of the Chicago Federation of Labor, when the executive board brot in a recommendation to seat Berry's scabby outfit. Fitspatrick stated that the laws of the A. F. of L. had to be lived up to.

The delegates from Pressmen's No. 3 were given the floor and pointed out the unfair procedure of unseating them before even giving a chance to hear their side of the story and pointed out that it was not Pressmen's Local No. 3 that had violated any laws of the union, but "Majah" Berry and that the lay members of the Pressmen's Union refused to work under scab conditions and had conducted themselves as union men should.

Compared to A. C. W. Fight.

Delegate Lichtenstein of Painters No. 275, stated that this case was similar to the situation existing between the Amalgamated Clothing Workers and the United Garment Workers and denounced "Majah" Berry as a notorious strikebreaker.

Delegate Shussler of the Photo Engravers, went into the history of the fight between Berry and No. 3, and the famous theft of $275,000 was again brot to the attention of the delegates. He also reminded the delegates of the unseating of the stereotypers in 1912, when the federation took the action of the A. F. of L. convention and when scabs were seated over the protest of the rank and file.

Berry Not Quite Popular.

Altho the recommendation of the board was adopted by a majority vote, the dissatisfaction against the tactics of "Majah" Berry and his scabby tools was quite evident in the discussion.

Delegate Werlik of the Metal Polishers, reported on the strike at the Cribben and Sexton company, and how the plant has been surrounded by thugs and detectives to intimidate the men when the strike became effective. The company had transferred the work to another company, the Chicago Plating Works, and the metal polishers were able to organize this plant and finally called a strike there.

This explained the attempt of the bosses to hire thugs to break the strike. The matter, Werlik stated, will be brot before the A. F. of L. convention and a national campaign made to compel the company to come to terms. The federation granted credentials to the metal polishers to visit all local unions in Chicago on this matter.

Less Than 300,000 Immigrants Come In; 92,000 Go Back Home

WASHINGTON.—(FP)—Only 294,314 immigrants entered the United States in the fiscal year which ended June 30, 1925, while 92,728 emigrants left our ports in the same period, says a report by the bureau of immigration. This leaves an immigrant net total of 201,586 for the year.

For the month of July, 1925, starting the new fiscal year, the immigrants totalled 18,599 and the emigrants 8,784 or a net balance of 9,806.

Canadian Quota Large.

Of the immigrants in the fiscal year 1924-25, 102,496 came over the land border from Canada, and 32,293 across the land border from Mexico. New York port received 107,492 of the aliens, Boston 9,023, Philadelphia 409, Baltimore 68, Providence 948, San Francisco 1,927, Seattle 1,233, New Orleans 727, and Key West 686. A curious phase of the movement through Pacific ports was the fact that all of them had more emigrants than immigrants.

The total incoming was 3,543, and the outgoing 5,238. For July, 1925, the incoming were 217 and the outgoing 422. The year's total immigration from China was 1,937 and the return movement 3,412. The excess of outgoing over incoming aliens was noted also for Japan, India, Armenia and Turkey in Asia.

Irish Send Many.

The Irish Free State sent 25,440 to this country during the year, and received back 921; Italy sent only 6,203 and received back 27,151; Greece sent 826 and took home 6,574; Finland sent 480 and took back 464. From Germany came 46,068, and returned 3,646; from Poland 5,341 and returned to Poland 3,721. Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Esthonia and Latvia sent far more than returned home, while Czechoslovakia, Rumania, Jugoslavia and Lithuania received more than they sent.

EMIGRES EXPOSE BASE TREACHERY OF MENSHEVIKS

Menshevik Leaders Aid Bourgeoisie

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, Oct. 6.—(I. R. A.)—In Tiflis a numerous group of Parisian emigrants who have left the ranks of the menshevik party has arrived. The members were greeted heartily. The emigrants, amongst them members of 15 and 20 years standing in the menshevik party, declared that they could no longer reconcile the policy of the Georgian emigrant leaders with proletarian honesty and they therefore preferred to return and take part in the socialist reconstruction of their country instead of serving as the instruments of irresponsible conspirative intrigues of the emigrant leaders supported by the international bourgeoisie.

The returned told how Giordiani and Tseretelli and their followers use all methods including denunciations to the Parisian police, to smother the spirit amongst the Georgian emigrants towards a return to Georgia.

Marseilles Hears Issue.

The workers' group amongst the Georgian emigrants requested the Marseilles congress of the Second International to appoint a commission to go into the question of the present relations between it and the emigrant leaders. The congress, however, left the request unnoticed, for it had the effect of drawing the attention of the congress to the counter-revolutionary degeneration of the Georgian social democracy. The group directed itself also to the league for human rights and to the national conference of the French social-democratic party with the like result.

The teachers' delegation, at present in Tiflis which is studying both the cultural and political situation of the country, had a long discussion with the returned emigrants from Paris.

The Workers Party in Action

Ukrainian Section and Party Reorganization

By M. DURDELA.

A FEW months ago there was a feeling among some members of the Ukrainian section that, on account or language difficulties, the reorganization of the party on the basis of shop nuclei would mean a step backward in our work. It was their opinion that the reorganization should wait a little longer. Now, however, after all the discussion on that point, after the experience of the last struggle within the party, in which it was possible to pitch one part of the language sections against the other, not on the basis of political differences but on the basis of petty squabbles in the sections, or language branches, the opposition to the reorganization has almost disappeared in the Ukrainian section.

There is this typical view in regard to language difficulties: If some comrades have enough time to make out of a branch meeting a "laundry" for many different kinds of "9 points," then they should have enough time to translate, if necessary, some communications or speeches at the meetings of shop nuclei, and international branches.

We cannot, however, overlook that there are also in Ukrainian section some comrades who, altho not opposing the reorganization, take a pessimistic attitude toward it. This is probably more or less the case with other sections of the party. The cure for this malady will be the raising of Communist consciousness of these comrades, and increasing their experience in the work of shop nuclei.

THE last party discussion is to be looked upon as the first step in the direction of raising the Communist consciousness of many members. In spite of the fact that from the very beginning the discussion went astray because some comrades could not refrain from calling names, and from trying to discredit utterly the opposite side, it was the first party discussion which induced practically all branches to try to have some point of view in regard to the problems of the party as a whole. Now the party as a whole is more before the eyes of our members than ever. The discussion also helped us to see clearly where our weak spots were, what is to be cured and what is to be cut out of in the organism of our party. Consequently, the work of reorganization will benefit from the last party discussion.

We expect to have practically all Ukrainian comrades in the new form of the party. They are all proletarians, working in shops, factories, mines, steel works, etc. From their experience in the last few years, they know what it means to have a good nucleus in a union and other kinds of workers' organizations. They are able to understand the meaning of a nucleus in a shop. They now see why it is necessary to make the shop nuclei the basic units of the party. Almost all of them have been in the United States for the last ten years. They cannot make a polished speech in English, that's true, but they can come to some understanding with other workers in their broken English. It will be a little difficult at the beginning, but it will be better and better with every meeting of a shop nucleus.

AS to the future activity among Ukrainian workers in the United States, we say to our comrades that the reorganization of the party will not stop it but on the contrary it will help us to broaden that activity on the basis of the daily struggles of all workers on the economic and political field. The shop, the most important recruiting ground for the party, was until now practically ignored. Now the attention of our membership will be turned toward the shops. We will be able to more easily get the workers under our influence, and into our party in greater numbers than heretofore. The place of almost exclusively social activity of our language branch members will be taken by their serious Communist activity in the shop nuclei. All other necessary activities among different nationalities will, of course, remain. Nothing of those activities is taken away. On the contrary, the need for Communist work will be greater.

PRODUCTION HIGHER THAN LAST LAST YEAR BUT LOWER THAN IT WAS TWO YEARS AGO IN AUGUST

By LELAND OLDS
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

Marked gains compared with 1924 in employment and wages appear in the August report of the U. S. department of labor covering factories thruout the country. The 8,029 concerns reported 8.4% more employes, total wages up 12.4% and average weekly wages higher by 3.6%.

In concrete terms these percents mean over 600,000 more workers with jobs, an increase of over $20,000,000 in total weekly wage payments and an increase from $25.20 to $26.11 in average weekly pay.

Must Be "Goin' to Rain Some Mo'"

Manufacturers of rubber boots and shoes lead with increases of 61.3% in number employed and 63.6% in total wages. Agricultural implement factories report 38.4% gain in employment and 48.8% in wages. But these are relatively small industries. How 15 of the larger industries fared is shown in the following percentage figures. Those starred indicate decreases.

Gains over August, 1924	Employment	Payrolls	Average wages
Automobile	30.1%	36.9%	5.2%
Auto tires	26.0	29.1	2.5
Boots & Shoes	6.3	9.7	3.3
Car building	*5.0	*5.8	0.1
Clothing, men's	5.3	9.9	4.4
Cotton goods	6.5	10.6	3.8
Electrical equipment	2.5	5.6	3.1
Foundries and machine shops	6.0	12.6	6.2
Hosiery and knit good	22.2	32.0	16.2
Iron and steel	12.3	16.5	3.7
Lumber	*0.9	1.0	2.0
Meat packing	*5.7	*4.3	1.5
Printing	3.1	5.3	2.2
Silk goods	18.8	25.5	5.7
Woolens and worsteds	3.1	*2.0	*5.0

Production Higher Than Last Year.

These gains reflect an increase in production over August, 1924 reported by the federal reserve board as 15%. Factories were averaging 94% of full time in August, 1925, compared with 88% in 1924 and 85% of full force this year compared with 77% a year ago.

But production must go still higher to bring full employment. The 15% over 1924 is still 15% under August, 1923. Employment is still 10% below the level of August, 1923, and total wage payments are 8% lower.

Combining wholesale price figures with production figures it appears that altho the workers are getting 12.4% more in wages they are turning out a product for which their employers receive from 20% to 25% more than they received a year ago. Labor is producing from 7% to 11% more value per $1 of wages than it did in Aug. 1924. This explains the higher profits which are being noted in a majority of the financial reports this year.

Pullman Porters to Organize Union on New England Roads

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BOSTON, Oct. 6—Of 400 Pullman porters employed on Boston & Albany, Boston & Maine and New Haven railroads into Boston, 300 listened eagerly to the message of general organizer of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters.

The American Federation of Labor and the big four railway brotherhoods are supporting the new organization of Pullman porters which aims to better conditions for the men.

The Pullman company union is opposed by the new group because it does nothing for the workers.

FAILURE TO ACT ON BIG MERGERS CAUSES SCANDAL

Aluminum and Bread Trust Under Fire

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—The members of the federal trade commission who seem to have violated a rule of secrecy imposed by the three other conservative members, disclose that a complaint lodged with the commission several months ago concerning the $400,000,000 Ward Baking Co. merger has not been acted on. Neither has the department of justice concerned itself with the matter although it was brought to Attorney General Sargent's attention.

The complaint charged that the General Baking company, as the new combine is known, will operate 157 baking companies in every important city in the United States. This will give the Ward trust a monopoly that will control the price of bread thruout the country.

It was also charged that a similar situation exists in the aluminum industry where mergers have resulted in a huge aluminum combine of nation-wide proportions.

Both of these will doubtless form the basis of an investigation forced by "progressive" republicans and democrats who see the chance to create a scandal that may rival the Daugherty investigation.

ful capitalist political machines, both controlled and backed by the immense resources of Wall Street, supported by the mighty prostitute press of New York and presenting a united front against the workers whenever the slightest interests of their capitalist masters is threatened; the workers are divided into many political fractions. The bulk of them still supports the capitalist parties. There is not one representative in the city government to voice the will of the worker. The unity of labor's forces into one powerful party of all the producers, a Labor Party capable of fighting for the workers' needs, is the immediate and vital necessity of the workers of New York, as it is of the workers thruout the land.

Non-Partisan Policy a Sham.

The sham non-partisan policy imposed upon the workers by the corrupt labor bureaucracy at the service of capitalism and its political parties, is a fundamental obstacle in the way of the building up of the labor party. This policy has divided labor's forces and has chained the local labor movement to the tail of Tammany's cart. The labor bureaucrats have become part of the local capitalist political machines and have sold their influence and their alleged power to deliver the vote of labor, in exchange for soft jobs, graft and occasional political nominations. The slogan, "reward your friends and punish your enemies" has meant in practice the dividing of the workers and their betrayal to their enemies by corrupt labor leaders for a price. This policy has poisoned the mind of labor, made it an easy prey to class collaboration shemes in place of uncompromising struggle for its own interests. The complete eradication of this policy is a question of life and death for the workers. The complete divorce of labor from the capitalist parties and the establishment of a policy of independent political action of the working class in a labor party is the immediate task of the workers of the city of New York.

United Labor Ticket.

The Workers (Communist) Party has for the past three years been the foremost fighter for the formation of a labor party. At the earliest opportunity this year, it proposed to the workers of New York the formation of a united labor ticket for the present campaign as a first step for the complete unity of labor's political forces in a labor party. It proposed to the socialist party, at its conference in June, the calling of a convention of all labor organizations for this purpose. But the socialist party in its servility to the labor bureaucrats and in its complete heedlessness of the elementary needs of the workers, gave no answer to this proposal. Therefore the socialist party must bear jointly with the labor bureaucrats the responsibility for dividing the forces of labor and preventing the realization of a united labor ticket against capitalism. The Workers Party has therefore been compelled to put forward its own candidates. But it realizes the crying need for working class political unity, and continues to call upon the socialist party and all other labor groups to join together for a united labor campaign against the captalist class for the immediate needs of the divided and exploited workers. The Workers Party stands ready to withdraw its candidates in favor of one united labor ticket at any time during this campaign. Workers of New York, raise this demand for a united labor ticket leading towards a labor party in all of your organizations and compel the labor bureaucrats and treacherous socialist leaders to cease dividing the workers. Out of this campaign must emerge concrete steps towards the formation of a labor party.

The Issues of the Campaign.

The Workers (Communist) Party, while continuing its fight for a united labor ticket enters the campaign under its own banner and with its own candidates and calls upon the workers to unite under its banner in the fight for the following general demands of the workers of America and the vital needs of the working class of New York City:

General Demands.

A labor party and a united labor ticket.

Recognition of Soviet Russia.

The building of the trade unions into mass fighting organizations thru amalgamation, and the organization of the unorganized and thru world trade union unity.

Freedom for the Philippines, Santa Domingo, Hawaii, Haiti, etc.

Hands off China.

For a workers' and farmers' government.

Injunctions, the Police and the Courts.

1. We demand the abolition of the use of injunctions in labor disputes.

2. The city government must in no way interfere with or limit the right of striking and picketing.

3. The police must not be used against the workers in labor stuggles.

4. We demand the repeal of the criminal syndicalist law and the release of all workers imprisoned because of their activity on behalf of the working class.

Traction and Public Utilities.

1. We demand municipal ownership and workers' control thru participation in the management of all public utilities such as: street car lines, elevator railways, subways, gas works, light and power, telephone, etc.

Housing.

To relieve the terrible housing situation we demand

1. The construction of dwellings for the workers by the city to be rented to them without profit.

2. The fixation by the city of a low rent scale, based upon the earnings of workers' families and their ability to pay.

3. The encouragement of workers' cooperatives for building construction by exemption from taxes and other fees and by loans from the city.

4. These demands express only two of the most pressing needs in the housing situation. We further favor all measures such as non-eviction, compulsory repairs, etc. which will curb the landlords' profit greed and help solve the housing problem.

The Cost of Living.

1. We demand the establishment of city markets which will sell food and other necessities at cost.

2. The establishment by the city of stores in workers' quarters for the direct sale of fuel, ice, bread, milk and other necessities at cost.

3. The encouragement of workers' cooperatives through credits, loans and preferential treatment.

Unemployment.

1. We demand the establishment of a system of unemployment insurance.

2. Maintenance of the unemployed by the city at trade union rates until work can be found for them.

3. The complete elimination of the employment agency sharks through the establishment of a city monopoly in job placements, with workers' control of the agencies thru participation in the management.

4. Two weeks pay for all workers dismissed from their jobs.

Municipal Employees.

1. We demand the right of organization and the right to strike for all municipal employees of every category.

2. They shall receive the prevailing union wage, the forty-four hour week and regular adjustment of their wage to keep pace with the rise of the cost of living.

Labor Protection Measures.

1. We demand the initiation of a full program of labor protection legislation including workmen's compensation for all trades, unemployment insurance, etc.

2. Special legislation for women including the eight-hour day, minimum wage, equal pay with men for the same work, prohibition of night work, mother's pensions, the establishment of municipal day nurseries, and leave of absence with full pay for eight weeks before and after child birth.

Child Labor.

1. We demand the abolition of all child labor under the age of 16.

2. A system of compensation for those families upon whom such a law would work a hardship.

Health.

1 Introduction of full regulations to prevent accidents and industrial disease thru prohibition or limitation of industrial devices, chemicalts, etc. which speedily destroy health of workers or bring on fatal results.

2. The regular, systematic inspection of factories and industrial establishments to enforce the regulations to prevent industrial accidents and disease. To insure such adequate inspection and enforcement of the regulations, labor to have adequate representation in the bodies of inspection. The violation of these regulations by employers shall be punished as a criminal offense.

3. Regular complete medical examination for workers by competent physicians in the employ of the city, thru local clinics open at night in the workers' quarters prepared to give special attention to the treating and checking of industrial diseases.

The Schools.

1. We demand the immediate construction of sufficient schools to accomodate comfortably all children of school age in their immediate neighborhood, without part-time.

2. The immediate increase of the teaching force and the maintenance of the ratio of one teacher for every 30 pupils.

3. Adequate wage for teachers and the single-salary schedule.

4. The formation of teachers' councils, democratically elected and controlled, to participate in the administration of the school and the selection of supervisory officers.

5 Full maintenance for all workers' children up to age of 16, where poverty would otherwise compel such children to leave school before that time.

6. Free and adequate dental, medical and other health treatment for all pupils.

7. Abolition of religious and military training in the public schools.

8. The unrestricted right of teachers to organize in labor unions. No teacher shall be expelled for holding beliefs inimical to the present capitalist system.

The Workers' Government and the Overthrow of Capitalism.

In proposing the above demands the Workers Party points out that even such elementary demands of the workers can only be realized and maintained through the establishment of a workers' government. We propose them, not as a complete expression of the aims of the working class, but as an expression of their most elementary needs, knowing that the workers, in struggling for these demands, will inevitably came to understand that they cannot be realized and maintained under capitalism, but only through overthrow of the capitalist system, the establishment of a government of workers and poor farmers and the adoption by this government of such measures as will lead toward the introduction of a communist system of society. To this full program the Workers (Communist) Party is pledged.

In calling upon the workers of this city to support the candidates of the Workers' (Communist) Party, we once more point out that they must choose between candidates that represent their class interests and those who directly or indirectly help to maintain the capitalist system. The two parties of big business stand directly for capitalism, for wage slavery, for government by injunction, for the open shop, for poverty, ignorance and misery for the workers, and for wealth and senseless luxury for the capitalist.

The socialist party which also calls for working class support in this election and pretends to be a party of the workers, is, in reality, a pacifist, social reform party most dangerous to the workers because it destroys their fighting spirit, is the ally of the labor bureaucrats who are wrecking the unions, sponsors class collaboration policies in place of the class struggle and is tying the workers to the politics, ideology and leadership of small businessmen and professional elements. This party, during the course of the past year, has again and again allied itself with the labor bureaucrats and served as their tool in attacks upon the militant workers.

The Second or "Socialist" International, of which the socialist party is a part, has behind it a history of ten years of working class betrayal of the slaughter of revolutionary workers and the chaining of the working class of the world to capitalist imperialism. This party, so meek and gentle in its dealings with and apologies for capitalism, has shown unbelievable energy, in fighting the militant section of the working class. It has blocked every effort for labor unity. It has this year abandoned even its platonic acceptance of the labor party idea, has discarded all semblance of militancy and makes no pretense of being a party of class struggle. The socialist party is not a party of workers; it cannot and will not serve their needs.

The Workers (Communist) Party is the only party that provides the means by which the workers may free themselves from exploitation and wage slavery, which is their lot under the exploited masses against the capi- nominating its candidates and carrying on its campaign, it aims to unite the exploited masses against the capitalist system. The support of the Workers (Communist) Party by the working class of New York means the preparation of the workers for their liberation from exploitation and oppression. Rally to the Workers (Communist) Party and hasten the day when the workers shall rule and thru their rule attain to freedom.

GERMAN LABOR FAKERS VISIT U. S. VARIETY

Plan Joint Fight on Trade Union Unity

By LAURENCE TODD.

(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON,— (FP) —Fourteen German trade union spokesmen, comprising what is by far the most significant commission ever sent to America by the workers of the European continent, have reached Washington on their way to the convention of the American Federation of Labor at Atlantic City, and will then separate, each man looking into conditions in the industries with which he is directly concerned.

Industrial Unions in Germany

The list of their organizations and jurisdictions, issued at A. F. of L. headquarters, presents a striking contrast to the craft union list in this country. German workers are united in industrial rather than craft groups.

First comes Friedrick Husemann, president, and Dr. Geo. Berger, for the Mine Workers' Union, which includes both coal and metal miners—contrasting with the American division of these two fields between the United Mine Workers and the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers.

Next are Pres. Oswald Schumann and Dr. Otto Iserland for the German Traffic Union, which includes longshoremen, seamen, drivers, chauffeurs, street and electric railway employes, packers and shipping workers in industrial establishments.

Then there are Pres. Fritz Tarnow and Franz Wenzel of the Woodworkers' Union, which includes sawmill workers, cabinet makers, joiners, carvers, etc., with a membership of 310,000. The carpenters have a separate organization.

There are Pres. Franz Scheffel and Herman Jochade of the Amalgamated Union of Railway Employes, covering the whole steam rail industry from locomotive engineers to track walkers and carmen.

Fritz Munter is president of the Union of Municipal and State Employes, numbering 790,000 persons. Eduard Backert is president of the brewery and cereal workers. Martin Plettl is president of the Clothing Workers' Union, having jurisdiction which in this country is divided between the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, United Garment Workers, Ladies' Garment Workers, Cloth Hat and Cap Makers, Furriers, etc.

Kurt Heining is secretary of the Afa-Bund, a federation of unions of clerks, technical engineers, salesmen, foremen and theatrical and stage employes. Bernhard Meier is director of the bank established by the German Federation of Trade Unions.

No Jurisdictional Craft Lines.

When the A. F. of L. compiled for these visitors a list of the American labor organizations whose jurisdiction was involved in their respective fields, it discovered that it was listing scores of national and international unions.

A German-speaking representative of the United Mine Workers has been assigned to the party as guide until after the Atlantic City convention, when he will escort the German mine workers' officials on a trip thru the central coal fields.

That worker next door to you may not have anything to do tonight. Hand him this copy of the DAILY WORKER.

PLOT TO INVOLVE U. S. S. R. AND CHINA IN DIFFICULTY WITH JAPAN IS EXPOSED

PEKIN, Oct. 6. (Tass)— For the last few months some foreign and even Chinese papers have been conducting a campaign of lies and calumnies against the U. S. S. R. Fantastic rumors were reported that the Soviet government started strong reprisals against all Chinese nationalists and revolutionists living in the U. S. S. R., and that under the pressure of England and other imperialistic powers the Soviet government arrested several Chinese nationals in Moscow and other cities of the U. S. S. R., for participation in meetings organized in connection with the last events in China and wholesale massacres in Shanghai, Canton and other cities. It was reported that even members of the Chinese diplomatic mission were also arrested. This campaign seems to be conducted by an experienced hand with a purpose of fomenting hostility between China and U. S. S. R.

In reference to Chinese citizens arrested in Moscow "Tass" is able now to communicate the following verified facts.

On July 19, there was discovered in Moscow a plot of a small group of Chinese against the life of Mr. Tanaka, the lately appointed Japanese ambassador in Moscow. Unfortunately three members of the Chinese diplomatic mission were also implicated in the plot. It goes without saying that the Soviet government can in no way admit terroristic acts in its country, especially against officially accredited representatives of foreign powers. It must be added that such terroristic acts against representatives of foreign countries on the part of a few fanatics not only would not facilitate the national struggle of the Chinese people for liberation, but on the contrary, would make it much more difficult.

The murder of the Japanese ambassador in Moscow, if it could be realized by a group of Chinese nationalists, would not only result in very strained relations between the Japanese and Soviet governments, but undoubtedly would considerably aggravate relations between Japan and China and strengthen the aggression of all the imperialistic powers in China. Therefore, if this plot against Mr. Tanaka could have been carried out, it would bring very serious complications between U. S. S. R. Japan and China and seriously endanger the international situation of China as well as Soviet Russia.

The Soviet government naturally could not permit this and had to take measures to prevent the plot. As a result the Soviet authorities had to arrest six Chinese citizens who have nothing to do with the Chinese diplomatic mission in Moscow. As to the three members of the Chinese mission implicated in the plot they have never been arrested, the Chinese government being informed of the disclosed plot thot it fit to recall thes members from Moscow to Pekin.

In reference to the six Chinese citizens arrested in this case, the Soviet government has also agreed, to comply with a request of the Chinese government which asked that they not be brot to trial in Moscow where they could expect severe punishment, according to Soviet laws, but to send them to China to be tried before a Chinese court of justice.

Give your name and address to the election inspector, who will write it in register. You will then sign your name to the book. The clerk will give you an enrollment blank, on which are the emblems of the three official parties. But one does not have to enroll. The only thing the enrollment means, is, to have a right to vote at the primaries. But since our party did not poll sufficient votes at the last election the primaries do not affect us, because we are not on the ballot as a regular party, but as an "independent political nomination" by petition.

Those who do not enroll, leave the slip blank, fold it and hand it to the clerk who will place it in the ballot box.

Don't fail to register on any one of the registration days. First voters must also have a certificate of literacy.

Benefit Performance for I.L.D. by Workers Group Well Received

In the estimation of those who attended the performance the Workers' Theater Alliance has established itself as an integral part of the labor movement of Philadelphia.

The alliance presented three plays, one a two-act play by the Juniors and Y. W. L. members known as "School Days," another "The Slave With Two Faces" and then the "New Spirit."

The Workers' Theater Alliance is composed of workers who carry union cards and work at their trade and devote their spare time to developing proletarian art. Not only do they act in the plays but they also write them.

LAUNDRY UNION FIGHTING OPEN SHOP ATTACKS

Fordham Strike Tests Laundry Drivers

By JACK CRIMAN,

(Worker Correspondent.)

NEW YORK CITY, Oct. 6. — The drivers of the Fordham Laundry have gone on strike to better their conditions and stop the open shop tactics of the employers.

Besides being the worst paid men in the laundry business, they are discharged for being members of the union. They are forced to work until 10 p. m. on Saturday. It is not unusual for a man to start work Monday about 4 a. m. and work until 10 p. m.

Eighteen hours' work on Monday and around thirteen hours each other week day. For this they get 17 cents a bundle. It can scarcely be imagined that in these days married men are slaving for from $18 to $25 per week.

Strike Against Open Shop Drive.

The bosses have an association whose president, Adolph Lowy, has full power to fire any worker who is a member of the union—just for that reason and nothing else. The association of the bosses has hired strong arm men and have been loaned plain clothes police by the city authorities to scare the pickets away from the laundry who dare to tell customers that there is a strike on.

It should be noted that altho the workers are paid starvation wages, the gangster hired to slug the pickets are paid from $15 to $30 per day.

The boss has made known that he would like to take the union men back and even grant concessions on conditions, but the association of bosses have not allowed it. All day one can see the association's president, Adolph Lowy, working in his shirt sleeves around the Fordham laundry —altho he has a laundry of his own.

Asks Support For Strikers.

At a meeting of Local Union No. 485, the following resolution was passed:

Resolved, that we are determined to stay out for months in order that we may eliminate the slave-driving tactics the association has been using. We therefore, request the public of the Bronx, Manhattan and Harlem districts to kindly assist us by giving their patronage to a driver with a union sign on his wagon.

Bankrupt Nations All Forced to Come Thru

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 6.—The Czecho-Slovakian debt mission reached Washington today, and quickly completed preparations for negotiations, starting Tuesday, for the funding of their war debt, which now totals $117,679,095.

Members of the American debt funding commission expressed the opinion that little time will be consumed in funding the Czecho-Slovakian obligation.

The Americans expect terms as good, if not better, from an American point of view, than those given Poland.

BRITISH CAPITAL FINANCES INTERVENTION MOVE IN CANTON TO CRUSH NATIONAL MOVEMENT

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BERLIN, Oct. 6.—W. I. R.)— British capitalism in China is becoming more and more aggressive. The clamor of the British imperialists in league with the militarists of China for an invasion of Canton is growing, according to the statement of Koumanggu, rector of the National University of Pekin.

"The fight for national emancipation of China entered in a new phase. Foreign imperialism attacks Canton," declares the telegram of Koumanggu to the central committee of the Workers International Relief. "Canton government is the only protector of the interests of the workers and peasants and is the only factor supporting the wage-policy of the Chinese trade unions and granting every possible help to small peasants. The Canton government is at the same time the center of the nationalist movement in China protesting against humiliating contracts of foreign powers and extra-territoriality.

British Finance at Work.

"Capitalists under the strong British financial groups in Hongkong try to arouse the excitation and upheavals against the Canton government. They intend to organize military intervention. The British government clamors for intervention. They support the reactionary capitalist and militarist cliques in China by material and financial aid in their fight against the Canton government.

Move to Crush Canton.

"The purpose of this campaign is quite clear. They will defeat the Canton government in consequence of its labor character. They will crush the dangerous center of the nationalist and social fight for emancipation in China. When this abominable plan succeeds, the economic and political enslavement of the laboring masses of China will be the immediate consequence of it. Appeal for resistance against all plans of intervention by the Workers International Relief," ends the appeal of the Koumanggu in the name of the Chinese committee of the International Workers' Relief.

Hershberg, Opposed to Mammoth Movies Commits Suicide

Despondent over business failures, William Hershberg, formerly a partner of Balaban and Katz, well known theatrical promoters, shot and killed himself yesterday. He was to have been married in ten days to Miss Sadie Kalman, a member of a prominent Chicago family.

According to Miss Kalman, her fiancee left her in a cheerful mood several hours before the suicide. He had talked with her of plans for the wedding but told her nothing of his business failures, she said.

Hershberg was a partner of Balaban and Katz several years ago, but severed relations when his partners insisted upon building mammoth theaters.

MIMIC AIR RAID PUTS BANKERS INTO HYSTERIA

Wall Street Fears a Bolshevik Raid

NEW YORK, Oct. 6—Bombs bursting in mid-air over the United States sub-treasury and the Morgan Bank on Wall Street, police running wildly thru the district, with light artillery tangled up in the maze of fire engines that had come down to save Wall Street, was the grand sight witnessed by many New York workers.

Anti-Aircrafters March In.

Five airplanes from the Mitchell field were sent over the city to advertise the Pulitzer air races that will take place Oct. 8. Before the planes had left their landing field, the state artillery detachment, with a searchlight and two anti-aircraft batteries marched into Wall Street. The anti-aircrafters from Governor's Island marched in and helped to jam the Wall Street district.

The airplanes arrived in a short time and one plane sweeping low, dropped a bomb over the Morgan building. It burst brightly in mid-air. A second was thrown with the same effect. Some banker must have thot that the Bolsheviks were bombarding the financial capital of the world, and turned in a riot call. Another at the Bankers' Trust company, 14 Wall Street, turned in a call for the fire department.

Within a half hour the district was in an uproar. From everywhere fire apparatus began to appear. Soldiers jumped out of the way. Light artillery rumbled this way and that. The planes dropped more bombs.

Riot Squads Arrives.

It was at this moment that the cops swarmed in and were lost in the tangle. Mounted cops arrived and were swallowed up. Fifteen thousand persons arrived and grouped around the fire apparatus. A police riot squad fearing a bomb explosion, was lost in the maze.

The planes then began to throw down the advertising matter for the Pulitzer air races. Thus ended the mimic air raid which threw the bankers into pandemonium in the fear of a Bolshevik attack on Wall Street.

Lost Flyer Near Stone Mountain

HUNTINGDON, Pa., Oct. 6.—Mayor George W. Fisher today sent searchers to Stone Mountain, fourteen miles north of here, to hunt for Charles H. Ames, air mail pilot who disappeared while enroute from New York to Chicago last Thursday night.

Fisher said that belief that the missing plane crashed in Stone Mountain was given weight by the fact that the flyer was last seen only about twenty mile from the mountain.

Complications at Locarno

Labored optimism is probably the best way to describe the tone of the news dispatches emanating from Locarno where France and Great Britain, with Germany occupying an enviable strategic position, are trying to re-make the map of Europe so that capitalism there can have a breathing spell.

New complications have arisen as a result of Italy's attitude. The news is that Mussolini will not attend, but send a substitute to keep a sharp eye on the other diplomats. Italy fears the rise of a new German-Austrian bloc and, according to the rumors, which in diplomatic circles are generally more reliable than what passes for the truth, has been proposing an alliance to Czecho-Slovakia.

The British and French foreign offices are, it now appears, in the light of later dispatches, more disturbed at the warm welcome extend to Georges Tchitcherin in Warsaw, than was at first admitted; nor is there any comfort in this fact for the German government.

Then, to further embarrass the allied governments, comes the news of a 100,000,000 mark loan by Germany to the Soviet government.

For the first time since the signing of the armistice Germany meets the allied governments on an equal footing, but it is the existence of the Soviet Union that makes this possible and millions of German workers know it.

As for France, she must choose between the loss of her Polish, Czecho-Slovakian, Roumanian and Jugo-Slavian allies and a security pact which will strengthen Great Britain. She gets in return only the guarantee of her eastern frontier.

The attitude of the capitalist press generally that Locarno represents a great step toward "the peace of Europe" is the exact opposite of the case—the conference marks the culmination of the European tour of Austen Chamberlain, British foreign minister, arranged to organize European capitalism against Soviet Russia and the Communist International. The conference not only cannot bring peace but it can do nothing else than create fresh alignments bearing within them a more menacing threat of imperialist war and consequently a threat to the whole working class.

British Fascism

The rapid rise of fascism in Great Britain, "the cradle of democracy," as she has been called so often by soft-headed persons who can very easily fail to hear the moans of the tortured natives of India, Egypt and southern Africa, is the best of all testimony to the failure of social-democracy as expressed by the Ramsay MacDonalds.

The social-patriots of this type are loud in their condemnation of the Communists and are attempting to blame them for the open violence against workers and the organization of fascist bands like the one in Liverpool whose services were offered to and accepted by the chief of police of that great seaport. In London and Manchester similar organizations have been formed. British laws have no provisions for these extra-legal bodies, but they are both tolerated and encouraged by such speeches as that of Sir William Joynson Hicks, home secretary, yesterday, delivered to a meeting of members of the conservative party presided over by Lord Derby.

The home secretary said that "the destruction of the Communist menace in Great Britain is a matter of life and death," and with the home secretary, responsible under British law for its administration, using such a tone it is little wonder that the ex-officers, younger sons of the first families, belly-crawling middle class elements and other riff-raff should feel that they have been issued letters of marque and reprisal against the Communists and all other militant workers.

There is no difference in the attitude of the home secretary and that of Ramsay MacDonald. Both are frightened by the breakup of British capitalism at home and the empire abroad on which it depends. Both will fight the working class to the death.

Let the tories and social democrats blame the Communists for the violence of the ruling class. The masses of workers are already learning that British rulers, altho they mouth democratic phrases, are just as ready to break strikes with bayonets and machine guns as any other desperate despots.

Not the Communists but the decay of British imperialism and socila-democratic treachery are responsible for the rise of fascism.

The A. F. of L. and the American Legion

Three important things for workers to remember in connection with the convention of the American legion now in session in Omaha:

1. It is a gathering of ex-officers—strikebreaking fascist elements.
2. President Coolidge considers it important enough to travel half-way across the continent to make a speech there.
3. Colonel William Donovan, former head of the rainbow division and now chief investigator for the department of justice, is one of the influential candidates for chairman of the American legion.

Having noticed these three things we can then begin to understand the alliance between the American legion and the officialdom of the American Federation of Labor—an alliance that was perfected at the legion's San Francisco convention and that has been endorsed at every convention of the American Federation of Labor held since.

Both groups of reactionaries have picked out the Communists as a target for attack and both stand for American capitalism—first, last and all the time.

The reason for the community of interest evident here is that both groups—labor officials and fascist ex-officers—are part of the machinery of American imperialism.

The legion has its minor differences with its masters over questions of the bonus and political jobs for its members, the officialdom of the American Federation of Labor has its minor differences over questions of recognition and legislation, but both groups unite to support the ruling class against the basic interests of the working class.

The left wing of American labor must realize that essentially there is no difference between a strikebreaker like Berry of the Pressmen's Union who belongs to both organizations, his legion colleagues, and men like Lewis, Green and Johnston who are the loud speakers for the bosses in the labor unions.

What Saklatvala Symbolizes -

By William F. Dunne

Article I.

THE exclusion of Shapurji Saklatvala, British subject, native of India, member of the British house of commons representing Battersea, one of the working class districts of London, member of the British Communist Party and delegate to the conference of the inter-parliamentary union has focused the attention of the American working class upon the status of the 330,000,000 natives of India within the British empire.

We Communists can afford to thank the British foreign office and the American state department for an action which has brought before the workers of this country a question which, largely because there is no considerable number of Indian immigrants here, has received but little attention heretofore.

But this is not the only issue in which the rulers of two great imperialist nations have, contrary to their evident desire, created great interest among large numbers of American workers.

THE puerile excuse given for the excusion, i. e., certain provisions of the American immigration law, only serve to arouse the curiosity of the masses. That curiosity is being gratified in a measure because upon this matter in which certain sections of the the middle class press see a violation of "international courtesy" and other sections a confession of weakness and an elevation of a despised Communist to a position of importance, there is no real unity of opinion. That portion of the press which caters to the Irish population takes advantage of its anti-British prejudices to exploit the Saklatvala incident. Irish republican societies pass resolutions of protest and they find their way into the papers. The liberal press becomes quite indignant while disavowing all sympathy for Saklatvala's political beliefs.

The very thing that the rulers wanted to suppress occurs—an inquiry into and a discussion of India and its people, of the British empire, its present condition and of Communists and Communism, of the relation of the American government and the working class to all these weighty questions.

THE British foreign office is a ponderous machine and when it calls to its aid the state department of America—its most powerful rival—we are justified in assuming the visit of Saklatvala to America was considered a grave danger to the safety of British imperialism and the prestige of His Majesty's government.

A few facts stand out:

(1) Saklatvala speaks officially for a militant section of the British working class—the workers of Battersea, and indirectly for the whole left wing of British labor.

(2) He speaks for the 330,000,000 oppressed workers and peasants of India—the colony which a British statesmen has called "the brightest jewel in the imperial diadem."

(3) As a member of the British Communist Party he speaks for that party and in the name of the Communist International of which it is a section.

THE exclusion of Saklatvala is in fact a blow delivered jointly by two groups of imperialists who are rivals in almost every form of capitalist activity at the British working class, at the workers and peasants of India and at the Communist International. Only the fear and hatred of the leader of the world revolution could bring such unity between two imperialist enemies.

The attitude of the American state department is inspired principally by a fear of the impetus that the visit of Saklatvala might give to the revolutionary movement here. American labor is passive and the rulers wish to keep it so.

But the action of the British foreign office is based on actual conditions of the most critical nature. If there is one thing the American masses are susceptible to it is appeals in behalf of national liberation movements—particularly if these movements are against Great Britain. The traditions of the war for independence still live and such appeals find a ready response from large sections of the American people.

GREAT BRITAIN cannot afford to have popular sentiment in behalf of Indian nationalism aroused in America. The danger of the colonial liberation movements is too real for that.

It is hard for the American workers to realize the ever-present fear of the loss of India that abides in the breast of every loyal son of the empire. The whole strategy of the British imperialists is based on India.

Ever since the French were driven from India and the adventurer Clive consolidated British influence, the protection of India and the extension of the British frontier in Asia has dominated British imperial policy.

THE major factor in the Mediterranean policy of Great Britain has been the securing and holding of the sea route to India. The acquisition of Egypt and South Africa have been incidental to this dominant strategy.

Great Britain went to war with Germany when the latter power began to build the Berlin to Bagdad railway which would have made ineffective the British sea route to India and the Far East.

Before Germany became by reason of her rapid industrialization and its resulting imperial ambition the most dangerous enemy of Great Britain, Russia was the foe which Britain feared. One has only to read that songbird of British imperialism, Rudyard Kipling, with his ceaseless denunciation of "the bear that walks like a man" to understand that the possibility of invasion of India from the north was a constant nightmare to the British rulers.

THE robbers of the Indian workers and peasants could never get rid of the thought that in her drive towards warm water Russia would some day send her hordes thru the Khyber pass and take for the czar the rich loot that was going to England in a thousand ships and on which British imperialism prospered and expanded.

British imperialism strives to extend her Asiatic from north and east.

On the north it now encounters the Soviet Union, in the east the Chinese national liberation movement develops under the influence of Soviet Russia and the Communist Party of China a revolutionary proletarian character.

IF the British imperialists feared czarist Russia they fear the Russia of the workers' and peasants' government a thousand times more. Czarist Russia could offer the Indian masses only a change of oppressors but the Soviet Union offers admission on a basis of full equality to all Asiatic peoples. From over the mountains that crown India's norther border comes the news that in Soviet Russia the peasants have the land and that the factories are the property of the joint government of workers and peasants. This one fact is more dangerous to British imperialism in India than all the armies of the czar.

From the east comes the news that the Chinese workers and peasants are driving the British robbers from their country and that alone of all the nations Soviet Russia treats the Chinese workers and peasants as equals.

The front of British imperialism in the north and east has been broken.

Saklatvala is a member of a section of the Communist International and an Indian. He symbolizes in his person all that British imperialism hates and fears—to the British foreign office he is the emblem of the Russian revolution and of mass revolt in India and China. He represents the unity of the working class in the imperialist nations with the colonial peoples and wherever he speaks, there the two great forces which will overthrow world imperialism are seen in action.

Convention of the Y. W. L. Adopts Resolution

RESOLUTION ON REPORT OF THE REPRESENTATIVE OF THE WORKERS PARTY TO THE Y. W. L. CONVENTION

The following resolution accepting and approving the report of the representative of the Central Executive Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party to the convention of the Young Workers (Communist) League was passed by the youth convention by a vote of 29 in favor, none voting against, and 22 abstaining:

The immediate problem of the Communist movement in the United States lies in the development of the degree of class consciousness of the masses of the working class, and also to develop the anti-capitalist tendencies of the toiling farmers, and the drawing of the proletariat into more active, conscious and militant prosecution of the class struggle and toward the proletarian revolution.

The Proletarian Youth.

The important share of the Young Workers League in this task, in addition to full participation in, and support of, all the actions of the Communist Party, is to apply the correct Communist tactics and policies to the specific problems of the young workers and proletarian children, and also to the problem of the youth of the farms.

In the carrying out of this task in accord with the principles, policies and tactics of the Communist International and the Young Communist International, the Young Workers League requires and demands the correct political guidance of the American section of the Communist International, the Workers (Communist) Party of America. It is the duty of the Young Workers League to see to it that the organization as a whole conforms in its activities to this guidance in harmony with and support of the leadership of the world Communist Party, the Communist International, and the Young Communist International.

In this duty, the Young Workers League plays an active and not a passive role, in the application of the policies and tactics of the main campaigns and activities of the Party to the specific field of the Young Workers League. The correctness of the political line of the Party, is a matter of vital importance to the Young Workers League.

The Results of the Party Convention.

The Fourth National Convention of the Workers Communist Party adopted resolutions submitted by the Parity Commission, which laid down a correct Bolshevist policy by which not only the Party, but also the Young Workers League can develop into a mass Communist character and become the organ of leadership of the American proletarian revolution. These resolutions, as well as the other actions of the convention, are of Communist character and free from the right-wing sectarianism which for the past year and a half have endangered and obstructed the development of the Party toward the goal of becoming a Leninist Party. We declare our wholehearted support of the Party convention's resolution on the immediate tasks of the Party, on the Young Workers League, on the trade union work, on the labor party campaign, on the question of imperialism, on work among women, on the organization and revolutionizing of the Negro workers, on agricultural work, and on other major campaigns of the party. We fully and heartily accept these resolutions as laying down the correct policies equally for the Young Workers League.

Liquidation of Loreism

We welcome the action taken by the national convention of the party for the liquidation of Loreism in the party, and we declare that this action lays down a correct guidance for the Young Workers League for similar action for the liquidation of Loreism in the Young Workers League. The party has already reached the point of development where opportunistic deviations among its leaders can no longer be tolerated. In the expulsion of Lore and several of his aides from the party, and also in the removal of Comrade Askeli from the editorial board of the Finnish language organ of the party, The Tyomies, the national convention of the party indicated a correct line in the fight against opportunism. The third national convention of the Young Workers (Communist) League heartily endorses these actions of the party convention, and pledges the Young Workers League as a whole to the complete elimination of Loreism within the league.

Bolshevization and Reorganization

The resolution on Bolshevization and reorganization of the party marks a new and important step forward for the party, and the Young Workers League pledges itself to keep step with the party in the Bolshevization and reorganization of the Young Workers League. The thorogoing reorganization of the league on the basis of shop nuclei and the development of a centralized apparatus are necessary and significant steps toward the Bolshevik centralization of the league, and lay a sound basis for carrying on real Communist work among the proletarian youth. We pledge ourselves to carry on energetically the reorganization of the league along the lines laid down by the Comintern and the Young Communist International. We also pledge ourselves to give the league's full assistance and encouragement to the central executive committee of the party for the reorganization and Bolshevization of the party.

Decisions of Communist International

The main political line adopted by the Workers Communist Party is derived from and laid down by the decision of the Communist International. We greet with hearty approval the decisions of the Communist International for the guidance of the American party.

The decision on the labor party question is of momentous importance, not only to the party, but also to the league, as the means by which the proletarian masses can be brought to class consciousness and thereby on the way toward accepting the Communist leadership and revolutionary program, and thus the best means by which the party and the league can become the leading mass organizations of the American proletariat.

The last decision of the Communist International, received by the party during its fourth national convention, which declared that "it has finally become clear that the Ruthenberg group is more loyal to the decisions of the Communist International, and stands closer to its views," lays the basis for the unification and development of the party. Likewise, it lays the basis for the unification and development of the Young Workers League which has suffered considerable disunity and factionalism as a result of the party dispute. We declare that we are in full agreement with the last decision of the Comintern on the question of the party leadership, and we pledge the Young Workers League to give its loyal support to the central executive committee elected by the party on the basis of the decision.

Tendencies to Undermine Prestige of Communist International

The Young Workers League in its third national convention assembled, declares that the interests of the revolutionary youth demand the sincerest and most unreserved and aggressive support of all decisions of the Communist International regarding the Communist work in America. The Young Workers League considers it especially necessary at this time to be on its guard against all tendencies toward the undermining of the prestige of the Communist International. This is particularly necessary at a time when the social-democrat Lore, (who only one month ago was a member of the central executive committee of the party) openly works to discredit the Communist International and its decisions, with the aim to destroy the possibility for building up in this country a powerful section of the Communist International, and a powerful section of the Young Communist International. The Communist International is the best and most reliable guide—and, together with the Young Communist International, the only reliable guide—for the Communist revolutionary organization of the entire world. We declare that the process of Bolshevization of the Young Workers League of America and the elimination of Loreism, includes among other things, the elimination of all tendencies to question the judgment and responsibility of the decisions of the Communist International. Any propaganda among the youth to the effect that the Communist International acts upon misinformation regarding American conditions, is a direct blow struck against the idea of a single world party, and is an anti-Bolshevik tendency. The willing and enthusiastic acceptance and carrying out of the latest decision of the Communist International, as well as of all other decisions of the Communist International, is a part of the process of Bolshevization and centralization of the International party—the Communist International—and of the Young Communist International.

The Party and the League.

We call upon the party to recognize the important role that the league must play in relation to the building up and bolshevization of the party. The youthful proletarians in the Y. W. L. representing the most exploited section of the working class, the young workers, entirely free from a labor aristocracy, is the best blood that can be infused into the party, and represents a tremendous force working in the direction of our party becoming a real Bolshevik section of the Communist International. This can best be accomplished by a close co-operation and mutual representation on all important party committees, between the party and the league, and by seeing to it that the leadership of the youth are members of the party and letting them share in the work and responsibility of the party, thereby creating a closer bond between the party and the youth.

The party should make every effort to help the Y. W. L., in the drawing in of the young proletarians into its ranks. Where a unit of the party exists, the party must help in the establishment of a unit of the league. This must receive special emphasis in connection with the party's campaign of reorganization particularly in view of the fact that there has arisen a notion in the minds of some of our party members that a party nucleus in a factory makes it impossible, or in many cases due to the weakness of the party nucleus, inadvisable to form a league nucleus.

The party must help in the building up of the league, by aiding the league in the placing of organizers in the field, particularly in the section of the country where the basic industries are located.

The party must also aid the Young Workers League in the work of education, by providing the comrades who can undertake the work of educating the mass of our membership and by aiding the league in the building up of a Leninist central school for the training of league propagandists and functionaries.

The third national convention of the Young Workers League calls upon all of the youth members to close their ranks in hearty and willing support of the central executive committee of the Workers Communist Party and the incoming national executive committee of the Young Workers (Communist) League, and to eliminate all past factional differences and all factional strife within the league, so that we can rally as one solidified, united Communist youth league, pursuing our activity in the spirit of Lenin for the American proletarian revolution.

U. S. ADMIRAL TALKS PEACE TO CHINESE

But His Pacifism Reveals Morgan Menace

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SHANGHAI, China, Oct. 7.—Agents of American imperialism are making plain to representatives of other powers on the eve of the judicial investigation into the Shanghai rioting of last May, their determination to continue an independent policy in relation to China.

Justice Finlay Johnson, representing the United States government, has serious differences of opinion with the British and Japanese judges and is reported to be very skeptical of the "constructive results" of the inquiry. He feels that America should not have agreed to participate owing to the possible adverse effect of Chinese opinion on American interests. This attitude is the logical result of the whole American orientation toward China as enunciated in the famous "open door" policy formulated in the interest of the Morgan banking combine, which insists upon its activities in this part of the world being unhampered by any pact with other powers.

Imperialism Disguised as Pacifism.

A dinner given in honor of his departure was the occasion for Rear Admiral Charles B. McVay, commander of the United States Yangtze patrol to glorify American imperialism with pacific phrases. In a speech on that occasion he asserted that the purpose of the American navy in Pacific waters was to protect American citizens and property and after a specific instance in whcih American citizens were endangered had subsided, American naval forces must return to their ships and could no longer be used for police duty on shore.

Shows Mailed Fist.

Altho McVay and Admiral Thomas Washington are to return to the United States, the naval detachment will remain in Chinese waters to be ready for action in case American property is again endangered.

The admiral in severe criticism of those participating in the international settlement for their failure to provide sufficient police protection and insisted that it was necessary to make immediate plans to strengthen the forces of suppression "owing to the inability of the United States in the future to interfere in civil disturbances arising from economic conditions." Thus, while Justice Johnson is wary of the advisability of joining the British and Japanese imperialists in fixing the blame for the Shanghai riots, Admiral McVay denounces other representatives of the powers for failure to create a strike-breaking agency powerful enough to crush any future moves on the part of the Chinese masses against the foreign exploiters of labor.

Boasts of Saving City.

In an effort to justify the presence of part of the United States naval forces in this vicinity, Rear Admiral McVay asserted that without naval "protection" the Shanghai riots would have resulted in the city being looted and burned to the ground. He stated that without foreign naval intervention on the Yangtze intrenational commerce would be impossible and asserted that the presence of these forces were still required and predicted further trouble because of the threatening moves of the rival Chinese military forces.

So, while the battleships of the American fleet crawl thru the waters that wash these shores, the eyes of the agents of the House of Morgan turn menacingly not only upon the Chinese workers, but also upon the rival imperialist powers.

Six Million in New Coins

MOSCOW, Oct. 7.—The government has decided to issue new coins for six million roubles. The new coins will be made ten per cent aluminum and ninety per cent of copper. Work has already been started in the mint. The size of the new money will be much less than before.

FALL OF FRANC BRINGS MORGAN TO THE RESCUE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, Oct. 7.—The alarming decline of the franc, following failure of the debt negotiations in Washington, has caused the French government to take steps in an effort to check it.

The finance ministry will avail itself of funds from the Morgan loan as a means of retarding the fall of the franc. It is plain to experts on finance that in spite of M. Caillaux's much heralded reputation as a financial wizard, he can do nothing but accept aid from Morgan in order to stabilize, even temporarily, the franc. The use of the money placed at the disposal of the government by Morgan means the further ascendency of finance capital in European affairs and presages the time when France will be a vassal of the U. S.

Meanwhile the government of France is making a feeble gesture against the fall of the franc by selecting a commission to investigate the activities of speculators with a view to restraining them. If the fall continues, however, there will be no need to restrain them, as speculators do not gamble on a permanently falling market.

BANKS DEMAND FRANCE CANCEL INTERNAL DEBT

"Repudiate or We Lend Nothing"

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—Premier Caillaux was forced to leave America without any assurances that the loan he sought in Wall Street will be granted. The American bankers fear to grant such a loan, as France has an internal debt of 300,000,000,000 francs on which she must pay interest annually. The French government faces an annual debt of 16,000,000,000, francs.

The New York bankers realise that France will not be able to meet the interest payment to her own banking class, let alone pay American bankers for their investments. The American bankers suggested that France cancel three-fifths of her internal debt as one of the terms on which they would grant the $400,000,000 loan to the imperialist power of France.

Fall of Caillaux Cabinet.

To repudiate three-fifths of the internal loan means the fall of the Caillaux cabinet and any other cabinet that might attempt such a move in capitalist ruled France. Wall Street insisted that France must show her ability to pay before they will grant her the much-wanted loan.

England Sore.

LONDON, Oct. 7.—England is much displeased over the turn of events in the Franco-American debt negotiations. The granting of a moratorium to France for five years does not coincide with her plans. She also feels that the terms were much too lenient on the French.

Too Lenient on France.

In the arranging of the Anglo-French debt settlement, France received very lenient terms from England on the French fear that the terms to be made at Washington would endanger the currency and stability of the country. In the negotiations it was also agreed that the Anglo-French pact could be reopened by France if the terms she received in America would be hard for her to meet. England desires to reopen the settlement, but due to the fact that Franco-American debt settlement is not a final one, cannot do so. She would raise the annual demands on France.

The leniency that the French imperialists received at the hands of the American bankers has angered British capitalists still more for they are to pay 40,000,000 pounds sterling or $200,000,000 to the American bankers while France pays only $40,000,000. The English bankers regret letting France bargain the Anglo-French settlement down to 12,500,000 pounds or $62,500,000.

W. VA. JUDGE JAILS PICKETS WITHOUT TRIAL

Denies Counsel; Charge Board at Jail

(Special to The Daily Worker)

FAIRMONT, W. Va., Oct. 7.— Too poor to hire legal counsel for their defense, fifty-three union miners began pleading their own cases in the Marion county circuit court here today, when Judge Winfield Scoth Meredith refused to appoint counsel for their defense because the expense of such counsel would have to be borne by the county.

Have Heard of Constitution.

The miners are charged by this same judge with having violated an injunction he issued against picketing the mines.

They claim that their rights under the constitution permit them to picket and their action conforms with the interpretation of "legal picketing" made recently by Governor Howard M. Gore of West Virginia.

A Compulsory Boarding House.

Some months ago, this same judge charged 60 cents a day for room and board in jail to striking miners he sent to jail for similar picketing contrary to his injunctions.

When the pickets appeared without counsel, Judge Meredith became indignant, saying he believed their action was concerted, but that orders of the court must be obeyed and if he found it necessary he would use all the forces of the state to stop the strikers from picketing and uphold his injunction. The miners made a threat to fill the jails of Northern West Virginia.

FASCISTS AND BOSSES AGREE TO OUTLAW ALL BUT FASCIST UNIONS

ROME, Oct. 6.—An agreement, tantamount to giving fascism a monopoly over labor, was reached today between the Italian industrialists' association and the fascist party.

The agreement provides that the industrialists' association recognizes the fascist labor organizations as the exclusive representatives of the working class. Future negotiations between the working class and the industrialists will be conducted with fascist labor organizations. This outlaws all other union bodies, including even the socialist and catholic unions.

American Imperialist Interests Lay Hands of Conquest on Brazil

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 7.—Dr. Jose Mattoso Sampaio Correa, the head of the Brazilian delegation to the interparliamentary union and influential member of the Brazilian senate, in an interview here gave fulsome praise to the American naval mission in Brazil, which he declared, had "done wonders" in reorganizing and systematizing the Brazilian navy and training the personnel.

That such activity by American imperialism is not without its motive, may be judged from the fact that financial circles were all agog yesterday with the news that a big loan is impending to the Brazilian government. So strong a tonic was this on the market that the Brazilian money unit, the milreis, went up like a sky rocket 63 points.

BRITISH FASCISTI OPENLY JOIN POLICE FORCE TO AID SUPPRESSION OF COMMUNISTS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Oct. 7.—Emulating their Italian prototypes, three thousand British fascisti, operating in the vicinity of Liverpool, announce that they are joining the police force as special constables, "to serve in times of emergency." The anticipated "emergency" is taken to mean a Communist uprising, which the ruling class has been conjuring up for the past few months. The British fascisti parade in black shirts, and indulge in fantastic patriotic maneuvers, but thus far have not been taken very seriously. But their latest move which will give them police powers is indicative of the fact that the ruling class of Great Britain has decided to finance them and has handed down orders to the police to admit them in an official form.

Drill at Police Stations.

The Liverpool police in a declaration asserted that all fascisti who volunteered would be enrolled as special constabulary. Fascist spokesmen say they will maintain their identity as a special unit of the police force, with their own officers in command. Large numbers will henceforth be on duty at police stations day and night and their drills will be held at the police stations.

This action followed the declaration of the bombastic home secretary, William Joynson Hicks, that all "loyal Britons should join an organization for the maintenance of supplies." This is interpreted to mean that the government is officially behind the fascist movement and is preparing for a reign of violence against labor in the coming struggles in the spring.

Challenge Will Be Accepted.

Indisputably, it is the growing influence of the Communist Party over the masses of labor in Britain that stimulates such fascist action on the part of the government officials. Realizing this and having the lessons of the rise to power of Mussolini before them, the British revolutionists are determined to accept the challenge of the blackshirts.

When the house of commons convenes next month there will be a severe attack upon the home secretary for encouraging organized terrorism against the working class of England by the Communists. Certain laborite elements are expected to join in the attack on the government for permitting fascism to gain a foothold, tho the MacDonald group is not likely

PURCELL, IN MASTERFUL SPEECH URGES WORLD TRADE UNION UNITY BEFORE LABOR FEDERATION MEET

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

STEEPLECHASE PIER, ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Oct. 7.—American labor today heard the call for world trade union unity and the demand for friendly relations with the workers of the Union of Soviet Republics from the lips of A. A. Purcell, a fraternal delegate from the British Trade Union Congress.

It was the first time that such a message had been brought across the Atlantic by a spokesman of European labor. It was in sharp contrast with the red-baiting speech by Fritz Tarnow of the German delegation, who had not a friendly word to say for Soviet Russia, nor a sincere word to utter to promote the international solidarity of labor. Purcell's two big arguments may be summed up as follows:

FIRST—Great changes have taken place in the world since the war. Capitalism is organizing internationally. Labor must have its world organization. American labor must come into the world fold.

SECOND—Labor is assuming vast responsibilities in the Soviet Union. American labor must stand by and aid the Russian workers in the "closest fraternal relations."

Urges Delegation to Russia

Purcell urged that the American Federation of Labor send a delegation to Soviet Russia, just as the British Trade Union Congress had done. He was a member of the British delegation. His speech in part follows:

"I want our two great labor movements to come closer and still more closer together—to be linked together in steel-like bonds of friendship and solidarity, mutually helping and inspiring each other, coming to each others assistance in days of trial and difficulty, giving each other encouragement to tackle those formidable tasks with which we are confronted, engaged in a rivalry—if rivalry there need be—of organization, of the spread of ideas of building up and strengthening our movement.

"The call I want to make is a call for the unity of the world's workers—for the world brotherhood of all those who toil. I make no apology for making that call. I consider it my highest duty and my finest privilege to make that call here and now, at this great convention of American workers.

"Over there, in Europe, just as here in the United States and in all other parts of the world, many things are happening, great changes are taking place.

"Things do not stand still. Things have not stood still with the world, or with any part of the world. The world is today a vastly different place to what it was even at the conclusion of the great war.

Appeals for Trade Union Unity.

"I have been in Manchester and London, in Amsterdam, in Paris, Berlin, Moscow, Vienna. I have visited these places as a workman and as a representative of our trade union and labor organizations. I have been brot into contact with labor union officials and leaders of all kinds, and with organized workers. I have spoken at countless conferences and meetings, marched in processions, participated in demonstrations. I have felt the pulse of our great movement; heard, as it were, the beating of the mighty heart of the toiling millions, and in London, Berlin, Moscow and Vienna, and in many other towns and cities, I have watched the serried ranks of the hosts of labor go marching past. It is impossible for me to convey to you the surge and thrill of it all—to give you any idea of the sweep and passion and power of it all.

'I have been made to realize that there is growing upon this old world of ours a vast and tremendous vital force, a gigantic confraternity of labor a world power, possessed of inconceivable potential strength, profound and pregnant with the genius of a new human mode of life and culture.

"This I say, is growing up, taking shape, coming into being. It is only half articulate as yet. Its power is dispersed, and in many cases, unrealized. Its strands have yet to be gathered together. Its forces have yet to be centralized, reorganized and rendered capable of full expression. But there it is.

"The call I want to make to you, our fellow workers of America, is to

FRANCO-GERMAN DEADLOCK AT 'PEACE' CONFAB

Stresemann Gives Assurances to Russia

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LOCARNO, Switzerland, Oct. 7.—The security pact conference has reached a deadlock on the question of the eastern frontiers of Germany. Like the various conferences that have gone before and have broken upon the irreconcilable contradictions between the capitalist nations, the present conference finds itself confronted with obstacles it cannot overcome, despite the fact that the leaders of the various groups continue to exclue optimism.

In the German thesis, presented by Foreign Minister Stresemann, the demand is made that the eastern pacts become a matter for negotiation. This is interpreted by Aristide Briand, French foreign minister, to mean reservation of the right to reconsider and alter Germany's eastern frontiers at some future time.

Want to Stop Discussion

Briand, in a long speech, traced the history of the negotiations and concluded that the existing treaties be respected and not considered as topics of discussion at the conference. In a belligerent attitude he held that Germany accepted the Locarno conference on that basis and no other.

The French foreign minister was supported in his stand by Emil Vandervelde, Belgian foreign minister, and one of the luminaries of the Second (Socialist) International. Sig. Scialoga, of the Italian foreign office and Austen Chamberlain, British foreign minister, also supported the stand of Briand. This combination is surely a sight for the gods—Briand, renegade syndicalist and now lackey of French imperialism; Vandervelde, king's minister and hero of the socialist international; Scialoga, fascist emissary of Mussolini, and the British tory, Austen Chamberlain—working as a unit to silence discussion of the question of German frontiers.

The German delegation seemed quite depressed over the turn of affairs and would not discuss the detail of the occurrences of the session beyond stating that Germany and France are in a deadlock over that question.

Complications Over Rhine

A further conflict between German and French policy arose over the question of the proposed Rhine pact. The French insist that in no way shall the pact interfere with the right to take penalties from the Germans in case of default or breach of the treaty of Versailles. The German delegation concedes the right, but insists that France should not be the sole judge as to what constitutes breach or default, contending that in the future such cases be submitted to arbitration.

The fact that the British delegation has refrained from taking a stand on the question leads to speculation that Britain is really behind Germany in this move. In unofficial conversations the British have suggested a compromise on the Rhine question, but join with us in this great confraternity of labor.

"Just as the governmental representatives of the United States are in practically every country of the world giving effect to the policy of your government; just as the powerful American trusts and combines have representatives and agents in every country of the world, advancing their interests, so must American labor be in a position, also, to safeguard its interests internationally.

Isolation a Mistaken Policy

"I tell you that the policy of isolation is a mistaken one. You cannot afford to think only in terms of the United States, or the Americans. The Monroe doctrine no longer holds good for your government as its imperial policy in the Phillipines, in China and elsewhere demonstrates. And it no longer holds good for your capitalists. It can no longer hold good for you.

"Circumstances, the development of capitalism, the establishment of great industrial fabrics in Asia, Africa and Australia, necessarily compels you to take a world view and to act from a world standpoint.

"It is a fundamental urge, an insistent impulse, of capitalism to go to those places where labor is cheap and where the raw materials are immediately available. Capitalism, the trusts and combines, businessmen generally, know no frontiers.

Must Face Colonial Problems

"The capitalists are now concerned about maintaining race purity or the conservation of jobs for the workers of any particular country. They are merely concerned about profits. Your American capitalist is not concerned whether his factory be in San Francisco or Tokio, so long as he can make the most of it. If these foreign workers working for very low wages, receiving cents where you would be receiving dollars, are working in a Tokio factory or a Shanghai factory, or a Bombay or Calcutta factory, they are none the less competitors to the wage earners of this country, just as if they had been working in San Francisco, Chicago, or New York.

"I want you to let that fact sink deeply into your minds, and to reflect upon it in relation to the enormous development of industrialism in Japan, India, China, South Africa and the other parts of the world where there are infinite reserves of poor workers—workers of the brown, yellow and black races— anxious and willing to be drawn into the industrial vortex.

"What will the wage earners of America do to maintain their wage and living standard? What will they do by pursuing a policy of isolating, shutting themselves off from the world as though the world did not exist?

Must Aid Exploited Races

"And here I want to say that the world is a battleground of conflicting industrialisms. America aspires to obtain the world market for her goods. Britain aspires to obtain the world market for her goods. Japan, Germany, France, all the capitalist countries do the same, and the world market is woefully circumscribed, restricted. As things are, the tendency must inevitably be for the world market to go to those countries where the raw materials are at hand, labor is underpaid, and the costs of production are low. And I say further, that the only hope for the future of American labor, and indeed the world's white race, is for the trade union movement, internationally, to raise the status of the workers in Asia and Africa, to assist them with trade union organization so that they may build up their own trade union organization, and thru that means secure higher rates of pay and better working and living conditions. We, all the workers of Europe and the western world, will go down unless we help them to come up. The only way we can help them up is to assist them with our movement, united in one powerful trade union international.

"Nor is that all. We must now realize that the economy of the world is so highly developed, so technically efficient, and so extensive, that infinitely more can be produced than consumed under capitalism. In Britain we have 12 per cent of our workers permanently unemployed, and our experts tell us that unemployment must grow increasingly.

Is Proud of Russia

"I have been in Russia. There I have seen the workers assuming vast responsibilities and duties, carrying thru the reorganization of society under frightful difficulties. As a workman I am proud of the genius for organization and the essential grip of things which my class in Russia has displayed. Just as your president sent that warm and helpful letter on behalf of the Chinese workers, demonstrating thereby a desire to help those Chinese workers in their difficulties, so I want you to approach the question of relations with the workers of Russia.

"Let the same generous spirit prevail. The times we live in are too big, too fraught with fate, to permit of little prejudices barring the way to human relationship. Russia is a very big place—the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics occupies one-sixth of the land surface of the globe. It is an enormous factor in the world a tremendously powerful factor in the life of the world. Just recently, I read in the press that a great business concession, amounting to millions of dollars, was granted by the Russian government to one of your leading firms. Many American capitalists and financiers have been to Russia, endeavoring to fix up business deals. There is illimitable potential wealth in Russia.

"The soil of Russia is rich, the mineral resources of Russia are enormous ;the timber, flax, hides and raw materials of Russia generally are plentiful. Given a few good harvest years and Russia will become one of the wealthiest countries in the world.

"I have seen the foundations of the biggest electrification scheme in the world being laid down in Russia. The Russian people are a great people—strong, patient, hard working and clever. And they number 150 millions. These people, these workers and peasants, are building up a new economy and a new life, keenly and rapidly adapting to their use all the latest developments in science and industry, the most up to date machinery, the most modern and technical devices.

Must Not Fear New Ideas

"I say that you, workers of America, have got to learn from Russia. We must not be afraid of new ideas. It has often struck me that while the Americans have been the most advanced—the most receptive—in ideas concerning mechanical invention and business organization, they have been most slow in accepting new social and political ideas. I do hope that from now on, the organized workers of America will establish the closest fraternal relations with the organized workers of Russia. Just as the general council of the Trades Union Congress, representative of the whole trade union movement of Britain, has sent delegations to Russia, so I hope and trust the American Federation of Labor will do the same. Do not be afraid of being called names.

"Once again, I say, let our comradership and brotherhood be a real and lasting thing.

"The workers of the world hold the future in their hands."

Last midnight was the final hour for the introduction of resolutions, the limit of time having been fixed for the second day of the convention, after which resolutions can only be put in thru unanimous consent. Progressive resolutions were put in on the subjects of the organization of the unorganized the Sacco-Vanzetti case, the organization of Negro workers, the recognition of Soviet Russia, the labor party, world trade union unity, class collaboration and amalgamation. The delegation of the Cap Makers' Union introduced a resolution attacking citizen's military training camps.

ATLANTIC CITY, Oct. 7—Purcell was the first fraternal delegate to be presented today to the convention. President Green telling of his work in the British and European labor movement related how he was head of the Furniture Workers' association, member of the general council of British Trade Union Congress, of which he was president last year, of his being elected to parliament on labor party ticket from a coal miners' constituency, and of his presidency of the International Federation of Trade Unions. Purcell began by declaring that diversity of opinion was sign of good health. "If there was no difference of opinion that would be the end of us," said Purcell. But for the most part the delegates heard Purcell thru in complete silence. A little applause greeted his moderate plea for world trade union unity. But all references to Russia were received with deathly silence.

President Green seized the opportunity in reply to make broadside attack against American Communist Party. The Trade Union Educational League, and especially against the Red International of Labor Unions, making no mention of the Amsterdam Trade Union International.

"The Trade Union Educational League seeks to substitute for our philosophy the principles of Communism," declares Green. "We ask our visitor from England to take back to the Russian International the message that we will never affiliate with an organization that preaches that doctrine or stands for that philosophy."

President Green also referred to the fact that "some delegate who feels that the doctrines of Moscow are better than the philosophy of Gompers has introduced resolutions that would come up later." Green asked that Purcell remain in the convention until these resolutions came up to witness the registration of opinion by the delegates of these subjects.

As to the British situation Green also declared that he did not know whether he should recognize the decisions of Scarborough or of Liverpool. This was the end of Purcell's plea for world trade union unity for the time being. Fraternal Delegate Ben Smith, members of the British Transport nad General Workers' Union, used his speech to explain attacks made in the capitalist press against British workers, especially as regards the dole system of unemployed benefits. He said the settlement of the British coal strike was a subsidy of profits not of wages.

He said British workers were idle as a result of the war and the huge stream of goods pouring in from Germany.

"We are told that we are following Communist doctrines," said Smith, "but all that we want are the things that should be ours."

Tells of Fascism.

While making no criticism of Communists, Smith urged constitutional action at the ballot box, but explained how the British fascist movement was growing up planning to use force to keep the workers in submission thru the suppression of their struggles.

Smith said the British ruling class was bent on taking its pound of flesh, but the reply of the workers was, "if you take your pound of flesh it will be with every wheel stopped." Smith closed with a plea for closer attention by the organized labor movement to the young people of the world.

Fraternize with Mexican Yellows.

A. F. of L. efforts to cater to the Calles' Mexican government is repeatedly evident in the convention. Green outdid himself in presenting Roberto Haberman, one of the fraternal delegates from Mexico, who used his speech in comical attempt to attack the DAILY WORKER, the Communist parties of both the United States and Mexico and Soviet Russia.

Haberman is an emigre Mexican who spends most of his time in this country. The regular delegate, Vargas, however, accepted Haberman's speech as his own.

The two British delegates are planning to continue their trip to Mexico, where they can get information first hand. One of Haberman's sallies for instance was as follows: "There are a few honest souls in Russia. We hope they do not read the DAILY WORKER but the official reports of the American Federation of Labor."

Donald Dear, fraternal delegate from Canada, said that unemployment was also growing across the northern border.

A. F. OF L. CONVENTION CITY A SCENE OF SLAVERY ILLUSTRATING WEAKNESS OF AMERICAN UNIONS

By ART SHIELDS

(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

ATLANTIC CITY, Oct. 7.—The famous Atlantic City boardwalk that runs past Steeplechase Pier where the American Federation of Labor holds its 45th annual convention has a unique system of transportation that harks back to ancient times when men took the place of horses in hauling passengers. If a boardwalk traveler's legs grow weary the only vehicles available are chairs pushed by patient human beings.

Directly across from convention pier is what might be called a carbarn for the chairs and here delegates can hear the story of how tough it is to work for the Shill company that controls most of the chairs on the walk.

"Dividing Up."

No wages are paid, a tired chair pusher explained, only a commission and tips. The company gets a dollar an hour from the patrons—one dollar for the two persons that make the standard load. Capital splits this purse with labor, labor taking the loser's end of 20 cents—and such tips as are gathered.

Where three persons ride the company gets $1.25 an hour and labor 25 cents, five cents more for bending the back lower and shoving harder. Hours are a maximum of from 8 a. m. till one the next morning, but actually few work that long. It is humanly impossible to keep such a working day going steadily.

Workers' Poverty Easily Seen.

Chairs were in great demand during the bankers' convention and sharp contrasts appeared with portly and expensively tailored forms in the seats and a ragged Negro pusher behind. The chair pushers bear the stamp of their poverty. No natty uniforms, such as might be expected on this smart thoroughfare, are furnished by the company, the pushers wearing such clothes as they have.

Taxicabs are not allowed on the boardwalk and labor men thus are allowed a vacation from the eye sore of the Yellows all over the rest of the town. The Yellow men work 12 hours a day and are not organized. "The company won't permit it," a driver told the Federated Press reporter when interviewed on the curb. A small independent union has members in the independent cabs and each of the latter hacks—that are organized—displays a card of greeting to the A. F. of L.

DuPont's Dynamite Exhibit.

Diagonally across from convention pier the luxurious exhibition rooms of the DuPont chemical products fronts the boardwalk and gives a vivid impression of the amazing development of this industry since the war put the ball and chain on German chemicals. The DuPont display at Atlantic City is richer and more varied than the one they gave at the recent chemical exposition in New York.

There are literally thousands of chemical products: explosives of all kinds, dyes, artificial silk, artificial leather, tortoise shell and ivory imitations and a whole series of other fancy, hard surfaced synthetic products; toilet articles, automobile varnishes, and so forth. All produced on the open shop plan.

No Lucky Strike for Craftsmen...

Two hundred yards down the line is a demonstration room where Lucky Strike cigarets are turned out by the hundreds of thousands with the same machinery used in the factory. Youths and girls tend the machines. The machine displaced the old fashioned tobacconist craftsmen with the hand operations. The human hand does not touch the tobacco from the time it falls into the hoppers till it comes out as a finished "tailor made."

Representatives of France and Germany Deadlock Conference the French insist that there can be no question of bargaining away treaty rights.

Revive Belgian Neutrality

The request of Stresemann to know the future status of the Franco-Belgian treaty and military alliance with relation to the Rhineland pact brought to light the intention to revive the old 1839 treaty guaranteeing Belgium neutrality, which the Germans are charged with regarding as a "scrap of paper" at the outbreak of the world war in 1914.

The role of Britain, if the Rhine pact is completed, and the treaty of Belgian neutrality is revived, will be that of guarantor of both the agreements.

In view of England acting as guarantor in the western pacts, France claims that no objections should be raised regarding her acting guarantor of agreements on the question of the eastern frontier of Germany, involving the proposed German-Czech and German-Polish pacts. France raises this question now because in case of aggression by Germany against Poland or Czecho-Slovakia they want the privilage of marching troops thru the neutralized and demilitarised zone of the Rhineland.

The Germans say that when Germany joins the league of nations this will be sufficient guarantee against any aggression of a military nature. With this proposition the British are incline to agree.

Stresemann Reassures Russia

Out of the maze of diplomatic intrigue that is going on, officially and unofficially, but one thing stands out clearly at this time and that is the new assurances of Germany to Russia that no pact will be signed calling for military aggression against Russia and that under no conditions will Germany accept the proposal that France act as guarantor of eastern frontiers. This assurance was officially sent to the Russian foreign office by the German foreign minister, which shows that thus far the efforts of the imperialist and fascist bandits of Europe to create a pact for the purpose ef endeavoring to stage a new drive against Russia is doomed to fail.

ENGDAHL TO TELL PHILADELPHIA WORKERS HOW "FAT BOYS" TIED WORKERS TO BOSSES' APRONSTRINGS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Oct. 7.—The workers of Philadelphia will be able to hear of how the "fat boys" of the American Federation of Labor have tied down the American workers to the boss' apron strings by endorsing the infamous Dawes plan, at a mass meeting to be held at Grand Fraternity Hall, 1626 Arch St., Sunday evening, October 11, at 8 o'clock.

J. Louis Engdahl, editor of the DAILY WORKER and observer at the convention, will tell of how the German and the American delegations worked in cahoots to endorse the Dawes plan thinking to make fat jobs for themselves, and how the British delegates fought against lining up with the bankers of America to enslave the workers not only of Germany but also of other nations.

No Class Documents of Labor in Sight at This Year's A. F. of L. Meeting

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.—Today, a flood of fervid patriotism sweeps thru the annual convention of the American Federation of Labor, as if LaFollette were launching another "Back to '76!" campaign.

Turning their backs on the future the officials spellbind about "revitalizing the U. S. constitution and the declaration of independence," reaching a climax in President Green's excited utterance "We love our country! We love our flag! We love our government! We love its institutions!" Such love hath no labor official ever shown for the capitalist state that enslaves the working class for which he is supposed to speak.

• • • •

It is a coincidence that while the delegates were thus heaving their bosoms in star spangled banner protestations, that extracts from numerous letters of George Washington were being published showing just what kind of a man the "father of his country" happened to have been.

For instance, the man who is supposed to have laid the basis of American institutions, thru leading the armies of the colonies victorious against Great Britain, is revealed as a shoddy aristocrat, not only as a distiller of whiskey, but also as a seller of it, while those who talk of humane warfare today, may learn that Washington was trying to make killing respectable even 150 years ago.

• • • •

Washington was an aristocrat; some claim the richest man of his time. Slaveholder and lord of vast estates, which it is shown he secured thru questionable and sharp methods, he did not like to see his women folk marry "beneath their station." A Mr. Parks, in the "mason trade," was considered unfit to wed into the Washington family, altho he placed his fortune at $15,000. The value of money at the time may be judged from the fact that even a Washington talked about paying only $2 weekly for the "schooling, board, lodging and washing" of the son of a friend, whom he advised to go to school at Andover, Mass. If a man with $15,000 under these circumstances stood beneath the contempt of George Washington, it may well be judged how far below him he considered the ordinary workers of the time, many of whom were enslaved almost to the same extent as their black brothers.

• • • •

Usually when one charges in the open that Washington was a common drunkard, a call is sent in for the police wagon. But the New York Times publishes a letter showing how Washington haggled over the purchase of 500 barrels of corn for his whiskey distillery, and then how he haggles again in the sale of the finished whiskey product, since it is evident that he could not drink it all himself. So successful was Washington's whiskey business that he increased the output of his distillery from time to time.

• • • •

Washington's efforts at humanizing war were revealed in a letter he wrote to the British general, Lord Cornwallis, from Camp Middlebrook June 2, 1777, in which he signs himself as, "Your Lordship's Most Obedient Servant," declaring, "It is with infinite regret I am again compelled to remonstrate against that spirit of wanton cruelty that has in several instances influenced the conduct of your soldiery."

The incident arose over the killing of an officer, not over a private soldier, and Washington's appeal showed that he felt himself pretty close to the British aristocracy that he was supposed to be warring against most bitterly.

• • • •

Washington made the fight of his day for his class against the British overseas government that had not yet learned to govern its colonies as cleverly as it does today. Washington's class was made up of the great landlords, the merchants and professional class of his day. Out of this ruling class of the 18th century has grown the capitalist ruling class of today, the 20th century. Washington and Hancock and Jefferson and all the rest wrote the declaration of independence and the constitution to promote their class interests, and the capitalist class of today has appropriated those documents to protect their class interests.

• • • •

This the working class of the United States will learn, if the officials of the American Federation of Labor never do. The workers will then begin writing class documents of their own, upon which to build their future class struggles and class hopes. There are no such class documents in sight at this convention of the A. F. of L.

Hicks Again Assails Communists.

LONDON, Oct. 7—For the second time this week, Sir William Joynson Hicks, home secretary, assailed the Communists. In an address in Liverpool last night he asserted: "The destruction of the Communist menace in England is a matter of life and death."

Lord Derby, who presided, declared that widespread efforts are now being made to "Russianize England."

"The Communist Party my be small in England," he said, "but it is powerful and is definitely allied with Russia. Men like Saklatvala, Harry Pollitt, Purcell and Gallacher receive their orders from Zinoviev."

The Liverpool conservatives were properly impressed with these solemn warnings, from Sir Hicks, who, next to Ramsay MacDonald has become the principal red-baiter in the British Isles.

TEAPOT DOME SCANDAL NOW PUT ON DENBY

Sinclair and Fall Try to Shift Blame

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 7.—The Teapot Dome governmental graft scandal sprung into a new lease of life here Monday when Harry Sinclair, oil magnate, and Albert B. Fall, former secretary of the interior, charged in the District of Columbia courts with having conspired to defraud the government, filed demurrers the main contention of which that Edwin Denby, former secretary of the navy, and not Secretary Fall, was responsible for handing the Wyoming Teapot Dome to Sinclair.

The idea is that Sinclair and Fall wish to shift the blame from Fall to Denby, automatically ending the prosecution of the former two teapotters.

Fall also entered a demurrer to the indictment involving him with Ed Doheny over the Elk Hills, California, lease. The first one of these indictments was quashed some months ago by Chief Justice McCoy of the district supreme court, on the ground that the presence in the grand jury room of Assistant Attorney General Pagan was unlawful. This prevented any arguments on the merits of the indictment.

BESTIAL ROUMANIAN GOVERNMENT FEARFUL OF TCHITCHERIN VISIT

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BUKHAREST, Roumania, Oct. 6.—The proposal of Count Skrzynski, Polish foreign minister, to go to Moscow to pay a return visit to Commissar of Foreign Affairs Tchitcherin, who stopped in Warsaw on his way to Berlin, has aroused serious apprehension on the part of the official governmental clique in Bukharest. After the world war, under the domination of France, the Polish and Roumanian governments signed a joint "defensive military alliance" to be used against Soviet Russia.

Recent developments on the field of international diplomacy have caused Poland to move toward agreement with Russia, without consulting Roumania. The Bukharest government wants to know the meaning of these visits and wonders if it is being left out in the cold.

As far as the Roumanian government is concerned the Soviet government has made it quite plain that it will have nothing to do with it while the ferocious suppression of Bessarabia continues. It is the contention of the Soviet government that Roumania has no right to rule over Bessarabia.

This rule has been maintained by the most appalling excesses of violence, resulting in the bestial slaughter of 2,000 peasants a year ago and at this time trials of 500 peasants are going on for their taking part in an uprising against the tyranny of the Roumanian vassals of French imperialism.

MELLON OPPOSES ALL TAXES THAT AFFECT BIG BIZ

Wants to Cut Down on Surtax

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—Secretary of the Treasury Mellon has been invited to appear before sessions of the house ways and means committee which meets October 19, to present his ideas on the 1926 revenue act.

Mellon recommends repeal of the publicity clause of the revenue act, abolition of the federal inheritance tax, repeal of the gift taxes, legislation to curb tax exempt securities, and reduction of the surtax to a maximum of 15 or 20 per cent.

With the request from chairman Green of the ways and means committee that the treasury take an active part in the new tax legislation, a big corps of experts has been put to work compiling the necessary data on which congress must base its new law.

Strong pressure has been brought to bear for repeal of the automobile sales tax, the tax on automobile bus transportation and motor accessories. Experts at the treasury favor the automobile tax, which last year yielded $150,000,000. Elimination of the accessories tax probably will be agreed to. Other "nuisance taxes," the repeal of which is demanded in some quarters are on the following:

Sales by dealers of art works: cameras, photographic films, use of pleasure boats, fire arms and shells, smokers articles, slot machines, jewelry, bowling alleys, pool rooms, shooting galleries, riding academies, admissions and some of the documentary stamp taxes.

Titles to Stick in England; Their Sale Fills Empty Coffers

WINNIPEG, Can., Oct. 7.— Titles will not be abolished in England, as they were in Canada, because the sale of titles often replenishes the empty coffers of the political party in power.

Hugh Martin, parliamentary editor of the Daily News, and member of the British press delegation touring Canada, said that Lloyd George raised over 1,000,000 pounds sterling, thru the sale of titles, during his regime as premier.

Barter for Titles.

Tho at present it is a crime to barter for a title, one can still buy a title for 30,000 pounds sterling.

Another correspondent in the delegation said the only way political parties ever get rid of the useless timber in their parties is thru making lords of them and then sending them to the house of lords.

Our Party and the Communist International

(Stenographic report of the speech of James P. Cannon at the National Convention of the Young Workers League, Sunday, Oct. 4, 1925.)

COMRADE Chairman and Comrades: The youth league is meeting in this national convention just at a time of a particularly serious crisis in the party; and I am speaking here as one of the party representatives under circumstances which I think must be known to you comrades.

As a result of the decision of the last convention, and the decision of the Communist International, the Central Executive Committee leadership is represented by the group which, prior to the party convention, was the minority, and which, as you know, I do not belong to. So, in speaking here tonight I am doing so after consultation with the delegation of the Central Executive Committee, not as a direct representative of the Central Executive Committee, but I am speaking by permission of the Central Executive Committee in my own name, and in the name of a large number of comrades whose views coincide with mine.

THE situation of the party requires very clear statements from us; and I propose here to make these statements. I propose to give the party and the Comintern an answer to every question, which they have a right to ask us in this situation.

I said the party is in a crisis, and we all know this. In my opinion, it is a crisis of Bolshevization. Our party is going thru the travail of accelerated development towards a real Bolshevist party. It is the process of "The Birth of a Communist Party" of which Comrade Zinoviev once wrote. The party appears to be torn into all kinds of groups, factions and sub-factions as a result of this process.

The problem before the party, above all others, or, rather embracing all others, is the problem of Bolshevization. And it is clear that the central question in the problem of Bolshevization is now the question of the relations of the party to the Communist International.

Bolshevization, without a correct estimate of the relations of the party and the party leaders to the Communist International, is merely an empty phrase. Bolshevization program or Bolshevization resolutions that do not take into account the full significance of the fact that we are members of the world Communist party, with international leadership, do not contain the real essence of Bolshevization.

Because of the peculiar nature of the present situation, and because of the rapid changes which have taken place in the party leadership, it is manifestly the duty of those comrades, who prior to the convention composed the majority group, to make known their attitude towards the party crisis, and their proposals for its solution.

I THINK it is known to nearly all comrades in the party, as it has been known for some time to the members of the former majority, that the former majority group is itself in the process of the deepest crisis. This crisis within the group of the former majority is a part of the crisis in the party. For that reason it is the concern of the party, and should be made known to it. Factions can have no interests of their own in a Communist party. They have to be related to the interests of the party.

Within the group of the former majority there has been in recent times a very thorogoing discussion. Very strong pressure has been put upon one section by another section. This pressure has had certain effects. But these effects have not been sufficiently decisive. Therefore it s necessary for the group of the former majority to have more pressure put upon it, from the outside, directly before the whole party. My speech here tonight has this purpose.

SO I am going to discuss the question before the Young Workers League convention, not merely for the Y. W. L., but for the party, since this convention is a forum before the whole party. I am going to speak about the situation which has developed within the ranks of the former majority. When I say this, I want to inform you in advance, that if any comrade expects to hear me relate any private conversations, "secrets," scandals, or petty gossip, or anything of this sort, he will be disappointed. I will confine my remarks entirely to the questions which have political significance and a political content, which are known to all the leading comrades of the group and which are of concern to the party.

Comrade Green in his article in the DAILY WORKER the other day made the statement that the differences within the group of the former majority are not less serious than the differences between the former majority and the former minority. I want to testify here to the accuracy of this estimate.

THE differences within the former majority are as serious as were those between the two former factions. Differences arose at the convention and have been intensifying since the convention. But these differences which came to the surface in the convention crisis, and which have intensified since then, were themselves the outgrowth of old differences, and were foreshadowed by the old differences. And all of these differences have become synthesized and concentrated now into one, big predominant question.

That question is this: The role of the Communist International and the relations of our party and our party leaders to the Communist International.

In the controversy in the group over this question, a conflict has developed between Comrade Foster and myself. And in connection with the remarks I make on this I want to remind the comrades of my long collaboration with Comrade Foster.

Some of the greatest forward-steps of the party have been brot about as the result of this collaboration, together with some other comrades. As far back as 1921 and 1922, this collaboration made it possible simultaneously to develop the trade union work on a broad scale and to organize the legal party. These achievements laid the basis for the party to become a factor in the labor movement. Comrade Foster played a tremendous role in all of this; and I collaborated with him and with other comrades. And if we now come to the point where our differences are so sharp that there appears to be no possibility to reconcile them—and we are at such a point—it is not without great pain to those who were part of the collaboration.

ON receipt of the Communist International telegram, a profound crisis was immediately precipitated in the group of the former majority at the party convention. The immediate difference appeared to arise over two separate propositions put before the caucus: one by Comrade Foster and one by Comrade Dunne and myself. Comrade Foster's original proposition, was that we should accept only a minority of the Central Executive Committee, and that he should not participate; and that the organization of the new Central Executive Committee in fact should be carried out by the representative of the Communist International, and not by us who were the majority at the convention. Our counter-proposition was that we, the majority, should organize the Central Executive Committee. At first I proposed an even division, half and half; and later it was modified to include the representative of the Communist International, on his suggestion. The difference was not technical but political. It was a difference in attitude towards the decision and towards the situation created by it. I considered that Comrade Foster's proposition had serious objective consequences. I considered that if we, as a majority of the convention, should refuse to organize the new Central Executive Committee, or that in any event Comrade Foster should not go into the new Central Executive Committee, it could not be interpreted in any other way than that we were rejecting responsibility for the Central Executive Committee. This would mean that the party would be thrown into a crisis in which the Central Executive Committee would be deprived of the assistance and support which it would require from us to pull the party thru the crisis.

Our proposition was based on the opinion that the situation was such in the party, precipitated by the decision, that we were obliged if we wish to save the party from demoralization, to take responsibility to the full limit of the possibilities under the provisions of the decision.

WE held a discussion in the caucus for two days, and in this discussion I pointed out, together with other comrades, the objective consequences of the attitude shown by Comrade Foster.

We stated there that Comrade Foster's proposition would create a condition making it impossible for the party to work, or for the Central Executive Committee to lead it or control it; and that this would bring us inevitably, not only into conflict with the Central Executive Committee, but into conflict with the Communist International since the decision of the Communist International was the main factor; that consequently, regardless of the intention of the comrades, the whole objective tendency would be for all elements in the party who are in any degree actively or passively in opposition to the Communist International to rally around our standpoint, and enmesh us more and more into a position of opposition, which would inevitably develop into opposition to the Communist International.

And it was because we had such a deep conviction that this line would lead in this direction that we spoke ultimatively with great determination in the caucus. The tendency represented by Comrade Foster met the most powerful opposition; it met opposition from the very backbone of the former majority group.

COMRADES from all sections of the country, the leading, most responsible and most influential comrades, took a decided stand against it; and the final result was that a majority voted in favor of our proposal. We were then willing to consider the difference which arose over the Communist International decision as liquidated on the basis of the adoption of our policy, which was a decisive policy of responsibility for the party.

But this policy of responsibility for the party did not develop as the policy of Comrade Foster after the convention. We were no sooner out of this crisis than we immediately plunged into a new crisis in the group, that is, amongst the comrades who belonged to the former group. This conflict was organically connected with the conflict at the convention. It was over the appeal to the Communist International.

It has been stated here by Comrade Bedacht, and I think it is known to every Communist that it is not only the right of a Communist who disagrees with a decision of the Communist International to appeal for a reconsideration, but it is his duty to do so. It is the duty of any Communist who thinks the Communist International needs more information on any question to furnish this information.

I disagree totally with the implications of Comrade Stachel's statements here that an appeal to the Communist International is in itself in any sense a violation of Communist rights. However, there are two sides to this question of appealing to the Communist International.

ON the one hand it is the duty, not merely the right, of comrades to appeal to the Communist International. On the other hand it is impermissible for them, when they are appealing to the Communist International, to appeal, at the same time to the party, because that negates the whole principle involved in the appeal to the Communist International. An appeal to the party on the basis of an appeal to the Communist International is nothing less than an attempt to put the party in a position of opposition to the decision of the Communist International. No matter what is one's intention, this is the objective effect. Therefore we opposed the tendency that developed within our group to present resolutions to the party organizations endorsing the appeal of the former majority to the Communist International.

What was this conditioned upon? To us it was very clear, after a little consideration, that if the group of the former majority would present such a motion to a meeting of the party, it could only be adopted on the condition that the comrades present would be convinced that the appeal was justified and valid. In other words, they would have to be convinced that the decision was an error. In order to accomplish this it would be necessary, and would follow, in spite of all intentions, that propaganda and agitation would be made to convince party comrades that the decision of the Communist International is wrong. This is not permissible, because this is appealing in the party to the opinion and view-point that the Communist International decision was made with snap judgment, or made without due consideration. This in itself has an inevitable tendency to discredit the Communist International before the party comrades, to break down faith in the Communist International decisions. It is a step away from the Communist International. This was the position we took.

IT is significant, in confirmation of my statements that this conflict over the question of the appeal had an organic connection with the convention conflict, that the alignment of comrades on this question was identically the same as the one in the convention caucus, with only a change here and there by comrades who had not understood the real question involved.

A very severe crisis developed which made it impossible to agree to a unified policy. I am sorry to say that comrades in several parts of the country, under influence of the policy which was sponsored and given support by Comrade Foster were misled into taking what I consider some false steps. These comrades who had a certain resentment against the Communist International decision began to speak quite openly against it.

Efforts within the group to compel the comrades to abandon this policy were not successful. In the New York membership meeting as was reported in the DAILY WORKER, and as I have been informed by personal letters, some comrades of the former majority, who have been members of the party for many years, and who surely know the fundamental basis of our relations to the Communist International, allowed themselves to be placed in an impossible position. Before a membership meeting of the rank and file of the party they criticized the decision of the Communist International. Also I read in the DAILY WORKER that similar occurences took place in Boston. The reports of the New York membership meeting greatly sharpened the crisis. It showed clearly the dangerous line that was being followed. We did not react so much in antagonism to the comrades in New York and Boston (we are confident they will quickly correct their error) as we did to the leading comrades of our former group, especially Comrade Foster, because we held them to be responsible for having allowed such a situation to prevail.

WE held it to be a result of the policy which they sponsored and we decided to take drastic action to check the tendency developing amongst our comrades as a result of the policy, to get themselves into contradiction with the decision of the Communist International. That policy proved itself to be completely wrong, completely bankrupt, and very dangerous for the party and for the movement.

We held a discussion with the comrades and presented to them in an ultimative fashion the demand that the appeal should not be made an issue in the party in any way. The comrades finally agreed to this.

But in spite of the agreement the discussions we had with the Y. W. L. delegates seemed to center entirely around the question of the appeal. The whole discussion of the activities and the future line of the comrades seemed to hinge around this question and proposals were made that the comrades of the Y. W. L. should come into the convention of the Y. W. L. and make a motion to endorse the appeal to the Communist International.

IT was clearly demonstrated in these discussions that the acceptance of our policy was only a formal acceptance. Comrade Foster and those who supported him continued the attempt to have the essence of their policy prevail. This made further collaboration with them impossible for us.

FURTHER collaboration is impossible between those having our standpoint towards the relations of the party and its leaders to the Communist International, and comrades who persist in this other policy.

After this, during the few days we have been here, we have had many discussions with the youth. I personally attach tremendous importance to the convention of the Y. W. L., and to the comrades who are delegates here. So much importance that I have devoted my time almost entirely since the comrades arrived in town to discussions with them and to attempts to see to it that these comrades should not, under any circumstances, be placed in a position where they would be forming a political platform on the basis of opposition to the decision of the Communist International. The comrades representing the viewpoint of Comrade Foster persisted day after day in their efforts to convince the comrades of the Y. W. L. of their position; and so persistent have these comrades been, that we were obliged to spend this entire day and all last night discussing the question with these young comrades to beat down this propaganda and this attempt to get comrades agitated on this fundamentally false basis. It was only at five o'clock this evening that we finally confirmed our victory in the Y. W. L. delegation. These comrades took their position definitely and categorically, for our policy.

WE came to the decision finally, that in view of the violation of the prior agreement, these comrades who are delegates should not only take a position in the caucus against this policy, but that they should take a position openly in the convention condemning any attempts to agitate the party or the league on the question of the appeal, to discredit the decision of the Communist International, or to put up the appeal as a political platform of opposition in the party; and thanks to Comrades Williamson and Schachtman who fought side by side with me from start to finish the Y. W. L. comrades have been led away from this false path and have unanimously adopted what I think is the correct position on the question of the relations of the party to the Communist International.

For us the question has come to the point where we could not be satisfied any longer, in view of our duties to the party and to the Communist International, with having a private understanding within a private conference. The question has come to the point for us now where we feel obliged and duty-bound to take an open stand before the party in repudiation of the policy of Comrade Foster and to call openly on all comrades in the party, who are willing to be influenced by us, to follow our policy and not allow themselves to be maneuvered or pushed or led into any other policy on the question of the appeal to the Communist International.

THIS naturally brings about a very serious situation in the party on the question of our relations to Comrade Foster. I personally hope that Comrade Foster will be convinced and that he will turn back from the path he has drifted into.

Comrade Foster has played an important role in the party, and he has given much to the party as we all know, and I am sure that now if Comrade Foster will turn back from this course he can lay the basis for still greater work in the future. But on the other hand if Comrade Foster persists in the line that he followed even up to today, in my opinion, he will lose his influence in the party. Comrade Foster will find that he is more and more in conflict with all the best Communist elements in the party who have collaborated with him up till now, [illegible]

At the convention caucus our policy was called a policy of responsibility. Now, what do we mean by responsibility? We do not mean merely, comrades, that we shall accept party positions and discharge the functions of these positions; altho this is important. What we mean by responsibility which must be taken by the comrades of the former majority, is that we must take political responsibility to help in the solution of the crisis in the party. We must take responsibility to try to pull the party out of the crisis, to unify it, to complete the liquidation of the right wing within the party and to set it firmly on the path to Bolshevization. This is what responsibility means. Responsibility for us includes the criticism of the party in the proper time and place,and within limits of party discipline, as the conditions may make it necessary.

WE do not believe the situation in the party is of such a superficial nature that it can be solved easily and quickly. Comrade Bedacht, as we know, is a very violent comrade. He spoke here tonight very violently. But I am afraid Comrade Bedacht underestimates, at least in a slight degree, the deep seriousness of the problem in the party. In my opinion it is necessary for us to understand that mechanical measures have definite limitations. Mechanical methods of solving political problems have always to me appeared defective. I have learned this by experience in the party as well as by study. I do not believe that the crisis can be liquidated by persecution and terrorism of comrades.

We all know there is a certain dissatisfaction amongst some comrades. But I say it is impermissible for leaders of the party, whether they belong to the present official leadership or whether their leadership accrues from their influence within the party as the result of their past party work, it is impermissible for them to allow this sentiment to drift in the party, because it can drift only in one direction. We cannot permit ourselves to enter on a propaganda either openly in a party meeting or privately in discussion with the rank and file comrades which continually questions the Communist International decision, and represents it as the result of false information.

I DON'T think it is necessary to argue so much here as we did in the private discussions since the problem has been liquidated for our comrades who are delegates. We have been fighting comrades adopting these tactics, (and there were some comrades, I am sorry to say, with whom I have long been associated, with some of them even before the organization of the party, in the revolutionary labor movement, and in constant collaboration), and it is no pleasure to be in such sharp conflict with them. But we have reminded these comrades and we want to remind them now before the party that every one in the Comintern who wound up in the camp of the social-democrats began his opposition to the Communist International with statements such as we have been hearing lately. Comrades, regardless of intentions, in politics every action has its own logic; every action has an objective result, and it leads in a certain direction.

THE policy adopted in the convention caucus by Comrade Foster which was adhered to even after it was formally defeated, led to making the Communist International appeal an issue. And this in turn led some comrades in the membership meeting openly to criticise the decision of the Communist International. Each step led in the same direction and that direction is the wrong one.

I think it is our duty now to come out and say openly before the party that we are going to strive with all our power, and with all our energy to see to it, that not a single Communist is led any longer in that direction; that he shall turn back if he has already taken such steps.

We have some opinions in regard to the solution of the present crisis in the party. We believe it requires a united front of all the Communist elements against the right wing, and against the right wing tendencies. When I say a united front against the right wing I say it in the sense of the decision of the Communist International plenum of last April, and which has not been fully carried out up till now.

We think the crisis requires that comrades, especially leading comrades, do not forget what the C. I. called attention to in Germany: the necessity for a real Bolshevist self-criticism which has not been practised up to now. We think it requires a liquidation of the policy of refusing to admit mistakes or of admitting mistakes in such a way as to justify them. The party leaders have to begin to speak openly to the party and to the C. I. about everything that has been done wrongly in order that the party and the C. I. can enable us to get straight.

And, finally, our opinion of the thing that is necessary for the liquidation of the party crisis, is the firm establishment of the real Communist relations between the party and the C. I.; a complete break with the whole tradition of diplomatising with the C. I.; a complete break with the whole tendency to regard the C. I. as something outside the party, putting pressure on the party or the party leadership. We must develop the understanding that the party and the C. I. are one inseparable whole. We must have frank and open dealing with the executive of the C. I. and with the party; comrades must say the same thing in the party as they say in Moscow, and vice versa.

I, for one, and the comrades associated with me, and they are a considerable number, intend to follow this policy.

SAVE THE "DAILY WORKER".

Speech by Wm. Z. Foster at Y. W. L. Convention

COMRADE Chairman and Comrades: I feel it is my duty to say at least a few things here tonight. If it were any other meeting of the Party except the Young Workers League, possibly I would not feel the urge so strongly. But particularly the Young Workers League I believe I should speak to. I should like to refer to some of the things that have been said by Comrades Bedacht and Cannon. It is true, as Comrade Cannon has said, that sharp division has taken place in the ranks of the former majority. The division—I want to try to show you some of the implications of it if I can. The division took place shortly after the receipt of the cablegram from Moscow, upon a proposal of Comrade Bittelman and I that on the basis of the cablegram we should take a minority of the CEC. It seems to me necessary, comrades, in view of the fact that I have been so closely identified with such a very large section of the Party, that something should be said in addition to what Comrade Cannon has said as to the motive behind that motion.

Comrade Cannon has left the impression as tho this motion was designed to shirk responsibility of the Party. I want to correct that. I want to say that to shirk responsibility was the farthest thing from our minds. When Comrade Cannon put forth the idea of a fifty-fifty CEC, to me that looked like a highly impractical proposition. Comrades, as I read the decision from the Comintern I understood it to mean this—that the Comintern decision meant just what it said, "that the Ruthenberg group was closer to the view of the Comintern, more loyal to its decisions." In this situation, to my understanding, there was nothing left to do except to turn the control of the CEC over to the former minority. I think that was a 100 per cent correct Communist decision on our part. It was and still is my opinion that, in the face of the decision, to try to hold on to the majority of the CEC or even to set up a fifty-fifty CEC was a wrong policy.

I don't think it can be held against us that we were sabotaging the Party because of our interpretation of the Comintern decision, namely, that it calls upon the minority to take charge of the CEC. Our position was this, that to take a fifty-fifty CEC was not going to facilitate matters. It would put us in a false position and expose us to the charges that we were blocking the Party work. The decision said the minority should control the Party, and we should accept it as such. We had to get ourselves in the proper position in the Party, in the CEC of the Party, which in the face of the decision, could only be done by our taking a minority of the CEC. It is significant that at the very first meeting of the CEC, Comrade Green abolished the fifty-fifty arrangement and gave the former minority a majority.

I repeat, the farthest thing from our minds was to shirk responsibility. Our comrades generally have not shirked responsibility. They have worked diligently since this decision. As for myself, I feel there is at least one thing I am grateful to the minority for, that is, the present majority of the CEC, that they entrusted me with particularly important work—that is the handling of the [illegible] ference and the handling of the I. L. G. W. U. settlement to a great extent in New York—a very difficult problem—and I tried to put that into good shape and my policies were endorsed by the CEC almost completely. This indicates that they never took any stock in Cannon's argument that I was seeking to avoid responsibility in the Party.

It was not with a desire to shirk responsibility that we made our proposition, nor could it possibly be given the sinister twist of being in opposition to the Comintern. On the contrary it was, we feel, the other section of the group, that were shirking responsibility of the Party in spite of their proposal. Why? Because these comrades, notwithstanding all their talk about sharing responsibility, come forth with a proposition to send all the leaders of their group off to the school in Moscow—Cannon, Dunne, Abern, Bell, Hathaway, Schachtman and Williamson. We argued unavailingly against this policy of theirs. Comrade Bedacht in the committee also impressed upon them that it was impossible for all these leading comrades to go away at this particular time—that they had to stay and help do the work of the Party. If anybody was shirking it was these very comrades who have tried to create the impression that we were avoiding Party responsibility, and to make such a desperate issue of this matter. I don't say that they shirked responsibility intentionally, but the CEC understood it as avoiding responsibility and refused to let them go to Moscow.

Comrade Cannon said that after the decision came I refused to participate in the CEC. Altho that charge relates to my personal attitude I must answer it. His statement is correct and a fact. I can assure you that when I read that decision I was not a bit pleased. When I saw the statement "that the Ruthenberg group is more loyal to the decisions of the Comintern" than our group, it went straight to my heart, because I want to be loyal to the Comintern and as far as I understand its decisions I am loyal to them. When the decision came I said to myself "What value am I in the movement if I am not loyal,—if the position is taken that I am not loyal to the Comintern? If that is the case, of what value am I in the CEC?" It took me only an hour to get over this wrong, but excusable conclusion. I think I recovered rapidly from that subjective reaction.

Comrade Bedacht said much about the army. I noticed that he used the illustration of the army and general staff constantly. In trying to picture Party discipline, he said when the army staff gives the instructions the soldiers must obey. In a sense that's true in our Party as it's true in an army. But there is one important difference not mentioned by Comrade Bedacht. In our Party the discipline is self-imposed. The decisions are arrived at by a common discussion of policy with our higher officers, and the decisions, when they come, are not forced upon us like in an army. They are the result of a common understanding and intelligent co-operation in the various phases of the Party. Like soldiers we must obey the CI. The higher degree of discipline [illegible] the Communist International the more effective will be our organization. But we have the right to take up these questions of policy with the heads of the Comintern and that's what we are doing in our appeal. In the meantime, however, we must put the Comintern decision fully into effect. In outlining the Party conception of discipline this right must be borne in mind.

I believe we have obeyed the decision of the Comintern 100 per cent. We have done the best we could in a difficult situation. I am sure we made the effort to act in the spirit of the decision when we refused to continue on as the majority of the Party. Suppose we had tried to diplomatize with the CI and said, "Well, this decision doesn't say we shall take a minority of the CEC, so we shall continue as a majority." Suppose we had done that. Do you think the Party would be in a healthy condition at the present time if we insisted on clinging on to the majority? I don't think it would. I think we took the proper stand in taking a minority. I am sure the Comintern will endorse it. To call it opposition to the C. I. is ridiculous.

Now about the organized campaign in support of the appeal that is charged against us. It is true we have asked the Comintern to review the decision, which is a legitimate and proper thing to do. But with one provision: that in the meantime we put the decision into effect unquestioningly and unequivocably. We have done that, I think. And as far as an organized campaign to develop the Party in support of the appeal is concerned, the thing has been enormously exaggerated, to say the very least. The Party organizations all over the country that we were in control of, and are still to a great extent, as well as the mass membership meetings recently held, have not gone on record for the appeal, nor have we made any effort to have them do so. Comrade Cannon's charges of an organized campaign in support of the appeal is incorrect. It is true that some comrades have made statements that were improper, and for this these comrades must be corrected. I refer particularly to the statements of Comrades Kraska of Boston and Aronberg in New York. I think these statements were inadvisable. But I am sure these comrades had not the slightest intention of admonishing the Communist International. I am sure they are altogether loyal to the C. I. If I have made any incorrect statements, I would want to be corrected about them also.

In connection with this matter, I want to say something about Moscow. Comrade Bedacht said a few things to the effect that some comrades and ex-comrades have slighting opinions of the Comintern and the decisions it makes. I don't think he meant these remarks for me, but probably for anyone to put on the shoe who might find it a good fit. I have the highest appreciation of the C. I. I have been three times to Moscow. I went the first time in 1921 and learned a lot. The second time in 1924 I learned much more. And something else. I think our Party learned a lot on the question of the third party alliance. I am convinced that the leaders of [illegible]

Y. W. L. ELECTS WORKERS AS CANDIDATES TO N. E. C.; BEDACHT SPEAKS TO YOUTH

In addition to the members of the National Executive Committee, six "candidates for the N. E. C." were elected, in accord with the custom of Communist youth leagues of the world generally, altho this custom had not previously been followed in America. These candidates meet with the plenary sessions of the N. E. C. with voice but no vote, except in the absence of full members, in which case the absentees' places are filled by the candidates, who are the first six alternates. The candidates elected are:

Harry Fox, August Valentine, Morris Yusem, Carl Weisberg, Sam Eronberg, David Milgrim.

Continuation of Report of Party CEC.

In the Sunday evening session of the convention, Comrade Bedacht, continuing his report on behalf of the Central Executive Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party, said that the working class is our army. If the working class remains inactive, the revolutionary movement cannot be successful. It is our task to develop the working class' consciousness and to accelerate its movement. There appears to be very little motion in the American working class. But there are some little commotions here and there. It is the business of the Communists to unite these little commotions, and this, with the experiences of the struggle, will increase the power and activity of the working class until it becomes strong enough and conscious enough to overcome the capitalist class.

All of this would seem to be an A. B. C. lesson having no place in a report of the Central Executive Committee of the party to the convention of the Y. W. L., said Comrade Bedacht. But unfortunately, this A. B. C. is not sufficiently rooted in the minds of our comrades. Leninism for them is not a method of analyses of all of the phenomena of social and other life, but it consists of phrases which they memorize out of articles, pamphlets or books. In the phrase these comrades are bound to forget the substance presented by the ever-flowing and ever-moving reality of life. The hanging on to an incompletely-understood phrase prevents the dialectic consideration of the situation and leads to false conclusions. Thus while the Leninism of these comrades seems to be attested to by their familiarity with the phrase, their lack of Leninism is attested to by their thoroly un-Leninist analyses and policies.

Comrade Bedacht discussed the present low level of the party and the league in the matter of Marxist-Leninist understanding, giving examples of comrades who wildly argued against the policy of building a labor party as a policy of "raising the yellow flag," but some of these same individual comrades had occasion later to take a party examination on their knowledge of Communist theory, and were unable to answer the simplest questions.

The Leninist quality of our activities must be carefully guarded thru the leadership and advice of the combined Leninist understanding and experience of our international party. The leadership of the Communist International thus becomes an indispensable element in the accomplishment of our tasks. The Communist International is the international general staff of the revolutionary proletarian army. Any movement which may be started for the purpose of undermining the authority of this general staff of the revolution, the leaders of the Communist International, is an act of enmity to our organization and to the working class. The speaker recalled that Lore had built his movement against the Comintern on the propaganda of the claim that "the Communist International was misinformed." Such propaganda is agitation against the leadership of the C. I. One cannot at the same time propagate the broad masses of the workers for the correctness of the leadership of the Comintern and at the same time agitate the party against this correctness. One cannot appeal to the Comintern against the party and at the same time appeal to the party against the Comintern.

The speaker declared that the Central Executive Committee of the party will do its duty in carefully guarding the authority of the Comintern and at the same time of guarding its own authority in the American sections of the Communist movement as the agent of the Comintern.

In the endeavor to establish the leadership of our international Communist Party also over the American working masses, the best possible cooperation and unity of action of the party and the league must be established. This unity must be one of purpose as well as of policy. For this reason all the activities and campaigns of the league must fit into the general political policies and campaigns of the party. The problems of the working class as a whole are in the main the problems of the young workers among whom the Young Workers' League carries on its special work. There can be no division, therefore, between the activities and policies of the party and the league.

Comrade Bedacht dwelt at length on the problem of the inner purification of our movement from the remnants of social-democracy, the problem of cleansing the party and the league of Loreism. He pointed out that this cleansing process is not merely and solely one of eliminating elements foreign to our movement, but it is also the problem of raising the intellectual level, the level of Communist quality—of our membership in general. Our efforts at Bolshevization are devoted to this task. Party and league must mobilize all their forces for the speedy carrying thru of reorganization which is one of the methods of Bolshevizing our movement. The educational work of party and league must be extended. It must not be confined to class work, but much reach out to every party unit and every member of the party. While the educational endeavors of the party have as their object the raising of the quality of our membership, the general activities of the party must have the object of raising the degree of class-consciousness among the working masses. In both of these fields of education we must carefully guard against abstractions and must combine theoretical education with extensive activities which latter are the best teacher of the masses thru experience.

The speaker pointed out that nowhere else in the world does capitalism make such extensive efforts to chain down the minds of the children of the working class to an eternal acceptance of capitalism. In this situation the task of developing a mass movement of proletarian children attempting to keep awake in their minds their class interests and instincts, which are fostered by the misery of their existence as proletarian children, is an absolute necessity. The Young Workers' League must devote all of its energy available to this task.

Comrade Bedacht closed with an appeal to the delegates to drown their factional differences in a wave of Communist activities, to mobilize all their energies and spirit for the further building up of the league, for the establishment of the closest unity between league and party, for the loyal carrying out of the policies of the leadership of our international, the Comintern, so that the combined efforts of party and league may succeed in setting the American working class into motion, in arousing class consciousness in them, and in leading them on to decisive victory.

SPEECH BY WM. Z. FOSTER

the Communist International, even tho they were five thousand miles away from here, or even six thousand, understood the American situation far better than we did. They were able to teach us with regard to the American situation. The decision which they arrived at in the question of the third party alliance greatly educated our party in the fundamentals of Communist tactics.

A case in point of the wisdom of the Comintern—the second congress of the C. I. We had a delegation over there—Reid, Fraina and others, I don't remember the personnel exactly. The debate was on the trade union question. Our delegation took a dual union standpoint. It was very typical what the Russian leaders said to them. They said: "You say you cannot work in the trade unions in America and you have made a lot of arguments to that effect. We don't know the exact details of the situation but we are certain nevertheless that you can work in the trade unions of America." Experience has proven the correctness of this position, in the trade unions of America. It was the Russian leaders who taught the American Party to work in the unions. It was Lenin and Lozovsky and other Russian leaders who freed us from our infantile dualism and instructed us in the fundamentals of trade union work. We did not understand the first principles of this basic task. The Comintern taught us how to work in the unions.

The last trip I made to Moscow was in 1925. Again we learned many things about our own Party and the American situation. On the question of the labor party—now the comrades of the minority, the former minority, had searched around with a microscope to find every conceivable argument for the advocacy of the slogan, yet we found that the leaders of the Comintern even 5,000 miles away, were able to educate the comrades of the minority very much on the question of the necessity to advocate the labor party. They had more faith in the certainty of a labor party than our comrades. The best arguments were made by Zinoviev, Stalin and Kuusinen, not by the American delegates of the minority, and I think it is not telling any tales out of school to say that when the former minority delegates came to Moscow they were criticized by the Comintern leaders for yielding too much to us on the question of the labor party.

I am not one of those who say that when you go to Moscow you meet with a lot of men who make hasty factional decisions. Quite the contrary. The leaders of the C. I. are responsible, intelligent leaders, and when they make decisions, their decisions are based upon real facts and their decisions on American problems have been far more intelligent than we have been able to arrive at as a result of counselling among ourselves.

I am not going to say what happened at the Young Workers League caucus. Comrade Cannon pictures a desperate situation. But that is ridiculous. I will pass over that for the present. On my previous trips, I learned much, and the fourth time I shall probably learn a lot more. I do want to say this: every time I have gone to Moscow I have learned much. Once I really contributed something—the first time I went over—the other two times I was defeated, but the second time I was in pretty respectable company—Comrade Pepper, both factions. In all these cases, I have at least tried to correct my policy in accordance with the Comintern and to get in line with the Comintern. On our next visit over there, I will assure you the same thing will happen. I am for the Comintern from start to finish. I want to work with the Comintern, and if the Comintern finds itself criss-cross with my opinions, there is only one thing to do and that is to change my opinions to fit the policy of the Comintern.

You Can't Afford to Miss Y. W. L. Ball This Saturday Night

The third annual youth ball of the Young Workers League of Local Chicago will be held on Saturday, Oct. 10 at the Roosevelt Hall, 3437 W. Roosevelt Road. Comrades who have attended league affairs need no further introduction to them. They know that a good time awaits them. Admission 35 cents.

That worker next door to you may not have anything to do tonight. Hand him this copy of the DAILY WORKER.

Cleveland Membership Meeting for C. E. C.

CLEVELAND, Oct. 7.—A most successful membership meeting was held in Celeveland on Sunday, September 27, with 150 comrades present. Comrade Israel Amter, the new district secretary, spoke on Bolshevization and reorganization of the party.

Comrade Amter went back into the political bakground for the necessity of Bolshevizing the party. He pointed out the issues that in the past two years had emphasized the necessity of Bolshevizing all the parties of the Comintern. The Trotsky issue in the Russian party, the Brandler-Thalheimer issue in the German Party, the Bordiga issue in the Italian (a supposed "left" issue), the Bubnik issue in the Czecho-Slovakian Party (where Bubnik had the support of the center group), and finally the recent Maslow-Fischer issue in the German Party—all demonstrated that Bolshevization of the parties of the Communist International was imperative.

Defines Loreism.

Comrade Amter dealt at length with the issue of Loreism, and analyzed the question. He showed that Loreism was prevalent in all sections of the party, without the comrades being aware that they are Loreites—right wingers. He showed that made up Loreism, emphasizing the steps that were taken at the party convention to deal with the problem, by the removal of Askeli as editor of the Tyomies, and the expulsion of Lore.

"To the masses," is the slogan of the Communist International and the united front is one of the most effective methods. Trade union work is one of the most important duties of the party members. Not mere membership in the unions, but active participation in all of its work, to bring the masses of organized workers under the influence and control of the party. This can be done in an organized form only if party fractions are built up in all unions. This must be undertaken without delay and with all energy, if the party influence is to grow.

The United Front Tactics.

The united front in one of its most effective fights in the United States is the labor party. Wherever occasion presents itself, steps must be taken to form a local labor party. Sentiment must be created for the idea of a labor party, and the masses won over. The trade unions are the basis of the labor party and this again is one of the reasons that the comrades must become active in the unions.

Defense is also necessary and is becoming increasingly so, in view of the growing reaction. The confirmation of the criminal syndicalism in the case of Gitlow, the new attacks on the foreign-born workers, the attempts to fingerprint all the workers of the country with the intention of keeping control of the militants, the threatened deportation of foreign-born radicals, the increasing use of injunctions and force by the American government, demonstrate that defense for the militant workers is an issue of the day.

Comrade Amter emphasized the necessity of Marxian-Leninistic education if our membership is to perform its work in a Communist manner. Theory and practice go together, one without the other is not indicative of a Communist. In building up the party, we must also build up the Y. W. L., since they are the future members of the party, and without our help, the young workers will not be brot into the Y. W. L.

Reorganization of the Communist Parties becomes necessary in order that we may get to the masses, root ourselves in their struggles, and become their leaders. Comrade Amter went into the technical details of the reorganization, and showed how the party members will be reorganized and the work intensified by each comrade having a task assigned to him, a duty that he will perform under the discipline and control of the nucleus.

The many questions asked showed that the comrades had grasped the idea of Bolshevization, but had to have the small points cleared up. Then followed discussion on a high plane, except for a few ideological slips, which had to be corrected. Considerable literature was sold and a good collection taken up.

All in all, the comrades declare that this was one of the best meetings that they have held in Cleveland since the discussion began in the party.

The following resolution was adopted:

This membership meeting held in Cleveland, on September 27, 1925, declares its complete agreement with the decisions of the Communist International and the party convention on the questions of reorganization of the party on the basis of shop nuclei and on Bolshevization of the party.

This meeting recognizes that the present form of organization is a relic of the days of social democracy, which keeps the revolutionists apart from the masses and does not prepare the Communist Party for immediate participation in all the struggles of the workers. Only by rooting the party deep in the masses at the place where they labor, viz., the mines, mills and factories, will it be possible to build our party into a mass Communist Party. This meeting recognizes that the members of the party who are not engaged in industrial work, and various individual members, who are industrial workers, for whom it is impossible for the time being to form shop nuclei, must be grouped together in international branches.

This meeting pledges itself to do everything in its power to assist the C. E. C. and D. E. C. in the complete reorganization of the party, in order that within the shortest time possible, our party may be completely reorganized on the basis of shop nuclei.

This meeting, however, also recognizes that only if a complete Bolshevization plan is adopted and carried out in the party will the membership be equipped for the tasks that fall upon them. Education in theory and practice of Communism are imperative. Marxian-Leninist education must become a most important task of all units, so that every comrade will become familiar with Communist theory and work.

But not by theory alone will our comrades become real Communists. The Communist Party is a party of action. Hence the party must participate actively in the struggles of the workers, adopting such policies as are needful in order to bring the party close to the masses. At this period of the struggle, trade union work is absolutely essential. Every party comrade eligible to membership in a trade union must join a union. He must become active in the union and seek for leadership and control. In order, however, to do Communist work in an organized form, party fractions must be formed.

The united front is one of the most important Bolshevik tactics at the present time. The campaign for the labor party, the campaign for building up a defense organization—the International Labor Defense—must be propagated with all energy, and the organizations built up.

Work among the Negroes, among women, and particularly work to build up the Communist Youth organization, the Y. W. L., must be regarded of major importance.

The membership meeting regards the Bolshevization plan and the reorganization of the party on the basis of shop nuclei as, the most essential means of activating every party comrade. This Bolshevization will mean the throwing off of all non-Communist elements still in the party. The party convention took the proper steps in removing Comrade Askeli as editor of the Tyomies, since his position was typical of right wingism, and would retard the Bolshevization of the party. This meeting approves the expulsion of Lore from the party, since he is unworthy of and unfit for membership in the party. This membership meeting declares that the party convention took the proper steps in Bolshevizing the party when it took these measures, and the membership present at this meeting pledges itself to do everything in its power to wipe out right wing tendencies, to the end that our party may become a Bolshevik party worthy of membership in the Communist International and capable of leading the workers and poor farmers of this country to a successful revolution for the establishment of the proletarian dictatorship in the United States.

DANGER AHEAD AGAIN FOR DAILY WORKER AS RETURNS FROM OUR DRIVE DWINDLE

IN the race which will determine the life or death of THE DAILY WORKER the working class is not making sufficient headway. Still hampered by old debts which clamor for immediate payment, constantly meeting new financial problems which cannot be solved in the absence of ready cash THE DAILY WORKER is again in immediate and increasingly perilous danger.

The part of the drive which was to see THE DAILY WORKER out of emergency is over, but unfortunately it required more than twice as long as the time set to raise the first $10,000. Now the ten thousand has been raised but emergency is not over. Unless the DAILY WORKER can count on the thousands who have not yet come forward with support, unless those who have already come forward can step into the breach again, the fate of our daily is doubtful indeed.

Workers Party branches which have not yet sent in their share of the DAILY WORKER funds! Take your place now besides those which have been and are still exerting their utmost effort to Save THE DAILY WORKER.

DAILY WORKER readers, those of you who have not yet taken part in the drive to save your paper! If THE DAILY WORKER has been worth anything to you, if it has served you as part of the working class, join those who have done their part in preserving the life of the paper that fights their battles.

Not by the stroke of one, no not even by the efforts of a few thousands,, can THE DAILY WORKER be saved. It will take efforts of all who have a head for thinking and a heart for fighting for the working class to save THE DAILY WORKER.

Red Factory Workers to Hold Big Affair at Brownsville Hall

By S. W. LEVICH.

NEW YORK CITY, Oct. .—The Red Factory Workers of Brownsville have arranged a concert, entertainment and dance to be given Saturday, Oct. 10, at the headquarters of the Workers (Communist) Party at 1844 Pitkin avenue.

This is the first of a series of affairs to be given by the Brownsville Shop Nuclei Branch of the Workers Party this season for the purpose of drawing the masses of factory workers of Brownsville into the class struggle.

At each of these affairs lectures will be given at the outset, to be followed by concerts, plays, entertainments and dances. At this first affair on Oct. 10, the following prominent leaders of the Communist movement of America will lecture: Comrade Benjamin Gitlow, member of the Central Executive Committee; William Weinstone, member of the C. E. C, and General Secretary of the New York district, and Comrade Bertram D. Wolfe, member of the C. E. C. of the Mexican Communist Party who has recently been expelled from Mexico and who is now educational director of the New York district.

We urge all workers not to miss this opportunity to come to this affair and acquaint themselves with the life and activities of the most advanced section of the working class of America—the Workers (Communist) Party.

Needle Trade Workers Ball to Help Launch Organization Drive

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Oct. 7.—The Needle Trades Council will run their second annual ball on Saturday evening October 17th at the Co-operative Center, 2706 Brooklyn Ave.

This year the Needle Trades Council has many important organization drives before it for which it must raise funds at once. This makes our affair of tremendous importance to all needle trades workers as well as to all other workers of Los Angeles.

For instance in Los Angeles there exists the condition where thousands of dressmakers earn $12.00 and $14.00 per week. Conditions are very miserable. The same is true within the millinery trade.

We are putting forth every effort to make this dance a success. The funds will be used for strengthening the organization and to organize the unorganized in the vorious sections of the needle trades.

Workers in every trade come and bring your friends. A good time is assured to everyone.

BOSTON JEWELRY WORKERS LOSING TO THE BOSSES

Need for Union Being Shown by Disunity

(By a Worker Correspondent.)

BOSTON, Mass., Oct. 7.—The Jewelry hand worker is a highly qualified mechanic; it takes several years of experience to become an accomplished jeweler and then one needs to learn. Obviously, a jeweler is in a commanding position in a shop and if organized, would control the shop completely.

Yet strange to say, the jewelers are not organized. In spite of the fact that conditions in the shop are fair, due to the past efforts of our organization led by the militant Local 1, of N. Y., the men dropped the organization due partly to negligence and indifference of the average worker toward his organization after he exploited same to improve his conditions, also partly due to an internal fight that rendered the organization asunder.

Bosses Profit From Disunity.

The bosses, however, are quick to take advantage of this disunity prevailing and are reaping the profits, as in the case of the Boston Jewelry company, where a foreman was hired that antagonized the men and made it his business to get rid of the "kickers." And he certainly is accomplishing his purpose due to the failure of the men to act when action was needed.

In the care of the Heller and Atkin shop, some men are discriminated against by being continually laid off and the rest of the men instead of defending the "brothers," are even razzing them.

Ruinous Selfishness.

This is true even of a former vice-president of the International Jewelry Workers' Union, who got "wiser" and "does not give a damn for anybody."

However, this condition cannot last forever, and some men are beginning to see where this policy of "everyone for himself" leads to. They are beginning to realise that an injury to one is an injury to all, indeed.

Union Sentiment Growing.

"A union is a good thing," "We need a union," is more frequently heard among the men and the organization of the Boston Jewelry Workers' Protective Association is the consequence. We are now engaged in a drive to get the men back into the organization; to restore their confidence in their own organized might; to show them the necessity of building up a force that will check the appetite of the bosses.

The organization of a nucleus of the Workers Party among the jewelry workers is also contemplated, that will carry on a campaign of enlightenment to show the workers that the way to abolish all the ills besetting us, such as unemployment, war, malnutrition, etc., etc., can be abolished only by abolishing the cause of all these—the capitalist system.

KLAN LEADER, THREE OTHERS GO TO TRIAL FOR SLAYING OF GIRL

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NOBLESVILLE, Ind., Oct. 7.—Unless unforeseen developments arise making a postponement inevitable, D. C. Stephenson, former K. K. K. leader in Indiana, Earl Klinck and Earl Gentry, alleged slayers of Miss Madge Oberholtzer, 28, of Indianapolis, will go on trial in circuit court here next Monday.

SOCIALIST LEADER IN LEAGUE WITH CHINESE MILITARISTS TO BLOCK WORKERS' AID RELIEF

BERLIN, Sept. 28—(By Mail.)—The attempt of the Chinese militarists to block the relief work of the Workers' International Relief is revealed in a telegram received by the Central Committee of the Workers' International Relief in Berlin from the Chinese national committee.

Mr. Chiang Kang-Hu, chairman of the social-democratic party and member of the constitution drafting committee, has been disclosed by Chinese students to be in league with the former Emperor Hsuang-Tung in a plot for the restoration of the monarchy.

"The control of the Chang Tso-Lin forces in Tien Tsin is preparing the atmosphere for a fascist monarchist upheaval in this important port of China," declares the telegram of the Chinese committee. "The food distribution of the Workers' International Relief met with difficulties caused by maneuvers of the military authorities to hinder the work of the working class relief organization and protecting the religious charity societies.

"A monarchist plot was recently discovered. Mr. Chiang Kang-Hu, chairman of the social-democratic party and member of the constitution drafting committee, is involved in the plot. The students of the Southern University at Shanghai and those of the Pekin College issued—according to the statement of the Pekin Leader—a statement severely denouncing Chiang for his alleged connections with the monarchists and demanding his retirement at once.

"Mr. Chiang confessed his connections with the Manchu imperial family but he says that his chief object in making friendship with ex-Emperor Hsuang-Tung and others was to spread socialistic ideas amongst them, persuading them to abandon their monarchial dreams forever. His opponents refused to hear his lame arguments."

Mesaba Iron Miners Laid Off as Bosses Start Wage Cutting

(By Worker Correspondent.)

HIBBING, Minn., October 7.—Unexpectedly the Oliver Iron Mining Co., representing the steel trust in the iron ranges, closed Hibbing mine and one hundred miners found themselves on the streets of Hibbing, without any prospect to be employed elsewhere.

The early shutting of too many open pits on the Mesaba range is creating among the workers a fear of severe unemployment in the winter.

The Cleveland Iron Mining Co., the second largest in the world, didn't let this opportunity go by and the miners in Boeing mine were congratulated with 10 per cent reduction. Yet not even one single militant voice is raised against this by the miners, because of fear of firing.

Men and Horses Killed.

SMYRNA, Ga., Oct. 7—Five persons were injured and three cars of race horses were killed or crippled when two freight trains of the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis railroad collided near here today. Those injured T. W. Gilstrap, engineer, Chattanooga; I. T. Sullivan, Decatur, Ga., and three Negro caretakers of the horses.

Helicopter Crashes.

ALDERSHOT, Eng., Oct. 4—The Brennan helicopter, which has been in the process of perfection for the past three years, was taken from the hangar this afternoon for a secret trial and crashed after ascending only a few feet. After the British government has spent thousands of dollars upon this helicopter, and it has been hailed as a certain success.

MOSCOW, Oct. 7.—Final harvest figures as published today in Economic Life show a total of 4,144,000,000 poods—aproximately 2,250,000,000 bushels—for the consolidated grain crop of the Soviet Union. It is about 750,000,000 bushels above last year's showing.

BRITISH SLAUGHTER HUNDREDS OF HINDU SOLDIERS AT HONG KONG

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Oct. 7.—I am sending you the following cablegram that has been suppressed for nearly four months by the British government thru its control of wirse. I hope you will publish it in your valuable paper and thus help the cause of the oppressed people of India. Here is the message:

> Three hundred Hindu soldiers shot dead by the British government at Hong Kong because they refused to fire on their Chinese brothers.

The Union of Shanghai, China, a paper published by the Student Association of that city, also reports that on or about July 1, 1925, about three hundred Hindu soldiers, who refused to fire on Chinese students and strikers for the benefit of a few British imperialists, were court martialed and shot dead by the British authorities at Hong Kong, China.—H. Singh.

Terrorism of Public Printer Geo. H. Carter Denounced by A. F. of L.

ATLANTIC CITY, October 7.—The convention of the American Federation of Labor evinced the first sign that it was concerned with something other than attacks on Communists and serving the interests of the bosses when three resolutions were introduced condemning the conduct in office of Public Printer George H. Carter, a Harding appointee, and demanding his removal.

The resolution asked an investigation of the affairs of the government printing office at Washington and directed the federation executive council to petition President Coolidge to order such an investigation.

Carter is the tool of the senate committee on printing whose leading lights are Senators Smoot of Utah and Moses of New Hampshire, both notorious open-shoppers, and his administration has been characterised by wholesale discharges of members of trade unions.

Debs Against All Use of Force in His Cleveland Speech

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Oct. 5.—At a meeting of professors and lawyers and businessmen in the aristocratic Carnegie Hall, Eugene Victor Debs made a speech which differed but little from the speeches of 1908 and 1922. He failed to mention the fight against imperialism in Morocco, Syria and China.

"No great and permanent good was ever achieved by force. Power is self destructive when not based on intelligence. That is why the revolution in Russia failed," said Debs in his speech before this petty bourgeois gathering. "An ignorant peasantry had Communism thrust upon it, and the result is what you see today."

Very few workers attended the meeting.

REARREST FORD AFTER PAROLE; AWAITS TRIAL

I. W. W. Prisoner in Jail 12 Years

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Oct. 7.—Richard Ford, who with Herman Suhr, is one of America's oldest class war prisoners, has been paroled from San Quentin prison and rearrested. Ford is now in the Yuba county jail where he sat out his first trial in 1913, the usual strike frame-up for the murder of the district attorney, E. T. Manwell, who led a charge on striking hop pickers of Wheatland. Neither Ford or Suhr was in any way implicated in the murder but they were leaders of the strike and were given life sentences.

Second Murder Charge.

The present district attorney of Yuba county, Ray Manwell, is the son of the former attorney and threatened to re-arrest Ford for the death of a deputy by the name of Thomas, who was killed in the same affray along with a number of strikers. He carried out his threat and Ford awaits trial for the second time.

I. L. D. to Aid.

Austin Lewis, western labor attorney who was associated with the defense in the first trial is again working on the case. Lewis is the attorney for International Labor Defense that has declared it will assist in the defense of Ford in co-operation with the General Defense Committee of the I. W. W. of which Ford is a member.

U. S. DEPT PARLEY WITH CZECHO-SLOVAKIA HITS 'VARIED REASON' SNAG

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—Czecho-Slovakia came to the treasury today to pay its war debt to the United States. The debt is being handled by the Czech and American commissions as a business deal, and definite funding negotiations are expected to be completed speedily.

The two commissions met briefly today, and revealed that substantially there is but one point of issue between them, the exact amount of Czech debt. The little republic claimed it owed approximately $85,000,000; the American negotiations placed the indebtedness at approximately $117,000,000. The amount is complicated because of the "varied reasons" for which the money was loaned.

Earthquake Breaks Denver Seismograph

DENVER, Colo., Oct. 7.—An earthquake, believed to have been of serious proportions, was reported today by Rev. A. W. Forestall, seismologist at Regis College here. The tremblor started at 9:18 last night and lasted for 11 minutes, the maximum wave coming at 9:22. Because the shock mutilated the tape on the recorder, Father Forestall was unable to estimate the distance or direction of the shock.

Two Turin Journalists Indicted

TURIN, Italy, Oct. 7.—Criminal indictments have been drawn against Vittorio Banzatti, responsible agent for the newspaper Stampa, and Luigi Ambrosini, author of the article on the Italian army maneuvers which brought about the paper's recent suspension by the fascist newspapers. The trial of the two men is set to begin on Oct. 21.

WEST VIRGINIA OPEN SHOP DRIVE AGAINST MINERS' UNION FOUGHT UNDER CONDITIONS OF CIVIL WAR

By LOUIS F. BUDENZ
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent).

FAIRMONT, W. Va., Oct. 7.—(FP)—The man who said "there is no class war" has never been to West Virginia. In contrast to the hard-coal regions, there is a spirit of antagonism and bitterness everywhere in the atmosphere.

The United Mine Workers are in the battle for their life up here in the northern section of the state. The trenches have moved from Mingo and McDowell up to Marion, Monongahela and Harrison counties. Across the intervening space, the open shop operators have been driving the union men, thru the convenient weapon of an "overdeveloped industry."

Contracts Broken by Operators.

Contracts with employers are not worth the paper they are written on, the experience of the miners hereabouts seems to show. Shortly after the Jacksonville agreement was entered into for the central competitive field in 1924, the northern West Virginia operators and the United Mine Workers entered into an agreement at Baltimore for a lower wage than that guaranteed under the central competitive contract, but running for the same period of three years.

Since last April the operators have persistently broken this agreement, cutting wages and altering conditions. Finally, with the union miners opposing their program, they have come out with the "American plan," which is the open shop.

Reports on Open Shop Disagree.

The local papers run daily reports, the Fairmont Times in particular, showing the extent of the inroads of the American plan on the union mines. It runs a tabulation each day of the number of cars loaded in each of the districts, Monongah, Charleston, Connellsville, Cumberland, etc., under union conditions and the American plan.

Van Bittner, national organizer of the United Mine Workers in charge of this field, asserts on the other hand, that inroads have been made into non-union territory. As a result of meetings at Monongah and Barrackville, he states, "several mines on the Monongahela river front have been completely closed down, as well as other mines in the Clarksburg and Grafton fields."

Rank and File Full of Fight.

The spirit of the union strikers around Fairmont is enthusiastic and belligerent. They seem perfectly willing to go to jail for the union. "'We know what union has done for us," Mrs. Eddie Venesky, one of the fighting pickets at the New England mine, said. "We have nothing if the union goes."

And yet, that is just what threatens in West Virginia. The union must either make a real advance into non-union territory before winter, or it faces complete annihilation in the West Virginia field.

Boss Vare to Insist on Naming Governor; At Odds with Mellon

WASHINGTON, October 7.—Unless Secretary Mellon will permit Boss Vare in Philadelphia to name the next governor of Pennsylvania, Vare will refuse to support Sen. Pepper re-election, and may elect Gifford Pinchot senator by putting up an anti-Pepper machine candidate in the primary.

Penn. Railway Shops on Three-Day Week; Little Coal Hauled

SCRANTON, Pa., Oct. 7.—The 2,000 employes of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad shops at Scranton, Kingsland and Buffalo, N. Y., are on a three-day week basis because of slack business. The anthracite coal strike has decreased the amount of business for the railroad, officials assert.

This Chap Didn't Yet Read Cal's Omaha Talk on Need of Tolerance

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NORFOLK, Va., Oct. 7.—Because he resented criticisms of the navy, George Bohlender, a naval fireman, is in the naval hospital today with slight chances of recovery from knife wounds in his neck and body. Surgeons at a hospital where Bohlender received first treatment, took 25 stitches in wounds in his neck and throat.

Bohlender, according to a companion, heard two civilians making disparaging remarks about the conduct of the navy. When he rebuked them for it, a fight followed. Two young men have been arrested as suspects.

THOMAS RAZZED BY RAILWAYMEN OF OLD ENGLAND

Tumult Raised, But Not by Communists

LONDON, Sept. 21.—(By mail.)—The Daily Herald of today carries a story that is well worth giving to American workers just as it stands to show the tide of sentiment in British labor. It reads as follows:

Mr. J. H Thomas, M. P., was subjected to an angry outburst on the part of a section of the crowd at a demonstration organized by the local district council of the National Union of Railwaymen, which was held on Newcastle Town Moor yesterday. Tens of thousands of workers marched to the Moor, with bands and banners.

The demonstration was orderly until Mr. Thomas rose to speak, when there was uproar behind the platform, and he could not begin.

At last he managed to say, "Well, I am not going to compete with that mob. This is their idea of freedom of speech."

Then followed the strains of the "Red Flag" from women and youths.

"Well," said Mr. Thomas, "if they don't want to hear me I don't want to speak."

Insane Asylum Used to Put Troublesome Persons Out of Way

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—The startling charge that there are many people now confined at St. Elizabeth's Hospital, the government's big insane hospital here, "who are now and never were insane, but who have been sent there for ulterior motives," was contained in a report made by a federal grand jury in district supreme court today.

The jury returned manslaughter indictments against Wm. McIntire and Irwin Sweeney, white attendants, because of the death of Wm. Green, Negro patient. The guards were char

Fight Indictment of Teapot Dome Fall and Friend Sinclair

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7—A demurrer to the indictment of former Secretary of Interior Albert B. Fall, and Harry F. Sinclair, oil magnate, for alleged conspiracy in connection with the Teapot Dome lease, was filed in district supreme court today by George P. Hoover, counsel for Sinclair.

A similar plea is expected to be filed shortly by counsel for E. L. Doheny, lessor of Elks Hills' naval reserve.

Purcell's Speech

The delegates to the American Federation of Labor got the greatest jolt of their lives yesterday—those who understood what the speech of A. A. Purcell was all about and this does not include all of them by any means.

When we say "the greatest jolt of their lives" we mean as delegates to the A. F. of L. conventions because most of them have been attending its sessions for many years. It is part of the business of being a "labor leader."

There have been other speeches in the A. F. of L. conventions urging the need of trade union unity; there have been speeches hailing the class struggle; there have even been Communist speeches. But Purcell's speech stands out as a landmark of labor history because of the position he occupies and because of the world situation.

The president of the Amsterdam International urging world trade union unity in company with the unions of Soviet Russia against world imperialism—in the United States, its most powerful unit!

This is a spectacle to confirm all the fears of the stalwarts of imperialism in the labor movement of America—their boss-inspired fears that the forces of the working class and the exploiters are arrayed in a battle front where such phrases as "a fair day's wage for a fair day's work" and "identity of interest between employer and employe" are meaningless terms.

President Green, however, seems to have risen to the occasion. He pledged American labor never to join with the All-Russian unions for the reason that "they (the All-Russian unions) stand for the overthrow of government." This in the face of the fact that the All-Russian unions are the foundation of the most stable government in the world today!

But Purcell's speech was not delivered with the view of converting labor officialdom to the class struggle. It was made to show to the American working class that they cannot escape from the class struggle—that they must either fight or be enslaved.

American labor officialdom, as beneficiaries of the rich fruits of American imperialist robbery, will snarl but the American working class, its victims, will read Purcell's speech—and think.

The Deadlock at Locarno

Two events have occurred which have substantiated the predictions made by us relative to the Locarno conference. They are:

1. The deadlock of the conference over the question of a revision of the German eastern frontiers.
2. The assurance given representatives of the Soviet Union by the German delegation officially that Germany will not be a party to any agreement calling for military action against the Soviet Union nor allow France to guarantee the treaties with Poland and Czecho-Slovakia.

The assumption of the allied imperialists concerning the order of business for the Locarno conference was that the existing treaties with the little countries composing the "sanitary cordon" were not to be subjects for discussions.

Germany has knocked this idea into a cocked hat and by her assurances to the Soviet Union has attempted to force the reconsideration of the whole question of her eastern boundaries.

Hence the deadlock.

If the capitalist press was willing to explain the real basis of the proposed security pact and the differences between France and Germany on one hand and France and England on the other, with both trying to reach an agreement that would allow Germany to be brought into an anti-Soviet bloc, every literate would know that a deadlock was inevitable. But the capitalist press is trying to spread an atmosphere of optimism around the conference and lull the masses into a feeling of security for which no reason exists.

It is true that the pressure of American finance-capital will force some kind of agreement among its debtors. Debt-funding missions form Czecho-Slovakia and Roumania are in the United States. Poland and Italy are mortgaged to the House of Morgan and every effort will be made to weld these nations, with France and Germany, into an alliance against the Soviet Union.

The outlook for the peace of the Soviet Union and the peace of the world is as gloomy as it has been since the abandonment of the policy of armed intervention by the allies following their defeat by the red army.

But the present deadlock in Locarno and the tremendous influence exercised on German and Polish policy by the Soviet Union is an indictaion that even the tremendous weight of the mountain of gold owned by the House of Morgan cannot weld into a solid bloc the warring capitalist nations of Europe.

Coolidge in Omaha

The speech of President Coolidge before the American legion convention in Omaha is one of the greatest bits of unconscious humor yet brought to our attention.

His appeal for "intellectual demobilization" to bring peace, would do credit to Kin Hubbard. Only a country that has been intellectually demobilized can go to war for the profit of its exploiters and oppressors. If the president does not believe this he should take another look at the militant section of the babbittry assembled in Omaha.

The high spot of the whole proceeding was the presentation of a Texas "ten-gallon" hat to the head of the nation. This was the occasion for prolonged cheering in which the voices of the middle class morons present were strained to their utmost.

It is logical to assume that after this get-together meeting held in the best rotary club style, every legion delegate is ready to break any strike that Coolidge, at the orders of the bosses, chooses to take a crack at.

Just why Coolidge went to the legion instead of to the American Federation of Labor convention is a mystery to us.

What Saklatvala Symbolizes - By William F. Dunne

ARTICLE II.

ONE has only to read one extract from Saklatvala's recent speech in the house of commons to realize that to British imperialism he appears as the forerunner of the day when India drives out British hangmen and becomes an ally and friend of Soviet Russia. Said Saklatvala to the representatives of British imperialism:

"It may be that you are honest incompentents . . . but why not learn from others, Our Russian Bolshevist friends have in five years time been able to give the political franchise to the agriculturists of Russia, who as a class are parallel with the agriculturist population of India. The are also people of diverse religions, including Mohammedans, Jews, Greek church people and others. The Bolsheviks have been able to give them education in five years, yet in the Czar's days these people were treated with that same callousness and brutal cruelty as that with which you have been treating the Indian peasant for 150 years. In five years after the Communist International revolution in Russia, 65 per cent of the agricultural population have received education and you have today the testimony or half a dozen British men and women that in spite of the bloodcurdling articles in your newspapers, the Russians have done their job well. Why play a dog-in-the-manger part? I appeal to this committee to allow a commission of Indians to go to Russia to study and to find what the British have failed to discover—the way of granting to the people of political franchise and education, scientific laboratories, institutions, health homes, compensation and allowances for industrial workers. If Russia, a country of agriculturists, could find the way out, how is it that you with your world-proclaimed cleverness as administrators have failed to find it, why not be honest and step aside and let us do the job, and we shall do it on an international Communist basis? Why are you turned inside out at the very thought of Communist propaganda in India? Is as an industrial nation with your Western mind you have failed to discover a humanitarian cure for the ills of an agricultural population in an Eastern country, why play the-dog-in-the-manger? Why not permit the Russian nation, which has actually discovered the way out of the darkness, to come and help you?"

THIS is no parliamentary bombast. These words are true words and the lords by right of birth and bankroll know them to be true. The colonial liberation movements are shaking imperialism the world over and British imperialists know better than any other ruling group that the eyes of all the colonial people are turned towards Soviet Russia and that in Moscow are the headquarters of the Communist International which links up these movements with the struggle of the working class in all lands.

THEY will ask even their bitterest imperialist enemy to prevent their working class being "corrupted" and moral aid being given by them to the Indian liberationists.

But Saklatvala speaks also for the British working class—the working class that in the last year has astounded observers by the rapidity of its development to consciousness as a class. The organized section of this class—the trade unionists has sent an official delegation to Soviet Russia and has published a report that has shattered the lies of the capitalist press and given to millions of workers an insight into the wonders of the Russia of the workers and peasents.

THE British trades unions have, with the all-Russian unions, taken the lead in the drive for world trade union unity. An English worker, chairman of the Amsterdam International, A. A. Purcell, is a leading figure in the Anglo-Russian Trade Union Unity Committee.

The British miners force the government to subsidise the coal industry and while the coal owners will profit largely by the settlement it is nevertheless only a temporary one, represents a huge concession by the tory government and it has allowed the alliance of miners, transport workers and railwaymen nine months in which to prepare their forces for a still more serious struggle.

THE government subsidy to the coal industry, the cost of which is estimated variously from $50,000,000 to $100,000,000, is made possible by the super-profits from the colonies — India in particular.

Yet the British Trades Union Congress meeting at Scarborough passes a resolution (by some 3,000,000 votes with a negligible majority voting against) endorsing the liberation movement in the colonies and upholding the right of any or all of them to separate from the empire at any time. This is a great historical act on the part of the organized section of a class which has been bound up with imperial exploitation for decades. It has been proverbial that to scratch any Briton was to find an imperialist but the chains of tradition were broken at Scarborough and British labor, at least the very powerful left wing, now acknowledges that the empire must be broken up if the British working class is to save itself from utter slavery.

WHAT has brought about this change?

The outstanding fact is that with all the loose talk of the "stabiliaztion of capitalism" the trend of Great Britain's national economy is definitely downwards.

Unemployment is on the increase and conservative estimates place the total number of jobless workers at 1,000,000. The numbers of these workers on part time is at least double this figure.

THE report of the ministry of labor as of September 17, published in the London Daily Herald states:

> For food alone the corresponding percentages were 70 and 68 respectively. A housewife who has one pound to spend on food is receiving now in values eleven shillings and nine pence as compared with 1914, and during the month of August the price of food rose 2 per cent.

The British pound is worth approximately $5 in American money. There are twenty shillings of the approximate value of 25 cents to the pound. The penny rates at about two of American pennies. In other words the British workers is able to buy with one pound nominally rated at $5, food only to the value of $2.93

INCREASING unemployment and rising food prices!

It is no wonder that the British imperialists want no talk in the United States or elsewhere of the oppression by them of the Indian and British working class — or of any other subject which would tend to explain the need for working class solidarity with the colonial peoples.

BRITISH seamen are on strike. In defiance of Havelock Wilson, the imperialist tool who heads the union, the seamen have tied up shipping thruout the empire. They have received sympathy and support from a dozen different countries — Russia in particular.

But most surprising of all they received support from the regular British trade unions. An example of the disgust that the Havelock Wilson have aroused among the honest element of the trade unions is the following statement of J. Rowan, general secretary of the Electrical Trades Union published in the Daily Herald:

> The unfortunate thing for the seamen is that they are not only fighting the shipowners, but they are fighting their own union, who, altho they did not consult the men about the reduction, are insisting even at the revolver point, on its acceptance.
> It is a most disgraceful state of affairs and a blot on the whole trade union movement.
> The procedure seems to be that the union, representing their own grades, agree with the shipowners what their reduction is going to be, and seem to do it without any consultation with their members.

It is well to say here that "union," when used in the sense in which it is used by Rowan, refers to the official committees and not to the general membership.

A militant spirit among the seamen — the most oppressed and lowest paid of all the "sons of Mary" of whom Kipling wrote in the one moment he forgot his imperialist allegiance!

Revolt in the merchant marine — the second line defense of Britain's empire! God save the mark! It is time for something more than letters to The Times—when "outlaw" strikes get support — outlaw strikes of seamen at that!

In times like these no impudent Indian can be allowed to raise the fiery cross in other Anglo-Saxon lands!

The Fascist International Holds Secret Conference

By R. DOMBUSCH

The international united front against Communism and against the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics is already more than an idea, a wish of extreme reaction generally. The struggle against the Soviet Union, accused of the deadly sin of being the union of the liberated peoples of a sixth part of the earth and as such exercising great influence in the historical liberation movement of all peoples—this struggle has now taken on real and concrete organiaztional forms.

It is now no longer a question of howling against the first workers' and peasants' state, not only are calumnies circulated, which are very often helpless and absurd as tho the production of some circus clown; now organization is actually being taken in hand. Of course, for us this is nothing new. We have already experienced the organization of an armed intervention against Soviet Russia, during which the capitalist governments got the worst of it. But that was during war time. The governments making this attempt were optimistic, for how should these governments of stockholders and profiteers know what unbounded strength the people liberated by revolution possess and what fighting power the solidarity of their "own" working class in the proletarian revolution signifies?

Preparing Intervention.

It cannot be said that capitalist governments have learned nothing from the experiences of the first intervention. They have grown cleverer. They are preparing intervention more carefully, more thoroly. They are carrying it out on a much larger and in their opinion, more suitable form. The official form is expressed in that colossal and finely spun diplomatic maneuver which is manifested in the negotiations and proposals regarding the "guarantee pact", the basic idea of which is not as the official diplomats maintain, the pacifist combination of the entente powers with the conquered state, but a continuous cunning endeavor to organize an international united front against the Soviet Union.

Require Parallel Action.

It is a foregone conclusion that the realization of the actual object of this attempt cannot be attained by mere legal and diplomatic formula concealed under a pact system. The governments, chiefly the British conservative government which is the leader in this world compaign, will require parallel actions which are much more open than is possible within the framework of diplomatic actions. The "public opinion" of the protectors of "the social order" is essential for these governments. Such active support on the part of the arch-reactionary strata has actually been found by all governments in their own countries.

The innumerable legal and illegal organizations of fascist and semi-fascist reaction, continually offer support to their governments not merely morally but in actual fact. But now the question is that of international action, intervention must be carried on an extensive scale and united. The fascist groups in the individual countries are now strengthening their international connections and organizing on an international scale. Thereby they have two objects in view. On the one hand, they endeavor to advance the struggle on a national scale against individual Communist parties; on the other hand, they offer their capabilities to the sacred causes of international intervention against the Soviet Union.

The Aubert League.

The documents before us give exact and irrevocable proof of this. These documents are the protocols of the second conference of the "International Alliance against the Third International.", which took place in Geneva on May 25, 26 and 27. At the head of this alliance is a cerain Aubert, after whom this organization is called, "The Aubert League." Mr. Aubert did not gain this role of international leader without sufficient cause. He is one of those who organized the murder of Comrade Vorovsky.

The Second Conference.

The delegates assembled under his auspices. We learn that the first conference really took place in Paris in 1924. We do not think we are mistaken when we maintain that this recent second conference is of much greater significance than the first, for the participants, if only on account of the present situation of international politics. At a moment when England is endeavoring to keep Germany and the Soviet Union apart, to incite Poland and the border states against the Soviet Union, and altogether to create a system of foreign policy of all states bent on opposing the Soviet Union, at such a moment a conference of "private" organizations in opposition to Bolshevism is really of significance for the official initiators who have their seat in the various governments.

The Suitable Moment.

Various delegates at this Aubert conference clearly referred to the "suitable moment." It was no mere chance that the delegates from Great Britain declared that the present moment was especially favorable for the submission of a memorandum to the British government, since at the head of the state a conservative government held sway. In reference to this the chairman declared the the statement of the British delegate was of especial importance. One of the delegates assured the conference that the anti-Bolshevist memoranda would surely exercise influence on the British government and act as a moral support in action for same. It is not difficult to find a logical connection between the shameless campaign against Russia which the British government has been carrying on and the German machinations of the murderer Aubert. But in order not to compromise the governments all this must be done very carefully. And we saw evidence of this care at the fascist international conference. Apart from the fact that the entire conference was of a conspirative nature and only a brief non-committal communique was issued to the press, the delegates were often reminded of this delicate point. The German representative was quite logically of the opinion that the idea of intervention should originate with a private organization and not with the state as the latter would call forth a strong movement FOR Bolshevism. He supplemented this point by stating that some states would be exceedingly happy if they could count on the support of private persons since for various reasons they could not fight against Bolshevism. The Dutch delegate declared that on the previous day he had had an interview with a "highly placed person" who gave him to understand that the alliance ought to devote special attention to strengthening its national organizations before approaching the governments and the league of nations.

Liberation of Governments.

Of course, voices expressed discontent with the liberalism of individual governments. In many European countries, governments allowed themselves to be guided by public opinion instead of guiding the latter, was the opinion expressed by the representatives of "liberal" Belgium. But on the whole, the conference was quite content with the governments. The statements of the representatives of some of the border states of Soviet Russia were characteristic. From these of the Esthonian delegates we learn that the fascist volunteer organization in Esthonia received material support from the government and that the Finnish delegate carried on negotiations with the Latvian and Esthonian ministers about an anti-Bolshevist organization and that the ministers promised them support. The idea of a conference of the various governments to "fight against the Communist danger" was especially approved by the Polish delegate, who maintained that such a conference would surely receive support of his government. Yet, despite all this plain language the decision was made to avoid any kind of action that would indicate direct contact between the Aubert league and the governments. In deciding on the next center for the conference a proposal was made to decide on NO CAPITAL since the alliance must maintain a neutral character of a private organization in respect of the governments.

Onlooker from U. S.

At the international conference there were representatives from Germany, Austria, Belgium, Bulgaria, Denmark, Finland, France, Great Britain, Greece, Hungary, Italy, Norway, Roumania, Holland, Switzerland, Czecho-Slovakia Jugo-Slavia and Sweden. From America there was an "onlooker" present and, of course a representative of the Russian white guards and immigrants also was present. We get a picture of the national organization from the reports of the delegates. In this connection, too, Great Britain in conjunction with other countries takes the lead. The "central" council of economy league which has for its object the task of forming "a united front against the agents of the Third International" subdivides its work into five sections:

1. Propaganda amongst the intelligentsia.
2. Press propaganda amongst the masses.
3. Propaganda by organizations.
4. Education and development of reporters.
5. Work amongst the youth.

Penetrating Communist Groups

The British delegation drew attention to the special danger of the Minority Movement which was enjoying such great success amongst the trade unions. This movement requires the organization of anti-Bolshevist centers. The system of penetration into Communist organizations is one of the chief organizational principles of the Aubert league. For this purpose, "anti-agitators" are being educated.

What are the methods of struggle of these protectors of the "bourgeois order?" We must admit that it displays a definite sympathy for the prevailing forces of Communist organizations. Communists form nuclei in the factories. What is simpler than to form "anti-Bolshevist nuclei" in the factory? At the head of these nuclei we find the people, who are doubtless the most interested in the matter; the employers themselves. This institution of the fascist nuclei gives the employer the possibility to "observe" Communists, their organization and their activity. The tasks of the nuclei are to disclose "plots against the social order," to betray the existing Communist nuclei and destroy them, to maintain the strictest discipline, to watch systematically each worker during work, paying especial attention to foreign workers, to organize the inspection of the factory, etc. Anti-Bolshevist nuclei are "built from above." The Communist factory nucleus is the bearer of elementary economic and most extensive political interests of factory nuclei, whilst the Aubert nucleus is an organ for attack on the interests of the workers and hence remains a white guardist sectarian organization which can strike no roots in the factory masses.

Imperialist Rivalries in China Increase

The news from from China shows that world imperialism is like a syphilitic patient in the hands of a quack doctor. The quack eases the pain of one ulcer by the application of some patent ointment, but no sooner is it done than a lesion appears on some other part of the body.

Healing salves and sweet smelling balms are being applied to the rotting carcass of world imperialism in Locarno, but in China the three-cornered antagonism between America, Great Britain and Japan breaks out afresh.

A dispatch sent by a great capitalist news service says:

> A belief exists tonight, on the eve of the judicial investigation into the Shanghai rioting of last May, that serious differences of opinion are developing between Justice Finley Johnson, the American, and the British and Japanese judges. Judge Johnson is reported to be skeptical of the constructive results of the inquiry, and feels that America should not have agreed to participate owing to the possible adverse effect of Chinese opinion on American interests.

American imperialist policy, based on the "open door" doctrine for China, has been to appear as the friend and champion of the Chinese people against the other imperialist powers. The use of American marines in the recent Shanghai strike and liberation demonstrations has tended to enable the Chinese masses to see American imperialism in its true role. The dispatch of the gunboat Palos 1,400 miles up the Yangtze river to punish natives who were alleged to have fired on a ship of American registry has been of additional value in this respect.

The British and Japanese, the British in particular, have been demanding joint action by the foreign representatives against the Shanghai workers and students but the dispatch quoted shows that the American imperialist agents are now aware that to act in concert with the other powers means to arouse further enmity among the Chinese masses that will inevitably put American exploiters in the same category with the British and Japanese and involve them more directly than heretofore in the anti-imperialist movement that is sweeping China.

All this division of interest and conflcits arising therefrom among the imperialist powers give the greatest encouragement to the liberation movement. To see dissension in the ranks of the enemy, enemies which have generally been able to appear as a unit against the Chinese masses, cannot help but encourage the drive against the foreign robbers.

The working class in the United States must take full advantage of these imperialist rivalries to create the widest possible sentiment and action for the withdrawal of all troops and warships from China.

It is by building a solid front of the working class in the great nations and the colonial and semi-colonial peoples, as the imperialist rivalries grow more bitter, that victory for both sections of the world's proletariat can be achieved.

Italians Avoid French.

ROME, Oct. 7.— The possibility of a meeting and a tactical discussion between Finance Minister Volpi of Italy, and Finance Minister Caillaux of France, vanished today with the announcement that the Italian debt delegation had cancelled its sailing via Cherbourg in favor of leaving from Naples for America aboard the liner Duilio.

COOL GE SHEET WANTS PURCELL DEPORTED

GERMANS BALK AT ARTICLE 16 OF LEAGUE PACT

Locarno Conference Seems Near Crash

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LOCARNO, Switzerland, Oct. 9.—Aristide Briand, French foreign minister and Austin Chamberlain, British foreign minister, are hopeful that Germany will accept a compromise offered on her entry into the League of Nations.

Germany balks at entry into the league because of Article 16 of the covenant which provides for the marching of troops over the territory of another member in case of war with a third power. While the entente powers cannot exempt Germany from the terms of this article, the British and French have promised to work toward a modification that might be acceptable to Germany.

In order to persuade Germany to enter the league, Briand pointed to the fact that Germany will have a seat at the league council table. The present permanent seats in the council include only four powers, Great Britain, France, Italy and Japan. A fifth seat is kept in reserve for Germany and one is always held for the United States in case it enters. The non-permanent seats are filled by Belgium, Spain, Sweden, Czecho-Slovakia, Brazil and Uruguay. These nations constitute the present council of the League of Nations.

Germany Is Wary.

The German foreign minister, Stresemann, is wary of accepting the promises of Briand and Chamberlain to work toward modification of the article, as the nations holding non-permanent seats are mere pawns of the large imperialist powers and the representatives at the league council these vassals of great banking houses of Europe. It is feared that while Britain and France may make a pretense of working toward modification of Article 16 and may themselves vote for such modification they will intrigue to force the smaller states to oppose it.

Russia Watchful.

While these maneuvers are proceeding Russia is watching the efforts at gerrymandering that have as their object the launching of a concerted drive against the Soviet power. Germany has already reassured Russia that she will not sign anything that can be construed as furnishing an opportunity for the allies to march troops thru territory in order to attack Russia.

Should Germany accept the entire covenant, which includes Article 16, she will find herself in immediate conflict with Russia and then be at the complete mercy of the allied powers.

The French, Belgian and British social traitors and tories representing their various governments, are desperately striving to induce the Germans to enter into a pact that will create a solid anti-Soviet bloc.

Near Breaking Point.

The dealock over the eastern frontiers of Germany relating to Poland and Czecho-Slovakia continues and altho the French issue optimistic statements wherein they express themselves as hopeful of the outcome, there is deep gloom elsewhere and their optimism is plainly not shared by other delegates.

A day or two longer will either produce a compromise or a break that will wreck the conference. The latter is the probable outcome.

Quake in New Hampshire.

MANCHSTER, N. H., Oct. 9.—Earth tremors, extending in the belt along the Daniel Webster highway from the White Mountains to this city and beyond, caused considerable excitement in New Hampshire today. Houses shook, windows rattled and chairs rocked but no damage was reported. The tremors, which resembled those of last winter, lasted for three minutes.

SENATORS INSIST THAT PROHIBITION OFFICIALS AID IN RE-ELECTION

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 9.—The close connection between prohibition enforcement and politics received emphasis today when United States Senator John W. Harreld, republican, of Oklahoma, in a letter to General Lincoln C. Andrews, insisted that no steps be taken by enforcement officials that would endanger his chances of re-election to the senate. No political question was raised—simply a plain question of holding his job.

Senator Harreld demanded that Andrews make no appointment in his state that would injure his standing before the voters. The letter followed dismissal of a meddlesome pulpit pounder by Director White of the Fort Worth district.

In demanding the reinstatement of the clergyman, Harreld said: "I insist that neither you (Andrews) nor he (White) should do anything which will injure my standing in the state or endanger my chances of re-election in the coming campaign."

Sweeping Victory Over Sigman in New York

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Oct. 9—The elections in the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union locals, agreed upon in the settlement recently approved by the shop chairmen as between the Sigman administration of the joint board and the joint action committee of Locals 2, 9, and 22, which were suspended, have resulted in victory for the left wing, the entire executives of the three left wing locals being re-elected by their memberships.

The heat of the struggle which went on for 15 weeks, during which Locals 2 and 9 were captured by armed gangsters of the Sigmanite joint board and Local 22 remained continually in a state of seige with hundreds of members on guard night and day, brot out the heaviest vote these locals have ever shown in the history of the international.

In Local 2 there were 5,203 votes cast. Borchovich, the left wing candidate for manager, received 4,362 of them; while Stenzer, left wing candidate for chairman got 3,987 votes and the whole executive put forth by the left wing was reelected.

In Local 9, there were 2,057 votes cast, and Louis Hyman, who led the long fight against the expulsion and suspensions as head of the joint action committee of the suspended locals, received 1,832 of these votes.

In Local 22, the membership which spent its days in the shops and its night guarding the local's office from the gangsters of the joint board, stood by their executive and officers who led them thru one of the noblest battles against corruption in American labor history. Of the 2,821 votes cast, Julius Portnoy, the left wing candidate, received 2,314 votes and the whole left slate was elected.

In all locals the 77 members of the three executives deposed by the Sigmanite joint board on charges of being Communists or having "permitted" Communists to speak before the union's May Day meetings, were given a vote of confidence by the membership which confirmed their claims upon their right to hold their positions.

CAPITALIST PRESS ETHICS SHOWN IN A. P. LAWSON PUFF

Courageous Christian Dared to Lie

CHICAGO, Oct. 9.— (FP) — Newspaper men reading the Associated Press eulogy of the late Victor F. Lawson adopted by its directors find in it a key to the peculiar appraisal of news values established by it.

Lawson, who helped to found the Associated Press is described by its present directors as a true American, a Christian gentleman, a courageous newspaperman and a tower of wisdom and strength.

Favored Monkey Against Children

It is recalled however that as owner of the Chicago Daily News this true American opposed a bond issue for Chicago schools at the same time favoring a huge issue for a new municipal monkey house and zoo.

As a Christian gentleman he has left millions of dollars to the Chicago Congregational Missionary and Extension Society, a holding company that has over 40 churches sewed up so that they cannot choose their own ministers.

A Courageous Liar

As a courageous newspaperman he permitted his Daily News without retraction to print absolutely fake news about the LaFollette railroad valuation conference in Chicago, describing in detail happenings that never took place.

He was indeed a tower of wisdom and strength to the banking and commercial interests of Chicago in whose enterprises he was vitally concerned through his large holdings in the Illinois Merchants Trust Co., in whose control he left his immense fortune and his newspaper.

Official Returns on LaFollette.

MADISON, Wis., Oct. 9.—Robert M. LaFollette, Jr., was elected United States senator by a margin of 146,401 over Edward Dithmer, his nearest opponent, official election returns compiled in the secretary of state's office on Friday showed.

Oil Magnates Oppose Union Shop.

SHREVEPORT, La.—Reported attempts to organize workers of the oil industry into a union has caused the Mid-Continent Oil and Gas Ass'n., Louisiana-Arkansas division, to declare for the open shop and against "dictation."

MUCH GUM SHOEING ON BETWEEN JOHN L. LEWIS AND ANTHRACITE BOSS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SCRANTON, Pa., Oct. 9.—The committee of mediators elected by the Scranton chamber of commerce, which a week ago had long and secret conference with John L. Lewis regarding the anthracite strike, yesterday held another such conference with W. W. Inglis, president of the Glen Alden Coal company and leader of the operators in their fight against the demands of the striking miners. It was announced afterward that "the anthracite suspension situation had been canvassed from various angles without arriving at any definite conclusion."

FINNISH WHITE GUARD PREPARES FOR WAR ON RUSS

Enormous Funds Spent on Finnish Army

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Oct. 9.—That fears of labor that the imperialist powers are preparing for ultimate war against Soviet Russia are not witout foundation is seen in the plans of white guard Finland to make unexampled military preparation running into the billions of dollars. Of course this is to be done, as usual, by preparing for "defense."

President of the Defense Committee Hornborg, although admitting that Finland itself could not afford such a pretentions and costly plan, does not say where the funds are to come from to furnish Finland with the estimated $140,000,000 a year for ten years, in addition to the cost of maintaining the "civil corps" or white guard.

Broadly hinting that money from the larger capitalist nations would be welcomed, Hornborg says the economic aspects of the plan is causing the Finnish government concern, as it had been hoped to make use of material captured from Soviet Russia, but this would not suffice and "Something must be done to make Finnish defense more than a bluff."

DEPT. OF NAVY GUILTY IN CRASH OF SHENANDOAH

Commander's Widow Exposes Political Trick

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 9.—The disastrous flight of the navy dirigible Shenandoah, that resulted in the death of her husbnad and most of his crew, was made solely for political purposes, declared Mrs. Margaret Lansdowne, widow of Commander Zachary T. Lansdowne, testifying today before the naval court of inquiry.

This charge, asserted Mrs. Lansdowne, is borne out by official correspondence revealed at the inquiry. She then poceeded to read the official documents of the inquiry proving that her statements were amply supported. One of these was the protest of Commander Lansdowne in which "he felt the Shenandoah should only be used for war purposes and should not be used for political purposes, such as a flight to the Middle West so the taxpayers there could look at their property," said the commander's widow.

Staggers Naval Board.

Mrs. Lansdowne then produced the record of her husband's protest which was marked "officially disapproved"

ENGDAHL SPEAKS AT PHILADELPHIA MASS MEETING SUNDAY NITE

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 9—Every worker in Philadelphia who wants to get first-hand news of the latest developments of the American Federation of Labor convention must attend the mass meeting to be held at Grand Fraternity Hall, 162 Arch street, Sunday evenin, Oct. 11 at 8 o'clock where J. Louis Engdahl, editor of the DAILY WORKER, who is now touring the east, will speak on the American Federation of Labor convention.

ATLANTIC CITY, Oct. 9—J. Louis Engdahl, editor of the DAILY WORKER, speaks tonight at 8 p. m. at Moose Hall, Atlantic avenue and New Jersey, subject: The A. F. of L. Convention and the American Communist Movement.

GOVERNMENT ORGAN STARTS FRAME-UP TO OUST BRITISH LABOR HEAD, PREVENT TOUR

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

The Washington Post, unofficial white house organ, that was caught smeared with so much of the filth thrown up by the Teapot Dome oil scandal, today, came to the aid of President Green in his attack on Arthur Purcell and Ben Smith, the two fraternal delegates of the British Trade Union Congress, who were outspoken and frank in their greetings to the convention.

But the Post, recently edited by George Harvey, former American ambassador to London, goes a little further and incites governmental action to deport Purcell, especially in words as follows: "What is this Communist doing at a meeting of the American Federation of Labor? How did he smuggle himself into the United States in violation of the law excluding Communists and agitators of Communist doctrines? What is the bureau of immigration doing that it permits a Communist to voilate the act of June 5, 1920? What about it, Mr. Commissioner General Hull?"

Urges Deportation.

Purcell, of course, is not a Communist. He is a labor party member of parliament. But the Post reaches its conclusions after quoting an extract from an article written by Purcell in the August number of the British publication World Trade Union Unity, of which it says, "These are the words of Lenin," the Washington Post, owned by Edward B. McLean, who was mixed up in the mysterious "principal" letters in the oil scandal, is considered a feeler for the republican administration.

The attack on Purcell may therefore, be considered to have some official inspiration. It was such an insidious campaign that led to the barring of Saklatvala from the country and from attending the gathering of the interparliamentary union at Washington, to which he had been selected as a delegate.

Green's Attack Cowardly.

There is no doubt, that Green's attack on Purcell and Smith has given considerable encouragement to the government in any action that it may choose to take, and to the capitalist press generally, in its assault on the British fraternal delegates.

It is an unheard of precedent for the head of a labor congress to attack sentiments expressed by fraternal delegates. Especially when they have no chance to reply, as was the case on Wednesday, when Green immediately adjourned the convention for the noon recess after his vitriolic assault against Purcell.

American delegates attending the British Trade Union Congress have been permitted to tire out the British delegates, who have patiently listened to their long winded nonsense and no criticism or complain was offered. President Green, by his attack on Purcell, has established a new code of labor fraternity in this convention.

Delegates today attended showing of new labor moving picture, that will be used in trade union propaganda work.

Miss Elizabeth Christman, fraternal delegate of the National Woman's Trade Union League, addressed the convention urging organization work. The afternoon session was given over to the discussion of child labor as a special order of business.

Four Killed in St. Louis.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Oct. 9.—The body of a fourth victim of the explosion in the Laclede Gas Light Building was found in the debris in the basement by firemen early today. The list of injured treated in hospitals was placed at 50.

Officials of the company gave no explanation for the exploding of ammonia tanks in the building Thursday afternoon, which wrecked the lower structure and sent flames up the elevator shaft as high as the tenth floor. Many escaped by jumping into nets spread by firemen.

UNION DELEGATE MEETING TO BE HELD SUNDAY

To Indorse New York Labor Ticket

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—Enthusiastic support is coming from many quarters for the big union delegate meeting called for Sunday afternoon, Oct. 11, at Manhattan Lyceum, 66 E. 4th St., New York City, to endorse the united labor ticket and the Workers Party candidates in the municipal election. Needle trades workers, food workers, metal workers and others are expected to have full representation at this meeting.

[illegible] become actively interested in the Workers Party campaign in the municipal elections and for its determined fight for the united labor ticket against the active sabotage of the socialist party and the Tammany trade union politicians who make up the bureaucracy of New York's unions.

Active unionists are aiding the party in arranging noon-hour meetings in front of the big shops in the chief industrial centers of the city. Campaign literature is being circulated and funds are being collected in the shops and Workers Party speakers are being invited to speak at union meetings. The following resolution which is typical of those being adopted, was passed by the Hotel Workers' Union, indicates the interest of the organized workers in the campaign that the Workers Party is waging:

"Whereas, The workers of New York City are faced today with the prospect of another four years of the rule of big business under the leadership of either Frank Waterman, the republican banker, millionaire fountain pen manufacturer and exploiter of labor or that of James Walker of Tammany Hall, lawyer for the beef trust and the milk trust, and

"Whereas, The election of either of these tools of the capitalist class means more crowded schools, more crowded subways, higher rents, worse housing conditions, injunctions and arrest of pickets, lower wages, increased exploitation of labor and more atacks upon the working class of New York City, and

"Whereas, The working class of New York City stands today and divided before the prospect these certain attacks by the powerful forces of the employers, be it

"Resolved, That we send our delegates to the conference called by the Workers Party of America for Sunday, Oct. 11, at 2 p. m., at Manhattan Lyceum, 66 East 4th St., for the purpose of furthering the idea of a united labor ticket and the unity of labor on the political field."

SHOP WORKERS' COMMITTEES FOR W. P. CANDIDATES

Brownsville Shoe Shops on the Job

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—The organized workers of the city of New York are manifesting great interest in the Workers Party mayoralty campaign. One after another of the big left wing unions of the city have indorsed the Workers Party candidates and their fight for the united labor ticket and are sending delegates to the big conference of organized labor to be held Sunday, Oct. 11, at 2 p. m., in Manhattan Lyceum, 66 East 4th St., New York City.

Locals 1, 5, 10, and 15, of the Furriers' Union; Lasters' Local 53, and Fitters' Local 54, of the Shoe Workers' Protective Union; the Furriers' Joint Trade; Shoe Workers' District Council No. 2, and the militant locals of the International Ladies' Garment Workers are among the latest to endorse the Workers Party candidates and to elect two delegates each, to the meeting of Oct. 11.

Great Enthusiasm.

Another interesting development, which shows the enthusiasm which is being awakened among the workers of the city of New York, for the Workers Party campaign, is the fact that in many shops the workers are spontaneously forming Workers Party campaign committees. During the last few days, news has come in from all of the important shoe factories of the Brownsville district that they have formed committees, are collecting funds and have already elected their delegates to the conference on Oct. 11. These shop organizations represent a new feature in Communist campaigning and show that even in the question of political campaigns for which the old social-democratic form of organization is supposed to be peculiarly adapted, the shop nucleus basis is more desirable for a truly proletarian party.

Campaign in Shops.

The unanimity with which the Brownsville shops have organized themselves to back the Workers Party municipal campaign is without doubt due to the fact that live shop nuclei have been functioning for some time in the Brownsville factories. This demonstrates that the reorganization of the party will bring the campaign into the shops.

One of the tasks of the Oct. 11 meeting is precisely this task of bringing this campaign of the Workers Party into the shops, and after Oct. 11, the New York industrial district will witness a veritable fever of organization within the shops, the circulating of lists of shop collections, of formation of shop campaign committees, noon-hour meetings at the gates of the big factories and circulation of the Workers Party literature among the workers at the bench.

Gitlow Speaks Sunday.

Benjamin Gitlow, the Workers Party candidate for mayor, himself a member of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, will make the principle address at the meeting in Manhattan Lyceum, this Sunday. Other candidates, who are also members of trade unions, will speak and there will be addresses by leading militant workers in the trade unions. The officials of several unions have requested to speak. The workers of the city of New York are welcome to attend this conference and listen to the proceedings which will be of absorbing interest to all those who work in the shop.

Re-emigrants from U. S. to Be Considered as Russ Soviet Citizens

MOSCOW, Oct. 9—By decision of the people's commissariat for home affairs, all Russian re-emigrants from America arriving in order to engage in agriculture or industry are to be considered as Soviet citizens.

This rule does not apply to natives of the border states such as Poland, Lithuania, Esthonia, Latvia and Finland which seceded from the Union of Socialist Soviet Russia by peace treaties.

NEGROES PETITION FEDERATION OF LABOR TO ABOLISH COLOR LINE AMONG FREIGHT HANDLERS

By ESTHER LOWELL,
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.—Four Negro freight handlers, delegates to the 15th annual convention of the American Federation of Labor, have a serious problem for the federation's attention. Their local unions, 4 out of 39 in a similar predicament, are chartered directly by the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, Freight Handlers, Express and Station Employes' agreements with employers.

Union Maintains Color Ban.

The Bortherhood's constitution expressly states that all white persons employed in the lines of work under their jurisdiction are eligible to membershp in the union. Negro workers are not admitted, altho they pay 50c to the Brotherhood in addition to the 25c per capita to the American Federation of Labor. Negroes are not permitted to participate in Brotherhood meetings or share in insurance and other Brotherhood benefits aside from equal conditions for white and colored freight handlers. Negroes are not allowed to become clerks.

Couldn't Get Audience.

Ben Oglesby, president Local No. 17769, and Albert C. Campbell, president Local No. 17775, both of Kansas City, Mo., two of the Negro delegates in Atlantic City, say they attempted to get an audience at the last convention of the Brotherhood but could not get beyond the door and found no delegate to present their resolution asking for removal of the color line in the Brotherhood constitution. William McGibney, president Local No. 16900, Greensboro, N. C., and Samuel Blockman of Cleveland, Ohio, are the two other delegates from colored freight handlers' local unions to the American Federation of Labor convention.

All four Negro delegates signed the resolution presented to the convention, calling for the American Federation of Labor to approve their proposal that President Green and whoever else he choses from the American Federation of Labor officials negotiate with the Grand Lodge of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks "for the full admission to membership for all classes under their jurisdiction as granted by the American Federation of Labor." In the event negotiations should fail, the Negro freight handlers call upon the the American Federation of Labor to "take the necessary action to properly protect the welfare of that class of railway employes."

Only two Negro delegates attended the El Paso convention last year and none the American Federation of Labor Portland convention in 1923. No other Negro unionists are represented at the Atlantic City convention.

The four Negro freight handlers are staying in the pleasure city's north side, the district away from the oceanside which has long been claimed by whites. Negro workers are plentiful in Atlantic City, along the boardwalk, in hotels and restaurants, and colored nursemaids ride in the ever-present boardwalk wheel chair with their white wards and sometimes with their white mistresses. But when a white girl stops the colored delegates to the American Federation of Labor convention for an interview on the boardwalk the idle white population sitting on the piers or passing by, gape at the sight.

Increasing Classes Speeds Up Teachers Like Ford Factory

By exacting an increase of output from its teachers the Chicago board of education expects to save $300,000 this year in running its education plant. By increasing the average number of children in a class room from 48 to 50, the board gets more teaching per teacher for the same pay, just as Ford speeds up the production of automobiles by pushing more per hour thru his plant. Superintendent McAndrews also suggests "a neat trim uniform" for teachers.

Speeding-up is undermining the health of teachers to such an extent that group sickness and accident insurance is being advocated by the American Federation of Teachers as a protection to teacher welfare. "Despite the low pay," says F. G. Stecker, "the average city allows a maximum of only two weeks' pay on sick-leave. The St. Paul Federation of Men Teachers has successfully worked its group insurance plan for four years. Teachers under 59 years are eligible without physical examination."

FURRIERS' UNION PLEDGE SUPPORT TO MINE STRIKE

To Give Financial and Moral Aid

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—At the last meeting of the joint board of the Furriers' Union in New York City, delegates representing Locals 1, 5, 10 and 15, unanimously adopted the following resolution giving their moral and financial support to the strike of the anthracite coal miners in Pennsylvania:

"WHEREAS, 150,000 anthracite coal miners have been forced to strike in order to resist the efforts of the mine owners to reduce their wages and to lower their standard of life, therefore be it

"RESOLVED, That we, the New York Joint Board Furriers' Union, representing Locals 1, 5, 10 and 15, pledge our moral and financial support to the miners in their present struggle and urge all organised labor to rally to the support of the mine workers and help them carry their struggle to a successful conclusion, be it further

"RESOLVED, That we urge the organised labor movement of the United States to cooperate with every effort to bring about unity of all labor, internationally, to resist the united efforts of the internationally organised capitalist class to force down the standard of life of all workers."

Workers Standard of Living Rises Rapidly in Bolshevik Russia

The Russian periodical Labor Statistics publishes the results of an enquiry held for the purpose of ascertaining the amount of the revenue and expenditure of the Russia workers. The result of the enquiry showed that because of increased wages, expenditure had increased thruout in November, 1924, (the date of the enquiry) as compared with November, 1923. The increase amounts to 12-14 per cent in Kharkov and in the Don district, up to 40 per cent in Moscow, Leningrad and Vladimir.

The expenditure on foods, forms about 45% of the total expenditure in a working class household. Taking into consideration increased food prices there is an increase of 10-40% as compared with last year with respect to the quantity of food. As to the various food stuffs, a qualitative improvement in nourishment is noticeable. Whilst less bread and potatoes are consumed, the consumption of meat, fat and sugar goes up. The demand for clothes is from 20-25 per cent higher than last year, which is also a sign of the general improvement in the workers' living conditions.

As far as Moscow is concerned, the average revenue of a workers' family is about 100 gold rubles, and the average expenditure about 97 rubles.

Polish Terror Tortures Young Bielsk Workers

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R. Oct. 9.—The International Red Aid has received a telegram relating new crimes of the Polish "Defensive Organization."

Mass arrests of workers and peasants have taken place in the White Russian districts of Bielsk and Volkovisk. Up to the present over a thousand workers and peasants have been placed under arrest. Amongst them are thirteen-year-old children.

Lack Jails

In Bielsk the arrested are quartered in schools, hospitals etc., in consequence of the lack of room in the prisons.

Hundreds of the arrested have been subjected to inhuman tortures. Hands and feet are tied and the bare soles beaten with sticks. Electric current is run into the ear. Hot urine with salt is poured into mouths. Lighted cigarettes are thrust against lips, etc.

Populace Terrorized

The population of the town is terrorized by the shrieks of the prisoners and is leaving the town in masses. The police are forcing the prisoners with these tortures to make false oaths. The international proletariat must raise its voice energetically against the new crimes of the "defensive."

Soviet Museum Backs Expedition.

MOSCOW, Oct. 9.—An archeological expedition of the Academy of History of Material Culture, headed by Professor Miller, has left for Krasnoday, to carry out excavations on the site of the ancient settlements which had once flourished on the river Kuban and its tributaries.

COOLIDGE IS CHALLENGED BY SHIPPING BOARD

Whole Struggle to Be Aired in Congress

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., October 9.—President Coolidge is floundering around in a maze of bewilderment regarding the crisis precipitated by the shipping board which openly defied him in the discharge of Admiral Leigh Palmer as president of the Emergency Fleet corporation. Totally incapable of formulating a personal opinion on anything involving brain power he awaits the "advice" of the watch-dogs of imperialism that act in Washington as his "close friends."

Unofficial sources are responsibility for the statement that the whole question will be presented to congress when it convenes in December in the form of a recommendation embodied in the president's address.

Hesitates to Act.

The issue is whether a commission created by congress may flout the wishes of the president as to governmental activities that are held to be within the executive power. Members of the shipping board contend that operation of the merchant marine is their exclusive jurisdiction and not within the power of the executive. Coolidge hesitates to act on the case because the legal status is in dispute in a similar case now before the United States supreme court involving the authority of the executive to discharge a postmaster without the consent of the senate. Possibly Coolidge's advisers believe that no action toward removing members of the shipping board should be taken until after the decision of the supreme court is handed down.

That preparations to take the controversy before congress is under way is indicated by the announcement that H. G. Dalton, of Cleveland, selected by the president to investigate the matter will return to Washington next week. His recommendations will be the basis of the recommendations to congress.

Board Still Defiant

In a notice sent to Elmer E. Crowley, the new president of the fleet corporation, the shipping board emphasised the fact that Crowley is solely responsible to the board and no other department of government. This defiant attitude presages a congressional fight that will reveal the whole history of the inner workings of this branch of the government, even to the extent of investigating the financial juggling that is an open secret in Washington.

RUSSIAN COMMUNIST PARTY HAS ELECTIONS IN YATCHEYKAS FOR COMING NOVEMBER CONVENTION

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., Oct. 9.—Elections are being held all over Russia with a view to the coming Russian Communist Party convention to be held in November. The Communist Party of Russia has upwards of three-quarters of a million members, including the "Lenin levy" of 200,000 members taken in since the death of Vladimir Ilyich Lenin.

The Yatcheyka.

The Russian Communist Party is composed of units known as the yatcheyka (cell) or nuclei group as they would be called in America, consisting of all party members in one factory, village, regiment, state or business administration. Its numbers run from about seven or eight in a village up to 100 or more in the cities. In factories or elsewhere, where there are several hundred party members, there are several yacheykas, according to departments or employments, to prevent unwieldy size. Twice yearly each yacheykas elects a secretary and "buro" or committee.

Elect Delegates

During the elections previous to the R. C. P. convention, they simultaneously elect delegates to a large group of conferences preliminary to the annual party convention. Thus in the cities there are first the yacheyka units, then the sectional conference, then the city conference above that.

The Village Yacheyka

In the country there are village yacheyka and county conference, a larger group county conference, then a provincial conference and a larger group provincial conference—Ural region—or Caucasian conference—corresponding to the conference in large cities like Moscow, Leningrad and Odessa.

Free Discussion

The difference between the larger conferences and the unit or yacheykas is towfold—first, the yacheykas meet all the year around, and secretaries and committees are elected for six months only. The higher conferences meet once a year and elect secretaries and committees for the next twelve months. The election is by show of hands for a majority vote. The election is preceded by a wide discussion, during which complete freedom of speech and criticism is allowed, resolutions passed, etc.

But after the decisions of the convention, have been made all of the members must buckle down to work to do the tasks decided upon.

Anita Whitney Case of California Comes Before Supreme Court

By LAURENCE TODD,
(Federated Press Service)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9—At the very hour when President Coolidge's Omaha speech demanding tolerance for minoritiy opinion in this country was appearing on the streets of the national capital, the federal supreme court was listening to argument on the appeal of Miss Charlotte Anita Whitney from the sentence imposed on her by a California court for the crime of belonging to the minority group known in 1919 as the Communist Labor Party.

Her actual crime was her activity in raising and administering defense funds for the I. W. W. who were being sent to prison by hundreds upon mere proof of membership in that organization.

Official Terrorist Argues Case.

Argument for the accused was made by Walter H. Pollak of New York, and for the state of California by a deputy for U. S. Webb, attorney general of the state, who has had charge of the official terror against the "Wobblies" for ten years past.

The state dug up the old accusations against the I. W. W.—that by confession of members they stood convicted of burning crops, poisoning livestock, setting fire to forests and putting lime in the shoes of strike-breakers.

Stool Pigeon Testimony.

He did not mention the fact that these "confessions" were made by criminals of the Harry Orchard type who were used as profesional witnesses for the state in large numbers of cases, and whose membership in the I. W. W. was denied by the responsible officers of that body.

No case involving conviction of an I. W. W. member on the testimony of the red card in his pocket has yet come to the final tribunal in Washington.

Bank Clerks Attempt to Organize Union

An attempt will soon be made by the Bank Clerks' Union to organize the bank clerks in Chicago.

At present the delegate of the Bank Clerks' Union is in Atlantic City in an attempt to have the American Federation of Labor go on record for organising the bank clerks and place an organizer in the field. Another resolution to be introduced will call upon all union officials to demand that the clerks in the banks where union funds are deposited belong to the union.

At the State Federation of Labor meeting at Champaign, Illinois, a resolution was passed demanding that every union official bank only in those banks that employ union clerks.

International Labor Defense Ball

The New York section of the International Labor Defense is arranging a grand costume ball on Saturday, October 17, at the Lyceum, 86th St. and Third Ave., in order to riase funds for defense.

The need of funds for the defense of the class war prisoners is growing daily.

The International Labor Defense protects all victims of the class struggle, who are sent to the capitalist prisons. The organization has a large number of cases on hand—the number is still growing.

Hence, in addition to enjoying one of the finest balls that have ever been arranged—and there will be dancing and refreshments—every comrade will be doing a great service to the working class movement.

For further information apply to the secretary of the International Labor Defense, New York Section, Rose Baron, 799 Broadway, Room 422, New York City.

WORKERS' SCHOOL OPENS ENGLISH CLASSES IN N. Y.

To Aid Foreign-Born in Party

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—The English courses that the Workers' School offers this year assume special political importance because of the reorganization of the party. Party re-organization means that every party member must be able to speak, read and write English. The abolition of the foreign speaking comrades in shop nuclei and international branches where English will be the official language and where Russian, Lithuanian, Jewish, Scandinavian, Italian and other foreign speaking members will find themselves together with American workers who speak only English, means that the entire party must learn English or great numbers of its members will be lost to the party and to the class struggle in America.

To meet this need, the Workers' School has prepared to offer any number of English courses on any and all nights of the week in order to accomodate all those who should and must be studying English during the next three months.

To Aid Comrades.

There will be courses in elementary, intermediate and advanced English as well as courses in composition and workers correspondence. The elementary English will be two nights a week and other courses will be one night a week. But to specially accomodate the active, leading workers of the foreign federations who are so occupied with party work that they cannot spare more than one night a week and yet need improvement in English, there will be one night a week of our elementary English course with a distince political tone to its vocabulary, exercises, dictation, etc., that is to say, that the subject matter treated in this course will be the subject matter which is necessary for party life to be conducted in the English language. A group of courses will begin the week of Oct. 19, including elementary, intermediate and advanced English. A staff of twenty teachers has been prepared and as many courses will be started as the registration warrants. The fee for these courses, where they are given one night a week will be $2.50 for a three months course and where two night a week $3.50 for a three months course. Registration is now going on in Room 34 of the Workers' School at 108 East 14th St., N. Y. City. Further information can be secured by writing to Bert Wolfe, director of the Workers' School at the above address.

Every foreign-born worker who takes seriously the Bolshevization and re-organization of the party, must improve his knowledge of English. Now is the time to begin before re-organization has been completed.

FURRIERS' UNION BOARD PROTESTS SAKLATVALA BAN

Demand Admission of Communist

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—The New York joint board of the Furriers' Union at its last meeting unanimously adopted the following resolution against the exclusion and demanding the admission of Shapurji Saklatvala, Communist member of the British house of commons:

"Whereas, Secretary of State Kellogg has instructed the London consul general to revoke the visa granted to Sahpurji Saklatvala, a member of the English parliament representing the organied labor movement of that country at the interparliamentary union at Washington, therefore be it

"Resolved by the New York joint board of the Furriers' Union representing Locals 1, 5, 10 and 15, that we vigorously protest the action of the secretary of state in excluding Shapurji Saklatvala as an act hostile to the interests of the organized labor movement of the world, as an act of unauthorised and unjustifiable discrimination against the foreign-born workers and as a high-handed attempt to limit the freedom of speech in the United States; and be it further

"Resolved that we demand the immediate admission of Saklatvala into this country and the removal of all restrictions which may have been initiated by the secretary of state without the authority of congress against those seeking admission to this country; and be it further

"Resolved, that copies of this resolution be sent to the secretary of state at Washington, D. C., and to the press.

Boston Checker Taxi Drivers Win Strike

(A Worker Correspondent.)

BOSTON, Mass., Oct. 8.—Taxi drivers in the employ of the Checker Taxicab Co. of Boston, who have been out on strike since September 19, returned to work Oct. 2, when the company granted to the workers an increase in wages of one dollar a day and a nine-hour work day and fifty cents an hour for overtime.

The strike which was started on midnight Sept. 19, was originally meant as a protest against the company because of the order to the drivers to purchase uniforms and caps. Upon consultation they found they were the lowest paid drivers in the city of Boston and therefore, changed their plans and demanded an increase in wages and a nine-hour day.

This is the second strike of taxi drivers in Boston and each strike was won. The first strike was when the drivers of the Premier Taxi company walked out on strike also for an increase in wages and after a struggle that lasted about three weeks, the men won the strike.

TWELVE-HOUR DAY AND SUNDAY WORK FOR FORD WORKERS NOW THAT THE GOV'T DOES NOT FOOT HENRY'S BILLS

(By WORKER CORRESPONDENT)

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 9.—At the Ford plant, the world's richest corporation, the workers are going thru a sweating period being expected to work 12 hours a day even including Sunday for straight time. Everybody has read the advertisements and publicity articles in the capitalist papers about the improved Ford car. That car is the cause of all that sweat.

For 8-Hour Day When Govt. Paid.

This same Henry Ford, in 1819, during the war, was appointed by Woodrow Wilson as arbitrator in a wage dispute at Bridgeport, Conn., where he recommended a basic 8-hour day and time and a half for overtime. Ford paid time and a half overtime in his plant during the war only when the government footed the bill.

We older men well remember the booklet issued by this company some years ago. It ran something like this: "The Ford Motor company does not consider the making of cars its chief object, only primarily being interested in the making of men." Looking at the tired faces at quitting time one is struck by the hypocrisy of it all. Those faces more nearly suggest the "breaking of men."

A couple of years ago when business was slack the capitalist papers carried long articles to the effect that Ford would inaugurate a five-day week in his plant as one day of rest was insufficient for his workers (an admission that the men are overworked). But now when business is booming working his men overtime and Sunday does not seem to affect his conscience.

That Much Advertised Bonus.

When Ford wanted to squeeze out the minority stockholders he was very much interested in his employes and doled out the so-called bonus which act was heralded around the world a few years ago. Now, since he controls all the stock, it does not bother his conscience one iota when he receives $100,000,000 profit in one year with a little extra change of $400,000,000 in the banks.

Fellow workers! Let us ditch this cowardly Ford spirit of leaving our welfare to the tender mercies of Henry. Let us stand on our manly spirit and join the Auto Workers' or Machinists' Union.

Let us have something to say about our life and the products of our toil. Let us quit feeling like jelly fish, but let us feel the power that comes with organization.

Don't say, we can't buck the great Ford Motor Co. You read a few months ago what our foreign-born brothers in Copenhagen, Denmark, did. A worker accidentally upset some paint on a car body, he was laid off for the offense. Within an hour every worker at the plant quit work demanding his reinstatement. The Great Ford Motor Co. complied immediately with the demand, and all returned again to work.

That is the power of organization. United we stand, divided we fall. God knows we workers are falling fast in this great land of Rockefeller, Morgan and Ford.

Moscow Workers Get Higher than Prewar Standards of Wages

MOSCOW, Oct. 9—Taking the average wage of a worker in the last quarter of 1924 as 100, the average wage of metal workers in January, 1925, was 103.8 per cent, of chemical workers 107.5, of workers in the food industry, 110.3, in the tobacco industry 107.4, in the leather industry 110.5, in the printing trade 102.5, in the textile industry 100, the general average being 103.5 per cent.

As compared with pre-war wages, the situation is as follows: (in prewar rubles):

1913, 27.1; October, 1924, 32.71; November, 1924, 31.14 and January, 1923, 32.77.

Thus we find that on the Moscow average the pre-war wage has already been exceeded.

Right Wing Gangsters Break Up Big Meeting of Workmen's Circle

HARTFORD, Conn., Oct. 9.—Right wing gangsters of the Workmen's Circle broke up a meeting called by the left wing action committee Saturday night. The right wingers were out in full force and showed from the start that they were going to break up the meeting.

The meeting held at the Labor Educational Alliance and the speaker was to be Duroskkin of New York, who was once a member of the executive committee of the Workmen's Circle but was made a member at large by the right wing machine.

The chairman of the meeting, a member of the left wing action committee, was introducing the speaker when the right wingers began to show their stuff. They wanted to know who this left wing action committee is, what right they had to call a meeting and their trump card was that the meeting should elect a chairman.

This was ridiculous since the majority of those present were not members of the left wing. Their main object was just to keep the speaker from starting.

Two Hours of Disruption

When the speaker, after the air was filled with argument for some two hours, tried to get on the platform, some right wing strong arms led by Sacks, grabbed hold of him.

Finally he got on the stage. But it was evident that no meeting could be held since it was almost midnight. The right wingers were afraid to hear what the speaker had to say. He was there to criticize the bureucratic officialdom of the Workmen's Circle.

The chairman then announced that this meeting*(?) was over and that all left wingers who wanted to hear the speaker should go into another hall in the building.

And He Went Right Out Again

We had hardly gathered in this smaller hall when a few right wing sluggers began to break thru the door. One little right winger, Hurivitz, a boss painter and a little runt was the first thru the door but he went right out again by the collar.

We saw it was impossible to go on, so we left the building and went over to a member's house where the speaker gave a brief address, explained the situation and urged the left wingers to keep on the fight with added courage.

Best Members Are Left Wing

The most active members of the left wing action committee are old members in the Workmen's Circle and members of the Workers Party. The left wing action committee is going to strengthen itself here in Hartford so the next time the right winger sluggers who try their stuff, will get back their own medicine. On with the fight, brothers, to take the Workmen's Circle out of the hands of strikebreaking petty bourgeois.

"Passing the Buck" Favorite Pastime in Washington Meet

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—Suggestions made by delegates to the interparliamentary union's conference that the Washington government again take leadership in promoting a reduction of world armaments were answered by Representative Theodore Burton of Ohio.

Referring to the desire for a new limitation of armaments conference, Mr. Burton said "various propositions looking toward the same ideal are being considered in various European conferences and it would be an intrusion for our president to ask for a conference in Washington now."

by the navy department. This revelation fell like a bombshell upon the court of inquiry which has obviously been trying to whitewash the navy department and was received by them in dead silence. The board's surprise was, in fact, so great that its members conferred in whispers for ten minutes before they resumed the inquiry.

Terrorism Didn't Work.

This revelation is in flat contradiction to the statements alleged to have been made by Mrs. Lansdowne repudiating similar expressions made the morning after the disaster.

It developed today that agents of the navy department tried to take advantage of the widow in the first hours of her grief in order to terrorize her into refraining from exposing the political trickery of the Coolidge administration that cynically sacrificed the lives of members of the navy in order to increase its political prestige among the voters of the Middle West.

Wilbur is Silent.

Secretary of the Navy Wilbur maintains silence regarding this latest assault upon his department, while democratic congressmen in Washington are gathering every scrap of material available on the disaster in order to launch an investigation of the recent series of naval disasters, the latest of which was the sinking of the submarine S-51, in which all but three of the crew perished like rats in a trap.

Brands Wilbur Liar.

The name of Secretary of the Navy Wilbur was brought into the investigation by Mrs. Lansdowne who testified as follows:

"Secretary Wilbur was quoted in the press as saying that my husband had made no protest against going at this time, and one of my principal reasons for appearing before this court is to emphasize the fact that my statement has been substantiated by official correspondence read into the court record.

"The main points in this correspondence as I see them are all embodied in a letter to my husband from the chief of naval operations, dated Aug. 12, 1925, in which the recommendations of my husband are disapproved as follows:

Had to Fly Over Fairs.

"1. Recommended that the flight be made at the end of the second week in September. Disapproved, because state fairs occur during first week of month and must be flown over as scheduled.

"2. Recommendation that a trial flight be made first to Detroit to test out the new mooring mast there before making the long swing around over the state fairs. Disapproved, because its necessity was not apparent to the department in spite of the definite reasons for the recommendation given as follows in a letter from my husband to the chief of naval operations, Aug. 4, 1925:

Feared Possible Defects.

"'In view of the fact that the success of carrying out this proposed itinerary and schedule necessitates landing at the Detroit mooring mast it is recommended that the Shenandoah make a trip to Detroit during the last week in August to test out the functioning of this mast. It is pointed out that this mast is of a new type. Thus in case of failure to function properly of either the mast or gear the Shenandoah could carry sufficient fuel to safely return to Lakehurst, and any defects or deficiencies be remedied prior to the middle western flight.'"

JAPANESE WORKERS' UNION SENDS PROTEST AGAINST SAKLATVALA EXCLUSION TO JAP DELEGATES

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—The Japanese Workers' Union of New York City composed of over 200 Japanese workers employed in various trades, at their last meeting passed a resolution to be sent to the Japanese delegation attending the interparliamentary union congress.

In the following resolution, sent by telegram to the delegation, the Japanese workers score the attempt of Secretary of State Kellogg to exclude the Communist member of the British house of commons, Shapurji Saklatvala, for a speech in which Saklatvala defended the workers of all lands against the exploitation of the imperialist powers:

Resolution.

"Japanese Delegates,
"Interpaliamentary Union Congress,
"Washington, D. C.

"Exclusion of Saklatvala, Communist member of parliament of England from your congress, because of revolutionary statements in behalf of enslaved Hindus, is nothing but a display of dirty capitalistic policy.

"Time after time the people of England endorsed the Communistic views of Saklatvala thereby he enjoys the privileges in the glorious English parliament.

"However, there is a tendency among some English representatives to willingly and shamelessly dishonor the English empire by accepting the exclusion handed down. Incidentally they brand themselves as the staunch supporters of capitalist class whether consciously or unconsciously.

"As one of the Asiatic nations, Japan, especially the Japanese working class, has nothing in common with the English ruling class policy of enslaving India. On the contrary, she is predestined to stand by the Hindus' cry for justice and self-determination.

"The Saklatvala case is the acid test of your political views—whether you are with the ever aggrandising international capitalistic plunderers or have you the heart to side with the down-trodden people of Asia.

"Your honor as the representatives of the Japanese people demands you pay profound attention to the Shapurji Saklatvala case. Please, remember you are sitting in the very place christened after the avowed revolutionist against English imperialism.

"Y. NISHIMURA,
"Secretary Japanese Workers' Union of New York."

Labor Defense Grand Ball Coming Soon in Chicago; Jot Date Down

CHICAGO, Oct. 9—The Chicago local committee of I. L. D. is busy with plans for increasing the membership, getting more collective affiliations of workers' organizations, raising special pledged sums for the Zeigler defense and preparing extra attractions for the grand ball and dance to be held October 24 at the new Temple Hall on Van Buren and Marshfield for the benefit of the defense. Tickets, pluggers, etc., are being widely distributed. The admission price—in advance—is only 50c and includes wardrobe.

Branches Are Active.

Reports made at the last meeting of delegates from branches were very encouraging. Most branches had substantially increased their membership since organizing a month or two ago and were arranging special meetings. The Bulgarian branch has done very well. It started with 19 members and has already held two mass meetings, one of which was attended by over 100 Bulgarian workers, one-third of the entire Bulgarian population of Chicago. It now has 20 members.

Slovak Workers Society No. 16 (250 members) and Machinists' Union No. 337 (400 members) have recently affiliated to the Chicago I. L. D.

The work here is getting up steam.

Rival Imperialisms Leave One Little Question to Hague

THE HAGUE, Oct. 9.—The rival interests of two imperialisms over a little island in the eastern Pacific is the subject of the Hague tribunal's mediation to settle the dispute between the United States and Holland as to which owns the island of Las Palmas, half way between the Philippines and the Dutch Archipelago. Both governments have agreed to leave decision in the matter to Max Huber, a citizen of Switzerland who is acting as president of the rather ignored "international court of justice" at the Hague.

Peasant Taxes Fall to Quarter Prewar Taxation in Russia

The deputy chairman of the council of people's commissaries, Comrade Tsuriupa, has given some interesting figures on the burden of taxation of the peasantry in Soviet Russia in his report at the last party conference of the Russian Communist Party. Before the war direct taxes amounted to 1.60 rubles per head, whilst indirect taxes to 4.5 rubles per head. In addition there were payments to the peasant bank, etc., amounting to 4.01 rubles. Thus the total burden of taxation previous to the war was 10.37 rubles per head.

Taxes Fall.

After the revolution the burden of taxation approximated this sum only in one year, the year 1920-21. It amounted at that time to 10.30 rubles per head. In the following years there was a steady lowering of the burden of taxation: in the year 1921-22, it amounts to 6.11 rubles; in 1922-23, 3.98 rubles; in 1924-25, 3.96 rubles per head.

In the coming budget year the burden of taxation consisting of the proposed indirect taxes and the general agricultural tax will be only 2.77 rubles per head. Putting the general amount of direct and indirect taxes in the year 1912 at 100, the situation in the years 1920-21 is as follows:

1920-21, 100; 1921-22, 60; 1922-23, 43; 1923-24, 37; 1924-25, 42; 1925-26, 27.

The peasant taxes, direct and indirect, will amount during the current year to about 44 per cent of the prewar taxes, and the general burden of taxation of the peasantry will be only a quarter of pre-war taxation. But it must be taken into consideration that the purchasing capacity of the ruble is much smaller than before the war.

The direct taxation of the peasantry will be only a quarter of pre-war taxation. But it must be taken into consideration that the purchasing capacity of the ruble is much smaller than befor the war.

The direct taxation of the peasantry thru the general agricultural tax has been reduced in the current budget year from 470 million rubles to 290 million rubles, that is to say, by about 40 per cent.

British Missionaries Make Discovery

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Oct. 9.—Some imperialists are discovering that the [illegible] races and their colonial countries are inspired by the fairness and equality with which they are treated by Soviet Russia. This is admitted by no one less than Viscount Willingdon, expert on Indian affairs and ex-governor of Bombay and Madras.

The honorable viscount observed in a speech given to a church congress that the world war between christian nations in which some 10,000,000 were slain on the battle field, had not convinced the colored races that the white man's system of social government was flawless and his moral [illegible] higher. Quite on the contrary, and the viscount went on:

"I am convinced that the white races must realise the necessity of treating all colored men in a spirit of absolute equality giving up their attitude of color superiority."

Fascisti on Rampage

Incensed at the growing opposition to the fascist regime in Italy, Mussolini's blackshirt hordes that waded to power thru rivers of blood are demonstrating their determination to retain that power by a veritable saturnalia of murder, rapine, incendiarism and looting.

Dispatches from London reveal the fact that the outbreak against the free masons in Florence over the week-end, meager reports of which were received by telegraph at the time, was a piece of vandalism seldom surpassed even by that government of assassination.

Free masonry in Italy has taken up the struggle of the petty bourgeoisie against the increased burden of taxation imposed upon that class to maintain the fascist power. In the punitive expedition against this class in Florence their houses were entered and leaders of the society murdered in cold blood, stores large and small were pillaged and burned to the ground, while fascist bands held off the firemen that tried to stop the conflagrations.

Simultaneously with this outbreak, the grand council of the fascisti, meeting in secret session in Rome, framed "constitutional changes" giving the government complete control over every phase of economic and political life. If carried into effect this change means the death knell of the labor movement in Italy. Under its terms only fascist unions are recognized and the shop committees that have arisen in heavy industry—to a considerable extent under Communist influence—are to be disbanded and replaced by fascist hooligans.

In an effort forcibly to conscript the working class of the nation under the banner of fascism a provision of the new code creates a compulsory arbitration board for industry and labor, to be selected by the fascist government, and makes striking a crime punishable by death.

This attack upon both the proletariat and certain elements of the petty bourgeoisie will react favorably for the revolutionary movement. The pillaging of the homes and stores of the small shopkeepers will result in aligning many of that class on the side of the proletarian struggle and will neutralize other sections, as that class can never, in any country at this stage of development, lead an independent political existence.

Thus arises a situation in Italy that conjures up the words of Karl Mark:

> "On the eve of each general reconstruction of society, the last word of social science will every be:
> "'Combat or death. Bloody struggle or extinction. It is thus that the question is irresitibly put.'"

There is but one reply possible to a threat to punish striking by death and that is insurrection. At one blow the fascist government has placed that question on the order of the day.

Thruout the years of black reaction the vanguard of the working class—the Communist Party of Italy—has slowly and painfully struggled to maintain its existence. The long struggle has steeled it so that it will know how to meet this new menace by rallying the bleeding and battered masses of Italy to the revolutionary standard and sweeping from power in a mighty upheaval the Mussolini government.

Five Months of China's Struggle

The manner in which the Chinese people have united to discredit completely the fake international conference to consider the shooting of Shanghai students and strikers is further proof of the ability of the Chinese for concerted action.

The press is practically a unit against the conference, the unions, the students and the smaller Chinese commercial elements, General Feng and the well-known legislator Tang Shoayi, all have issued statements denouncing it. A huge demonstration in front of the hall where the conference is in session has taken place and the correspondents of the American capitalist press take a very gloomy view of the situation.

The strategy of Great Britain was to give the conference an international character and thus conceal the leading part played by British interests in the Shanghai outrages. Her pressure for joint action was so strong that the American government yielded and, much to the joy of the advanced section of the Chinese liberation movement, has practically destroyed the myth that it was a friend of the people. The correspondent of the New York Times cables as follows:

> My opinion is that the inquiry was a mistake, especially from the viewpoint of American policy and may possibly cause embarrassment later. It is believed here that Washington was drawn in by Downing Street, which, it is said, is trying to improve the British position in China by relieving pressure against them exclusively by giving all moves the color of international action.

This statement is all the more significant as the Times is the bearer of the "mother country" tradition in the United States.

The Shanghai strike and the rise of the national liberation movement that followed it has thus accomplished two highly important things:

1. It has made a definite cleavage between Britain and the United States in China.
2. It has resulted in American imperialism being exposed as another one of the robber groups.

There are remarkable advances in the period from May to October. In addition, the Chinese labor movement has established itself firmly, the national liberation movement is more than ever based on the workers and peasants and the membership of the Chinese Communist Party has tripled.

The wave of revolution in the Far East has not subsided but has changed into a powerful ground swell which will sweep imperialism on to the rocks with a force that will shatter it.

The German-Spanish Trade Agreement

By ARTHUR ROSENBERG (Berlin).

SHORTLY before Whitsuntide, the German reichstag agreed to accept the Spanish trade agreement after a tumultuous evening session at which the fate of the Luther government was at stake.

The German-Spanish trade relations were limited even before the war to Spain supplying Germany with colonial fruits and wine, and receiving German industrial goods in return. The world war and the economic confusion which followed, had led to the German-Spanish trade relations being almost completely broken off. Not until the summer of 1924 did the German and Spanish governments conclude a provisional trade agreement which was still awaiting confirmation by the German reichstag. The confirmation of this trade agreement, which was already in force was the subject round which the parliamentary conflict was waged.

THE trade agreement was concluded in such a form, that Spain carried all its points, while the German bourgeoisie had to yield all along the line. Spain forced the concession that Spanish wines and colonial fruits were to be imported into Germany at a ridiculously low customs duty. This was of course, a death blow to the German vine-growers. There are in Germany some hundreds of thousands of small vine-growers, especially in Wurttemburg and on the Rhine, who gain their precarious living under very difficult circumstances. For these vine-growers the wholesale import of cheap southern wines is nothing less than a catastrophe. Politically these vine-growers have up to now belonged to the right parties almost without exception: to the German national party and the right wing of the center. By the Spanish trade agreement, the German bourgeoisie has now sacrificed these vine-growers in order to drive a good industrial bargain.

Besides this, German industrial goods are dealt with very unfavorably in the Spanish trade agreement. The German industrialists did not succeed in obtaining the most favored nation terms; on the contrary, with regard to the most important German export goods such as coal, iron and steel good, machinery, locomotives, dyes and chemicals, English and French goods have in Spain a preferential tariff as compared with Germany. The Spanish duties are also in themselves very high.

GERMAN indsutry however had its good reasons for concluding the trade agreement with Spain and for promoting this treaty with such lively interest. German big industry is trying to regain the world markets thru wild protectionism. The object is to seclude the home market by high tariff walls and to exploit the native German consumers by exorbitant prices, and in this way to gain the strength to enter the world market with quite cheap, ruinously low competitive prices.

Thus the Spanish trade agreement represents on the part of Germany a dumping speculation of the worst sort:

In this situation, the Communist Party of Germany had no alternative as to the attitude it should take. The C. P. of Germany violently opposes every customs duty which increases the price of goods for the consumption of the masses. Wine however is in Germany no staple article of food of the people, but a luxury. The working class which, with the exception of only a few districts in Germany drinks no wine at all, has no direct interest as to how the price of wine are determined. For this reason it was a self-understood duty of the C. P. of Germany to stand up for the poor vine-growers who are about to be ruined by the Spanish trade agreement. Another reason why the C. P. of Germany felt compelled to reject the Spanish trade agreement, was that it is, without exception, opposed to the whole economic system which is based on high protective tariffs, undercutting and increasing the price of goods for the German consumers.

The Spanish trade agreement was a cause of great embarrassment to tho ruling parties of the right in Germany. The acceptance of the commercial treaty would of necessity call forth great embitterment among the vine-growers and the small peasantry as a whole. The German nationalists were in danger of losing their reputation as the party of agriculture. There were thus violent conflicts within the bourgeois parties between the industrial and the peasant interests. The trade agreement was rejected with a large majority even when put to the vote of the reichstag committee for trade agreements. Meanwhile however an intense counter-pressure set in on the part of the large bourgeoisie, and the Luther government threatened to resign if the German nationalists refused to accept the treaty.

WHAT then was the attitude of the S. P. of Germany? This so-called labor party behaved in its usual pitiable manner. As the faithful agent of the German large bourgeoisie, it declared that in this case it was in favor of the Spanish commercial treaty, but would only vote for it if the government parties did so. The German nationalists were not however allowed to get unpopular laws passed by the aid of the S. P. of Germany and to delight simultaneously in the joys of power and the joys of the opposition.

The situation was in every deed an embarrassing one for the Luther government. For, had the reichstag repudiated the Spanish trade agreement the Luther government would no longer have been in a position to conclude any treaties whatever with foreign states, since no one would have regarded the signatures of Herr Luther and Herr Stresemann as quite valid.

The day awaited with such anxious suspense arrived, the day when the question was to be decided by the reichstag in full session. The government parties made a declaration in common which, in tortuous language, expressed their agreement with the trade agreement. At the same time however, it was announced that a certain minority from the government parties would reject the agreement. The democrats, as a pro-capitalist party, declared themselves in favor of the agreement. Hilferding made an unprecedented speech on behalf of the S. P. of Germany. He gave a very detailed theoretical exposition of the present economic situation in Germany, he raved against the anticipated corn tariff, he emphasized that the German big bouregoisie had the intention of procuring for itself a special cartel profit thru its tariff and trade policy—and then he spoke in favor of the Spanish trade agreement under discussion, declaring however, that the S. P. of Germany would only accept the treaty if the government parties agreed to it.

THE Communist speakers pointed out the unprecedented contradiction which this attitude of the S. P. of Germany involved. The S. P. of Germany had dared to inveigh in theory against the cartel profit, and in practice it stood up for a trade agreement which simply embodied the efforts to obtain a cartel profit. The S. P. of Germany showed itself once more in this question to be the enemy of the workers and small peasants and the helpmate of German heavy industry.

The first voting took place. Almost 100 deputies voted against it, the Communists, the nationalists and those of the government majority who represented the rural districts. Another hundred abstained from voting; these were the courageous social democrats. The government majority for the treaty was not quite two hundred. Thus the Luther government was, in this decisive question, in the minority.

THIS made it evident that even in this reichstag, a majority of workers and peasants would be possible if those deputies who were elected as representatives of the proletariat and the small peasantry, would seriously act in the spirit of their constituents. But the social democrats are in reality no representatives of the workers, but agents of large capital, and the German nationalist agrarians are only friends of the small peasants in demagogic agitation, never however are they prepared to fight for the small peasantry their party friends, the great industrialists.

This mental attitude of the opponents of the government made it possible for Luther and Stresemann to achieve their object in spite of all difficulties. When the decisive final voting took place, the S. P. of Germany left the hall, and the government parties, holding in check those of their members who were in opposition, passed the bill.

The international proletariat ought however to be informed that the black white red Luther government which is supposed to be so hated by the S. P. of Germany, was, in a serious crisis, saved by the social democrats; for, had the S. P. of Germany openly voted against the agreement and insisted upon a division, many a bourgeois deputy, representing a rural district would have thought twice as to how he should cast his vote. No one can say whether in these circumstances Luther and Stresemann would have managed to hold their majority. The Spanish trade agreement thus showed the actual grouping of classes in Germany: the S. P. of Germany with the bourgeois parties on the side of capital, and the C. P. of Germany representing the interests of the workers and peasants.

THE battle waged round the Spanish trade agreement was, for the German government majority, the prelude to more serious things which are in course of preparation. The ruling black white red bourgeoisie of Germany will be compelled to drop one by one its national slogans of friendship for the middle classes and friendship for the peasantry. The disillusioned middle classes and the workers with confused nationalist ideas will oppose the system of Luther and Hindenburg with correspondingly increasing vigor. Social democracy on the other hand will be forced in every crisis of the kind to abandon its pretended fight against reaction and to take its stands openly for the so-called reaction, for the black white red capitalist government. This also will contribute to a clearing up of the situation.

The German-Spanish trade agreement has once more given the Communist Party the opportunity of fighting on the side of the poor peasantry against the coalition of the capitalists and the leaders of the Socialist Party of Germany, in a question of great significance for the small peasantry of Germany. In spite of all stabilisation of the currency, present-day Germany is pregnant with so many difficulties for the ruling class, with so many possibilities of a crisis, that a clever, clear-sighted and energetic Communist policy might be successful.

The left wing in the convention has introduced several resolutions, which are still in the hands of the committee on resolutions, but whose fate may be understood in advance by looking over the committee, which is composed of James Duncan, Matthew Woll, C. W. Perkins, D. A. Larger, A. A. Myrup, J. A. Franklin, John L. Lewis, Thomas L. Hughes, Dave Evans, P. J. Morrin, C. J. Lambert, John Coefield, James M. Lynch, Joe Weber and Wm. B. Fitzgerald.

Because of the visit and speech of A. A. Purcell, of Great Britain, the resolution on world trade union unity is in the foreground. After recounting the reasons for unity, it states:

World Trade Union Unity.

"Resolved that the American Federation of Labor pledges its support to the Anglo-Russian unity committee in its efforts to convoke a world conference of trade unions of every country for the purpose of establishing unity of the international trade union movement."

Another important resolution cites the overwhelming reasons for amalgamation of the craft unions and declares:

Amalgamation.

"Resolved that the officials of the American Federation of Labor are herewith instructed to call a series of conferences of representatives of the various unions in the respective industries for the purpose of launching movements to amalgamate these unions in the respective industries into single organizations, each of which shall cover an industry."

The resolution which clashes with the fake "non-parisan" political policy of the A. F. of L. officialdom is that favoring a labor party, which concludes with the following:

For a Labor Party.

"Resolved that the American Federation of Labor herewith favors the formation of a labor party based upon the trade unions and including as affiliated sections all other political organizations of a working class nature upon a local, state and national basis; and be it further resolved, that the executive council of the A. F. of L. stands instructed to work out plans for the formation of such a party."

That the A. F. of L. bureaucrats cannot dodge the issue raised by Soviet Russia's existence for eight years, is seen in a resolution on the subject of recognition, which provides:

Russian Recognition.

"Resolved that the American Federation of Labor in convention assembled declares itself in favor of the recognition of Soviet Russia, and for the establishment of full diplomatic and commercial relations between the United States and that country."

Nor is the fight being waged by the Trade Union Educational League thruout the country, to defeat the beguilements of those trade union officials that have widely propagandized the union membership for class collaboration schemes, not without an echo here in the form of a resolution which concludes:

Opposing Class Co-Operation.

"Resolved that the A. F. of L. convention repudiates the whole program of class collaboration, as exemplified by the "B. L O. Plan," labor banking, etc., and declares in favor of a militant policy of struggle against the employers."

To carry out this policy the resolution urges amalgamation and organization of the unorganized. The latter, however, is presented in a separate resolution which calls upon all affiliated organizations to launch an immediate campaign, to be initiated and supervised by a conference among the convention heads of the various international unions, and that central bodies and locals be instructed "to immediately establish active organization committees and start at once a vigorous campaign of organizing the unorganized."

The matter of the discrimination against the Negro workers, both in the unions and socially, is presented to the highest body of the A. F. of L. in a lengthy resolution which, after reciting the reasons why the interests of the white workers and the Negro workers are identical, states:

For Unionization of Negro Labor.

"Be it resolved: That the American Federation of Labor in its 45th annual convention assembled does hereby declare that any constitutional provision, rule or practice, whether of official policy or by tacit custom, by which workers are excluded from trade unions because of race or color, is contrary and antagonistic to the principles of and constitution of the American Federation of Labor and to the interests of the masses of workers."

After providing the various organizational steps to make the spirit of the resolution effective, it closes:

Fight for Social Equality.

"Resolved that the most effective and sincere manner by which the A. F. of L. can ensure a response to its efforts to organize Negro workers, is to take up in an aggressive and wholehearted manner the cause and defense of the Negro against legal and social discrimination and abuses, such as lynching, segregation, disfanchisement, etc.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Oct. 9.—The American Federation of Labor in convention here today went on record as favoring greater ease in amending the United States constitution, and urged an amendment empowering congress and the various states to levy and collect taxes on securities that are now tax-exempt.

The recommendation, which was adopted, read "instead of making it more difficult to amend the constitution, it should be made easier, and this federation will oppose all legislation making such amendment more difficult."

Another recommendation adopted was that a model bill affecting the question of convict labor be prepared and submitted to the legislatures of all states "so that injurious competition between free labor and convict labor will be prevented and yet permit convicts to be employed with compensation."

The convention also went on record in opposing Sunday "blue laws," which were declared to "interfere with personal liberty, depriving the people of their right to spend Sunday as they please."

Two Clothing Workers Slugged and Arrested by Joint Board Heads

(By a Worker Correspondent)

NEW YORK CITY, Oct. 9.—Sam Robschinsky and Louis Nelson, members of Local 5 of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers Union, who were arrested Sept. 7, were today fined $20 or five days in jail.

The arrest of Robschinsky and Nelson took place at a meeting called by Hillman's appointed executive board, which was held at the Amalgamated Temple, Brooklyn. These two workers together with others were set upon and badly beaten up by the hired thugs of Hillman. They were badly beaten that they had to be attended to for their bruises by the ambulance surgeons that were called.

They were then taken to the police station where charges of "disorderly conduct" were preferred against them.

In court they were held in $1.500 bail each. The presiding judge would accept nothing but cash, altho property was offered. The case was postponed four times.

This morning when the case was called again, Abraham Miller, sec'y.-treasurer of the New York joint board and also general executive board member of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers and Secretary Sam Levy testified against the defendants.

The meeting which the two workers attended, was a general local membership meeting held for the nomination of officials of the New York joint board. All members of Local No. 5 were excluded from the meeting. Only gangsters claiming to belong to that union and that were known to the joint board were admitted.

Union Membership Increases in Moscow

MOSCOW, Oct. 9.—On January 1, 1925, there were 931,105 members in the trade unions of Moscow and the Moscow gubernia, as compared with 910,098 members in the previous year. This means an increase of 2.3%.

The trade unions have established 436 clubs in the Moscow gubernia, 2,580 lectures and 440 excursions have been organized. There are 451 sports circles, with a membership of 35,258.

WORKERS PARTY CANDIDATES TO APPEAR ON NEW YORK MUNICIPAL BALLOT IN NOVEMBER ELECTION

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—The Workers Party candidates are on the ballot. By the securing of 8,500 signatures in working class sections of the city, a full city ticket as well as many local candidates were put on the ballot. Great interest was aroused in the working class quarters of New York not only for the Workers Party ticket as such, but for the emphasis placed by the party for a united labor ticket as well.

Benjamin Gitlow goes on the election ballot to be voted on Tuesday, Nov. 3, as candidate for mayor of the city of New York; William W. Weinstone as candidate for comptroller and Charles Krumbein as candidate for the presidency of the board of alderman. Other candidates whose names will be before the voters, thanks to the enthusiastic petition drive of the party members are: For Manhattan: Edward M. Martin, sheriff; Arthur S. Leeds, district attorney; Frank J. Van Praet, county clerk; Rose Pastor Stokes, registrar; Alexander Trachtenberg, borough president; Rebecca Grecht, 8th aldermatic district; Moissaye J. Olgin, 17th aldermatic district; Carl Brodsky, 8th aldermatic district; Julius Codkind, 17th aldermatic district.

For the Bronx: Leo Hofbauer, sheriff; Bette Robbins, district attorney; Abe Epstein, county clerk; Noah London, registrar; Joseph Manley, borough president; Elias Marks, 4th aldermatic district; Charles Zimmerman, 5th aldermatic district; Sam Darcy, 7th aldermatic district; Joseph Boruchowitz, 25th aldermatic district; Aaron Gross, 29th aldermatic district.

For Brooklyn: Morris Rosen, sheriff; Margaret Undjus, registrar; Edward Lindgren, borough president; Samuel Nesin, 14th aldermatic district; Bertram D. Wolfe, 23rd aldermatic district; John D. Masso, 35th aldermatic district; Boris Lipshitz, 50th aldermatic district.

The Workers Party, it is hoped, will not have to spend so much energy to the collection of signatures for putting its candidates on the ballots in New York many more times.

Next year, in the gubarnatorial election, the party needs to secure only 25,000 votes in the entire state in order to be permanently recognized as a "Regular Party" and to go on the ballot automatically. Until such time, however, it will be considered as an independent nominating group and will have to make one more petition drive next year for governor.

Housewives Learning Means to Aid Family in Class Struggle

NEW YORK CITY, Oct. 9.—The women of New York are helping their husbands picket when they are on strike and intercepting scabs at their homes and raising hell with them. But what's the use of getting their husbands a raise in wages when the cost of living skyrockets immediately afterwards?

So they hit upon a good scheme to keep prices down. Up to last week the price of eggs was so high that a workingman's family could not look upon a fresh egg, let alone eat one. So the wives of the workers up in the Bronx and in Lower Manhattan got together thru their organizations and decided to boycott all eggs until the prices come down within reach of their pocketbooks so that the workers' families would not have to eat continually morgue eggs.

According to an official statement from the United States bureau of agriculture, there were in cold storage on September 25, 1925, 8,947,000 cases of eggs. Yet these eggs are selling in this city at prices that range from 80c per dozen to $1.10 per dozen. Many dealers are selling cold storage eggs at $1.25 per dozen.

Agricultural Student Roster Reveals More City Than Farm Boys

URBANA, Ill., Oct. 9—Enrollment of new men in the college of agriculture at the University of Illinois shows an increase of more than 25% compared with a year ago, and the total registration a slight increase over a year ago. This is the first time an increase has been shown in six years.

Supporting the theory that the farmer raises his son to become a lawyer, and the lawyer raises his son to become a farmer, Dean Mumford says not many students from the farm take up agriculture.

Statistical Background of the Agrarian Question in the United States

By EARL R. BROWDER.

Second Article.

WHAT are the class relations in the agrarian population within the different divisions? What special problems are presented by each agricultural division? The following is an attempt to find a rough approximation on the basis of the 1920 census. It must be remembered that 1920 was a peak year in agriculture, and that since then there has been a decided shift downward. These figures will give us, however, a basis for later examination of the changes since 1920.

There are nine divisions upon which the U. S. census is based. These are: New England (comprising Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut); the middle Atlantic (comprising New York, New Jersey,* Pennsylvania); the east north central (comprising Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin); the west north central (comprising Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas); the south Atlantic (comprising Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia, Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida); the east south central (comprising Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama, Mississippi); the west south central, (comprising Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Texas); the mountain division (comprising Montana, Idaho, Wyoming, Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona, Utah, Nevada); and the Pacific division (comprising Washington, Oregon, California).

Divisonal Differences.

SHARP differences manifest themselves in agriculture as between the various divisions. The first glimpse of this condition may be received by a comparison, by divisions, of the percentage of acreage, of population, and of rural population. This is as follows:

	Percentage of total
Division	Acreage	Population	Rural
New England	2.08	7.00	2.99
Middle Atlantic	3.36	21.06	10.87
East North Central	8.26	20.32	16.39
W. North Central	17.18	11.87	15.21
South Atlantic	9.05	13.23	18.78
East South Central	6.04	8.41	13.42
W. South Central	14.45	9.69	14.15
Mountain	28.89	3.16	4.13
Pacific	10.70	5.27	4.08

Let us, very briefly, summarize the most important points of comparison contained in the above table:

(1) The first three divisions (14 states), containing but 13.70 per cent of total acreage of the U. S., have almost half of the total population, or 48.38 per cent. Within this same area, however, are less than one-third of the rural population, or 30.25 per cent. This is the industrial area, in which the city completely overshadows the farm.

(2) The west north central, containing the 7 wheat states, shows the most even distribution of total and rural population in proportion to acreage, with the preponderance of population in agriculture. This area produces almost half of the total wheat crop of the United States.

(3) The three southern divisions (16 states) have a ratio of urban and rural population almost exactly the reverse of the first three divisions, spread over a little more than twice as much territory. With 29.54 per cent of total acreage, they contain 31.33 per cent of total population, of which the rural population amounts to 46.35 per cent, or almost half of the total for the United States.

(4) The last two divisions (11 states) are the "wide open spaces" of wild west fiction, and while the frontier is gone, yet this area, comprising 39.59 per cent of the total acreage, has but 8.43 per cent of the total population, which includes 8.21 per cent of rural population.

(5) The wide differences between these main groups, and the differences between the various divisions, indicate the extremely inharmonious and uneven development of agriculture, the most important aspects of which require further data to develop.

New England Division.

THIS group of six states, extremely important in the social and political life of America, is witnessing a degeneration of agriculture. The actual number of farms declined, between 1910 and 1920, from 188,802 to 156,564, a decrease of 17 per cent. The percentage of rural population decreased from 23.7 to 20.8, which is the smallest proportion of any division in the U. S. While the average size of farms is almost the same in 1920 as in 1850, (108.5 acres and 109.6 acres), yet the average number of acres improved dropped sharply, from 66.5 in 1850 to 39.1 in 1920. The main line consists of dairy products. The principal product in addition to dairy is hay and forage, which occupies from 77 to 91 per cent of acreage; only one state in this division has a crop of greater value than hay—tobacco in Connecticut, with 5.9 per cent of acreage, produces 43.2 per cent of total crop values, while hay, with 77.3 per cent of acreage produces 30.8 per cent of values.

The status of persons engaged in agriculture, classified by tenure of land, and approximate numbers of each category, is:

Workers	99,000
Tenants	12,000
Mortgaged farmers	53,000
Owners full	92,000
Total	256,000

The percentage of workers is almost the same as for the country as a whole. The percentage of tenants much smaller, (about one-fifth) while that of mortgaged farmers is more than tiwce as large. This is another reflection of the stagnant condition of agriculture in New England, where the outstanding change for generations has been merely a decline, rather than any radical change.

The racial and national composition of the agrarian population in New England also differs from other divisions. While a larger proportion are native-born whites than the general average for the United States (81.8 per cent compared with 75 per cent) at the same time the proportion of foreign-born whites is twice as high (18 per cent compared with 9 per cent), both these groups being higher than the general average because of the almost complete absence of Negro farmers in New England while Negroes make up 14 per cent of the general total.

The number engaged in agriculture is thus seen to be exceedingly small (one-quarter million out of total three and a quarter million "gainfully occupied"), as compared with mechanical and manufacturing industries with more than one and a half million, while transportation alone engaged 215,000 persons in New England.

There are more than 53,000 farms (over one-third of total) that are less than 50 acres in size. Of these about half are less than 20 acres each. Over 29,000 farms report no horses; almost 27,000 report no cattle; over 70,000 report no swine. The average number of horses to the farm (averaging only those farms which have horses) is 2.4, as against an average for the entire country of 4.2. The same figure for swine shows 4.5 per farm against 12.2. This must be offset, to some extent, by the higher value of livestock, per head in New England. The value of implements, per farm, is lower than in any other division except the southern, being $590. The same thing is true of value of livestock, which averages $1,042 per farm.

More than one-third of the number of mortgages are upon the smaller farms. It may also be assumed that those farms without livestock are principally among the smaller ones. Upon the basis of these figures, the category of poor farmers, those who are so deeply indebted for the "property" which they hold as to be practically propertyless, and whose means of production are limited to a few tools and their own labor power, can be estimated at 35,000.

Of the remaining 122,000, we can assign 57,000 to the position of "middle" farmers, possessing the average amount of farm property but in an economically precarious position; and 65,000 as well-to-do and rich farmers, who possess enuf property, implements, livestock, etc., to feel secure in their livelihood. The latter figure is the number of farms of 100 acres and over, whose implements and livestock average in value, according to size of farm, from $2,000 to $9,000 per farm. Of these, over 40,000 are sufficiently well-off to own automobiles, while 24,000 have gas or electric lights installed in the farm houses. The proportion of farms with water piped into the houses is larger in New England, by far, than in any other division, totaling 74,954. This last item, which in many states would be almost decisive in classifying the farms involved as "well-to-do," carries not so much weight in New England on account of the swiftly declining condition of agriculture and the fact that this territory is so much longer settled than the rest of America, and is hemmed in so tightly by industrial communities which press their commodities even into the declining agricultural districts.

Classification of agrarian population in New England, in terms of our original thesis, may be tentatively summed up as follows (in round numbers):

Workers	99,000
Poor farmers	35,000
Middle farmers	57,000
Well-to-do farmers	65,000
Total	256,000

Applying the same tests, and examining the same relative figures, for the other divisions, it will be necessary for economy of space to sum up each division more briefly, noting only the outstanding differences in each division.

Middle Atlantic Division.

WITH a total population of 22¼ milllions, the middle Atlantic division has a rural population of something over 5½ million, of whom 660 thousand are "gainfully occupied" in agriculture. Of this later figure, approximately 425 thousand are operating farms. In an area comprising but 3.36 per cent of the whole of the U. S., this division contains 21.06 per cent of the population. Slightly less than 3 per cent of the total population are actively engaged in tilling the soil. (Contrast this with the division showing the greatest percentage, east south central, with more than 20 per cent).

This is chiefly a dairy-farm division, with the next most important products being hay, potatoes, tobacco. Agriculture here is fitting itself to the production of those things required by the cities in a fresh and constant stream, and to such auxiliary and subsidiary crops as fit into such a scheme.

Other pertinent items, summarized, are: Number of farms, decreasing (more than 43,000 farms abandoned between 1910-1920; acres per farm, no change (most of abandoned farms are small, so average of those remaining shows slight increase); tenantry, 20 per cent, decreasing between 1910-1920; foreign-born, about 12 per cent, and increasing proportion; Negroes, very few (only 1,536 in 1920); average equipment, buildings, $3,153 (largest of all divisions), machinery $845 (exceeded only by west north central and Pacific); livestock $1,384 (exceeded by four divisions).

Approximate numbers in each category, according to our classification of farmers, would be (in round numbers):

Workers	235,0000
Poor Farmers	70,000
Middle Farmers	104,000
Well-to-do	251,000
Total	660,000

East North Central Division.

THIS division approximates closest to the general average for the entire country, and at the same time presents the most rapidly changing conditions; for the census period 1910-1920. In 1920 it had 21½ millions population, of which 39.2 per cent was rural, as compared with 1910 when it had 18¼ millions of which 47.3 per cent were rural. With an increase of 3¼ millions in the total, the rural population actually decreased by 200 thousand. With 8.28 per cent of the country's total acreage, it contained 20.32 per cent of the population as a whole and 16.39 per cent of the rural population. A little less than 8 per cent of the total population are actively engaged in agriculture, numbering 1,633,790 of whom 1,084,744 are farm operators.

Dairy farming is the backbone of this division; the two largest crops are corn and hay, with wheat and oats next in order. Potatoes, minor cereals, tobacco, play a smaller part. Poultry and eggs contribute a considerable sum to the total production. This division presents a more diversified and balanced production than the others, but here also can be seen at work the process of specialization. Dairy farming is becoming more and more the dominant element.

Other items: Number of farms, decreasing (38,743 less in 1920 than in 1910); acres per farm, increasing (large farms increasing in number, small farms going out of business); tenantry, increasing (27 per cent in 1910, 28 per cent in 1920); foreign-born, 13.3 per cent in 1920, decreased from 16.7 per cent in 1910; Negroes, very few and decreasing. Average equipment—buildings, $2,666; machinery, $725; livestock, $1,403; number of farmers' automobiles, 513,000.

A Worker Describes Progress of Shop Nucleus in Ford Plant

We herewith print excerpts from a report by a comrade functioning in a shop nucleus in one of the Ford plants in Detroit. This report is very instructive. It shows precisely what can be done to bring the workers closer to our party, and make our party a living political body.

The comrade writes as follows:

Regarding my experience in the shop nuclei, let me say that I have learnt many things and adapted myself accordingly. When the subscription drive for the DAILY WORKER was on I have taken as many as 15 copies to the shop for my mates to read. I did not have to lose any of my sleep looking up my prospects. They were working with me every day. I would speak to them in regard to some article, and explain it to them during the noon hour. No time lost. If nothing could be done I proceeded with the others. In the past a name was turned over and we would go and visit the worker with hopes of getting him interested to subscribe for the paper. Many times he would not be at home and we would try again.

How the Work is Done.

The comrades who are not members of the nucleus claim that we expose ourselves to the masters, by our membership in the nucleus. From experiences, I find just the reverse. From conversations in the shop you can easily find out who is who, let the other fellow talk, and find out who he is. When I bring a member to the nucleus branch, I know who I am bringing in. As before, no one knew him. All we were interested in was that he obligate himself to the principles of the Party. For example, we have an application from one who works in the shop, and he has been a member in the party in Indianapolis. We have a committee elected who can find out whether he was a member in Indianapolis and at the same time we got his location where he works, and go thru the department once in a while to see him, without his knowing it. The committee is satisfied, but will not give him any important work and he can't do any damage. But a Communist must expect danger. He must prepare for the worst, for the real revolutionary crisis is not here yet. The fact is that they do know that I am a Communist, but they never caught me. . . The general foreman knowing that I was well read and supporting Soviet Russia, would ask me some questions regarding some "red" news in the paper. But I have been wise enough not to be caught.

In all of my fifteen years of labor movement activity, I never saw the comrades take so much interest in having the papers distributed at their respective plants as this May Day. In the past, the comrades went from house to house where they were unmolested with their work. But this year, especially at the Ford shops, with all the police interference the comrades went at it in a revolutionary spirit. They were going to have their shop mates read the paper, and they were interested to have their shop organized. We have learnt a few things from that May Day distribution and will try to do better at the next distribution. Only a few comrades wanted to distribute at their shop; the comrades from one shop worked with the papers at another shop, so as not to expose themselves to the master.

Literature Distribution

One of the Ford plant nuclei distributed five thousand copies at the shop gates, and at midnight distributed 1,500 more, to the night workers, as they were leaving the shop. This shop nucleus had, at the time, a membership of fourteen members. But it was these fourteen members who distributed 6,500 DAILY WORKERS out of a total of 20,000 ordered by the entire district for the occasion. At the Ford plant shop nucleus, 3,000 special May Day issues of the DAILY WORKER were distributed. Three of the comrades were arrested while doing this party work. One of the comrades was badly beaten up by the sheriff because he refused to obey in answering the questions put to him. All of the comrades were released when they came up for trial.

These nuclei are now taking steps to reorganize themselves so as to include all party members working in the various departments who are still members of language branches. As soon as this reorganization is completed, steps will be taken to propose a special shop nucleus paper for the Ford workers.

The organizing secretary of this shop nucleus writes as follows:

The nucleus has taken steps in assisting in the reorganization work. The organizer has been given full power to appoint comrades to go before the federation branches, from which they have been transferred, and get the eligible comrades to transfer into the nucleus. For example, one or two comrades who have been transferred from the Russian branch will go to the Russian branch and convince them, in their language, why they must join the shop nucleus. In this way we expect results quickly, enlarging our nucleus and at the same time, it will be educational in the reorganization work, because these comrades who will go before the branch meetings will deal with their experiences in the shop nucleus. The nucelus needs more members to carry out the work mapped out for it, and will do all it can to get comrades transferred from the various branches. At the same time, the organizing of new members will continue.

In my next report I hope to be able Our struggle is bitter. But as Communists, we will fight until our objective is realized, the Communist society.

RESOLUTION PASSED BY CHICAGO MEMBERSHIP MEETING, OCT. 7

THE Chicago, District 8, membership meeting of the Workers (Communist) Party, section of the Comintern, after listening to the report of Comrade Ruthenberg, the representative of the Central Executive Committee, declares:

1. The resolutions of the parity commission unanimously adopted by the fourth national convention of our party, lay down a correct basis for the work of the party members among the masses, thru which alone our party can grow into a mass Communist Party. We declare our wholehearted support to the resolution on the immediate tasks of the party, on trade union work, on the labor party campaign, imperialism, work among women, agricultural work and other major campaigns of our party.

2. We welcome the action taken by the national convention for the liquidation of Loreism in our party. Our party has already reached the point of development where opportunistic deviations by leading members can no longer be tolerated. In the expulsion of Lore and several of his aides from the party and in the removal of Comrade Askeli from the editorial board of the Finnish organ, Tyomies, the national convention indicated that the fight against opportunism will be intensified in our party. We pledge our wholehearted support to this campaign.

3. The resolution on the Bolshevization of our party marks a new step forward for the American Communist Party. The thorogoing reorganization of our party on the basis of shop nucle and the development of a centralized apparatus mark necessary and significant steps toward the Bolshevik centralization of our party and lay a sound basis for the party's carrying on real Communist work. We pledge ourselves energetically to take up the campaign for the reorganization in the least possible time.

Comintern Decision.

4. The last resolution of the Communist International sent to our Fourth National Convention by the presidium of the Communist International declaring that, "it has finally become clear that the Ruthenberg group is more loyal to the decisions of the Communist International and stands closer to its views," lays the basis for the unification and development of our party. We declare our acceptance of the last resolution of the Comintern dealing with our party and that we will loyally support the Central Executive Committee elected on the basis of this decision in carrying on and intensifying the work of the party.

5. This membership meeting of District No. 8 declares that the interests of the party demand the sincerest and most tireless executions of all decisions of the Communist International regarding our party. This is particularly necessary when Lore is openly working to discredit the Communist International and its decisions and to destroy the possibilities for building up a powerful section of the Communist International. Especially at this moment, therefore, any attempt to question the character of or to discredit the latest Communist International decision or in any way to interfere with its successful execution would be playing into the hands of the Loreites and other enemies of the Comintern, would be a blow struck against the Communist International and its American section—the Workers (Communist) Party.

6. The division between the group of Comrade Foster and Comrade Cannon in the former majority over the question of their respective attitudes toward the Communist International decision, indicates the importance of the question of the attitude of our party and its members toward the Communist International decision and is further proof of the crisis our party is going thru in the process of Bolshevization.

Approve Convention.

7 We declare our approval of the unanimous decision of the national convention to accept and carry out without reservation the last resolution which the Comintern cabled to the fourth convention of our party.

8. The Chicago District 8 membership meeting declares its fullest endorsement of the Central Executive Committee and strongly urges all members to forget their past factional differences; to drop all factional strife, and to rally as one solidified, united Communist Party for new constructive activities for Communist campaigns, under the leadership of the Central Executive Committee chosen by the Fourth National Convention of our party.

When that argument begins at lunch time in your shop tomorrow—show them what the DAILY WORKER says about it.

LITHUANIAN SECTION CONFERENCE OVERWHELMINGLY PLEDGES SUPPORT TO CENTRAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

BRROKLYN, N. Y., Oct. 9.—The conference of the Lithuanian Section, Workers (Communist) Party of America, held here today, after hearing the report of the representative of the Central Executive Committee, William W. Weinstone, and after considerable discussion, voted 44 against 1 to accept the report, and the following resolution which was introduced by Comrade Weinstone.

"The national convention of the Lithuanian Section of the Workers Party, having heard the report of the Central Executive Committee representative on the situation in the party, and the immediate tasks confronting the Workers Party and the Lithuanian Section, declares its approval of the report.

2. It expresses approval of the decisions of the fourth national convention in the Bolshevization and reorganization of the party, the labor party activities, trade union work, agrarian, women, youth, Negro and other activities.

3. The convention wholeheartedly endorses the expulsion of Lore from the party and the removal of Askeli from the Finnish organ Tyomies as a demonstration of the fact that the party can no longer tolerate such opportunistic elements of Lore in the party when they continuously pervert our principles and they adopt an attitude of open warfare agains tthe party and the Communist International.

4. The convention expresses its agreement with the decision of the Communist International regarding the leadership of the party which was unanimously adopted at the national convention.

5. This decision declares that the "Ruthenberg group is more loyal to the Communist International and closer to its views." The convention declared that the former majority comrades carried out this decision of the Communist International at the national convention in a responsible Communist manner and calls upon all comrades to carry out this decision in the manner of loyal followers of the Communist International.

2. The convention pledges its full support to the Central Executive Committee and Communist International in the great tasks assigned to it by the national convention.

After the resolution was passed, the question of reorganization was taken up. Comrades Bimba and Andruils spoke on this vital question and it was evident that every delegate present understands the importance of the reorganization, and is ready to participate with all energy in this important task.

The report of the bureau was unanimously accepted, and every important question was discussed fully by the delegates.

The conference was lively and laid a sound basis for concerted and increased efforts on the part of the members of the Lithuanian section of our party.

Factory Workers to Receive Preference at Health Resorts

MOSCOW, Oct. 9.—In accordance with the directions of the All-Russian Trade Union Council at least 80 per cent of the general number of patients being sent this year to the health resorts of the Crimea and the Caucasus, will be factory workers. The remaining accommodations will be given to office workers, responsible officials, etc. The central administration of social insurance grants about 200 rubles for each patient, and the average health resort treatment is reckoned at 5 to 6 weeks.

The available places are distributed among the various trade unions. Thus, for instance, the Railwaymen's Union has been allotted 570 places, which means that about 2,000 railwaymen will have the benefit of health resort treatment thruout the season.

The Moscow trade unions send several thousand people to the health resorts in the vicinity of Moscow. In addition, about 60,000 Moscow workers will have an opportunity of spending their holidays in rest homes.

The Anthracite Strike, A John L. Lewis Strike

BEN GITLOW.

THE strike in the anthracite has been turned into a war against the militant members of the United Mine Workers of America who are supporting the program of the Progressive Miners' Committee. In Scranton the largest city in the anthracite region, four militant miners are behind prison bars. They are Patrick Toohey, a young fighting miner, who defied President Lewis at the tri-district convention, which was held before the strike was called and formulated the demands for the recent strike; August Valentine, a young miner, who has been in the thick and thin of the miners' struggle in West Virginia; Alex Zarek, a big-hearted Russian, who wants to see the strike conducted in the interest of the miners, and Alex Reid, secretary of the Progressive Miners' Committee, a militant miner, who spent 29 years in the bituminous fields digging coal.

WHY have these militant miners been arrested? Only when one knows the real situation can an answer be given to the question. 158,000 miners have been called out on strike in the anthracite region. No one knows better than John L. Lewis, the appointed president of the United Mine Workers, that there is no genuine strike in the anthracite. The present stoppage was desired by the coal operators. J. L. Lewis just helped along the scheme of the operators. The coal operators are not making any attempt to mine coal. There is absolutely no need for it. John L. Lewis knows this also. The strike has been called for the express purpose of giving the coal operators an opportunity to utilize the cry about a coal shortage to force the sale of inferior grades of coal that has been accumulated in the millions of tons in the last two years. This coal which in normal times is practically worthless because no market can be found for it, is now due to the strike, being sold at exhorbitant prices. The operators are coining millions of dollars while the miners are starving. The operators are very thankful indeed to John L. Lewis, because in addition to affording them an opportunity to sit back and pocket big profits, J. L. Lewis has taken care that the properties of the operators shall not be damaged during the suspension. He has made an agreement with the operators to keep on the job the 10,000 maintenance men whose business it is to see that the mine properties are repaired and kept in good shape. The keeping of the maintenance men on the job is a conspiracy on the part of Lewis and the operators to prevent any effective struggle on the part of the miners against the operators. It gives an opportunity for the coal operators to continue the suspension for as many months as it is necessary to dispose of their surplus stocks. The operators are not concerned about the starvation of the miners that is taking place now because the store keepers have decided not to grant credit to striking miners and John L. Lewis who will not starve and whose only object is to sell out the miners, will hypocritically assume a fighting attitude and permit the starving of the miners to continue.

FOR what consideration has John L. Lewis called this strike? Only two demands actually were presented to the operators. One for the check-off and the other for a ten per cent increase in wages. That Lewis will not insist on an increase in wages is apparent to every one acquainted with the anthracite strike situation.

Lewis has entered into a conspiracy with the coal operators at the expense of the miners, the coal operators to make millions in additional profits and the Lewis machine in return to get the check off. That is why there are no picket lines around the mines. That is why no strike meetings are being held. That is why there is no rank and file strike committee in the field. That is why there are no strike headquarters thruout the district.

The militant progressive miners, however, knowing the deplorable conditions confronting the miners in the anthracite have started a campaign to turn this strike into a genuine struggle in the interest of the miners. They have raised the slogan of a minimum living wage for all miners regardless of output. They have raised the issue of a six-hour day and five-day week for the anthracite miners; they have raised the issue of the labor party; they have started a move to make the struggle effective by getting all the maintenance men to quit their posts and join the striking miners; they have raised the slogan against a check off settlement; that there can be no settlement without wage increases, and many other demands of vital importance to the miners.

NUMEROUS meetings were held by the Progressive Miners' Committee and the Workers Party, which is supporting the progressive demands. Leaflets with these demands have reached miners in the thousands thruout the district. The workers were beginning to seriously consider the proposals presented to them. The operators and the reactionary officials of the United Mine Workers became alarmed. The capitalist press began to scream against the reds. The authorities began to smash and break up meetings and the reactionary corrupt officials headed by Cappellini, president of District No. 1, the largest district of the United Mine Workers in the anthracite with a membership of 70,000 raised a howl against the militants and insisted upon having the meetings of the progressives and the Workers Party broken up and those responsible for them prosecuted. The reactionary officials of the United Mine Workers are in back of the persecution of the progressive elements because they realize that the progressive movement must not be allowed to get a foothold if they are to put thru their deal without any objections from the rank and file in selling out the strike for the check off.

Let us examine some of the outrageous activities of these corrupt officials. When a hearing was held in Scranton on Monday afternoon on the arrest of the four militant miners, the following officials of the United Mine Workers of America were in the court room: D. W. Davis, International representative of the United Mine Workers of America, and James Gleason and John Boylan of the executive board of District No. 1.

MR. GLEASON made a vicious talk against the militant miners under arrest. He said the men came for the purpose of disrupting the miners' union. He informed the court that Patrick Toohey, who had succeeded in joining the miners' union, had been relieved of his membership card in the morning. (This, in spite of the fact that Toohey has been a good loyal member of the organization for the last eight years.) This is a gem from the lips of Gleason, the labor leader of the miners. In the courtroom against members of his own organization, Mr. Gleason made the following statement: "These men are seeking to undermine the principle of our country's constitution and the government itself. There is no room for any of them in any organization of the United Mine Workers, whose constitution provides that any man known to hold membership in a radical order shall be dropped from the rolls of the union." This Gleason who is doing everything in his power to send fellow miners to prison because they are fighting in the interests of the workers wanted to know from the authorities who was financing them in their nefarious work. Gleason is a good Lewis lieutenant and his sentiments were approved by the other two reactionary Lewis officials, who were in the courtroom to use their influence in railroading innocent loyal and devoted members of the United Mine Workers to prison for a long time. Better lickspittles and flunkies than these the operators cannot find to do their dirty work.

NOW listen to another high official of the the United Mine Workers and a cog in the Lewis machine and you will believe you are listening to an agent provocateur of the coal companies and the department of justice. This time Mr. James A. McAndrew, secretary of District No. 9, of the anthracite region, makes a statement as follows:

"After carefully reading the literature before me, I come to the conclusion that the demands stated in the circular are greatly in excess of the demands presentd by the United Mine Workers and that the attitude expressed to John L. Lewis is very unfriendly. In their message to the miners, the reds intimated that Lewis is not to be trusted and warn them to be very careful that he does not double cross them when an agreement is reached between the miners and the operators. This action itself is believed to be sufficient proof that the work is that of radicals who, if apprehended will be punished to the full extent of the law and charged with conspiracy to destroy the mine workers' union. The members of the union have been warned to pay no attention to the circulars and to treat them as being extraneous to their organization."

PAT TOOHEY

This McAndrew wants to punish loyal miners to the full extent. He wants the authorities to arrest them and to send them to prison for a long term of years if they refuse to remain quiet when John L. Lewis sells out the interests of the miners to the coal operators.

I HAVE received a letter from a worker in the anthracite region, which is very illuminating. He writes as follows:

"The situation has changed here considerably since you left. We can no longer secure permits for meetings of the progressive miners. The union officials have definitely stated that they will start prosecution against any miner or any worker who is caught distributing the Workers Party leaflet or any leaflet where the Lewis machine is attacked as treacherous, will be arrested by the authorities and prosecuted."

This letter comes from District No. 9 and is in line with the declaration made by Mr. James A. McAndrew.

Lewis is now in Scranton. He is to confer with a committee representing the chamber of commerce over the possibility of settling the strike. In Scranton the United Mine Workers' reactionary officialdom is prosecuting the progressive miners. Lewis will try to settle the strike for the check off. The check off will be a betrayal of the strike because it will in no way better the conditions for the anthracite coal miners. Thru these persecutions Lewis may be able at this time to betray the miners. The miners, however, when they will return to the mines if the strike is immediately settled, will find that they are the victims of two groups—the exploiters and the corrupt reactionary Lewis officialdom. They will discover that in spite of the strike, conditions for them will have become worse. They will then remember the fight that the progressive miners who were railroaded by the Lewis machine to prison, made for them. They will look towards the progressive movement and the progressive movement in the United Mine Workers will grow in the anthracite districts. If Lewis cannot settle the strike immediately, then the progressives will be able to fight back the persecutions and definately establish the movement for a real militant fighting organization of the rank and file among the miners.

THE actions of the Lewis machine in the anthracite, their treacherous activities against the workers who slave in the mines is very apparent in the anthracite strike. The miners must organize to get rid of officials who will bring union fighters before capitalist judges for the purpose of sending them to capitalist penitentiaries. The miners must get rid of the corruption and treachery of the Lewis machine. There must be no more J. L. Lewis strikes in the mine industry.

This can be achieved by building up the Progressive Miners' Committee. A powerful Progressive Miners' Committee of the rank and file will prevent agent provocateurs of the Lewis machine from sending to prison Toohey, Valentine, Reid and Zarek. A big progressive movement will drive Lewis and his gang from the miners' union and will put the real fighters for the miners, the progressives and militants in charge of the organization.

The British Trade Union Congress at Scarborough

By CARL BRANNIN.

THE British labor movement is definitely swinging to the left. Indications of this were seen when the miners, railwaymen and transport workers joined hands on a certain Friday last July to protect the miners from a wage cut and forced the Baldwin government to subsidize the mining industry for nine months rather than make the workers suffer for the greed of the operators. This "Red Friday" demonstration of working class solidarity announced to the world that the limit had been reached—that British labor was of a single mind to stand together and fight. The recent (Sept. 7-12) Trade Union Congress at Scarborough, gave definite confirmation of this new orientation. The 726 delegates representing nearly 4½ million organized workers, met in an atmosphere of high morale over the setback given the employing interests.

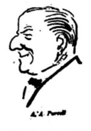
THE opening speech of Pres. A. B. Swales seemed to set the pace for the congress, but what is really true, is that he was only voicing the sentiments of the rank and file, when he hit straight from the shoulder at the whole capitalist system:

"There are surely signs over the whole field of industry which indicate that vast and revolutionary changes must take place in industrial structure to meet the changed conditions. Men and women are not going to remain content with a condition of society which condemns millions of human beings to want the necessaries of life, while as a result of education and knowledge they know too well and see quite clearly that nature in its bounteousness can supply all their legitimate needs by the proper organization of society upon a basis of collective ownership.

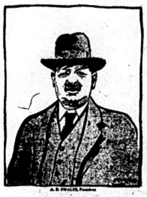
"INDUSTRIES are in an appalling condition and the employing class stand aghast at their own handiwork. For almost a century and a half theirs has been the task to apply the economic policy of industry. Deny it as they may the present chaos is of their making, for they consistently and persistently denied the workers the slightest measure of control. Having produced these conditions, the possessing class are afraid of their own production and now they cry to the unions: 'Let us come together; sit down with us and examine the present condition of trade and commerce. . . . See if we cannot together save our system from tottering to its last fall.' Many of our good comrades who in the days gone by, taught us to believe there was no remedy other than the abolition of capitalism seem afraid, now that the system is collapsing, and appeal for a united effort to patch up the system with the aid of the present possessing class.

"THOSE who believe that a new order of society is inevitable before we can remedy the existing evils—and to which in this address I have directed attention—cannot do other than rejoice that at last there are clear indications of a world movement rising in revolt and determined to shake off the shackles of wage slavery. Just as our people have passed out of slavedom into serfdom, and out of serfdom into wagedom, so will they finally pass out of wagedom into freedom.

"The new phase of development, which is world wide, has entered upon the next and probably the last stage of revolt. It is the duty of all members of the working class to so solidify their movement that, come when the time may for the last final struggle, we shall be wanting in neither machinery, nor men, to move forward to the destruction of wage slavery and the construction of a system of society based upon co-ordinated effort and world wide mutual good will and understanding."



A. A. Purcell



A. B. SWALES, President

SINCE the memorable "Black Friday" of 1921, when the Triple Alliance of Railwaymen, Miners and Transport Workers fell to pieces before the attack of the employers, British labor has been learning some things in the hard school of experience.

They have seen their purchasing power diminish by millions of pounds. They have felt the sharp pangs of hunger as unemployment has mounted to near the two million figure. They have witnessed the insufficiency of the "dole" to provide even an existence standard of living. They have seen the development of industries in Indian and the colonies and the consequent closing down of similar factories in England. They have felt the effects of the Dawes' plan as German coal has gone to markets that were formerly British. They have seen the threat of coolie labor at from 8 to 16 cents per day in the Far East. They have been smashed between the eyes by the refusal of the British government and the banks to finance large machinery orders from the Russian textile trust and from other Russian industries.

Mrs. Tomsky and Mrs. Swales at Scarborough.

Now they are beginning to recognize the point of the propaganda of the Communist and left wing militants and to register their response by definite action. What they have heretofore considered as being purely in the realm of theory has been translated by everyday events into living reality. The decisions of the congress upon the various resolutions bear out this principle.

THO the decisions of the National Minority Movement convention (Aug. 29-30) had been refused consideration by the general council of the T. U. C. because the N. M. M. was not an affiliated body, with only a few exceptions every position endorsed by the latter was ratified by the congress. On the granting of more power to the general council, on a sound and far-reaching program dealing with unemployment, on acceptance of trades councils as affiliated bodies to the T. U. C., the action of the congress was unsatisfactory. (The formation of workers' defense corps was not covered by a resolution.) But on international trade union unity, the Dawes' plan, imperialism, shop committees and trade union aims and broader trade relations with Russia, the delegates took a stand identical with that of their comrades of the N. M. M. The first three items might be taken as the most important on the agenda.

WHEN M. Tomski, chairman of the All-Russian Council of Trade Unions, rose to address the congress as a fraternal delegate, he was given an ovation more pronounced than that accorded to any other speaker. He expressed his gratification that the faith reposed by the Russian workers in their British comrades had been fully justified and that events were moving toward the formation of one international of all the workers of the world. In no other way could the workers protect their standard of living and prevent a recurrence of world wars.

"International working class unity," said Tomski, "is a development which will go forward in spite of the bitter attacks of the capitalist press and the reactionary attitude of a group of the leaders in the Amsterdam International."

WHEN the speaker had finished and the Internationale had been sung by the delegates (the first time in the history of a B. T. U. Congress) S. Ellsbury (Garment Workers) a member of the Minority Movement, moved the resolution endorsing the action of the general council in its efforts toward "an all-inclusive international federation of trade unions" and declaring for a continuance of the work. Fred Bramley, secretary of the congress, and one of the B. T. U. delegates to Russia, made an eloquent plea for loyal support of the Russian workers. There could be no real international unless they were included.

"WE consider it our duty to stand by the working classes of Russia. The Russian revolution is the first revolution in all history that has aimed at and secured the overthrow of exploitation—the world's first experiment in working class control of public affairs. There they have put into practice the resolutions we have been passing in these congresses for many years.

"There is one great lesson the Russian revolution has taught us. It is possible to make changes in governments; to put people in prison; to cut off the heads even of kings; to remove whole ruling dynasties; to launch devastating wars upon the world and slaughter the workers by the millions and yet to maintain your position of respectability in society. We have had some experience with these matters in our own country. But if you disturb the landed interests, if you interfere with the landed interests, if you disturb business profits, if you take any step that threatens the destruction of the established system of exploitation you will be ostracised and attacked by the whole capitalist world. You will be compelled to face what Russia faces now."

Even J. H. Thomas who hates Soviet Russia as much as he likes Lord Inchcape (and that's saying a good deal) did not dare raise his voice against it. The resolution was carried with only two dissenting votes.

For the first time since its enactment, the official British labor movement had an opportunity to register its opposition to the Dawes' plan. This scheme for sweating German labor was denounced by an overwhelming vote. Even J. H. Thomas, J. R. Clynes and Margaret Bondfield, members of the labor government that put this over, did not dare raise their voices in its favor. A. J. Cook, secretary of the Miners' Federation, speaking for the resolution, said that there had been a time when the British workers had not been opposed to the Dawes' plan. It was because they had not understood it. But now with British mines shut down, 200,000 miners unemployed and German coal going to Italy and other former British markets, their eyes had been opened to its effects.

"THIS Trade Union Congress believes that the domination of non-British people by the British government is a form of capitalist exploitation having for its object the securing for British capitalists (1) of cheap sources of raw materials; (2) the right to exploit cheap and unorganized labor and to use the competition of that labor to degrade the workers' standards in Great Britain.

"It declares its complete opposition to imperialism and resolves: (1) to support the workers in all parts of the British Empire to organize the trade unions and political parties in order to further their interests, and (2) to support the right of all peoples in the British empire to self determination, including the right to choose complete separation from the Empire."

A. A. PURCELL, vice-chairman of the congress, moved the foregoing resolution, with definite emphasis upon the menace of the coolie standard to British workers. John Bromley, secretary of the Locomotive Engineers and Firemen, whose appearance denoted a prosperous business man, but whose remarks were along the lines of the class conscious worker, followed in the same vein. Harry Pollitt (Boilermakers) clear-headed secretary of the N. M. M. expressed the Communist position. Then J. H. Thomas, secretary National Union of Railwaymen and colonial secretary of the late labor government, arose to offer a weak opposition. There was no question as to how the vote would go but Chairman Swales decided to make a demonstration by a card tally. The count showed 3,082,000 for and 79,000 against.

Thus begins the passing of one of the hoary traditions of Great Britain—the sanctity of the British empire.

THE general council was instructed by a later resolution to consider sending a delegation to India and the Far East to help in the organization of the workers there.

The convention expressed solidarity with the striking Chinese workers and condemned British diplomacy there.

An account of the Scarborough convention for American readers would be incomplete without mention of the fraternal delegates from the American Federation of Labor. Messrs. Adamski (United Garment Workers) and Evans (Electrical workers) were the gentlemen favored with this pleasant excursion. The British delegates accorded them a respectful hearing while they consumed an hour and a half reading their pamphlets on labor banking and investments, the B. & O. plan and workers' education of the inocuous type. They seemed blissfully ignorant of the significance of the issues of the congress and the spirit of international solidarity there displayed.

What the British trade union movement thinks of the idea of class collaboration is forcefully embodied in the statement on "trade union aims" which was adopted by a large majority.

"THIS congress declares that the trade union movement must organise to prepare the trade unions in conjunction with the party of the workers to struggle for the overthrow of capitalism.

"At the same time congress warns the workers against all attempts to introduce capitalist schemes of copartnership which in the past have failed to give the workers any positive rights, but instead, have usually served as fetters retarding the forward movements.

"Congress further considers that strong, well-organized shop committees are indispensable weapons in the struggle to force the capitalist to relinquish their grip on industry, and, therefore, pledges itself to do all in its power to develop and strengthen workshop organization."

THO unemployment in Britain is steadily growing worse—the official register showing 1,300,000 and the actual figures being something like 2,000,000—the congress failed to respond to the plea of Harry Pollitt to adopt a strong program of demands on the government for relief. He emphasized these points; a nation-wide campaign to organize the unemployed; to cement bonds between unemployed and employed workers so that they would fight better together in strikes; that the labor party in parliament should pursue a policy of obstruction until definite action was taken by the government to stop the closing down of industry and the credit blockade against Russia. He quoted J. M. Keynes, liberal economist, as declaring that unemployment was being artificially fostered by the employers as a means of weakening the working class preparatory to the wage cut offensive against the miners next May.

The congress adopted a strong resolution calling for increased trade with Soviet Russia and scoring the Baldwin government and the banks for shutting the door in the face of the Russian textile delegation who wished to spend 25 million dollars for machinery in English metal works. Except for this, the discussion on unemployment related solely to changes in the present form of relief machinery.

THERE is no question but that the British workers are in favor of "amalgamation" but they still regard the one big union as yet in the realm of theory. Resolutions both for and against it were voted down. The discussion revealed that such industrial unions as the General Workers' Union were regarded by many trade unionists as trying to gobble up other unions whose right to existence was as fully justified. Where the average A. F. of L. convention would devote a large part of its time to a discussion of jurisdictional disputes the T. U. C. settles such matters outside by inter-union conference and uses its convention for more weighty matters. The amount of territory covered in the five days' session and the business-like purpose of the delegates was very noteworthy.

IN the first two days of the convention when Clynes, Thomas and Cramp all opposed the immediate granting of more power to the general council and the matter was referred back to be settled by a special conference of union executives, there was a feeling of disappointment on the part of the rank and file left wingers. Purcell, Hicks and other progressives on the G. C. had been expected to take the floor in this fight, but they had remained silent. However, as the convention progressed and one radical resolution after another was adopted, it became evident that the reactionaries had no ground for satisfaction at the general tenor of the conference. The delegates apparently had felt that the G. C. had sufficient power already to handle any direct attack on working class standards and that if more was needed, it would be quickly forthcoming thru a meeting of the executives, as in the case of "Red Friday" last July.

Whatever criticism may be directed at the average British trade unionist for not seeing very far ahead of his nose (in this respect he is like his brother worker in every other land) except Soviet Russia, it is of some moment that he is willing to meet realities when they are thrust in his face and deal with them in a radical way without fear of being dubbed a Bolshevik. He is fortunate in having leaders here and there who seem willing to go as far and perhaps take a chance on going a bit farther than the rank and file. The majority of the workers are not particularly interested in cataclysmic revolution—that is not the issue just now—but when matters come to a show down, they will not allow a deluge of epithets from the capitalist press or even the "cold steel" of Lloyd George and Lord Londonderry deter them from the accomplishment of their goal.

TO SAKLATVALA

Comrade, we are told that you can't come across,
Kellogg, plute spokesman, says we havn't room for you;
We were kind of looking forward to havin' you with us,
Thot you might take the curse off the rest of the crew.

We intended to meet you with the best that we knew,
Give you of our finest, as we give to those we own;
As workers in the cause that we know to be the true,
You are one of us, we planned to make it known.

Today Kell' wins or better say his masters,
Their victory will pass, Canute was not more futile than they;
"Communists keep out!" they cry while fast and ever faster
They are raising us at home here in the U. S. A.

Soviet Russia gains, the working class succeeds,
One-sixth of earth's surface turned to the workers' care;
This fact they hate, dark ways for capital's need,
"The way out," they cry to their prophets, "is it here? Is it there?"

Onward, we say to the workers, push up and take it all
Deceived us enough, they have robbed us too many a year;
The country stinks with graft, capital rides to a fall,
Comrade, in keeping you out they show their own fear!

ARTICLE III.

BRITISH iron, steel and coal—the basis of Britain's former industrial supremacy—no longer dominate the world markets.

Her textile industry cannot meet Indian, Chinese and German competition.

Her shipbuilding industry is idle.

Her shipping trade has shrunk with the narrowing of the world markets and American competition.

Her foreign investments were liquidated in order to partially defray the cost of the war in 1914-18 and have never regained their former importance. American capital dominates the foreign investment field and Great Britain herself is a debtor nation.

FOR the second time in recent history Great Britain's balance of trade will this year be unfavorable.

In 1924 her imports were 1,186,956,000 pounds.

Her exports in the same year were 915,051,000 pounds—an unfavorable balance of 271,905,000 pounds.

This year her imports have increased to 1,349,707,000 pounds while her exports have increased only to 937,774,000 pounds—her unfavorable trade balance leaping to 411,933,000 pounds.

The British press is hysterical.

IN the London Times ("the bloody old Times," as Cobden called it) for Sept. 19 there was an article by Sir Phillip Gibbs entitled, "Is England Done?" He states that this question is on the lips of thousands of Englishmen and Americans visiting England. He says:

> They see the beggars in our streets, they hear the hard luck stories on the tops of busses, see or think they see the dwindling of effort and vitality, a creeping up of pessimism, a spreading of pauperdom that shocks them.

Then Sir Phillip, after acknowledging the hopelessness of the situation for the masses of the population, proceeds to denounce the trade unions, and the Scarborough conference with "its avowed purpose of revolutionary action." Like all of the British ruling class Sir Phillip has no solution except to ask support for the England that was but is no more:

> "If our working folk are pauperized until they lose the will to work, or if they follow revolutionary leaders into the ways of violence and destruction—I do not believe they will—then indeed we shall see the passing of England and all that was good and gracious in its life. Our Oriental empire will be a flaming anarchy, in which the weak and innocent will perish. The world will lose its strongest rock of defense against brutality and tyranny and the ethics of the jungle. If we give way, the outposts of civilization will be driven in.
> "Is such a thing possible? Yes, in my belief it is possible."

J. L. GARVIN, editor of the Sunday Observer, sounds a similar hopeless note:

> The Trade Union Congress has shown a strong swing towards Communist sentiment. The Stockport constituency which the unionists (tories) carried by a large majority at the last election has been handed to the socialists in the by-election. Week by week the number of unemployed is mounting toward its old figure of 1,500,000. This means as a nation we are earning less in proportion to our numbers while in the mass we are consuming more than ever . . . unless the Baldwin government, as regards trade and unemployment, can rise above nullity or mediocrity, John Bull will resort to the newspapers and declare a vacant situation.

ANOTHER voice of the ruling class is that of Sir George Hunter, shipping magnate, who three weeks ago appealed to Premier Baldwin to do something (he did not make any suggestions) to avert "impending ruin."

The London Daily Herald, official organ of the British labor party, in its every issue furnishes a wealth of evidence, not only of the continual decay of industry in Great Britain but of the temper of the working class and the brutal arrogance of the rulers.

ON Sept. 17 The Herald published an editorial entitled "Emigrate or Starve!" This editorial deals with the proposal of Lord Rothermere to abolish unemployment insurance so that those who cannot find work in Great Britain "will be compelled to emigrate to the dominions." Of this proposal The Herald says:

> It is difficult to know which is the more shocking—the heartlessness of this, or its scarcely believable folly.
> Here is the chief proprietor of a newspaper which has the largest circulation in the world so ill-acquainted with public affairs that he does not know the dominions decline to receive our industrial unemployed.
> The only immigrants they want are those who can make a living on the land, and of those we have none to spare. Lord Rothmore's blether about "converting the shiftless pensioners of our labor exchanges into prosperous farmers and graziers" is either criminally ignorant or brutally insinsere.
> The idea behind such talk is "Get them out of the country. Let them starve somewhere else." That is what Lord Rothmere proposes in his gratitude to the workers for making him, with their daily pennies, a multi-millionaire.

IN the columns of The Daily Herald a discussion on the question of "Shall the Workers' Arm?" is being carried on and never has there been such an outpouring of working class opinion. The majority trend of this opinion is not apparent at this time but the tremendous meaning of such a discussion in parliamentary England cannot be over-estimated.

As for the die-hards of the ruling class they have already made up their minds on the matter. Fascist organizations have sprung up in many centers, violence against the workers is on the increase and the British courts, those bulwarks of democracy, are acquitting regularly those who are accused only of the shooting and beating of strikers and Communists.

THE American capitalist press is watching the British situation closely and true to its class instincts speaks approvingly of the prospect of a fascist dictatorship in Great Britain. Says The Chicago Tribune of Oct. 1:

> It would seem that Communism has a strong influence among large numbers of British workers, and the critical question now is whether the comparatively moderate leaders like Thomas, MacDonald, Henderson, and the intellectuals like Snowden and the Webbs have really lost control of the rank and file, while still able to manage the representative machinery of the labor party. Great Britain's present acute economic condition is, of course, favorable to extreme radicalism, and there may be a serious effort to paralyze British transport and production and establish a revolutionary regime. But we doubt that the British middle class will take it lying down. Recent dispatches from England indicate that something resembling a fascist movement may be in train. It won't be a replica of Signor Mussolini's procedure, but it is likely to be quite as decisive. There is no tradition of dictatorship or autocracy in modern Britain, and the British are too competent in republican forms of action to need a dictatorship, at least for more than a momentary crisis. But the proletarians in England have to deal with a class very different from the aristocracy of Russia or Russia's pitiful middle class. They have to deal with men and women of character and self-discipline, having a deep solidarity and loyalty, and plenty of experience in co-operative effort, intensified during the late war, and capable of organizing a more formidable resistance than any proletarian movement can overthrew.
> The British people may have to come to gripe with the Communist threat sooner or later, and while every rightminded person must hope civil war will be avoided, we suspect that Great Britain would be the better for a clear showdown now, which will compel intelligent British labor to take sides where it belongs, with the middle class, and to repudiate the Bolshevik delusion of the extremists.

The Beginning of the End -

By Sinbad

AT the beginning of this year, Dr. Sun Yat Sen, the president of the revolutionary government of China with its capital at Canton, went north in an endeavor to effect the convening of the national people's conference and its proposed predecessor the preliminary conference. The purpose of the preliminary conference is to abolish the unequal traties which bind China hand and foot. Tuan Chi-Jui, the chief executive, who had gotten his position from the Fengtien militarists and had made it more secure by dependence upon the imperialists did all in his power to obstruct the course of any project contradictory to the will of both the Fengtien militarists and the imperialists. The proposal for the convening of the preliminary conference fell thru and Dr. Sun Yat Sen died a few days after his arrival in the north, his main aim remaining unachieved.

Take Advantage of Sun's Death.

Taking advantage of Dr. Sun's death, certain militarists, subsidized by the imperialists urged about 15,000 Yunnanese mercenaries who had been under the orders of the Canton government, to revolt and take the city into their own hands so as to give the imperialists the chance to attack the national revolutionary movement at its heart.

Most of the Cantonese troops had gone to Swatow, a city a few hundred miles west of Canton, to drive out the remainder of the troops belonging to Chan Chiung Ming, another of the imperialist subsidized militarists. The Yunnanese militarists who had the job of guarding Canton seized the golden opportunity and established themselves at the head of the government.

Revolutionary Troops Take Town.

As soon as news of the betrayal reached the faithful revolutionary troops, they fell back to the vicinity of Canton and gradually formed an iron ring around the usurpers and after a week's skirmishing the Yunnanese were completely routed and their leaders, Yang Hsi-Min and Liu Chen-Wan escaped to Shanghai by way of Hongkon. According to current reports they were materially aided in their escape by the British consul. Thus the reactionary elements within the Kuomintang were exterminated.

Three Groupings.

From the time of the October coup d'etat, the group in power has been resolving itself into three factors: First, Feng Yu-Hsiang; second, Chang Tso-Lin; and third, Tuan Chi-Jui.

Feng Yu-Hsiang was the one who carried out the technical part of the coup. Chang Tso-Lin was the war-lord who being decidedly against Wu Pei-Fu necessarily became nominally united to Feng Yu-Hsiang. Tuan Chi-Jui is an old statesman whose career has been checkered with faithful service to whoever has hired him.

Revision Not Arbitration.

As soon as the coup was a fact Tuan Chi-Jui was placed nominally at the head of the Pekin government. By convening a so-called reorganization conference instead of calling the preliminary conference proposed by Dr. Sun Yet Sen, he prevented what might have materialized into the abolition of the unequal treaties. The recent imperialistic atrocities in different parts of China have caused the people to demand the abolition of the unequal treaties. The demand was too strong and too sincere for Tuan to entirely ignore, but it needed the Kuomintang manifesto of June 22, demanding abolition of unequal treaties within the shortest period of time to cause Tuan to issue a note to the diplomatic corps at Pekin requesting a revision of the treaties. It need not be pointed out that there is a great difference between a demand for abolition and a request for revision.

The recent defeat of the South China reactionaries leaves all the strength and efforts of the Kuomintang to be directed towards the abrogation of these obnoxious treaties and the return of the settlements and concessions granted to foreigners thru coercion.

Feng Stands for China.

Feng Yu-Hsian is the only one of the northern triumvirate who sincerely demands the annulment of the unequal treaties and who is prepared, as he says, to fight to the last against imperialism.

But on the other hand stands Chang Tso-lin, openly the tool of imperialism, with a well-equipped modernly-trained army and adequate financial support from his masters. It would be highly erroneus to even for a moment suppose that Chang Tso-lin will also support the people's demand for abolition. The condition created by such a stand would be the immediate loss of his imperialist support without which any demand made by him would be of little value.

The situation in regard to the annulment of the unequal treaties resolves itself thus: Chang Tso-Lin with an abundance of imperialist support against the proposal; the revolutionary Kuomintang whose sole purpose is the achieving of the economic and political independence of China coupled with the will of the 460,000,000 Chinese in support of the proposal.

Battle Has Started.

The battle has already commenced. A boycott against all imperialist products has been declared. Strikes with an unprecedented number of participants are carrying on with vigor and steadfastness of purpose. Shipping which is the pulse of imperialist commerce, is tied up all along the Chinese coast from Vladivostok to Singapore. The death-knell of imperialism has been sounded. This is the beginning of the end.

The Task of Reorganization in District Number 1

By JOHN J. BALLAM

"THERE can be no Bolshevik party without a Bolshevik organization."

These ten words contain the meat of the question. What is a Bolshevik party? It is one that has its roots deep in the masses and leads them in their struggles, permeating the workers with the ideology of Communism, and organizing them to achieve their historic mission—to do away with capitalism. It is a party in which every member is equipped with the knowledge and understanding of the fundamentals of Marxian-Leninism in theory and practise. In brief, a Bolshevik party is a party which is ideologically and organizationally prepared to carry out the proletarian Communist revolution and to assume the responsability for the administration of the workers' and farmers' government—the Soviet state.

THE first and immediate task of our Workers (Communist) Party is to Bolshevize itself, organizationally. This involves the reorganization of our party on the basis of the shop nuclei. The national convention has decided that this task must be completed within the next six months. The organization department of the C. E. C. has worked out complete and detailed plans which should be studied by every party member.

Every member must face this task with the determination to solve all difficulties and to overcome all obstacles. There must be no doubts or misgivings. In carrying out the plans of the C. E. E. for reorganization every member should do so with the enthusiasm which grows out of the conviction that we are laying the foundation upon which will be erected the future Union of Socialist Soviet Republics in the Americas.

WHERE the report on reorganization has been made in Dist. No. 1 the membership have accepted it without opposition. An analysis of the membership of Dist. No. 1 will show 34 Finnish branches, 12 Russian, 1 Lettish, 7 Jewish, 9 Lithuanian, 8 Armenian, 3 Scandinavian, 2 Ukrainian, 2 German, 7 Italian, 2 Greek, 1 Estonian, 2 Polish and 3 English. Ninety-four branches with a total membership of 2192 in good standing. Ninety per cent of these work in the shops, mills and factories of New England. The actual carrying out of the reorganization in this district, while complex, should not be over-difficult.

Let us take, for example, the textile industry. In Lawrence, Mass. we have 120 members in German, Russian, Lithuanian and Armenian branches. Of these we have 61 working in the cotton and wollen mills, who can be organized into shop nuclei at once. Where three or more comrades work in the same mill they can proceed to form the shop nucleus in each mill, and begin functioning without very much difficulty. The Russian branch maintains a club room and the German branch controls a very fine building.

These language groups have already the basis for very effective Russian and German workingmen's clubs. Those who are not in any particular industry can be formed into the street nuclei or international branch and after a membership meeting in Lawrence of all the shop and street nuclei have elected their city executive committee the first steps in the reorganization of Lawrence will have been completed.

IN Maynard, Mass. we have a large Finnish branch of 135 members and a Russian branch of 12 members. Sixty-five of our Finnish comrades are weavers and nine of the Russian comrades are textile workers. These can be organized at once into shop nuclei and begin functioning. Both the Russian and Finnish comrades maintain club rooms and the problem of their functioning within these as a language fraction is comparatively simple.

This same process can easily be carried out in Woonsocket where we have an Italian and Ukrainian branch most of whose members work in the cotton mills; and in Lebanon, N. H. where we have a Finnish branch of which 21 are weavers all members of the U. T. W.

If our members who work in the textile mills had been so organized in the shop nuclei during the last campaign against wage cuts our party could have won greater results and leadership.

In Gardner, Mass. we have a large Finnish branch most of whose members work in the only industry in town—furniture and chair factories. These comrades could be reorganized in the shop nuclei without delay by the local committee. These examples are typical of the rest of the district.

In Boston we have 24 branches. The Russian, Letts, Jews, Poles, Ukrainians, Lithuanians and Armenians maintain club rooms in different parts of the city. Here the industries are diversified and our comrades work at various occupations. At least 25 shop nuclei can be formed and the rest of our comrades organized into the street nuclei or international branches.

AT first sight the task of reorganization seems to be exceedingly difficult. In practise it will be found that nine-tenths of the problems will be solved easily once they are undertaken with enthusiasm and real Communist spirit. In a large industrial section like New England the loss of membership due to readjustment in reorganization should not be over ten or twelve per cent. After reorganization our party in Dist. No. 1 will grow rapidly especially in the textile and shoe centers.

The main objections that I have met from the comrades seems to be the following:

We cannot speak English well and so cannot function in the shop nuclei.

Answer: One's English is not improved by remaining in our present language branches; our comrades will learn to understand each other and to carry out their Communist tasks in the nuclei, under the direction of the leading committees of our party.

The party will disappear from the view of the masses and only the non-party foreign-language workers clubs will be open to their observation.

Answer: The shop nuclei, while limited in their activity to the factory and the industrial section where they are organized will operate to bring us into closer touch with the workers in the mill and locality— bringing the party's political and industrial campaigns to the immediate attention of the workers in the mill and factory and mine, while the general mass meetings and collective activities of the party in a city or sub-district will be under the direction of the City Executive Committee or the leading committees. All the nuclei will work together to make these campaigns successful.

The foreign-language speaking comrades will not have the same opportunity to work among their fellow-workers as now.

Answer: The language workers clubs will give greater opportunity than exists at present for propaganda in foreign languages. By forming the fractions in these clubs our foreign-language comrades can carry on educational work, cultural, sports, defense, and other activities on a wider scale than at present drawing in much larger masses of the foreign-born into our party campaigns and for recruiting larger numbers into the shop and street nuclei of our party. Where formerly hundreds of the foreign-born workers were attracted to the federations, under reorganization thousands can be brought under our direction and influence and the language press and propaganda increased an hundred-fold. There is no phase of party work which will not be immediately benefitted thru the reorganization of our party.

Let us, then, go to work with a will. Let us turn the energies of our party, which have been largely wasted during the factional struggle of the past months, into intensive, constructive effort. Let us go to work and by bolshevizing our party forge the weapon with which the workers can carry out the proletarian revolution in America.

The Tenth Year of Organization of International Leninism

MOSCOW, Sept. 5.—(By Mail.)—"Today is the tenth anniversary of the Zimmerwald conference, which was the first appearance of organized Leninism on an international scale," writes Zinoviev in an article entitled "The Tenth Year of Organized International Leninism."

"The Zimmerwald Left" formed at the conference was the first organized expression of International Leninism. The teachings of Lenin were formulated long before Zimmerawld. His efforts in the 'nineties against menshevism, his tactics during the Russian revolution of 1905, his work at the Stuttgart congress of the Second International, all this had an international significance, nevertheless, the first organized international nucleus of Leninism was the Zimmerwald left, from which the Comintern is directly descended. Zimmerwald was a chip of the Second International, it consisted of the center, a small right wing and a left, which commenced to form itself in 1917. The majority belonged to the center and was only captured by the left on very rare occasions. Zimmerwald represented the best of the Second International. But what did even this best look like? Beside Lenin sat Tchernov, Martov, Ledebour, Modigliani and Grimm.

"The French internationalist Brison, declared that he was a Frenchman, and a socialist, and that he would vote against the war credits as long as France was in a good military situation. Kautsky, Haase and Hoffman protested against the undertaking to vote against the war credits. Even the honest revolutionary Ledebour threatened Lenin almost physically, telling him that it was easy to vote against the war credits in exile. The French internationalist Dugence, approved of the German socialist democratic party and the French socialist party when they voted for the war credits. Zimmerwald was a conglomeration of rosy-hued pacifism up to Leninsm. One section of the Zimmerwaldians developed towards the right like Modigliani, Morgari, Grimm, Tchernov and Kautsky whilst others, Radek, Serrati, Ernst Meyer, Paul Froelich, Platten and Lapinsky found their way to Communism. The Zimmerwald left began its work under the most difficult circumstances. Its financial resources amounted to 100 francs. Soon after Karl Liebknecht, Rosa Luxemburg, Klara Zetkin and Franz Mehring joined it. The working out of the program was not carried thru without difficulties. The Polish internationalists Liebknecht and Luxemburg, stood between menshevism and Leninism. With what devotion Lenin worked! It is almost unbelievable that only a decade has passed since then and that today the sixth part of the world in a Soviet state and the Comintern the most powerful international organization, causing the capitalists many sleepless nights.

"THE Second International is rotting, despite the breathing space that it has received as a consequence of the breathing space which capitalism itself has been able to obtain, and the Comintern is developing. It is true that the Comintern is now going thru its most difficult period. The conquest of the majority of the decisive sections of the proletariat is going more slowly than we thot, and there are also set-backs. But the Russian movement has experienced them also between 1908 and 1912. The Hoeglunds and the Rosmers are running away, but there were always deserters and liquidators. We know how Lenin thrashed the deserters and the liquidators and we must do the same with the waverers and those of little faith who do not understand the significance of this difficult stage in our development. The Comintern is only beginning to fulfill its historical tasks. It has not yet gone one-half the way. Since the adoption of the united front tactic, four years have passed and only now can we see its great results, the agreement between the English and Russian unions, the growing struggle for trade union unity, the increasing number of workers' delegations to Soviet Russia, the growth of the Communist Party influence in England, the worthy attitude of the Communist Party of France towards the Morocco war, the policy of the Comintern in China, etc. The Comintern has found the way to the masses despite all the difficulties. Our chief task is now the carrying out of a still broader and more systematic united front tactic, a still stronger propaganda for trade union unity, still greater action to win the social-democratic and non-party masses and to find with them a common tongue against the treacherous leaders. The bourgeoisie declare that it will recognize the Soviet Union when the latter parts company with the Comintern. Our answer to this is clear. The Soviet Union pursues its way basing itself upon the working class slowly rising from the depths and not upon the slowly descending bourgeoisie. The XIV party conference of the Russian Communist Party has declared war upon the national limitation caused by the N. E. P. and the slower tempo of the revolution. The Communist Party of Russia is overcoming this limitation. On the Tenth Anniversary of Zimmerwald the Soviet power controls one-sixth of the earth's surface, and the Comintern unites the minorities in the working class. N. E. P. in Russia is becoming socialism, the Comintern will capture the majorities in the working classes and capitalist Europe will become proletarian Europe."

GARY

By WORKER CORRESPONDENT

One summer day I took a car to visit Gary for a spell,
And as I spied it from afar quoth I, "It surely looks like hell!"
A little later and my nose assailed me with a sulphurous smell,
Thought I: "The likeness grows and grows, this atmosphere sure smells like hell!"

Later a dull and sullen roar annoyed me with its constant swell,
So I kept thinking more and more, "This bedlam surely sounds like hell!"
When I beheld the molten steel, which from the white hot furnace fell,
Quote I: "This business makes one feel, it surely makes ME feel like hell!"

With burning thirst I sought a drink from greasy "top" (they have no well),
The liquid made me scowl and blink and say, "This water tastes like hell!"
When to the hospital I came and viewed the wreckage, foul and fell,
Said I, "This is the devil's game, and Gary certainly is hell!"

THE FILM ACTIVITY OF THE I. W. A.

ARTICLE V.

IN the field of film propaganda the I. W. A. has been a trail blazer. On the one hand it sought thru special I. W. A. films that showed its work, activity and undertakings, to build up its own organization; and on the other to further the ideas of the revolutionary international working class movement, and particularly of Soviet Russia, thru the medium of general proletarian motion pictures.

The first two films produced by the I. W. A., "Down the Volga" and "Famine in Soviet Russia," were taken in Russia in the fall of 1921 and shown the following year before millions of workers all thru Europe and North America and Argentina. These films showed that as the result of the drought of 1921, a terrible crop failure caused widespread famine along the Volga and in other Russian districts; it showed the relief measures taken by the Soviet government and by foreign relief organizations. Our experiences and successes determined us to continue in this field of work. In 1922, 1923 and 1924 the I. W. A. showed a whole series of additional films of revolutionary-proletarian content thruout the various countries. Since 1923 the I. W. A. has gone into production itself, and made connections with the highly artistic production group "Russ" in Moscow, from whose studio came the world-famous "Polikushka," starring Ivan Moskvin.

ASIDE from the I. W. A. the principal effort at proletarian film production in Russia is made by "Proletkino." But unfortunately its products have thus far found little way to the other countries. (Note: "Kombrig Ivanow," shown in America as "The Beauty and the Bolshevik," was made by Proletkino.) Since 1922 the I. W. A. headquarters in Berlin, thru the establishment of a special film division, has sought to systematically supply the entire world with proletarian films. We have met with partial success. Thru the efforts of the I. W. A. we have succeeded to show films in Germany, Holland, Belgium, France, Czecho-Slovakia, Spain, Austria, Italy, Switzerland, Sweden, Norway, Denmark, Bulgaria, United States, Canada, Argentine, Australia, South Africa, Japan and Russia. Of the films brought to the screen by the I. W. A. we can list the following:

1. Famine in Russia, taken in 1921, and used mainly in winning support for the relief campaign against the Russian famine.

2. Down the Volga, taken for the same purpose, but which already showed the alleviation of the needs as a result of relief activity, and the resumption of economic improvement among the peasants and workers.

3. The Congress of the Eastern Peoples, a short film showing the thrilling demonstration of eastern peoples in Baku in 1921.

4. The Third Congress of the Comintetrn, containing the best photos of Lenin speaking.

5. Five Years of Soviet Russia, a cross-cut of the political, economic, military and cultural life of Russia in 1922.

6. Russia Through the Shadows, a feature film concerning the life of Russia during 1923, which secured a tremendous reception particularly in the United States and awakened a spirited sympathy for Russia.

7. Mother and Child in Soviet Russia, a gripping film which shows the care given children and young mothers.

8. The Red Army. Pictures of the creation and development of the Red Army of Soviet Russia and its various subdivisions, cavalry, artillery, infantry; the political teaching in its clubs, the struggle against illiteracy.

9. Children's Homes and Care in Soviet Russia, a film showing the care given by the Soviet state to the war and famine orphans of fallen workers and peasants.

10. First of May in Moscow, 1922. Magnificent pictures of this people's day, in which half a million workers and peasants participated.

11. A Soviet Diplomat's Last Journey, showing the transport of the body of Vorovsky, the Soviet representative at Lausanne, Switzerland, from Berlin to Moscow. Tens of thousands of German workers take part in a torchlight procession as his body is taken thru the streets. Its arrival in Moscow and its interment under the Kremlin wall.

12. The Death of Lenin, containing the most mighty scenes of any topical film ever made, bearing the body to Moscow, borne to the Trade Union headquarters by Kalenin, Kameneff, Zinoviev and others of his old comrades, a million workers and peasants file past during two days. This film has made the mightiest impression and has enjoyed the greatest success among the broad working masses.

13. In the Heart of Red Russia, a film showing the development and life of Soviet Russia during the year 1924. Soon to be distributed commercially in Germany and England.

14. The Fifth Congress of the Comintern.

15. Soldier Ivan's Miracle. A light comedy ridiculing religious superstition.

16. People's May. Showing May Day demonstrations of the international proletariat in the principal cities thruout the world, 1923, including Berlin, New York, London, Paris, Stockholm, Zurich, Christiania, Prague, Leningrad and Moscow.

17. Famine in Germany, dealing with the results of inflation and the consequent struggles of the workers, the Trade Union Congress in Chemnitz, etc.

18. The I. W. A. and Its Activities in Russia, showing activity thruout the world, relief in Germany, and economic support in Soviet Russia. Takes in fisheries in Astrachan, farms in the Urals, and reveals the great improvement in Russian agriculture.

19. Recruiting Film of the I. W. A., a short, directly agitational film.

20. An entire series of short news reels on the Russian and international labor movement.

WITH but minor exceptions those films were shown thruout the countries already listed. Altogether about 25 million people have seen these pictures. There can be no doubt as to the assistance rendered by these films in giving the I. W. A. the popularity it enjoys today among the broad masses of workers and farmers. What has been done thus far is considered only the beginning of our film activity. The international headquarters of the I. W. A. has decided to give special attention to the film division and to the film production center in Moscow, and to build up especially this branch of its activity. After years of effort we have succeeded, at first in conjunction with a film concern, now entirely in our own production unit, the production of new and technically and ideologically faultless films, and to place them at the disposal of the working class organizations. As a characteristic creation of this new period of our film activity we need only cite "Lenin's Warning."

This picture shows in the experiences of a young working girl the struggles and evolution of the Soviet Republic and the decline of its enemies, the white guardist emigres skulking in foreign capitals, particularly in Paris. The film depicts in gripping manner the civil strife in Leningrad in the fall of 1917, in which the 13-year-old girl, Katya, loses her father in the defense of the workers' barricades. The girl goes to her grandmother in the country and goes to work in a big textile factory. This gives the director a chance to contrast the factory conditions during the decline of czarism with the steady improvement from year to year of Soviet industrial development. As, in the beginning, the terrible aftermath of famine and civil war is truthfully shown, the optience is shown the orgies of the emigres in Paris. But after a few years the picture is otherwise, Russian industry is getting to its feet, the lot of the worker is better. Communal kitchens, reading clubs, educational circles are organized in the factory, the currency is stabilized, but the emigres pawn their last smuggled jewels and stand face to face with work or want.

WHAT makes the film especially valuable is the exact execution of decisive direction, with gripping tragic moments, and a uniform high artistry on the part of the cast. Particularly striking is the wonderful feeling brought in by the child actors who take part. One sees a picture—Paris, the white guard emigres are studying the progress of invading interventionists on a map before them and dream of regaining their lost paradise—there is a dissolve into the battle scenes as the Red Army defends its home and its revolution—another cross dissolve, one sees five sturdy Russian children, also studying a map, and discussing strategical problems in the defense of their land. Another picture—the meeting room of the factory, a worker proudly shows the first silver Soviet rouble, everybody crowds around, with joyful face—dissolve—the Soviet coin changes into the last czarist rouble, in the hands of a fugitive aristocrat, his last rouble.

Added value is given by the extremely clever way in which the influence of Lenin on the development of Soviet Russia is visualized. First in the years 1920 to 1922 where he is shown as a speaker at the Second Congress, then symbolically as the helmsman of a ship under the Soviet star weathering thru a severe storm.

The heights are reached in the last reel when a workers' meeting, gathered to commemorate the anniversary of the 1905 revolution, received the report that Lenin is dead. Just then telephone connection is destroyed by the blizzard. None will credit the report. A young comrade jumps on a horse and in a thrilling ride thru the storm goes to check up on the report. The meeting waits an hour, two, three, four. The horse founders, another is borrowed from a peasant who asks the reason for the haste. The verification of the report stamps heartrending grief upon the faces of the entire family, even down to the youngest child. And what sorrow and mourning by the same report given to the waiting meeting!

AND then the great, wholehearted, inspiring response when, after his burial, there comes his warning from the grave, an appeal to class conscious workers and peasants to fill his place by mass affiliation with his party. Old peasants, scarcely able to write their names, hasten to join; women, and among them Katya, accepted amid the cheers of the great meeting. And as a symbolic finale, Lenin directing armies of thousands of workers with their banners on the road to freedom.

In short, in treatment as in ideology the strictest unity, living pictures, rapid continuity of scenes that grip the watcher in constantly mounting suspense, relieved only in the conclusion with its all-embracing agreement and desire to co-operate and help achieve the great aims set for itself by the proletarian movement.

This film, if it can be shown, will help millions of workers to find their way into the labor movement.

(There follows comment from the Russian press on the excellence of this film, and a long list of proposed feature and educational productions of the I. W. A. studio in Moscow.)

IT is the task of the workers' organizations and of the Communist Parties and of all who fight the trash and jazz and nationalist monarchist prejudice of the bourgeois film, to see to it that not only the Russian workers and peasants but also the workers of the entire world profit by those films now available and to be produced. We must wage a systematic struggle, similar to that fought against the reptilian bourgeois press, so today against the bourgeois lying film. We must wage a struggle to place the film in the service of the labor movement, in order that by means of the film we may carry the thought of the class struggle into broadest masses of the world proletariat. Properly used, the film can become, along with the press, one of the most important and most effective methods of enlightenment for the Communist movement, for the revolutionary labor movement.

FAMOUS RUSSIAN POET RETURNS TO CHICAGO OCT. 20

Mayakovsky Will Give Last Lecture Here

Altho he was supposed to leave this week for Soviet Russia, the famous Russian poet Vladimir Mayakovsky yielded to the request of his Chicago admirers to give another lecture in Chicago. He will speak here on Tuesday, Oct. 20, at Schoenhofen Hall, corner Ashland and Milwaukee Aves. Fear is expressed that the hall may be too small, but this was the only hall that was available for this date. There is room for over a thousand people.

The enthusiastic crowd that wildly cheered Vladimir Mayakovsky at his last lecture is expected to pack this hall also. An attempt will be made to arrange also a banquet with the famous guest.

Mass Meeting for His Admission

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SEATTLE, Oct. 11.—One of the most successful demonstrations in Seattle was the protest meeting held last night against the exclusion of Shapurji Saklatvala, in which representatives of unions and other workers organizations participated.

Paul Mohr, the veteran labor leader, M. Miller, Vincent Brown, M. Hansen of the best progressive leaders of the organized labor movement, Jean Stovel, progressive woman leader of labor, George O'Hanrahan, radical, Elmer W. Steele, I. W. W. speaker and Aaron Fislerman, district organizer of the Workers Party were the speakers.

The meeting was opened by Hansen as chairman. He told the large assembly the aims and purpose of the meeting. He was followed by O'Hanrahan who said that once America was the haven of men of revolutionary thought. But now and particularly, since the world war, it it is the garbage can of dethroned and bankrupt rulers and aristocratic garbage of Europe. The denial of Saklatvala to enter the United States, he characterized as a disgrace.

Miller declared organized labor resented the bar on Saklatvala.

Steele pointed out that because of the indifference of the large mass of workers, the victims of Centralia tragedy are still languishing in the penitentiary. He urged the workers to organize and stand up for their rights as a class. Saklatvala who represents the interests of the workers would not have been barred if the workers were awake, he said.

Workers Showed Open Doors

Stovel said that the workers should have made it possible for Saklatvala to enter the United States. The barring of Saklatvala by Secretary of State Kellogg, should make the statue of liberty hang its head in shame. The workers should demand that Saklatvala be admitted into the United States, she said.

Mohr declared that the fault lies greatly with organized labor. Saklatvala represents the interests of the working class. England feared the exposal of her atrocities perpetrated upon the workers and peasants of India. And in order to prevent Saklatvala from exposing these atrocities before the mass of American workers, the British tories have used Kellogg, as a tool, he said. He urged the workers to organize politically and industrially so that eventually they can bring about their own emancipation.

Saklatvala Action Significant

Fislerman said that the action of the secretary of state, in barring Saklatvala from entering the United States, is but only one of the many outrageous acts perpetrated on the working class by the ruling class and their governmental lackeys. It is, however, a significant one, because it proves the contention of Communists once more that the much heralded democracy of the imperialists and capitalists is a class dictatorship. Saklatvala was denied entry into the United States by Secretary of State Kellogg, at the behest of British tories because Saklatvala is a Communist and as such he represents the interests of the workers of all countries. He urged the workers to rally the banner of Communism by joining the Workers Party.

A resolution protesting and condemning the action of the secretary of state and demanding that Saklatvala be admitted into the United States was passed by acclamation.

SHIPPERS CONFIDENT OF LEWIS' PROTECTION OF CAPITALIST INTERESTS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEWARK, N. J., Oct. 11.—Stocks of prepared sizes of anthracite coal in the eastern Atlantic states are sufficient to last thirty days longer, according to a survey submitted by the coal committee of the Atlantic state shippers' advisory board, meeting here in the Robert Treat Hotel.

After these sizes are taken there will be enough pea coal to last until about the end of November and in some localities even longer, while buckwheat coal, which can be used for emergency heating purposes for heating of residences will last until after January 1.

On the bituminous coal situation the committee reported that there is sufficient for two months, and that threats of a strike in West Virginia fields made by John L. Lewis are not alarming.

This capitalist board, in its references to Lewis, did not display any animosity toward him and asserted that they believed he would secure a settlement in the anthracite before this situation became menacing to business interests.

IRISH LABOR IN REBELLIOUS MOOD AGAINST BOSSES

Unemployment Fails to Quench Militancy

DUBLIN, Ireland, Oct. 11—The labor situation is acute thruout Ireland. The northern parliament, on reopening in Belfast, was faced by a demonstration of the unemployed, who proposed to assemble outside the parliament house. The government prohibited this and the demonstrators withdrew.

When challenged in parliament by the labor members the cabinet ministers justified their action by quoting local labor speeches, in which it was declared that if Belfast became red, it would be redder than the Clyde.

Much Unemployment.

Belfast has the highest record of unemployment in the British Isles. In Great Britain the average number of unemployed is twenty-nine in each thousand; in Belfast it is ninety.

In Limerick, Ireland, where the Shanon river electrification scheme should be affording plenty of work, operations are held up by a wage dispute which turns mainly on the question whether unskilled labor on the project should be paid more than agricultural labor. The German contractors offered 32 shillings ($7.68) a week with free lodging in hutments and tho this is more than agricultural workers are paid in Limerick, organized labor opposed it as a starvation wage.

Strike Solidarity.

The dock workers are in sympathy with the laborers and refuse to unload German vessels carrying material. When the Germans did the work themselves they were attacked and the services of the military and the police had to be requisitioned to protect them. No German labor is imported except the highest skilled grade and there is no objection to the Germans as Germans.

Municipal Workers Call Strike.

Dublin city is threatened with the strike of 1,800 municipal workers Saturday. This would paralyze all the street services and the electrical supply. The proposed strike would be in the nature of a protest against the action of the city authorities in awarding to a Paris firm a ten-year contract for cleaning the streets.

DOES THE AMERICAN LEGION SUPPORT "MORGAN'S STATE"?

By WORKER CORRESPONDENT.

OMAHA, Neb., Oct 11.—Last week Omaha was the scene of an exhibition of debauchery, rivalling tales from Paris after the armistice. Young men brought here presumably to attend a convention of the American legion, have been given money and transportation, decked out in the gaudiest of uniforms and turned loose upon the populace of an American city.

During the first two days an unlimited supply of whisky passed around among the visitors. Groups congregated on sidewalks, streets and hotel lobbies, handing around bottles and apparently trying to become intoxicated in the shortest possible time. Nothing like this was ever seen during pre-Volstead days, even young boys participating in the orgy with gusto. No attention was paid to this "Americanization of the youth," altho there were about 500 extra police in the city.

There was unmistakable evidence that city, state and federal officers

U. S. BUILDS IN GUNS PREPARING FOR CIVIL WAR

By CARL HACKER,
Worker Correspondent.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Oct. 11.—The new federal reserve building recently completed in this city boasts of several "built-in" features, and we wonder just what they are for. For instance, as we pass the main entrance way on E. 6th St., we note that under the third stair there are three small pieces of stone loosely cemented in and we are told that behind each of these a machine gun is mounted, the first pop of which knocks the piece of stone away and then gives the gunner a clean sweep of the street.

We are also that in addition to these three machine guns there are also two others mounted a trifle higher on the same side of the building, in addition to which there are also guns similarly mounted on the Superior Ave. side.

It has also been stated that on the upper floors of the building sufficient arrangements have been made to accommodate the entire working force in-so-far as food supplies, water, beds, etc., are concerned.

Russ Tractor Trade in China.

MOSCOW, Oct.11—A competition of tractors is being organized in the Crimea, in which Soviet and foreign factories will take part. The race is to be started on September 15. The purpose of the competition is to decide on the types of tractors best suitable to the conditions of the Crimean soil.

The preliminary arrangements for the contest have already been completed, and replies have been obtained from a number of foreign firms desirous of taking part in the contest.

PEKING GOVERNMENT'S STAND AGAINST BRITISH CONTROL WORRIES STATE DEPARTMENT

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—Indications that the government set up in Pekin last year will not dare defy Chinese public opinion, but will defy the foreign powers' control of China instead, are engaging the attention of Secretary Kellogg. The state department is informed that British interests in South China are demanding that foreign troops be landed at Canton to suppress the "red" nationalist movement there. This British agitation is interpreted in some official circles in Washington as an attempt to divert attention from the strong stand taken by the Pekin government.

In substance, the Pekin cabinet has decided that it cannot take part in a customs conference unless assured beforehand that abolition of foreign control of Chinese tariff rates is to be granted.

American influence has been largely thrown to the support of British demands thus far. Now the state department must choose between the British refusal to grant the Chinese demands and the hope of getting China to settle down calmly once more.

Anti-Labor Patriots Amalgamate to Nurse White Terror in U. S.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—Taking their cue from big business friends, the anti-labor Sentinels of the Republic are planning a formal merger with the Woman Patriot, organ of the anti-suffrage and anti-labor propaganda in the capital. A meeting of the executive board of the Sentinels will vote on the plan Oct. 13. Since the death of Louis A. Coolidge last spring, Bentley W. Warren, a Boston lawyer, has headed the Sentinels.

Nicholas Murray Butler has taken the chairmanship of the drive to raise a sustaining fund in memory fo Louis Coolidge. Mrs. John Balch of Milton, Mass., remains secretary, and Miss Mary Kilbreth, active in editing the Woman Patriot, has joined the board. The offices of the organization and the paper are already identical.

A rival organization in the anti-labor field, the national association for constitutional government, has just issued the October number of its quarterly, the Constitutional Review.

FRED BRAMLEY DIES AT AMSTERDAM MEET, SAYS LONDON WIRE

LONDON, Oct. 11.— A message from Amsterdam to labor headquarters says Fred Bramley, well known labor leader and former member of parliament, died there suddenly Friday night.

He had been attending a meeting of the executives of the International Federation of Trades Unions. Mr. Bramley, who was 51 years old, had been secretary of the British Trades Union congress since 1923. Bramley was one of the famous delegation to Soviet Russia and has led in the movement for the international trade union unity.

A. F. OF L. TO CONTROL ALL PROPERTY OF STATE AND CITY FEDERATIONS; WIND-UP NEAR

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Oct. 11.—Monday morning will see the present convention of the American Federation of Labor rapidly grinding towards its close with the presentation of gifts, in the forms of gold watches, to each of the fraternal delegates.

But 10:30 o'clock has been set as the time of the special order for the report of the resolutions committee, to which all propositions of importance that usually draw forth the most interesting debates, are referred. The progressive propositions—urging recognition of Soviet Russia, against class collaboration, favoring world trade union unity, urging amalgamation and the labor party—have been referred to this committee and will be reported on.

Eagerness of delegates to wind up meager business of fruitless convention was shown when they refused by vote of thirty-nine to one hundred forty to declare morning half holiday in honor of Columbus day, after plea by Delegate D'Alessandro, of Hod Carriers, made a chevalier by the king of Italy in the days before the war. Monday afternoon has been set aside for Gompers' Memorial services.

Strangle Hold on Federation.

The most heated discussion so far in the convention has taken place over the proposal of the laws committee that the constitution be amended to permit the federation to take over the property of disbanded state and city central labor bodies.

The whole intent of the proposition was revealed in an amendment by Delegates George A. Perkins of the Cigar Makers' union to the effect that such "property be held in trust until such time as the state federation or central labor union shall resume its activities in conformity with the laws of the federation."

Evidently the federation leaders, who claim they have eliminated all progressive influences, are afraid that there are state federations and central labor unions that harbor considerable militant strength, that will have to be disciplined during the coming year. Delegate Dan Tobin, of the Teamsters' Union, reporting for the laws committee, referred to those subsidiary bodies that "harbor those with doctrines hostile to the federation."

The discussion, however, did not hinge on issues of ousting militants, but on the question of whether the federation would be liable for the debts of local and state bodies, if it demanded the right to take over property. No one was willing to assume any debts, but the proposition went thru with the agreement that if it didn't work very well during the coming year it could be changed at the next convention.

Wind Up in Few Days.

The convention rejected the proposition that women's auxiliary organizations be allowed representatives with voice and vote in central labor bodies. Delegate Henry F. Hilfers, for the New Jersey Federation of Labor, was supposed to sponsor this resolution, but he started out by declaring that it had no chance of approval, but that he hoped the women would keep on organizing their auxiliaries, in spite of the fact, as he claimed, that they were not real wage earners.

The convention may finish its work by Wednesday or Thursday. Arthur A. Purcell and Ben Smith, the two British delegates, are preparing to remain until the middle of the week, when they will proceed to Mexico.

FAILURE LOOMS AT LOCARNO 'PEACE' MEET

Briand Takes Boat Ride —Tells Fish Story

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LOCARNO, Switzerland, Oct. 11—Desperate efforts to break the deadlock between Germany and France over the question of the eastern frontiers were made yesterday. Germany still insists that these frontiers affecting Czecho-Slovakia and Poland are subjects for negotiations and refuses to consider France as guarantor of the eastern frontier.

At the morning session a general formula was accepted as a basis for further deliberations, tho Germany reserved the right to reject the thing in its totality in case it proves unsatisfactory. That formula provides that the league of nations shall guarantee the treaties of arbitration, with particular attention to the interests of France. The France-Polish military alliance is to be continued and recognized by Germany.

Germany Cannot Accept.

The delegates to the conference have not been able to decide whether such a proposal, if accepted, should place the power of guarantor in the hands of the league as a whole, the council, or a special body created within the league.

All this speculation is based on the assumption that Germany will accept it, but in view of the strong nationalist sentiment in Germany it is generally conceded that she cannot accept such a proposal, especially in view of the clause forcing Germany to recognize the military alliance between France and Poland.

Italy Enters Pact.

In an effort to reach a satisfactory agreement on the question of the western frontier, embracing the Rhineland, a decision was reached at the morning session to include Italy in the preamble of the pact, making that nation one of the guarantors, with England, of the western frontiers. Italy, thru its representatives, announced that it would sign the pact. That means that the Mussolini government is anxious to enter into an offensive alliance against Soviet Russia.

Leaders Take Boat Ride.

While the afternoon session was abandoned in order that personal discussions could take place, these discussions were of such a nature that the spokesmen for the leading powers involved went boat riding, leaving

WARREN, O., DEMONSTRATION DEMANDS QUICK ADMISSION OF SAKLATVALA TO AMERICA

WARREN, Ohio, Oct. 11.—At a mass meeting held in Warren, Ohio, on Sunday, Oct. 4, the demand that Saklatvala, the representative of British labor, be admitted into the United States, was enthusiastically endorsed by the assembled workers.

This was a representative meeting of the workers of Warren. There were workers of all languages—and nearly half of the audience was made up of Negro workers and their families—listening to the speches of E. Curtis, a member of the Amalgamated Association of Sheet and Tin Workers, Dan Rogers, a Negro worker, and organizer of the Warren branch of the American Negro Labor Congress, and I. Amter, district secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party.

Comrade W. J. White, veteran fighter in Warren, was chairman of the meeting, and pointed out the meaning of excluding Saklatvala from this country. "Did you ever hear of

BISHOP BROWN APPEALS FOR AN INJUNCTION

"Obey" Stricken Out of Marriage Ceremony

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 11. — The house of bishops is confused today over the action of Bishop William Montgomery Brown in going into federal court for an injunction to restrain them from passing sentence of excommunication upon the aged prelate. The house of bishops has already voted the sentence and its formal carrying out is the task of the presiding bishop, the Most Rev. Ethlebert Talbot of Bethlehem.

The court refused to issue a temporary restraining order, but ordered the house of bishops to appear Wednesday and give reasons why such an order should not be issued.

The carrying out of the sentence of unfrocking the heretic bishop on Monday would not be in violation of the court action, but the bishops are bedating the wisdom of carrying it out for fear it might be considered an affront to the court.

Wives Need Not Obey.

The house of deputies recommended the striking of the word "obey" out of the protestant episcopal marriage ceremony, which will probably be adopted. This is considered the better part of wisdom since so few of the wives of the bourgeoisie carry this provision out in practice.

their imperialist messenger boys from the smaller nations on the shore.

Austin Chamberlain, who is striving to secure a temporary settlement of disputes in Europe in order that the energy of the nations may be devoted to a drive against Soviet Russia, was the host. Mrs. Chamberlain served tea to the party, which included Briand, French foreign minister; Gustav Stresemann, German foreign minister and Dr. Hans Luther, German chancellor, and the experts.

Tackled Article 16

Unofficial sources are responsible for the assertion that the discussion resolved around Article 16 of the league covenant, which provide for troops of one state crossing the territory of another state in case a third government is guilty of aggression. Nothing beyond the promise of the allies of a gentlemen's agreement was proposed to the German representatives. That agreement being that if Germany enters the league without reservations that the allied powers will use their influence to modify Article 16.

Allied statesmen have further intimated that they are willing to strive for modification of Article X which provides that all members of the league must participate in a general offensive against a nation in violation of any provisions of the league. This was the famous article upon which the American senators smashed President Wilson's proposal that the U. S. enter the league.

Briand's Fishy Parable

When the boating party returned after five hours the French appeared decidedly optimistic and Aristide Briand, the slimy foreign minister of France, tried to rival Jesus Christ by telling fish stories. On his arrival at his hotel, Briand, told a "parable of the fishes" which was intended to throw light on the results of the boat ride.

"We went to sea to fish," said Briand, "You know there are lots in the lake. We succeeded in identifying several specimens. Then we were told we could find others further on. We proceeded and found several more specimens. Some we would not identify, but on the whole our studies were highly successful."

Chamberlain was not so optimistic and refused to discuss the matter, further than platonic observations about the boat ride being evidence of civilized personal relations between representatives of former enemy nations.

Inform Von Hindenburg

The German representatives retain silence on the outcome of the conference and have dispatched a special emissary to Berlin to lay the results of all the proceedings, official and private, before President Von Hindenburg. It is understood that Hindenburg requested a report on the details of all the conversations so that he may be in a position to answer the nationalists who assail the whole affair at Locarno.

The agents of the tory party in London are issuing statements to foreign correspondents to the effect that Germany has promised to abandon the Rapallo treaty entered into with Russia in 1922, after revealing to Britain and France the details of that treaty.

This is emphatically denied by official spokesmen for Germany here, who asserted that their statement of last week regarding Russia and their assurances to the Russian foreign minister still stand.

WARREN AND YOUNGSTOWN, O., MEMBERSHIP MEETINGS HEAR OF PARTY REORGANIZATION

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WARREN, Ohio, Oct. 11.—A membership meeting was held in Warren on Sunday, Oct. 4, and at Youngstown Saturday night, to discuss Bolshevization and reorganization of the party. Comrade Amter, the district secretary, was the speaker at both meetings.

Comrade Amter gave a full resume of the world situation, and of the situation in the Communist International. He pointed out the nature of the conflicts that are arising in world imperialism and the positive ending in international war. He then showed the forces of labor that are thrown against the coming conflagration. In the Comintern, there are tendencies not in keeping with the definite trend of labor in several countries to the left. On the contrary, in several countries—in Soviet Russia, in 1923 and 1924, in Germany in 1923, in Czecho-Slovakia in 1925, in Italy a so-called ultra-left opportunist tendency represented by Bordiga, in the German party again in 1925, the opportunist tendencies manifesting themselves in the Fischer-Maslow group, all are out of keeping with the definite trend in the labor movement, particularly in England, Czecho-Slovakia, Poland. The visit of the trade union delegations to Soviet Russia and the tremendous impression which the situation in Soviet Russia produced on them is having a revolutionizing effect on the working class.

Hence the slogan of Bolshevization was necessary in order that the Communist Parties might get in touch with the masses, might adopt the right policies to the arising situation, which many of the Communist Parties could not understand—misinterpreting the temporary stabilization of capitalism. To reach the masses, the Communist Parties must be properly organized. Reorganization of the parties on the basis of shop nuclei was imperative, if the parties were to get out of the mire of social-democracy, which they inherited from the past.

Comrade Amter then pointed out that reorganization would not make of our parties Bolshevik parties unless they were prepared to do their work. Education, Marxian-Leninist education, must be imparted to the membership of the party in order that they may be equipped with the tools with which to do their Communist work. And just as the membership must learn the principles of Communism, they must understand the policies of the Comintern and the party. But in the same manner, they must equip themselves with another tool in order to make themselves good soldiers of the revolution in this country. They must learn English, in order to be able to reach the broad masses of the workers.

Education alone is not enough. Our party is a party of action. That member cannot be considered a real Communist who merely understands Communism, but does not engage in the party work. Hence, as the Comintern has pointed out, every member of the party eligible to membership in a trade union must join the union. The district executive committee of District 6, has decided that if these members do not join their union within two months or give valid reason for not doing so, they shall be disciplined. To do their work in the unions the comrades must be organized. Therefore, party fractions are indispensable.

The slogans of the party must be based upon the existing situation. The Comintern has as one of its most important slogans that of the united front. The labor party is the most important slogan on the political field at the present time. All other kinds of united front slogans must be employed in order to draw the workers into struggle. Work among women, work to build up the Y. W. L. and Junior groups, work among Negroes, work against imperialism, building up the defense, spreading the DAILY WORKER and party literature among the masses; these are the immediate tasks of the party, for which the comrades must be ready.

Comrade Amter then went into detail on the reorganization of the party; how it will be reorganized and how it will function.

The meeting at Warren manifested intense interest, many questions were asked and a discussion took place. The Youngstown meeting was not well-attended; therefore, it was decided to hold another meeting on October 25, to discuss the matter once more.

Warren is ready ideologically for reorganization. The Finnish district committee is holding educational meetings in the various branches of the district to prepare the comrades for the reorganization.

ITALIAN CABINET ISSUES FASCIST DECREES AS LAWS

Dictators Make Strikes a Capital Crime

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ROME, Oct. 11. — The council of Italian ministers controlled completely by the fascisti, has issued decrees which place the Italian people absolutely at the mercy of the fascist dictatorship.

Decrees of Fascist Dictators.

One creates courts for compulsory arbitration of labor disputes, making strikes punishable by death.

Another unifies the army, navy and aviation corps under the control of fascist officers.

A third merges the six forms of civil police bodies into a national body, wiping out the powers of municipal and provincial departments and centralizing all police power in the hands of the fascist national center at Rome.

The fourth "reorganizes" the senate, practically abolishing elections to that body, and making it in effect a rubber stamp group of senators appointed by Mussolini.

Barbaric Murderfest at Florence.

In spite of the severe censorship, the Florence murders by the fascisti of free masons, are learned to be far larger than the fascist press admits. Fully eighteen men were murdered in reprisal for the death of one fascist who had invaded the home of a mason without warrant of law and with arms in hand. Many of those murdered were assassinated under the most brutal circumstances. Fascist bands broke into their homes, stabbing and shooting the men to death while in bed and in the presence of their terror stricken wives and children. In many instances the house was wrecked and set afire.

Contrary to censored news, the fascist authorities did not attempt to stop the massacre, and issued orders to police and troops to keep the fascists from being interfered with by any opposition.

EX-SAILOR IS GIVEN TASTE OF CAPITALIST DEMOCRACY HE GUARDED

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 11—Several weeks ago someone forged the name of "W. W. Reynolds" to a liberty bond at Mare Island, Cal. Washington records disclosed a William W. Reynolds, an ex-sailor now living in Tampa, Fla., a man with an excellent record who was discharged after being wounded in action. Reynolds was located in Tampa, and was the only support of his aged mother. In spite of his record and his protestations of innocence he was immediately shipped to San Francisco (where he had not been for 16 years) under guard, and lodged in jail there, his mother being left destitute. After some time in jail as a common criminal, he succeeded in securing legal help, the lawyer proving conclusively that Reynolds had nothing to do with forging the bond. The case was dimsissed, and Reynolds left jail with 10c in his pocket. Now the government announces that it will "probably" return Reynolds to his home in Tampa, and meanwhile he is being fed and lodged by the charity of the Red Cross. Join the navy and see the world!

BALDWIN IN TORY CONFAB ASSAILS BRITISH REBELS

Communists Will Not Be Bluffed by Him

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Oct. 11.—Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin in an address before the annual meeting of the Unionist (Tory) party at Brighton last night continued the bombastic threats against the reds that have lately come forth with monotonous regularity from spokesmen for the government, promised a reduction in taxes next year and expressed a confidence that both international conferences now in session, one in Locarno and the other in Shanghai, would terminate satisfactorily for the empire.

Stealing the thunder of his predecessor, J. Ramsey MacDonald, the prime minister asserted that work toward the pacification of Europe was the major task of the government at this time.

Assails Communists

In the part of his speech devoted to the unemployed problem he tried to divert attention from the growing army of jobless workers by launching into a vitriolic attack against the Communists. Expressing his alarm at the tremendous growth of Communist influence in England he predicted that "the Communists will fail here as they failed in the United States and Germany, and will fail in France."

This ludicrous assertion evoked sarcastic smiles from the more enlightened of the Tories who realized the absurdity of comparing the situation in the United States with that in Germany. Baldwin probably meant that the British government was preparing to use the methods of Palmer and Daugherty against the reds in Britain.

Must Not "Seduce" Troops

In his attack on the Communists Baldwin said: "The government will employ all the power the law gives to deal with attempts to seduce the troops with seditious speeches. The government is fully alive to the danger and will do its utmost to protect the best interests of the country." The "best interests" being, in the lexicon of Baldwin, the interests of the most reactionary strata of the ruling class.

Pact Should Be Simple

Referring to the security pact at Locarno, where Austin Chamberlain, British foreign minister is trying to create a bloc against Soviet Russia, Baldwin said the difficulty had been to keep the scheme simple and straight forward, and referred to the proposal that Germany enter the league of nations.

On the subject of Irak he did not forget the world struggle for oil and asserted that the "legal right of Irak (a British protectorate) to the province of Mosul was as good as her legal right to any other part of her territory."

In dealing with home questions he concluded by promising concessions to the petty bourgeoisie elements, advocating reforms in the house of lords and a reduction of taxes, neither of which he can possibly hope to carry out. In the first place the nabobs in the house of lords will resent any meddling even from the tory government of Baldwin and in the second place the imperative necessity of maintaining and even increasing the unemployed dole makes reduction of taxes absolutely impossible.

The Communist Party of Great Britain will not in any manner refrain from its work among the armed forces of the nation and in respect to so-called seditious utterances will openly defy Baldwin and his government.

Australian Labor Party Head Speaks Upon Its Policies

MELBOURNE, Australia, Oct. 11.—Matthew Charlton, leader of the Australian labor party, in a speech outlining the policy of the party, sets forth the strange mixture of principles which will guide this increasingly infuential organization.

The party demands that Australia have a voice in foreign affairs of Great Britain, and states that Australia should not be committed to overseas war decided on by Great Britain alone. The foreign policy of Australia is demanded to be developed in Australia, in day light, and not in London fogs.

The labor party stands for a protectionist tariff policy, opposes immigration, wants conscription abolished and cruisers scrapped, but plenty of submarines and shore fortifications.

The party wants extension of the commonwealth shipping line, cheaper freights, larger storage houses in London and a compulsory wheat pool.

Charlton's speech ridiculed the "red" scares so frequent of late as to be continuous. Strikes were not abnormal and if any "Bolshevik agent" broke the law, the government could arrest him, he said. As for deportation, the cure-all for the red baiters under Premier Bruce, deportation now was only applied to labor unionists and political opposition. One might be a burglar or a murderer and could not be deported, but a labor union leader who orders a strike or stoppage of work is promptly seized and deported.

BIG LAND HOLDINGS WILL USHER IN ERA OF FACTORY FARMING

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., —(FP)— That one-fourth of the total farm acreage in the United States was held in tracts of 1,000 acres or more, in the year 1920, is announced by Benjamin C. Marsh of the Farmers' National Council after a study census figures. He cites this fact as showing that the danger to the individual American which rests in the trustification of manufacturing and transportation industries is now beginning to apply to farming.

"With the substitution of electric machine and motor power, on farms, for man power," says Marsh, "the agricultural revolution is in full swing. 'Factory farming' will continue to increase with amazing rapidity." Average farm wages in 1923 were $46.91 per month without board, or $33.18 with board.

ANOTHER DEFEAT IN NEWSPAPERS FOR ABD-EL KRIM

Be-medalled Dictator Claims Mastery

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Oct. 11—Reports from Morrocco quote the Spanish dictator, General Primo de Rivera, as claiming that Abd-el Krim's army is broken and Krim is hiding with about a thousand men in mountain fastnesses.

Bolshevism's Bemedalled Enemy.

The general, who wears all of seventy medals on his chest, boasts that "Above all, Krim's defeat is a serious blow to Bolshevism." This he considers much more menacing to the imperialist nations than "yellow" or "brown" perils, so-called, tho he is shrewd enuf to see that the interests of the oppressed races coincide with the interests of Bolshevism as against the domination of imperialist exploitation.

"Anyone, imagining that the only result of the war in Morocco is the fate of Abd-el Krim's toy kingdom, is mightily mistaken," he says. "I maintain that the result will be responsible for far-reaching, world-wide future effects."

A Policy of Complete Subjection.

"Before Spain is satisfied, Spanish troops must march thru the Riff mountains. We have done it before and we will do it again. We must make Krim feel a thoro defefeat. Otherwise he will remain a menace to the security of the white races in North Africa."

Altho the dictator is bent on annihilation of the Riffians and carries out a war of barbaric reprisals on captives and tribes whose territory Spanish troops occupy, he was forced to admit that the Riffian troops fight bravely and with heroic perseverence for the independence of their native soil from the rule of foreign invaders.

The dictator's explanation of his censorship over the press in Spain hardly proves any anxiety about the "white race." He declares, of course, that it is "extremely light and only to prevent irresponsible elements from making trouble."

Senator A. B. Cummins Wants Next Congress to Curb Economic Laws

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 11—In a conference today with President Coolidge, Senator Albert B. Cummins, of Iowa, asserted that the demands of the farmers of the northwest to the coming congress included legislation making it impossible for foreign markets to set prices on American grain. He wants assurances, thru legislation, of good prices for American farm products, regardless of the condition of the world markets.

It is characteristic of the simple minds of American statesmen to desire legislation that will overcome fundamental economic laws. In spite of the desires of Cummins and other middle-west politicians prices of American farm products will fall whenever other grain producing nations have big crops.

Cummins thinks that if world grain prices can be citated by the American congress there will be less danger of agrarian political revolt against the republican party.

To Preserve Ancient Park of Czar Peter the Second in Moscow

MOSCOW, Oct. 11.—A special committee has been appointed to take steps for the preservation of the ancient park situated near the village of Sharapovo in the province of Moscow, which had once belonged to Peter II of Russia and had been presented by him to his bride, Princess Dolgeruki.

The park was laid out in the shape of a star, and it now contains spruce and lime trees that are 2 centuries old. There are many exceptional specimens with trunks of the thickness of 1½-2 girths.

Lodging Houses Built for Transient Workers in City of Moscow

MOSCOW, Oct. 11—In order to provide accommodation for transient laborers coming to Moscow, four new lodging houses have been erected and equipped to accommodate 3,500 people daily. The houses are provided with all modern comforts, laundries, baths, ambulatories, etc.

A good deal of educational and cultural work is carried on at these houses, at which reading rooms and clubs have been established.

CHICAGO UNIONS AT A. F. OF L. MEET EXPECTING AID

Pressmen and A. C. W. Not So Hopeful

By CARL HAESSLER
Federated Press Editor.

The Atlantic City convention of the American Federation of Labor turned the eyes of Chicago labor eastward this week. The metal polishers, on strike at the Cribben & Sexton Universal Gas Range and Stove plant against victimization of union members are putting their case before the national labor conclave.

Organized bank clerks, anxious to increase the enrolled percentage of Chicago's 10,000 bank clerks, have obtained from the federation a unanimous recommendation that labor banks employ only union staffs and that labor organizations do not patronize unorganized banks. Chicago's labor bank, the Amalgamated, is 100 per cent organized but less than 1 per cent of all bank clerks in the city have a union card.

Thumbs Down, from Green.

Local 3, the veteran pressmen's local ousted by Pres. George Berry for continuing a strike against speeding-up, expects no relief from Atlantic City, however. Nor does the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union, now in its 16th week of struggle against the Intl. Tailoring Co. wage cutting, hope that the A. F. of L. will condemn the open strikebreaking of the United Garment Workers.

The Amalgamated is not affiliated with the general body while the United's president, Tom Rickert, the leader of the strikebreaking raid on the Amalgamated stronghold, sits on the A. F. of L. executive council. The teachers are represented at the convention by Gen. Secy. Stecker of Chicago.

The Communists, declared outlaws by Green, are elated by the pro-Russian speech of A. A. Purcell, the British fraternal delegate at Atlantic City, but expect short mercy for the radical resolutions. Many of these were introduced by a Chicago delegates, Pres. Joe Shafir of the Bank Employes Assn., a federal union that gets its charter direct from the A. F. of L.

Expect 500 Delegates, Says Whiteman.

While Negro delegates are knocking at the eastern convention door for help in entering unions of their crafts which now bar them, the American Negro Labor Congress to be held in Chicago Oct. 25, is completing its preliminary arrangements. Tho blacklisted by Pres. Green of the A. F. of L. as an organization in which Communists are a sizable factor, national organizer Lovett Fort-Whiteman announces that the prospects for 500 delegates are favorable.

He states the aim of the congress is "to mobilize and to coordinate into a fighting machine the most enlightened and militant and class conscious workers of the race in the struggle for the abolition of lynching, jimcrowism, industrial discrimination, political disfranchisement, segregation, etc." The offices are at 19 S. Lincoln St., Chicago.

U. S. S. R. Education Program Abolishing Illiteracy Rapidly

MOSCOW, Oct. 11. — From June, 1924, until January, 1925, the network of rural literary stations in 23 provinces of R. S. F. S. R. was increased from 6,874 to 11,745. In some of the provinces the number of rural literary schools was increased 4-5 times.

The opinion was expressed by M. Khodorovsky, assistant commissary of education, that by the tenth anniversary of the October revolution there would be disposed of not less than 75 per cent of the illiteracy among the adult rural population.

ADMINISTRATION TO BACK MERGERS OF RAILROADS

President Wants Such Rail Legislation

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 11.—The question of railway consolidation will be one of the chief recommendations of the interstate commerce committee at the coming session of congress, according to today's developments.

In his discussion with President Coolidge at the white house today Senator Cummins of Iowa urged that the administration endorse the policy of devising plans for the merger of the great trunk lines of the country into a limited number of systems and the elimination of competition so that adequate equipment will be available for the rapid transport of farm products.

May Force Mergers

The plan is to offer the railroads guarantees that will protect them during such consolidation and give them a period of from five to seven years in which to perfect the system.

In case this is not done the next step is to force consolidation by taking a portion of the net earnings from the larger roads and distributing them pro-rata among the weaker roads according to their capitalization. This scheme will force the larger roads to take charge of the smaller ones in order to protect their net earnings.

Plot of Big Roads

This move is in the interest of the big roads dominated by bank capital and since the recommendations to congress are to be made by the interstate commerce commission the proposals for merging the various lines will be so devised that those trunk lines opposing those in favor of mergers will be forced to buy up the tributary roads in their territories. To do this will require the floating of new issues thru Wall Street banks thus placing all railroads under domination of the money combine.

CZECHO-SLOVAK DEBT TO BE PAID DURING 62 YEARS

But Revolution Is Bound to Intervene

(Special to The DAILY WORKER.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—The political agents of the House of Morgan at Washington have secured an agreement from the Czecho-Slovakian debt commission whereby their debt will be paid to the United States. The Wall Street banks are to immediately float Czecho-Slovakian bond issues based upon the industries of that nation, thereby bringing the economic life of the country under the control of the American banking combine.

62-Year Agreement.

After an inspection of the complicated records pertaining to the debt, the American and Czech commissions agreed upon a lump sum of $115,000,000 as the principal of the debt. This government originally held the debt to have been something over $117,000,000.

Including interest at 3 per cent for the first ten years and 3½ thereafter the Czechs will pay to United States a total of about $300,000,000.

Owing to heavy interest burdens of the debtor, amounting to over $86,000,000 annually, the debt commission agreed to accept a flat sum of $3,000,000 annually for the first 18 years. During the last forty-four years payments will average close to $6,000,000, the agreement providing for completion of the funding program in 62 years.

Revolution Will Intervene.

Critical observers of world politics view with amusement these long term agreements, for tho they serve the immediate ambitions of the House of Morgan to bring all of Central Europe under its domination, the ever-increasing concentration of power of the proletariat will sweep all such agreements into the waste basket of history long before one-third of the time set for the liquidation of the debt has elapsed.

If you want to thoroughly understand Communism—study it.

DOES THE AMERICAN LEGION SUPPORT "MORGAN'S STATE"?

had their instructions not to interfere. The legion's support apparently means much to the politician and militarists. The American legion is composed of young men of high spirits, and when turned loose they could hardly fail to go to excess. These young men are neither bad nor good, it is the apparently deliberate attempt to debauch them by businessmen, politicians and professionals, that is responsible.

It is reported that a carload of liquor from Canada was sent to Omaha for this convention. Appearances would indicate that this was the fact as much of the stuff was Canadian bond. This was consumed the first day, and then home brew and bootleg appeared in plenty. A cabaret was opened and liquor sold freely over the counter. Local and federal prohibition agents apparently "discovered" it and a grand jury investigation is to be made.

Not only men, but many young girls were to be seen on the streets in an intoxicated condition. Full of "spirit" the visitors appropriated whatever took their fancy, including the girls.

Business is Business.

Many of the leaders of the legion, who are businessmen, took advantage of the opportunity to advertise and drum up trade. While the rank and file, brought along for scenery and poll parrots, were revelling in the yearly "freedom," the businessmen were trying to add to their profits by selling goods or real estate. The parade advertised Kansas wheat, Iowa corn, Florida real estate, etc., while the gaudy uniforms that cost thousands of dollars give color to the advertising.

Omaha spent a hundred thousand or more to decorate and bring the convention here. Business expects a million in return in actual dollars, while they cater to the organization that supports their game. Profit and protection for the same dollar.

Omaha Post's Rake-off.

Omaha legion is reported to have the largest membership in the world. They put on a rodeo for the convention, in fact they held some affair every week and get large profits. They handed out concessions and permits to vendors that netted them a good profit from the convention. Recently every merchant had to buy American flags from the legion and pay for placing standards in front of their stores. The decorations for the convention also netted the legion post a fat percentage, even a small emblem costing $3 to $4, and altogether must have meant thousands. There is no rush to join the legion, so it would appear that these large profits remain in the hands of a very few who control.

"Soft Pedal" Mitchell's Protest.

Colonel Mitchell is a member of Washington, D. C., legion post, and very much admired. However, when it came to supporting his criticism of the war department on administration of aviation, they blue-penciled Mitchell's name and statements. The legion is the recipient of many favors from the government and present administration so they shut off the "static." They may be 100 per cent, but when it comes to "lame ducks," the legion comes first.

"War Ladies Rout Pacifism."

The American legion auxiliary received high praise for the firm stand they took on adequate defense as the best peace time insurance. Garland W. Powell, Washington, D. C., former head of the legion's Americanism committee, is quoted as saying: "You women have done much to stem the tide of extreme pacifism which was growing up among women's organizations."

Mrs. Ruth McCurry Brown, auxiliary Americanism chairman, is quoted as saying: "'It is up to us, the largest group of patriotic women to combat all radical movements—the youth movement, peace-at-any-price organizations, Bolshevists, Communists and every type seeking to undermine our nation. While we hope there is no danger of actual Bolshevism in America, the radical effort is reflected even now in unrest, political quackery, unwise laws and attacks on the constitution—all at the expense of national growth." Mrs. Brown expressed the belief that an army of unrest in America is only waiting for a leader.

"Majah" Berry Chimes In.

"Majah" George Berry, president of the International Pressmen's Union, spoke to the convention with deep regret of the death of Samuel Gompers, and of Gompers' interest in the legion, and pledged the co-operation of his successor, William Green, in the patriotic work of the legion.

George assured the legion that the A. F. of L. is American, that the organized men and women would resent any encroachment on our government as quickly as any organization. "That the economic, social and intellectual standard in America is unsurpassed and unequalled in any other nation of the world."

"We believe," said George the "mejah," "that this most desirable condition is the result of our form of government, hence the labor movement of America is American and it is against Communism, Sovietism or any other type of 'ism' in contravention of our Americanism."

He then cited labor's endorsement of rigid restriction of immigration, for Americanism, support of government, universal draft, citizen's military training camps, Woodrow Wilson memorial college, etc., showing how close the A. F. of L. is to the legion. The World-Herald reporter does not credit the "majah" with raising any applause for the fish he brought on a platter.

Bolshevists Are Pipe Pipers.

The Americanism branch of the legion plan to use the nation's love of athletics as a means to combat the youth movement of the radical forces.

A junior world's series in baseball was proposed last Sunday at the conference by Major John L. Griffith of Chicago. He is quoted as saying: "Competition among boys from 15 to 17 years, sponsored thru the legion posts of the nation, would offer one of the most effective ways to instill in them 'that spirit we know as Americanism' that he knows of."

At present, Major Griffith estimated that only three or four million of the 16 million youth of the nation are being reached. Defense day, he suggested, might also be a time to take stock of the athletic fitness of the youth, in this way to create a philosophy of life that will combat the radical idea.

Frank C. Cross, of Indianapolis, national director of Americanism, said the radical movement is growing and claims a number equal to that of the legion. They are busy in summer schools with an organization similar to the boy scouts and try to introduce one of their number in every scout troop they can. They sow hatred of the well-to-do instead of teaching service. They are organizing clubs in colleges, even have Sunday schools and publish fairy tales suited to their own purpose.

"The I. W. W. as an organization is doomed," Director Cross said, "because of a split in its ranks. The Workers Party is taking in youth. They also are active among the Negroes. The American Civil Liberties Union is a friend of this element."

Referring to disturbances in the south, Mrs. Mabel Spaulding of Mobile, Ala., said: "We have little trouble with the Negro, but our men certainly do handle the other element right down in our country."

The Glamor Is Fading.

The legion convention was expected to bring a hundred thousand visitors and delegates to Omaha. Less then one-fourth of that number appeared, if we discount those who come regularly to see the small town show as Ak-Sar-Ben every year. Even many of those kept away on account of rumors of rowdyism. In spite of persistent drives for membership, gaudy uniforms and a circus and debauch free of charge every year, the legion is going down hill rapidly. It holds something for the few, but has nothing to offer to the great mass of young ex-service men. Desperate efforts are being made by the government, military and big business to hold up the organization, but to no avail.

THIS WEEK WORKERS IN NEW YORK, PITTSBURGH AND CLEVELAND WILL HEAR ENGDAHL ON THE A. F. OF L. CONVENTION

J. Louis Engdahl, editor of the DAILY WORKER, directly from the American Federation of Labor convention will go on a speaking tour which takes in New York, Pittsburgh and Cleveland. Mass meetings have been arranged and the workers in these cities will get first hand information on how the "fat boys" at Atlantic City took to Purcell's speech in which he forced the issue of solidarity with the Russian workers on the convention floor.

Soviet Russia Biggest Issue

Despite the attempts of the reactionary bureaucracy to keep the issue of Soviet Russia and Communist activities from the floor of the convention, this issue was the biggest that the convention faced during all the sessions.

Soviet Russia, world trade union unity, the Dawes plan and other international and national issues showed the convention that the Communists were a live force in the labor movement and that their role was not the destruction, but the strengthening of the labor movement.

Engdahl Speaks in New York

NEW YORK CITY, Oct. 11.—The workers of New York City will be able to hear J. Louis Engdahl on the American Federation of Labor convention on Friday October 16th at 8 p. m. at the Manhattan Lyceum, 66 East 4th street.

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 11.—A mass meeting will be held in Pittsburgh, Saturday evening October 17th where Comrade J. Louis Engdahl will speak on the American Federation of Labor convention.

Cleveland Meeting

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Oct. 11.—John Louis Engdahl, editor of the DAILY WORKER will speak on the A. F. of L. convention and the American Communist movement at Insurance Exchange Hall, 11th and Walnut Sts., Oct. 13th at 8 p. m.

GEORGE PERLMAN W. P. CANDIDATE IN NEW JERSEY

New Petitions Filled by State Committee

NEW YORK CITY, Oct. 11.—Comrade George Perlman, an active worker of the party in Jersey City, has been nominated by the Workers Party for governor in New Jersey in preference to Charles Keene.

Comrade George Perlman has been associated with the labor movement for many years and is well known among the workers in New Jersey for his actions in behalf of the revolutionary movement.

Because of the change in candidates it was necessary to fill out new petitions and this work was splendidly accomplished by the New Jersey state campaign committee embracing the comrades of Newark, Perth Amboy, North Hudson and the surrounding vicinity. The campaign committee of New Jersey has arranged for regular meetings in the chief cities in New Jersey and a good month of campaigning in behalf of the Communist ticket has been arranged.

Warren, O., Workers Demand Admission of Saklatvala

a prince being excluded from this country? Of course not; but when the representative of British labor and the representative of the downtrodden Indian masses wishes to come to this country, Mr. Kellogg finds nothing better to do than to keep him out."

Brother Curtis spoke of the necessity of organization. He told of the many fights that the workers have had in this country, of the condition to which they are debased and declared that the reason that Saklatvala was excluded was that he may have told the truth about conditions which the employers wanted to cover up.

Dan Rogers, the Negro organizer, spoke particularly of the American Negro Labor Congress, and what it will mean to the Negro worker. Warren is sending three delegates to the congress.

Comrade Amter, the main speaker, made an expose of the condition of the Indian workers, who labor 12 and 14 hours a day for a mere pittance. The Indian peasants are crushed by tributes and taxes, and when they revolt, British troops, airplanes, machine guns and bombs are sent to shoot them down.

The workers of the United States need a labor party built first of all on organized labor. A party fighting for the interests of the workers, and makes no distinction between white and black workers.

The mention of the Soviet government caused hearty applause especially from the Negro workers who were present.

A resolution demanding the admittance of Saklatvala was adopted

Erect Monument at Kiev for Heroes Who Fell in 1905 Revolt

KIEV, Oct. 11.—A great monument is being erected at Kiev to the heroes who fell in the revolution of 1905.

Memorial tablets are also to be fixed to the building of the Sapper Barracks, where the soldiers revolted in 1905, and to the building of the Polytechnical Institute, where the meetings of the first Soviet of Workers' Deputies of Kiev were held.

Mexican Labor Unions Being Betrayed Into Class Collaboration

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 11—That Mexican labor unions are headed to the same fatal end as those of Italy under the fascisti, is foreseen by many, as the corrupt leaders of the Confederation Regional Obera Mexican continue the course of collaboration with the employers and with the Calles government.

In the textile convention now in session these so-called labor leaders are forcing the workers to agree on a program of co-operation with the textile bosses which will prevent the workers going on strike under any circumstances.

One of the reformist leaders advocates this policy as a benefit to labor, saying: "It is time we put a halt to strikes and attempted to find a way of working in harmony with the employers. The Mexican Federatoion of Labor (C. R. O. M.) has realized this, and has made most important steps in this direction."

Fight Illiteracy in Ukrainia

MOSCOW, Oct. 11—During the year 1925-26 it is proposed to introduce universal education in the Ukraine. There will be opened 12,650 new schools for children of 8-9 years of age.

An illiteracy campaign will be conducted among the two million adults and 12-13 year old who are illiterate. Great attention will be devoted to the development of propaganda for the pursuit of the arts and sciences.

A number of new institutions of art and science are to be opened.

SUPPORT BEN GITLOW, WORKERS' CANDIDATE, AGAINST NORMAN THOMAS, CAPITALIST LACKEY!

By SYLVIAN A. POLLACK.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—In this mayoralty campaign the socialist party has nominated as their candidate and standard bearer a preacher, the Rev. Norman Thomas, who is supposed to be a pacifist and by his preaching blunts the fighting spirit of many workers. His party in this country, as well as its brohter parties in Europe, have shown on every occasion, when the workers assert themselves, they are not the representatives of the working class, but as the Communist International has correctly termed them, "the left wing of the bourgeoisie."

We have only to look back to the time when Ramsay MacDonald was the "socialist premier" of capitalist England and we find him suppressing the nationalist revolutionary movement in India and elsewhere as brutally as Lloyd George or Stanley Baldwin.

In Bulgaria we find the socialists supporting the fascist government of Zankov.

In Poland they help Grabski send Communists to the gallows and in France they support the imperialist war of that country against the Riffs. The list is endless. Many more facts could be cited from the murdering of Karl Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg in Germany, to their support of the Dawes plan, which enslaves the German working class to the Wall Street bankers.

At the 1919 convention of the socialist party, they condemned the league of nations and called it the "Black International," but today Thomas and the socialist party are supporting the world court and the league of nations, which has as its purpose the overthrow of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics and the enslavement of the workers of the world.

Thomas has supported Sigman and the socialist bureaucracy of the International Ladies' Garment Workers in their fight to help the bosses put over Governor Smith's needle trades award on the rank and file.

Thomas has rejected the Workers (Communist) Party's offer for a United Labor ticket, and is responsible for dividing the workers' politically. He proposes a unity between the small businessmen and professional elements and the workers, under the leadership of the small business man and professional. United fronts of the socialists are always to the right with reactionary labor leaders, small business men, and never to the left with the class conscious workers.

Behind Thomas stands Hillquit, stockholder in the Burns Bros. Coal Co., which is now trying to import coal to break the American miners' strike. Another of his cronies is Abe Cahn who has prostituted the paper which the Jewish workers of New York built up at the cost of tremendous sacrifices. The Forward is now a weapon against the workers in the needle trades and is used to slander workers in their fight with the bureaucracy of their unions, and against Soviet Russia.

The socialist party misleads and divides the working class. It is not the instrument of the class struggle but of class collaboration. They have become the best flunkeys of capitalism, doing all the dirty work. Whenever the militant workers gain any strength, the socialists are called in to defeat the workers.

Down with such treachery!

Support the workers' candidate in he coming election—Ben Gitlow!

Work and vote for Communism!

Can the American Bolsheviks Maintain Their Daily Paper?

By MORITZ J. LOEB.

It was no easy task for the Communist workers in America to establish their daily paper. Once established, the DAILY WORKER encountered from the beginning a bitter and difficult struggle to secure its very existence. Because thousands of workers participated in this struggle and because they gave themselves generously and bravely we still have the DAILY WORKER as the leading organ of the class struggle in America.

Now the DAILY WORKER is again in the throes of a deep-going crisis. It is again a question as to whether or not the DAILY WORKER can survive. The question was once asked, "CAN THE BOLSHEVIKS ESTABLISH A DAILY PAPER IN AMERICA?" That question was answered with a thunderous YES two years ago. Now the question must be asked, considered with all gravity and answered, "CAN THE BOLSHEVIKS MAINTAIN THEIR PAPER?"

The question posed is not a theoretical one. If it is a matter of theory, the answer would theoretically be, "Yes, the Bolsheviks not only can maintain their paper, but they MUST."

But to a practical problem such as we now have before us there can be no answer of theory only. "Not can we keep the DAILY WORKER alive, but WILL we?" It is a matter of DEEDS, not words.

• • • •

In America there are some three thousand capitalist daily papers, each of them so many knives as the throat of the militant working class. The entire capitalist class gives unstinting support to this arsenal of hate against the workers and the workers themselves are by means of force compelled every day and hour of their lives to give, unwillingly, but to give just the same, support to the press which is their enemy.

A small section of the working class has made possible the establishment of the DAILY WORKER. It is the answer of the Communist workers and the militants to the capitalist press. It is more, it is their challenge and their threat. A small section of the working class gave life to the DAILY WORKER, was able to do so because this small body acted as a unit, each individual straining to the utmost.

The DAILY WORKER now struggles for maintenance. Will it succeed in this effort? Not unless every Communist, every militant fighter for the working class participates in this struggle, gives as much and as frequently as is "COMMUNISTICALLY" possible.

The Communists along with the rest of the working class gives support to the capitalist press. A part of every hour's labor we perform is wrung from us for the the benefit of capitalism and all of its institutions.

But we have played a huge trick on capitalism. We have stolen a part of our labor of which capitalism claims all and have converted it into our party and our press. This we have done in the past; this we must do again and yet again.

Let every militant steal a part of his wages during the next weeks to save the DAILY WORKER.

Let every militant hand at the throttle make the rails sing "SAVE THE DAILY WORKER"; every fighting coal miner's pick, bite to the same tune. Let the hum of the sewing machines and the roar of the steel furnaces join the chorus, the snare drum of the riveter and the bass drum of the blacksmith's sledge keep the time. In every shop or mine or factory where there are class conscious workers let the sounds of labor echo, "SAVE THE DAILY WORKER."

Can the Bolsheviks maintain their daily paper? What a question!!! If they are really Bolsheviks they WILL.

HELP SAVE THE DAILY WORKER!

CHICAGO MEMBERSHIP MEETING—RUTHENBERG'S SPEECH DISCUSSION

The Chicago membership meeting of the Workers (Communist) Party held Wednesday evening at Northwest Hall to discuss the reorganization and bolshevization of the party, after four hours of discussion, voted unanimously for a resolution offered by Comrade Ruthenberg on behalf of the Central Executive Committee. The resolution pledges full support of a united membership to the C. E. C. for the campaign to reorganize the party on the shop nucleus basis and for the Bolshevization of the party and the liquidation of Loreism, and declares that the latest decision of the Communist International on the question of the groups within the party leadership lays the basis for the unification and development of the party.

An amendment which raised the question of alleged removals and replacements, offered by Comrade Arne Swabeck as an addition to the C. E. C. resolution, and which Comrade Foster asked to be passed together with the resolution, was voted down by a vote of 225 to 150, after which the C. E. C. resolution was passed unanimously.

Ruthenberg Speaks

Comrade C. E. Ruthenberg, general secretary of the party, in reporting on behalf of Central Executive Committee, stated that the whole question to be considered could be summed up with a single word: "Bolshevization." The process of Bolshevizing our party, he said, is a part of the life of the party in the past. The Bolshevizing of a Communist Party is not accomplished merely by a number of measures taken at a certain time, but is a long process which goes on from the time of birth of the party. In Russia he had observed that altho our Russian comrades had been carrying on the work of Bolshevizing their party for twenty-five years, nevertheless they still found it important to Bolshevize their party.

Every step toward clarifying the minds of the members and developing within the party a Communist leadership,—all of this is a part of the process of Bolshevization.

This process, said Comrade Ruthenberg, extends in our party thruout its history during the past six years, and particularly during the past year and a half or two years. Our purpose in coming here is to prepare for greater steps. The goal for which the present leadership of the party will strive, is a tremendous acceleration of the process at this time.

Three Phases of Development.

Our party, which was six years old at the time of our recent convention, said Comrade Ruthenberg, has gone thru in that six-year period three phases of development. In 1919 there had been organized a group of members of the socialist party who had been influenced by the event of the Russian revolution to break with the opportunist leaders. This group was organized on the basis of the differences between the socialists and the Communists, between those who did and those who did not understand that the aims could be attained only by revolutionary methods, thru armed insurrection and the overthrow of the capitalist state. But the Communist Party in 1919 did not understand how to connect its revolutionary ideas and propaganda with the everyday struggles of the masses. In other words, we were a sectarian propaganda society teaching the workers the necessity of armed insurrection in the final stage. This period was about two years, during the underground life of the party, and the underground existence increased this tendency.

The second phase can be said to begin with the organization of the Workers Party at the beginning of the year 1922. In this phase we not only became a Communist Party as distinguished from a propaganda sect, but we were beginning the work of Bolshevizing the party thru learning the way to connect out activities with the struggles of the masses, learning to apply Communist principles to the struggle; we found the way to approach the masses of the workers.

During this period and as a result of coming into the open we absorbed into our party a number of elements which had not gone thru the earlier phase of storm and stress and development. Thru this fact has come a situation in which our party has met a crisis. But it is another crisis in the process of Bolshevization. The crisis has come, said Comrade Ruthenberg, on the question of the road that our party must follow in order to become a mass Communist Party. Some comrades bemoan the fact that we have had to endure this crisis for the past year and a half; but it was a part of the process of Bolshevization thru which it was necessary for the party to go. There is no way thru which the party can come to correct policies except thru a struggle against wrong policies. We have now turned away from the road that leads back toward sectarianism.

What was the struggle in the party conventon at the end of 1923, asked Comrade Ruthenberg. We had brot into the organization of the Workers Party large elements which had not gone thru the process of the earlier steps of Bolshevization. The Finnish Federation which had not gone thru this process became the largest portion of the party with 7,000 members, the greater part of whom had no understanding of Communist principles and were carrying on their activities solely as a social organization. Great numbers of these comrades had absolutely no political conceptions, not even of a socialist party, let alone of a Communist Party. We had brot into the party the Jewish, German, Scandanavian, Czecho-Slovak and Finnish federations from the socialist party, who had not been thru the process of the earlier period; and naturally the conception of the role and duties of a Communist Party was not as clear for them as it was for those groups in the party which had gone thru the fire of the previous years of struggle toward forming a Bolshevist party. And so we found that there was a certain crystallization of these newer elements under the leadership of the group which came into power in the party convention at the end of 1923. It is not often that one can show sufficiently clearly at the beginning one kind or another kind of grouping in a party; but that this was the situation the development of the past year and a half have shown.

The errors of the party in the year 1924 were not chance errors, but errors that sprang out of the nature of the elements which formed the basis of the majority of the convention of 1923. If we have a leadership based upon a right wing, that leadership will inevitably make concessions to the group that it represents, and we will find a consolidation between the rank and file of that group and that leadership.

That is what happened in 1924. Instead of continuing our development instead of continuing the process of Bolshevization, we went on the back track, we began to deviate in the direction of sectarianism, to become once more a propaganda society rather than a Communist Party, to say nothing of a Bolshevized Communist Party. This was shown in the error on the labor party question, which was a sectarian error; and again on the question of women's work, and still again in the rejecting of proposals for the formation of other non-party organizations. We had been developing a right-wing sectarianism rather than making the gains that should have been made toward becoming a Bolshevik party.

Other evidences of the trend during that year, continued Comrade Ruthenberg, were shown in the issue of Trotskyism and of Loreism, which showed that the leadership of the party were taking an orientation toward the right wing, toward that group which he had described as the least Communist in the party.

From this development, said Comrade Ruthenberg, we were saved to a certain degree by the decisions of the Communist International. The purpose of the decision of the Comintern was to precipitate in our party a crisis which would lead to another stage of its Bolshevization. Those who have studied the decisions of the C. I. will observe that the C. I. saw in the relationships of the groups of the party the fact that the Foster group had been in alliance with the right wing. The C. I. wanted to cut apart that alliance, not only in relation to Lore but to the right wing in our party. The C. I., in addition to declaring that Lore's connection with the party must come to a conclusion, saw that it was impossible to tolerate any further alliance based upon the right wing.

The C. I. had desired to unite within the party all Communist elements, declared Comrade Ruthenberg, and that was the political purpose of the decisions that were made prior to the convention. The crisis in the convention was the enlarged result of the failure to carry out the decisions of the Comintern by the group which had the majority of the C. E. C.

In what did that failure consist, asked Ruthenberg. At the time of the return of the delegations from Moscow, instead of uniting against Lore and the right wing, instead of attacks against Lore and efforts to free the rank and file from the influence of the right wing, we found attacks directed against the minority group. We found the "needle trades" statement, and the statement attempting to connect the minority group with Juliet Poyntz, and a statement on the "nine points." Instead of the political questions which should have been the major issue discussed, we found a thousand petty questions and scandals raised in order to evade the important matters which really faced the party. This situation culminated in the convention which showed the same character as the convention of 1923—that is, the same leadership based upon the same right wing, carrying on a bitter factional warfare against the Communists in the party—that is against the left wing. This situation created the basis of the decision of the C. I. which came during the convention and which stated that "it has finally become clear that the Ruthenberg group is more loyal to decisions of the C. I and stands closer to its views," and which provided certain guarantees for this group in the party. It was because we represented in the party the willingness and power to fight against sectarianism, against Loreism, against the tendencies in our party which led away from Bolshevism, because we represented the impetus toward making our party Communist, a Bolshevist Party.

Cannon-Foster Disagreement.

And the accuracy of the judgement of the Comintern, Comrade Ruthenberg continued, is shown by the latest developments in the party which are reflected in the speeches of Comrade Cannon and Foster to the Y. W. L. convention, published in the DAILY WORKER. These speeches, said Comrade Ruthenberg, show a cleavage between two sections of the former group led by Foster and Cannon, a cleavage on the question of the attitude toward the Communist International.

And this also is a part of the process of Bolshevization, Ruthenberg continued. It is a part of the process of Bolshevization which must succeed in bringing into the leadership of the party all of the solid, healthy elements of the party. We must say that we did not expect to see this development come as quickly as it did. This is a development toward the creation of a new alignment, and to have it come as quickly as it did come is an indication of the growth of our party—a growth of the process of Bolshevization. This growth will bring about a clarification of views and policies, and new groupings on the basis of clarified views. There will be forms of leadership based upon the various views, and we can expect a continuation of this until there is crystalized out of it a party leadership which includes all elements which can perform their task in the Bolshevization of the party. And this process will take place in the party itself.

New Organizational Forms

Comrade Ruthenberg then took up extensively the new organizational forms to be achieved in the reorganization of the party. The reorganization, he said, must not be viewed as a mere formation of a new machinery for organizational efficiency, but as a thing to be attained because it will give us a political basis such as a party must have in order to become a Bolshevik party. Our scattered form of organization in language and territorial branches is a thing separate and apart from the mass of workers and which therefore cannot influence the workers in the shops and factories who must be the backbone of the revolutionary movement. It is exactly those workers who are massed together in the large industries who, thru the experience of their collective relationship in large scale industry, become the portion of the working class which can first be won for the revolutionary movement. With shop nuclei organized as proposed we can become a party imbedded in the working class. The basic units of our party constituted of shop units of our be closely connected with our trade union fractions. The shop nucleus form is a part of the basic principle of organizing our party within the masses and within the mass organizations of the workers.

Some Dangers of Misapplication

The reorganization on the basis of shop nuclei, said Comrade Ruthenberg, is not without its dangers to the party—dangers of misapplication. Some of our party members have already shown their misunderstanding in expressing the idea that this means the "industrialization of the party." This is a mistake, said Ruthenberg. Rather it means the greater politicalization of the party. No one should think that because the shop nuclei becomes the basic unit of the party therefore we are becoming some sort of a new industrial organization. This is an entirely wrong idea. The truth is that thru the factory nuclei we can reach out to the masses of the workers and make use of the problems of the factory, the frictions with the management, the resentments of the incidents of exploitation, as the basis of our propaganda. But if our comrades make the mistake of leaving it at that and do not carry the implications further so as to connect the small and isolated struggles in the factories with the wider political problems of the working class, they will not succeed in carrying on the work for which the new form of organization is created.

Centralized Apparatus

Comrade Ruthenberg then spoke of the centralization of the party apparatus, which will overcome the difficulties which arise from the inconceivably clumsy form we now have by which party instructions are sifted down to the membership thru seventeen separate language sections of the party. The party is to become a single solid block with an apparatus reaching down direct to the basic units of the party in the workshops and factories. He described the new form of organization by shop nuclei, street nuclei (also called international branches), and the subdividing of each city organization into sub-sections and sections as provided in the new party constitution.

Some of the comrades might feel skeptical about the success of the reorganization plan in which the old federation forms disappear, doubting the smooth working of international branches and shop nuclei containing members speaking several different languages. Comrade Ruthenberg said that these difficulties will be overcome; that the party is going thru a process in this reorganization which will bring it new health and new life and new ability to carry on its work.

In concluding Comrade Ruthenberg said that sometimes struggles and crises are necessary to create a healthy situation; storms are sometimes necessary to clear the atmosphere, and he believed the party has now been passing thru such a storm which is already creating an atmosphere of Communist understanding and conscious policy, in which the rank and file is learning to fight determinedly against deviations from the line of the Communist International. We are reaching the stage of development where the membership will no longer tolerate the building of oppositions to the policies and decisions of the Communist International, said Comrade Ruthenberg. It is that party which goes thru such storms and stress, that reaches its goal. During this period of painful strife we have really attained something on the way toward Bolshevization. We are learning that there is only one basis for a grouping in the party, he concluded, and that is a grouping together on the basis of the decisions of the Communist International.

Other Speakers

Comrade Martin Abern, district organizer, was the second speaker, dealing with several features of the application of the reorganization plan.

A long discussion from the floor was participated in by Comrades Nat Kaplan, Jack Johnstone, B. Borisoff, Arne Swabeck, John Anderson, Harrison George, Gus Shklar, Robert Minor, Tom Bell, Joseph Kowalsky and Steve Rubiki.

Comrade Ruthenberg in closing read the resolution offered by the C. E. C., (published in last Saturday's magazine section of the DAILY WORKER).

Comrade Swabeck Offers Amendment

Comrade Arne Swabeck offered an amendment which, in addition to dealing with some of the details of reorganization, raised the question of supposed discriminations and replacements of party functionaries holding the views of the former majority.

Comrade William Z. Foster then made a statement, saying that he hoped that both the resolution and the amendment would be passed unanimously.

The amendment was defeated by a vote of 150 to 225. The resolution offered by Comrade Ruthenberg was then carried unanimously.

OHIO SOUTH SLAV CONVENTION PLEDGES LOYAL SUPPORT TO C. E. C.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Oct. 11.—Jugo-Slav (South Slav) section of Workers Party District No. 6 held its convention, Sunday, Oct. 4, at Cleveland. Sixteen branches from the state of Ohio were represented at this convention.

Upon invitation of the convention and the D. E. C. of the South Slav section, Comrade Boich spoke as representative of the D. E. C., reporting on the convention of the party to which he was a delegate and on future tasks of our party. Comrade Boich's speech was enthusiastically received after many important questions were answered to the satisfaction of all the members. Motion to accept Comrade Boich's report was carried unanimously. Then Comrade Boich introduced the following resolution which was also carried unanimously:

We the delegates to District No. 6 convention of Yugo-Slav section of the Workers Party assembled at Cleveland October 4, 1925 do hereby pledge our whole-hearted support and cooperation and declare our full confidence in our present C. E. C.

We promise to loyally carry out its decisions and most energetically support its policy.

We most bitterly condemn any attempt on the part of comrades of former majority to sabotage party decision thru their refusal to serve on important party committees and demand that strict discipline be enforced in such cases without hesitation.

We also fully indorse the Communist International decision.

Another resolution introduced by former supporters of Fisher group that only those who supported the Ruthenberg group in the past party controversy be elected to incoming federation bureau was also carried. This was a direct slap in the face of Fisher not only by his former supporters but also by one of the most powerful Yugo-Slav districts in the federation. The lone Fisher supporter from Farrell made no show worthy of consideration at the convention.

The following comrades were elected delegates to federation convention: Sepich and Buksa, from Bellaire; Roncevich, from Cleveland; Levnaich, from Canton; and Grosa, from Stubenville, Ohio. Comrades Sabljak and Celovich, were elected alternates.

D. Sabljak, sec'y.

HOW NOT TO MAKE THE UNITED FRONT

The Central Executive Committee published in the DAILY WORKER last week a statement with reference to the open letter sent by Local Toledo of the Workers Party to Tomis Devine, the socialist candidate for mayor, criticising this letter and pointing out the error of the Toledo comrades in applying the united front tactic.

The Central Executive Committee is now in receipt of the following letter from the secretary of Local Toledo, Ohio.

Toledo, Ohio, Oct. 1, 1925

To the Comrades of the C. E. C. of the Workers (Communist) Party,
Comrade Ruthenberg, Gen. Secy., Chicago, Ill.,

Dear Comrades:

After reading the letter of the C. E. C. that appeared in our daily paper under the date of September 29, on How to Apply the United Front Tactic, I, as secretary of Local Toledo will give you some past history on the municipal campaign in Toledo. The mistake of How to Apply the United Front Tactic is not the mistake of all the comrades of Toledo, we as as Communists accepted the decision of our next higher unit, the district organizer, Comrade Wagenknecht. At the C. C. C. meeting of Local Toledo of June 2, a motion was carried after a lengthy discussion that the Workers Party of Toledo do not participate in the municipal election. Comrades Willnecker and Stephenson speaking for the motion, Comrade Buehler fighting against the motion. At the D. E. C. meeting of June 7, a motion was passed that the district organizer be instructed to go to Toledo and demand that Local Toledo participate in the municipal campaign and same was done on June 17 at a general membership meeting. At the C. C. C. meeting of June 18 we placed Communist candidates in the field including the mayor, vice-mayor and five candidates for council. Then proceeded to get the required number of signatures, till July 12. The next fight in the C. C. C. was over a local platform for the primary election. You will find enclosed same of which we distributed 20,000 the day before election on August 11.

At the election of August 11 we won the election of Vice-Mayor Comrade Smith and one councilman, Comrade Buehler for the 20th ward to run as candidate for the final elections.

At the C. C. C. meeting of August 28 we took up the question of what action to take regarding the united front of labor in the final election to be held on November 3.

Comrade Topping and Buehler brot in a recommendation for the calling of a conference of labor to have a united front in the election.

Comrade Stephenson and Willnecker recommended the sending a letter to Tomis Devine, the socialist candidate for mayor, with the result that the CCC committee was deadlocked. Whereupon a motion was passed that the secretary of C. C. C. draw up a letter on the political situation in local Toledo and send same to the district organizer, Wageknecht, and let him give us the correct guidance on policy to pursue.

Same was done by the secretary and on Sept. 11th I received a reply from the district organizer headed: Policy for the Toledo Elections. You will find copy of same enclosed. We complied with the district organizer's instructions on Sept. 23rd and up to date have received no answer from Tomis Devine.

Hoping these few lines will give you some light on the political situation regarding the municipal campaign,

Yours for the cause,
(signed) Buehler, sec'y.

The instructions received by the Toledo comrades from the district organizer, Comrade Alfred Wagenknecht read as follows:

Policy for the Toledo Elections.

In general the policy for our party in Toledo should be to bring about an election united front between the labor unions, the socialist party forces, other workers' organizations and the Workers Party. A conference should be called and before such a conference should be placed the immediate problems for the workers in Toledo as they appear in the party (Toledo) platform.

But to make such a conference more successful and to make it possible to have a united front with the socialist forces, even if the unions do not enter into it you should at once:

1. Address a letter to Devine questioning him regarding his agreement with the immediate demands in our program. Make an attempt to secure his agreement with as many points as possible.
2. Make the letter to Devine public in the press, labor and daily, and among the labor unions.
3. Introduce resolutions in the trade unions calling for a united front of all workers for all the labor candidates running for election and calling upon Devine to make clear his position on the immediate needs of the workers.
4. Whether Devine agrees with the major demands or only a few of the immediate demands as they appear in our program, we should enter into negotiations for a united campaign. But in the letter to Devine and in our united front campaign we must make it clear at all times that we disagree fundamentally with the socialists in principles and that we reserve the right to criticise Devine even tho we agree to support him at the polls.
5. However, even if Devine refuses to enter into an election united front, even if he refuses to give the support of the socialist forces to our candidates, we should not refuse to support him if his reply to our questions are at all favorable.
6. If the negotiations with Devine result favorable, then an immediate attempt must be made to enlarge the united front campaign committee by securing the participation of the unions.
7. A campaign committee composed of representative from all organizations entering into the election united front should be created, and in this committee our Workers Party representatives must be very active.

Together with the above, not separate from it, must go the propaganda for the need of a labor party as the eventual force which will oppose the capitalist parties at the polls in Toledo.

Note: Even of Devine refuses to support our candidates, even if he refuses to answer our letter to him, or in answering disagrees with all our immediate demands, we would have to announce our support of Devine at the polls, but in so supporting him, would have to oppose him as the handmaiden of capitalism.

Comment.

In order to understand the situation in Toledo it is necessary to be acquainted with the election methods in that city.

The Toledo municipal elections are non-partisan. Combinations are made by petitions and all the candidates nominated are submitted in the electors in a primary held in this instance on August 11th. At the primary three candidates are selected for each office and submitted to the voters at the final election in November. As pointed out by Comrade Buehler in his letter the Workers Party candidates for vice-mayor and the candidate for council in the 20th ward of Toledo were among the three receiving the highest votes at these primaries and thus go before the voters in the November elections. The socialist candidate for Mayor Tomis Devine was among the three highest of the candidates for mayor and is a candidate in the final election together with a number of other socialist candidates.

The instructions sent to the Toledo comrades by the district organizer lay down correctly in paragraph one a proposal to call a united front conference of delegates of the labor unions, socialist party, other workers' organizations and the Workers Party for the purpose of supporting a common labor candidate in the final election.

The error, however, in these instructions is the proposal that in case the movement for such a united front conference fail it is desirable "to make it possible to have a united front with the socialist forces." This proposal is not a proposal for a genuine united front but a proposal that our party should enter into an election alliance with the socialist party in Toledo. The ground for the objection of the Central Executive Committee to such a proposal have already been stated in a previous letter to the Toledo comrades.

The tactics of addressing an open letter to Devine demanding that he support the calling of the conference of delegates from labor unions, the socialist party and the Workers Party to support a common labor candidate and laying down a program on which the candidate would carry on the election fight would have been correct, but to address to the socialist candidate a proposal that the Workers Party and the socialist party form an election alliance tends to confuse the minds of the workers to the Communist and socialist position and to cover up the gulf which divides the Communists from the socialists.

It was permissible, if the efforts to form a united front body in support of the united front ticket failed for the Toledo comrades to call upon the workers to vote for the socialist candidates for the office for which the Workers Party had no candidates in the final election. But such support of the socialist party would have to be coupled with the severest criticism of its program. This policy would have been something quite different from the policy proposed in the instructions of the district organizer which were to the effect that if the united front body to support a united front labor ticket could not be organized it was desirable to have "a united front" with the socialist forces. We could ask the voters to vote for the socialist candidates while criticizing them, but we could not enter into an election deal giving our support to the socialist candidates in return for their support for our candidates. Such a united front could only discredit our party in the eyes of the workers.

PINKERTONS TRY TO BREAK BANK CLERKS' UNION

Offer Services to Chicago Banks

By CARL HAESSLER,
(Federated Press Service.)

CHICAGO, Oct. 11.—Every bank in Chicago is being offered the aid of the Pinkerton private detective agency to prevent the spread of the Bank Clerks' Union, which now has members in ten Chicago banks and has at least one institution organized 100 per cent.

Offer to Furnish Rats.

The Pinkerton game consisted of sending to the bankers, memorandum on the Illinois State Federation of Labor convention resolution in favor of unionizing bank clerks. With the memo was inclosed an offer to co-operate with the banks in meeting the situation.

Bank clerks in Chicago are terrifically exploited. There are over 1000 bank clerks in loop banks getting $80 a month. Quite a few get as low as $60 a month or less than $15 a week. In the outlying banks $50 a month is not unusual.

Union "Labor" Bank Fights Union.

The union sent its president, Joe Shafir, as delegate to the A. F. of L. annual convention in Atlantic City. Shafir, who is employed by the Amalgamated, is pushing two resolutions, one requesting the A. F. of L. to assign an organizer to co-operate in unionizing banks in important centers, and another demanding that the convention and affiliated unions use their power to insist that all labor banks be unionized.

This resolution is a criticism of the Federation Trust Co., the labor bank in New York of which Peter Brady is president and which steadfastly refuses to become a union shop, so far as its employes are concerned.

THE POWER OF SHOP NUCLEI FOR COMMUNIST WORK IN AMERICAN TRADE UNIONS

BERT MILLER.

The shop nucleus is the spearhead with which the Communists will break thru the ranks of the reformist trade union leaders to the leadership of the masses of the workers. The shop nucleus is the most effective weapon against the right wing in the trade unions. It is absolutely indispensable for our work in the trade unions.

Power of the Union Leaders.

When an important question comes up for discussion in a trade union, the leaders wield a tremendous power over the membership through their control in the union machinery, with which they can mold the opinion of the membership. They control the union organ which reaches every worker in the organization. They have control of the mailing lists which is an additional channel for propaganda. They can manipulate the machinery of the union so as to have meetings called at the most favorable time and place and in the most favorable manner. Their business agents and other officials use their contacts with the workers to strengthen their hold upon the organization. It is in their power to render many small favors to some of the workers, thus giving them an additional hold upon them. Then too, there is the prestige which goes with an official title, which has considerable influence upon the average rank and filer. And last but not least they have the support of the capitalist press whenever they take a "respectable" stand against the interests of the workers, and denounce the Communists.

The Power of the Nucleus.

Seemingly the odds are against the Communists. But a closer analysis will show that on the contrary, the shop nuclei form of party organization gives the Communists a powerful advantage.

The strength of the Communists lies in the fact that they base their policies upon the actual needs of the workers in the shops. There is no better means of determining these needs than the shop nucleus with its alert representatives in every department of the shop in contact with the workers every minute of the day. Here the officials are at a distinct disadvantage, for their knowledge of conditions in the shop is obtained indirectly and is often unreliable. The policies formulated by the Communists in the shop nucleus on the basis of their intimate knowledge of the situation, are bound to meet the needs of the workers far better than those proposed by officials who are out of touch with the rank and file

Having formulated a policy on the basis of a correct analysis of conditions in the shop, having received the approval of this policy from the party fraction the Communists can readily put it thru in the union. Their propaganda is not limited to one union meeting, or to one issue of the union organ. It is carried on day after day, systematically and persistently until the entire shop is won over. The members of the shop nucleus use not only leaflets, party newspapers, the shop nucleus paper, and the shop meeting, but what is most effective, the personal interview in the language of the worker. No opposition can withstand this assault, provided it is organized and carried out well in a sufficient number of shops.

Our party has carried on an effective propaganda for the shop committee form of organization. This, in itself, may be wholly inadequate and dangerous to our party without at the same time, a network of shop nuclei of our party in control of these shop committees. The shop nuclei already organized have in most cases, gained control of the shop committees very quickly.

Organize the Unorganized.

The party's campaign for organizing the unorganized cannot be realized thru the traditional method of using paid organizers. It can only be carried on successfully through the establishment of shop nuclei in the industries and establishments we wish to organize. There is no doubt that the party will have to discard its present haphazard use of its forces. Capable comrades will have to be inducted into key factories and industries for organization purposes, power plants, transportation lines, telephone and telegraph companies, and the large trustified plants which dominate each particular industry. The shop nucleus will be the center from which will radiate the energy and the power behind these organization campaigns. This was proven in a number of instances during the past year, where the shop nuclei have campaigns and have succeeded in unionizing a number of shops.

Amalgamation.

Amalgamation cannot be realized through preaching and propaganda alone. There must be some medium which acts as a unifying force between the workers of different crafts in the same industry, pointing out constantly the inefficiency of the craft form of organization and gradually fusing the crafts together into a unified whole. The most powerful unifying force in a factory is the shop nucleus. The shop nucleus with its representatives from all crafts and departments of the shop, gives the workers not only the viewpoint of the shop but that of the industry as a whole in place of the narrow craft outlook.

Building the Party

The recent victories of the Communists in the trade union movement, their successful fight against expulsions, particularly in the I. L. G. W. U. their growing influence and prestige, must be capitalized for the party. There is great danger that the allies and sympathizers which have been won over will drop away as soon as the enthusiasm of the battle dies down. These sympathetic elements must be brought closer and bound by party discipline in preparation for future struggle. They must be educated beyond the trade union issues and immediate demands, to the complete political program of the party. The easiest and most natural rallying center for these new members to the party, proletarians who have been tested in the fire of the class struggle, is the shop nucleus. The fact that the most active comrades in the trade unions, those who are on the front line trenches, are not active in the party branches, is partly due to a faulty territorial form of organization. The party cannot afford to have these valuable elements abstain from active participation. It is an essential step in Bolshevization that the proletarian elements in the shops wield a more potent influence over and participate more energetically in the formulation of the policies and the destinies of the party. As soon as our comrades in the factories realize the power of the shop nucleus, and energetically try to make use of it, we will be on the road to the formation of a mass Communist party in this country.

WORKERS' SCHOOL TRAINS LABOR FOR STRUGGLE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Oct. 11—Training for Communist leadership and training for Communist membership are the central aims of the New York Workers School which will open its fall courses beginning about the middle of Oct. The school at 108 E. 14th St., under the control of the Workers Party, will be a training center not only for the New York membership and its most active elements but also for the entire eastern district of the country. Non party members also, in fact all progressive elements of the working class will find in the school some course or courses which will make them better militant fighters on behalf of their class.

Reorganization is the order of the day in the party. It is no less the order of the day in this educational work than in other fields.

The school has for its most immediate task to direct and initiate a simultaneous course in every shop nucleus so that within a period of three to six months every member of the party in New York will have been educated in "The Fundamentals of Leninism." In order to prepare the enormous staff of instructors or rather group discussion leaders to direct this work in all of the nuclei simultaneously, there will be a shop nucleus training course in the central school. To this course every shop nucleus will send a leading comrade, preferably its organizer, and this comrade will be trained to direct the discussion within his nucleus. The course will include such fundametnal problems as: What is a Party?; The Role of the Communist Party; Its Structure Leaders, Masses, Class; Bolshevization; Work in the Trade Unions; Communist Electoral Campaigns and Parliamentarism; Theory and Practise of the United Front; Loreism and other pressing party problems. In addition to the topics suggested above, the course will include the thoro study of the theoretical basis for the decision of these problems and a study of the practical measures for bringing the conclusions of the course to life in the daily work of the party.

For active trade unionists, party functionaries and leading comrades generally there will be a special training course to which only a limited number will be admitted on the basis of examination. The examination will consist of a presentation by the candidate not only of his previous study but, and this is much more important, a presentation of evidence that he is really an active party worker.

The training course will consist of a course in "Marxism-Leninism" extending over a period of six months, instructor, Bertram D. Wolfe; a course in "Party History Structure and Problems," three months, instructor, William W. Weinstone; and a course in "Our Work in the Trade Unions," three months, instructors, Ben Gitlow and Bert Miller. All comrades taking the training course will take the "Marxism-Leninism" course for the entire period of six months and for the first three months, either the trade union course or the course in "Party History, Structure and Problems" taking the other one during the second three months. These courses will be so arranged that the comrades will not have to spend more than one night a week at the school.

Another group of courses of fundamental importance this year are the English courses. Not only will there be great numbers of non-party workers anxious to take these courses in English but in addition there will be perhaps even greater numbers of members of the various language federations anxious to prepare themselves for active participation in the shop nuclei or international branches of the reorganized party in which English will be the official language used.

To take care of the entire foreign speaking membership of the party as well as other workers desirous of perfecting their English, a large staff of English teachers has been recruited and many courses in elementary, intermediate and advanced English will be given. Many of these courses will start the week of Oct. 12th simultaneously with the beginning of the definite reorganization of the party.

Other important courses in connection with English literature and public speaking will be offered. They include "Workers Correspondence (a course in Proletarian Journalism)"; elementary composition; elementary public speaking which will include parliamentary law and other details necessary to speaking at meetings of the party, unions and other Workers organizations; political issues and their presentation (a course in advanced public speaking); and various courses in literature. Probably the most interesting of these is a course to be given by Moissaye J. Olgin entitled "The Living Revolution," a study of the reflection of the Russian revolution in Russian literature. Other courses to be offered during the school season are a course in political economy; a study in Marx's capital; The Economics and Politics of the Era of Trusts (imperialism); Historic Materialism; a study of Socialist Philosophers; the Fundamentals of Communism; etc.

The school will have branches or annexes in all sections of the city in which the fundamentals of Communism and English courses will be offered and in which there will be public forums on Sunday nights.

The bulk of the courses mentioned above will begin the week of Nov. 9th but registration is now open for them, and some of the courses begin the week of Oct. 12th. The average fee charged is $2.50 for a three months course of one night a week. Those interested in training themselves for more active and more effective work in the trade unions, in the party and working class organizations generally should register at once at the school headquarters. A printed bulletin of courses will be mailed free upon request. Address the Workers School, Office, Room 34, 108 East 14th Street, New York City.

Details about the Eastern District Training Course will be announced later.

To Save THE DAILY WORKER

Worker Correspondent on Bolshevization

(Workers Correspondent)

The need for a new perspective on the work required of a Communist is the most important matter for us to take up. How are we going to become dynamic Bolsheviks is the question. A dynamic Bolshevik is one who has thrown off his sentimental attitude toward Communism and accepts the class war as a reality. A dynamic Bolshevik is one who has become a Leninist, a warrior in the struggle against the capitalist class; one who recognises that a powerful army of workers and farmers trained scientifically in the Leninist theory of fighting against the capitalist class is of vital importance. Comrades, lets us understand that our duty as Communists will have to take an entirely different form than heretofore. In the past, we have been content to come to the branch meetings, run a dance or have a class occasionally and blow off a little steam in meaningless discussions. And we called ourselves Communists. We did not understand the tasks of a Communist and therefore could not be effective soldiers in building up our party or in gaining influence among the masses. Therefore, coming to the realization that our foundation is wrong, the structure of our house must be completely renovated. The only kind of a structure in which to build up a powerful party and to gain contact with the masses in the shop nuclei form. The shop nuclei are our training camps. Comrade Lenin said every workshop should be our stronghold. Let us make a vow that we will do our utmost to make every workplace ours. That is what Bolshevization of our party means. When the district office gives us definite instructions to reorganize, which will probably be within a few weeks, let us be prepared in more ways than one. Articles by workers correspondents on the reorganization, on the shop nuclei and international branch basis, on Communist work in the shops and trade unions article concerning the workers in the shops should be written up at once. Until the reorganization, let the branch be an experimental laboratory. Let every comrade cooperate in creating an interesting wall newspaper in the branch. Let everyone contribute something about the daily struggle of the workers in his shop, the conditions, how it might be possible to improve them by stimulating your fellow workers to action, whether you do piece work, whether the work is seasonal, what kind of a foreman you have, and how the workers react to all these phases, what the possibilities are for building up a powerful nucleus, whether there are many sympathizers in your shop and what the party should do to help you to win them over. And as many other vital topics as you can crowd into 500 to 1,200 words. You might connect up the struggle with the present campaign in N. Y. and bring in some facts that might be of use in this campaign. Comrades, don't wait for instructions, if you see that something should be done, do it. Offer suggestions and help co-operate in the biggest task that has ever confronted our party, namely, the Bolshevization of our members. Let every one exert himself to the utmost to make the American section of the C. I. the leading section of the C. I. Look at England and see what a handful of Communists are doing. Let us generate greater enthusiasm, do more active work and become dynamic Bolsheviks.

The Proposal to Deport Purcell

Green's attack on Purcell at the American Federation of Labor convention is followed by a broad hint from the Washington Post, organ of the Coolidge administration, that he should be deported.

The close connection between the officials of the American labor movement and the blackest forces of imperialist reaction is revealed clearly in this one incident.

The moment that the strikebreaking Coolidge administration is sure that A. A. Purcell, chairman of the International Federation of Trade Unions, is unwelcome to the Greens, Wolls and Lewises it throws off all restraint. Capitalist imperialists and labor imperialists unite in opposition to the spokesmen of the most powerful section of the trade union movement—Purcell is fraternal delegate from the British Trade Union Congress—and the international organization, not of revolutionary but of reformist unions.

American imperialism dominates the world. The American Federation officials, supported by the labor aristocracy, are carrying out the schemes of their masters.

Purcell spoke for world trade unity. He urged unity with the Russian trade unions and pointed out, in a manner that President Green could not and did not atempt to answer, the need for solidarity of the organized workers as against that of their exploiters.

This is his crime. The German fraternal delegates—social-democrats who praised the Dawes plan and licked the boots of Wall Street, Haberman, fraternal delegate from Mexico, who lauded the A. F. of L. for its participation in the conspiracy to betray Mexican labor to American imperialism—these trucklers to the power of the American dollar backed by bayonets, are welcomed by Green and no proposal for their deportation comes from any source.

The Purcell incident is an international scandal and will cause every honest trade unionist to hang his head in shame, but it will serve to show to the mass of American workers the eunuch-like character of the leadership of the trade union movement here.

Purcell is to make a speaking trip thru the industrial sections of the United States after the convention. It is probable that the government, acting together with the executive council of the American Federation of Labor, has in mind to prevent Purcell being heard by the rank and file of labor.

So far they have suceeded only in arousing additional interest but more drastic measures may be expected and then the left wing of organized labor must arouse the workers to public demonstrations that will make clear to the ruling class and the labor traitors that it will permit the labor movement to be dragged no deeper into the mire.

A Suggestion to the S. P.

The socialist party of America, to the best of its limited ability, is engaged in discrediting the Russian revolution and betraying the revolutionary movement in the United States.

This has not prevented it, however, from talking about revolution and using revolutionary phraseology to some extent—the extent needed to fool the less discerning workers.

But even revolutionary phraseology has its dangers. At least the Milwaukee Leader, organ of the socialist party, has come to that conclusion. It appears that the Leader is worried over the fact that the Communists use the word revolution in the sense of a violent struggle between the capitalist class and the working class as the final phase of the conflict for power.

The Leader, in its issue of October 1, says:

> Chairman C. T. Cramp of the British labor party congress did well to point out the looseness of the way in which the word "revolution" is often flung around. Some good socialists use it as meaning simply the peaceful change which we are trying to bring about. That is a dangerous use to make of the word—for the reason that it is more often misunderstood than understood. The average person thinks the word means only violent revolution. And, since that is the sense in which the Communists use it, IT IS THE SENSIBLE THING FOR SOCIALISTS TO DROP THE WORD OUT OF THEIR VOCABULARY.

In one sense we agree with the Leader:

Seeing that the socialists are for everything in the world but a working class revolution, that in every European country they are the most vicious foes of the working class, that in Germany, Bulgaria, Italy, Poland, Esthonia, Finland, Georgia and Russia, their hands are red with the blood of revolutionary workers, that socialist ministers hold position in more than one murderous capitalist government, we suggest that for the word "revolution" the socialists substitute "counter-revolution."

In this way their vocabulary will suffer no loss and as the word accurately describes their purposes it will do much to clarify working class thought.

Working for War in Atlantic City

The convention of the American Federation of Labor follows in the footsteps of William Randolph Hearst and cries out about the "yellow peril." It scents, so its officials say, a plot to flood America with Japanese.

This is one of the most effective ways of making war propaganda for American imperialism. War with Japan is one of the pet hopes of the militarists and its necessity one of the cardinal beliefs of their Wall Street masters.

The officialdom of labor joins in the chorus and with the hypocritical pretense of protecting American labor prepares the ground for the slaughter of both American and Japanese workers.

This is one way in which the tools of imperialism in the labor movement earn their share of imperialism's super-profits.

More bituminous mines open up as the anthracite strike continues. This relieves the strain in the fuel market and helps to defeat both soft and hard coal miners. A strike in the whole industry is the answer.

The Martyred Colonel

By MANUEL GOMEZ.

THE aircraft investigation at Washington was a two-days' wonder . . . which means that of all the sessions of the investigating board, those two days when Col. Billy Mitchell was on the witness stand, boasting and snarling and spitting out sarcastic epigrams at the expense of his pot-bellied superiors of the army and navy, were the only ones that counted. And they were a memorable two days! Instinctively, newspaper editors realized that something significant was taking place, not merely because the scandal of it and the fact that Col. Billey is a "typical matinee idol of the army," made it "good copy," nor yet because it has become policy now to play up all things military—but because the testimony of the flashy, vulgar colonel was true talk which implies a new stage in modern warfare, so terrible as to take one's breath away.

COL. MITCHELL says to the generals: "Take your spurs off and get into a motor car. Get the most powerful missle-throwing weapons that can be devised, both for rapidity, penetration, and for range." He foretells the use of yet more murderous explosives and poison gases, with the all-seeing airplane dominating sea and land, sinking ships, destroying supply depots, railroads and canals, and forcing the évacuation of whole cities by the simple process of dropping tons of explosives upon the inhabitants.

What especially characterizes Colonel Michell's testimony is a sense of the world-wide scope of contemporary military operations, and of foreign policy. Having learned well Clausewitz's familiar phrase that "war is just a continuation of politics by other means," it is not difficult for him to locate presumptive enemies. First of all Great Britain, the foremost world competitor of American capitalism; then Japan, then a combination of Great Britain and Japan, with or without additional complicating alliances.

REGARDING Great Britain, he says ironically: "Altho it may be unthinkable that we have any trouble with her, it is the main reason that our defenses on the Atlantic are necessary."

Arguing for a powerful and mobile air force, he calls attention to the clash of interests in the Far Eeast over the domination of Asia. The aspirations of Japan in the Far East are, he emphasizes, "to control all ingress and egress to the continent of Asia, half the population of the world, and to hold Asia, Asiatic (that is, Japanese)." "A perfect laudable ambition!" he adds with the cynical urbanity of the true imperialist. Laudable or not laudable, it brings Japan into conflict with the equally "laudable" ambitions of American capitalism—with the result that Col. Mitchell calls for airplane bases in Alaska and the Hawaiian islands, and tresses the value of the air force in a joint war against Great Britain and Japan on the ground that it "can be used along the Atlantic coast and within 36 hours can be applied on the Pacific coast, or vice versa."

As if to indicate beyond the shadow of a doubt that he knows his way around in the world, the charming witness devoted an extra paragraph to the importance of the air force for future operations centering about the Caribbean sea.

WHETHER or not the spectacular colonel is right in saying that "an airplane can sink any ship that is built or that can be built," he undoubtedly represents a new era in modern warfare, the era when all war is world war at least in its implications—because of its basis in world imperialist policy. Warfare was once largely a matter of relatively small armies—of infantry, cavalry and light artillery; this was under feudalism and during the earliest wars for the establishment of national states, when markets were extremely limited and local economy was the rule. With the expansion of markets the navy came more and more prominently to the fore, until, with the development of imperialism, Admiral Mahan was able to say that he who controls the seas controls the destinies of the world. It appears as tho the day of the airplane will come next. Col. Billy Mitchell, the passionate advocate of airplane supremacy, is "the fair-haired boy" of contemporary super-imperialism.

OF course if the airplane is to dominate it will be only as a technical instrument, as a weapon. The war of 1914-18 proved, among other things, that the machinery of industrialism is the real determining factor in present-day warfare. Germany held the allies at bay for three years, and defeated them, because of her industrial advantage, consolidated at the very outset of the conflict; it was only the superior industrial resources of the United States that turned the scale against her. Today, the industrialism of the United States dominates the capitalist world. American industrialism will be able to forge whatever weapons may be necessary for its purposes.

Already, according to the testimony of Admiral Moffett, this country has the most powerful air force in the world. If the point of view of Col. Mitchell prevails, as it will prevail ultimately, American capitalist industrialism will set out to become undisputed "mistress of the air." And this precisely because that same industrialism is fighting for monopolization and control in Asia, in Latin-America and in Europe—because such a policy means inevitable war—because that is the whole method of modern imperialist competition on a world scale. Col. Mitchell realizes all this, at least as much as it is necessary for a soldier to realize it. That is the difference between him and the pettifogging bureaucrats of the army and navy departments, who still move within the narrow circle of an outworn routine, clinging to it in desperation because they sense that they will be left behind and will not be able to maintain themselves in the new world that Billy Mitchell speaks of so familiarly.

BILLY MITCHELL is to be courtmartialed. No doubt he will be hounded out of the army, amid the lamentations of the "liberals" and socialists of all shades, who are already bemoaning the unjust fate of this young "martyr of reform." But the liberals and socialists can cease worrying. Billy Mitchell's career is not at an end; it is just beginning. Billy Mitchell will be taken care of. He will be given ample opportunity to complete the revolution which he has started. Five seconds after he is out of the army his figure will loom portentously across the political horizon of these United States. Billy Mitchell has still more valuable services to give to American imperialism.

How Chairman Morrow (of the aircraft investigating board—and of J. P. Morgan & Co.) must have chuckled to read the lofty interviews given out by the delegates to the interparliamentary union, who began to arrive in Washington to discuss peace and disarmament—on the very day that Billy Mitchell took up his concrete analysis of war preparations for a struggle with Japan, with England, with a combination of allied powers!

The Political Crisis In Belgium

By J. JACQUEMOTTE (Brussels)

IT has taken 73 days to arrive at the formation of a government which declares that it is supported by a large and reliable majority in both the chamber and the senate. in other words, the formation of a strong government. Doubtless the new government will remain in existence as long as the social democrats, who belong to it, renounce the defense of the interests of the proletariat.

The election of April 5, 1925, brot about significant changes in the representation of the political parties, and it cannot be denied that taken as a whole, the mass of the workers explicity voted for the left.

The rapid collapse of the hopes which were expressed by the last ballot of the electors, will not be less marked.

From 1921-1923, the clerical-liberal government pursued a clear and open reactionary policy, supported by the Catholic right and by the liberal party.

THE most characteristic "factors" of this policy are participation in the criminal adventure in the Ruhr, in common with Poincare, the attempt to prohibit the legal existence of the Communist Party (the so-called Communist plot against the security of the state, March, 1923), the crushing of the railway strike by illegal mobilization of the strikers, and the persecution of the active elements in May, 1923; the raising of the heavy taxes with which the workers are burdened: a general policy of "limitation of expenses" to the disadvantage of the proletariat in order to restore equilibrium in the budget—in vain by the bye!

The result of the election, which reduced the liberal representatives by more than one-third and cost the clericals one seat, is a condemnation of the policy pursued by the clerical liberal government. The social democratic party was the great beneficiary of the discontent with the policy of the Theunis ministry, which had accumulated among the proletarian and petty bourgeois masses.

The crushed liberal party declared that they would not take part in the formation of a new ministry, they prefer to be once more in the parliamentary opposition, doubtless, in the hope that they would again acquire electoral virginity.

Thereupon a truly murderous game with combinations of ministers was witnessed. The social democrats whose leader, Emile Vandervelde has been commissioned to form a ministry, having convinced themselves of the impossibility of splitting off some elements from the groups of the clericals and liberals which would have been prepared to participate in a government of the socialist left against the consent of their party, refused to form a united socialist government, as in the circumstances this would have been a challenge to the bourgeoisie and, as such a government, if it wished to carry thru its program, could only have done so if, in its fight against capitalism, it had accepted the support of the organized forces of the proletariat.

THEN followed Broqueville's attempt to patch together the broken fragments of the clerical liberal ministry. In vain! Thereupon the catholic party formed a united ministry, thanks to the hostile attitude of the other parties, fell on the first day of its existence.

But the formation of this ephemeral cabinet which had been formed by the catholic minister Vandevyvere, had one chief object, that of proving to the chamber itself the impossibility of constructing a uniform cabinet whether catholic or socialist, and further to demonstrate in public debate that the program of the Vandevyvere cabinet and the government program advocated by the special democrats are in essentials as like as two peas.

After Max, the mayor of Brussels, had acted as mediator, Poullet, who had been a minister in the Theunis cabinet, undertook the mission of forming a cabinet and, after a great deal of bargaining, subterfuges and roundabout ways, arrived at the aim which had been pursued for more than ten weeks. A catholic-socialist government was formed. Twelve ministries are provided for, five catholics, five socialists and two personalities who are regarded as "liberalizing" or as standing outside party: Baron Rolin-Jaquemyns and General Kestens who has taken over the ministry of war.

Rolin-Jaquemyns was the Belgian delegate in the inter-allied supreme commission for the occupied territories of Germany.

ON the eve of the formation of the cabinet, the right elements of the catholic party had raised an objection to the first project of a Poullet-Vandervelde combination in which the "non-democrats" would not have had enough influence.

As a matter of fact, in spite of the three party aspect, which was fraudulently imparted to the Poullet cabinet by the introduction of the "liberalizing" members, the government is actually a catholic-socialist government.

And the long comedy of the formation of a "democratic" government ends with the formation of a cabinet which was constructed thanks to the whole catholic right entering into a coalition with the social democrats.

And vice versa.

The true character of this new government is revealed by the following simple statement; of the five catholic ministers, four were members of the previous Theunis cabinet and supported its external and internal policy. The fifth catholic minister, Jansen is director of the Banque Nationale de Belgique. It was he who was commissioned by the league of nations to report on the plans for the "reconstruction of Austria" which led to the enslavement of the Austrian people for the benefit of international finance.

FINANCE is represented by Minister Vandeyvere who will belong to the combination created by Poullet. He is well known to the Belgian workers. He was minister of of the interior in 1912, when, on the occasion of the general strike of the Walloon workers, shortly after the election of 1912, which had been a victory for clericalism, the gendarmes fired on the workers—who had peaceably installed themselves in the "Populaire" of Liege—killing and wounding several of them.

This means that the reformist leaders are by no means disgusted by it. But it is certain that this will soon be quite clear to the workers!

Imperialist Agents Rob Soyiet Courier 35 Miles from Moscow

RIGA, Latvia, Oct. 11.—It is reported from Moscow that early last Tuesday morning the express train from Moscow to Warsaw was held up at a point 35 miles out of Moscow and one of the passengers, a secretary of Tchitcherin, carrying important documents to the Soviet commissar for foreign affairs now visiting in Germany, was robbed of these important papers.

The robbers are not regarded as bandits after money, but as secret service agents of the imperialist powers who are at present building an anti-Soviet bloc of nations in western Europe in evident preparation for ultimate war on the workers' republic. There were fifteen armed men in the band, which disappeared in the forests following the robbery with red army troops in pursuit.

JAPAN TODAY

By K. Yamato.

TOKYO, Sept. 22.—(By Mail)—Japan is going thru a period of long and deep depression. There are no signs of immediate economic and financial improvement. The imports are far above the exports. The trade balance is unfavorable and the yen is fluctuating. The government is trying to fix the limits to imports but the cutting down of the imports of raw material affects the industry. The slowing down of industry increases the unemployed army, which already reaches the 2,000,000 mark. Of course the unfavorable outlook of the rice crop and the Chinese uprisings are also contributing to the depression and deadlocked position of Japanese capitalism.

The prices of necessities, particularly on rice, are going up. Wages are being cut time and time again. There is great unrest amongst the proletarians. The unemployed do not get any assistance whatsoever and the capitalist press fears sporadic outbreaks, etc. The government is scheming to "export" about a million unemployed proletarians to Hokkaido, a northern agricultural island. However even the capitalist spokesmen are forced to admit that such a scheme is an impossibility. Thus all in all and making the long story short, we may say that the objective conditions in Japan are ripe and favorable for Communist activities.

Labor Forces Scattered.

Unfortunately, the organized forces of Japanese labor are scattered to all four winds. There are 222,000 organized workers out of the four to four and a half million workers employed. But even this small force—the 222,000—are organized into no less than 401 unions. Yes, dualism and independence, or as we Japanese say, neutralism is prevaling. Decentralization and territorialism is being felt everywhere. Syndicalism, is still blossoming among the metal and printing trades.

Undoubtedly it will require some time before we will be able to put ourselves on the right track. For instance, just recently, we still had a split in the Japanese Federation of Labor. In a nut-shell, the case was as follows: The Japanese Federation of Labor, embracing 25,000 workers, was the leading and the most advanced section of organized labor in Japan. But due to the failure of the German revolution and the temporary stabilization of capitalism, etc., reformism began to manifest itself within this organization.

Thus gradually the right wing and the left wing within the Japanese Federation of Labor came into existence. The left wing was growing stronger every day. The right wingers became desperate and decided to expel the left wing. The left wingers on May 21st assembled in a conference and after heated debate decided to accept the challenge and decision of the right wing and resolved to organize a new federation—The Council of the Trade Unions of Japan. We, the Communists were against the acceptance of the challenge, but we were too weak to stem the tide of dualism. Altho the Japanese Federation of Labor split in 50-50, yet we the left wingers are facing isolation. The Suzukis and Nishios are trying their damndest to detach us from the general labor movement. It is quite possible that owing to the favorable objective canditions and the political developments that we will be able to avoid sectarianism and further dualism.

On Right Road Now.

From the above you will realise that the left wing so far was not the left wing organization a la Profintern, i. e., built upon minority groups within all existing trade unions. However, we are preparing to launch a real left wing organization within a couple of months.

At the present time we are engaged in campaigns as follows: The labor party, unemployed relief, invitation of the Soviet Russian trade union delegation to China to come over also to Japan, preparation for the left wing organization, formation of a Young Workers League and preparations for the Communist group conference.

Labor Party Campaign.

The labor party campaign is almost swinging the whole of organised labor. So far already a big majority of organized labor voted to participate in the coming conference of the labor party. Here I shall explain that in Japan the labor party is being called the Proletarian Party. Why? Simply because the translation does not go otherwise. However, please don't mix up the Japanese Proletarian Party with the Detroit so-called Proletarian Party of comedians, etc.

On October 10th the first preliminary conference will take place at Osaka. There will be 45 delegates present representing 127,000 organized workers, or strictly speaking, trade unionists. At this first preliminary conference the number of our adherents will be nine. We will insist that the constituent convention of the labor party shall be held not later than September; that the new party shall be a class party, a mass party, a fighting organization aiming for the conquest of political power, etc. Of course, we will try to force toward the left as far as possible without breaking it. We hope that we will avoid the mistakes you have made in Americe. You can be sure of that—that we Japanese Communists know all about your experiences in the United States and will profit from them.

Read the Militant "Progressive Barber," Just Off the Press

The Progressive Barber, one of the livest and most brilliant of the T. U. E. L. papers, is off the press. It is a real barbers' paper with just enough general trade union news to connect it with the general left wing movement in this country. The make-up is excellent.

This issue of the fighting little paper contains many features which are as a rule, lacking in all the other papers. Barberities by Larry Vallance presents the humorous side of the barbers' activities in a very original manner. The articles on the history of the barber trade by Joseph Giganti are tremendously interesting and are read with avidity by the barbers. The cartoons appearing in this issue tell the story of the Chicago expulsions. Contributions from readers demonstrate how wide-awake barbers view the situation in their union.

It leads the fight of the left wing in the barbers' unions thruout the country, and its method of gaining information of conditions among barbers is well developed and efficient.

The Progressive Barber is a real left wing paper, and of interest not only to the barbers, but to all in the left wing movement of this country.

GOLD [illegible] FROM [illegible] STAR[illegible]

Industrialists Face New Crisis in Britain

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—The arrival tomorrow of $4,000,000 in gold from London for the account of three New York banks, marks the first export of gold from London to this city in any volume since England returned to the gold standard last April, and is due to the decline in sterling exchange below the point where it is cheaper for British importers to pay their debs in gold rather than buy exchange currency in payment for their purchases in London.

Sterling recently slumped below 4.84 5-16, the rate at which it is profitable for British buyers of American goods to ship gold rather than buy exchange. The movement is due solely to the desire of British buyers to realize a saving in their purchases of goods.

Strive for Balance

It is an old law of economics that gold moves to the center of most remunerative employment under the normal working of capitalist exchange. However, the spokesmen for the federal reserve banks of the United States and the directors and governors of the Bank of England imagine this movement will have the effect of equalizing the rate of exchange between the City and Wall Street to a point where paper tokens will serve all purposes of commerce and it will be unprofitable to transport gold either way.

That this desire belongs to the realm of fantasy is emphasized by the fact that another $3,500,000 making last week's shipments from London $7,500,000 has been dispatched for further purchases. This movement will unquestionably continue during the autumn movement of American cotton to the mills of England and will rise even higher in November, the annual peak of this movement.

Shake London Market

LONDON, Oct. 12.—The bullion movement of last week from the Bank of England to the United States aroused anxiety on the London exchange. It is feared that the shipment will necessitate shoving up the London rate on money and would seriously interfere with the business recovery that was hopefully predicted after the rate was reduced from 4½ to 4 per cent.

If the rate again rises to its former position the industrialists contend they cannot conclude many operations already planned and point to the fact that competition due to the revival of industries in the war torn nations of continental Europe makes prohibitive the 4½ per cent rate.

Considering the probable effect of the shipments to New York—that is the raising of the rate on money—the industrialists are out of the frying pan into the fire. The advantages they gain by shipments of gold, will be lost many times over if the percentage on money again climbs to its previous height.

For the workers it means an increase in unemployment, already near the breaking point.

CARELESS BOSSES OF SUBWAY WORK DISREGARD POOR

NEW YORK CITY, Oct. 12.—The reckless disregard of the well being of the workers, especially the colored workers, is shown in the way the contractors and officials supervising the subway excavation at St. Nicholas avenue and 128th street allowed careless work to undermine 100 feet of wooden sidewalk covering the excavation at that point.

When the sidewalk fell into the hole, water mains and gas mains broke, flooding the tenement homes of fifty Negro families with gas and causing a panic among the tenants, who had to be removed by police and firemen across the yawning gulf that had been their doorsteps.

Discomfort and considerable expense caused many poor colored families by the accident, which was not repaired promptly and which would never have been allowed to happen in wealthy neighborhoods where the utmost care is always taken to save the silk-stoking population from dirt, odor or inconvenience.

The Daily Worker Must Be Saved!

By WILLIAM Z. FOSTER

WITHOUT our press, particularly without The DAILY WORKER, the Workers Party cannot hope to achieve its goal. Surely this is so obvious that repetition would seem to be unnecessary. Yet according to the results so far in the campaign to save The DAILY WORKER, there are, it would seem, many members of the Workers Party and many of its sympathizers who can contemplate the destruction of The DAILY WORKER with serenity. For unless The DAILY WORKER has substantial and immediate support, it cannot continue.

I DO not believe that there is any worker with a spark of militancy in him who can remain unconcerned when the life of The DAILY WORKER is threatened. The first call for help should have brought instantly the money necessary to avert the threatened catastrophe. Yet it seems imperative to point out again the danger and the deeds which are needed to overcome it.

IF there are those who feel that the call for support is merely a cry of "Wolf, wolf," when there is no wolf, let them put such nonsensical, if comforting illusions from their heads. The DAILY WORKER is in the hands of highly responsible management which concerns itself continuously with the preservation and extension of our paper. To my certain knowledge there has never been a daily labor paper in the United States which has asked so infrequently and modestly for financial support. For a management of this kind to warn of the danger, in a situation not desperately critical, to ask for funds unless in imperative need, is absolutely unheard of.

PERHAPS it is because of this careful management and moderate policy that many comrades have been lulled to sleep in the belief that the interests of The DAILY WORKER are being well guarded and that no one need be unduly perturbed. Unless these comrades arouse themselves, they are due for a very rude awakening. Some fine morning they will inquire why they do not receive The DAILY WORKER any longer and will be informed that publication has been suspended because of lack of funds.

TO lose The DAILY WORKER now, would be an unqualified calamity. Not only would we receive a tremendous set back in our movement, not only would our enemies be encouraged and ourselves demoralized, but we would be confronted immediately with the tremendous task of rebuilding at a huge sacrifice what we have thru our negligence, allowed to be destroyed. For every dollar required now to save The DAILY WORKER, ten would be needed to start it over again.

IF there are those who can regard this situation with composure, they do not belong in the militant section of the labor movement. If there are those who can endure this condition without exerting themselves to the utmost, they do not belong either.

DOLLARS are needed, thousands of them. They will not come from those who can afford to give. The dollars which will save The DAILY WORKER can come from pockets which can spare them only with great sacrifice.

A great deed is needed, a great proletarian deed. Save The DAILY WORKER!

Swift, united and generous action by militant proletarians is necessary.

FRENCH COMMUNIST STRIKE CALL TIES UP PARIS TRANSPORTATION; TROOPS GUARD FRENCH CAPITAL

PARIS, Oct. 12.—Over 10,000 troops from garrisons near Paris, sailors from French navy yards, crews of tanks and armored cars, all have been called into Paris because the Communist Party has appealed to the French workers to strike for 24 hours in protest against the war in Morocco and Syria, which is sending thousands of young French workers to death in mountains and deserts for the bankers and concession hunters.

Transportation Paralyzed.

In answer to the appeal the streets are deserted, taxi cab drivers being out almost completely, a large percentage of bus drivers, trolley men and subway engineers following suit. The railway men, whose striking would be considered as an offense against the state, are answering the appeal by delaying all trains and "going slow" while staying on the job.

The city is under practical martial law, with police and cavalry detachments clattering thru the streets everywhere. There is little transportation tangles to obstruct them. All troops are in charge of Generals Gourand and Charpy, heads of the Paris garrison.

The water, gas and electric power plants are closely guarded by infantry detachments in full war equipment. Other detachments guard the public buildings and the main post and telegraph offices.

Home of President Guarded.

In front of the Elysee, residence of the president of the republic, stout republican guards dressed in smart black, red and gold uniforms have replaced the ordinary infantrymen. They are steel-helmeted and their rifles carry fixed bayonets. Machine gun detachments are kept in readiness in the presidential gardens.

Big Biz Lackeys Cut Trust Investigation Funds; Oppose Probes

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12.—Appropriations for the federal trade commission have cut from the $997,000 asked for to $883,000. The economic investigations division of the federal trade commission appropriation will be cut $100,000.

The minority members of the committee protested this action saying that it was a trick of the republican administration to hinder the investigations of the bread trust, tobacco trust, Mellon's aluminum trust, the electric power trust and the attacks upon co-operative societies by price-fixing combines.

Attorney General Sargent refuses to make a ruling on the request of the commission for an investigation of the bread trust and Mellon's aluminum trust.

SECRETARY OF WAR WEEKS RESIGNATION EXPECTED THIS WEEK

WASHINGTON, Oct., 12.—The resignation of John W. Weeks, as secretary of war, will be formally announced "in a day or two."

Secretary Weeks was clearing up his desk in the department.

It is expected that acting Secretary Dwight F. Davis will be named to succeed him.

THREE PARIS POLICE INJURED IN ATTACK ON COMMUNIST STRIKERS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, Oct. 12—Communist workers this afternoon clashed with the police of St. Denis, a suburb of Paris.

The workers were picketing an automobile factory. The police intervened and in the fight that followed the chief of the St. Denis police and two other gendarmes were seriously injured.

The Communist mayor of St. Denis is reported to have aided the assailants of the police in escaping arrest.

TRY HEAD OF KU KLUX KLAN FOR MURDER OF GIRL

Drove Girl to Suicide, Is State Charge

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NOBLESVILLE, Ind., Oct. 12.—"Murder by mental coercion," loomed today as the theory of prosecution in what promises to be Indiana's most famous murder trial, in which one of the leading K. K. K. of the country is charged with a most atrocious crime.

D. C. Stephenson of Irvingston, wealthy Indianapolis business man, coal mine operator and former dragon of the ku klux klan and one time dominant figure in Northern Indiana politics, is the principal defendant.

Kluxer Had Two Accomplices.

With him in the prisoners' chairs are Earl Klick and Earl Gentry, who the state charge were hired by Stephenson and at his direction reduced pretty Madge Oberholtzer to such a mental state that she killed herself with a slow-acting poison last March.

In a death-bed affidavit Miss Oberholtzer declared she had been kidnapped by Stephenson, Klick and Gentry, taken to a number of towns in the state and assaulted.

The trial opened here today with Judge Will M. Sparks of Rushville, on the bench, and the cream of the legal profession in Indiana on one side or other of the counsel table.

Driven to Suicide.

Altho the girl died from poison, admittedly self-administered, the charge against Stephenson and the other two is murder in the first degree. The state contends that she killed herself because she was in a mental condition of desperation and irresponsibility due to the direct acts of the defendants. The trial opened with the examination of a special venire of 100.

STRIKEBREAKER BERRY PERFORMS BEFORE A. F. OF L. SESSION IN CHEAP HARRANGUE ON REDS

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

STEEPLECHASE PIER, ATLANTIC CITY, Oct. 12.—George L. Berry, the strikebreaker president of the Printing Pressmen's Union, direct from the American legion convention at Omaha, Nebr., opened the second week of the A. F. of L. convention here today with another attack against Communism and the Communists.

"There is no room in America for Sovietism or Communism," declared this labor official, who was specially delegated to represent the A. F. of L. at the American legion gathering, and then in turn was selected by this officer-inspired organization of ex-soldiers to speak for it at the A. F. of L. convention because the newly elected commander didn't have time to make the trip to Atlantic City.

Berry is a past vice commander of the American legion and was urged by members of that organization as a candidate for vice-president at the democratic national nominating convention last year.

Still Breaking Strikes.

Berry comes to this convention almost direct from Chicago where he directed the attempt to smash the strike of the pressmen in the Cuneo printing plant just as two years ago he went to the Portland, Oregon, convention of the A. F. of L. and was received with great acclaim because of his war against the New York pressmen, fighting for better conditions in the press rooms of the big capitalist newspapers of that city. Berry proved the best ally of the newspaper owners in that struggle.

Assails Communists.

The Green regime might have chosen a less foul-smelling red baiter to offer a prelude to the report of the resolution committee, that is to present the progressive propositions to the delegates here, but it seems he was the best on hand to offer.

"There is nothing wrong with America," declared Berry. "No fault can be found with the American form of government. The fault is with the people."

He said he had read the speech of President Green in attacking the British fraternal delegates, Purcell and Smith, and declared he was whole-heartedly in accord with it.

Applause Weak.

MILITARIZE ALL PRIVATE AIR FIRMS

Madden Upholds Coolidge on Aviation

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12.—Accusing the army and navy of squandering "millions of dollars in a meaningless experimental aviation orgy," Congressman Martin B. Madden of Illinois, chairman of the house appropriations committee, today recommended to the president's air board a new military aviation policy directly linking private aircraft manufacturers to the national defense.

Madden flayed the present policies of the army and navy as wasteful and charged both air services with a flat "failure" in their efforts to develop military aviation.

Madden declared that if congress carried out the demands of "some of these bureau people," it would bankrupt the government.

Madden took the stand primarily to defend congress against charges by high army and navy officers that a "lack of funds" had ruined the nation's military air forces. Citing statistics to disprove the charges, Madden told the board that congress

GERMANY SIGNS ECONOMIC TREATY WITH SOVIET RUSSIA; HAILED AS BREAKING LONG BLOCKADE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., Oct. 12.—The Russ-German economic treaty was signed with imposing ceremonies at the foreign office here late today.

The treaty affects many of the relations between Russia and Germany and is much broader in scope than a mere commercial and trade treaty.

It is hailed here as breaking the economic blockade against Russia. It recognizes the stipulations of the treaty of Rapallo, signed in 1922.

WORKERS (COMMUNIST) PARTY IN OPEN LETTER TO N. Y. SOCIALIST VOTERS ASKS ELECTION SUPPORT

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Oct. 12.—The Workers (Communist) Party of New York in entering the city elections has addressed the following open letter to all socialist voters and class conscious workers asking them to choose between the socialist party and the Workers (Communist) Party on the basis of the facts the letter sets forth. It is as follows:

Comrades and Fellow Workers: We assume that you are sufficiently enlightened and conscious of the interests of your class to have cut loose from the parties of bosses, the republican and democratic parties. We assume that you do not desire another four years of injunctions against picketing, police breaking up of meetings and picket lines and a city government at the service of the bosses. There are two tickets claiming your support and offering themselves as parties of the Workers—the candidates of the Workers (Communist) Party and those of the Socialist Party. You must choose between them.

The Socialist Party Against the Unity of Labor.

There should not have been two sets of candidates dividing labor's forces in this campaign. The differences between the Workers (Communist) Party and the Socialist Party are profoundly fundamental, but the weakness of labor in this city, state and nation; the powerfully organized drive of the master class against labor resulting in lowering of wages, open shop conditions, injunctions and police clubbing, persecutions and deportation of militant workers, the menace of new wars compel every section of the labor movement to join together in united action against the employing class.

The Workers (Communist) Party proposed to the Socialist Party at its convention in June the calling of a conference of all labor organizations for the formation of a united labor ticket in the present campaign as a step in the direction of a Labor Party. This proposal the Socialist Party rejected. The Socialist Party last year joined with the republican politician LaFollette, with the republican war jingo La Guardia, with the democrat Wheeler and with the exploiters of labor who supported them and betrayed the movement for a Labor Party; but the Socialist Party refuses to join with militant sections of the labor movement for the unity of the working class and for the building up of a Labor Party in the United States.

This year, the Socialist Party continues its betrayal of the Labor Party movement by completely omitting the Labor Party in its platform. Together with the wreckers of the labor movement, the Greens, Berrys, Wolls, Johnstones and other labor fakers, it divides labor's forces and helps keep labor tied to the capitalist parties. The Socialist Party has completely deserted the path leading toward working class freedom and has gone into the camp of the small business men, the labor bureaucrats, the professional elements who deceive the workers and who support the capitalist system.

Thomas Supports League of Nations.

The reverend Norman Thomas is a sky pilot, a "respectable" liberal minister who can steer the workers on heavenly matters, but knows nothing about piloting labor on earth. Norman Thomas is a member of the committee supporting the world court of the league of nations. Only a few years ago when the socialist party still had a breath of working class spirit, it condemned the league of nations as the "black international."

Today Norman Thomas is a member of the committee to support the world court and his fellow members are Thomas Lamont of the House of Morgan and other money masters of America and the world.

The Socialist Party for Sigman and Labor Bureaucrats.

Thomas and the socialist party supported Sigman of the needle trades in his long fight against the rank and file of the union whereas the Workers Party supported the rank and file which has at last become victorious.

With Thomas as candidate for mayor, stands lawyers, professional elements, small business men and labor bureaucrats. Behind Thomas and the socialists, stands the yellow Forward which has become a huge capitalist investment and fights together with the discredited Sigmans, Breslaus, Kaufmans, and Hillmans

DEADLOCK OF SECURITY PACT STILL UNBROKEN

Optimistic Reports Do Not Mean Anything

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LOCARNO, Switzerland, Oct. 12.—While optimistic reports emanate from spokesmen for the French and English at the "security" conference the aim of which is to create alliance of nations preparatory to a drive to throttle Soviet Russia, the real situation belies their statements.

As the spectre of revolution plagues the imperialist spokesmen of the capitalist nations the numerous conflicting interests present obstacles they seem unable to surmount.

British Hesitate

Austin Chamberlain, the British foreign minister, who has devoted his whole term in office to arranging this conference, finds himself in a maze of contradictions. Much as he favors some sort of patched-up agreement that will temporarily consolidate the forces of continental Europe, he fears to completely endorse the proposed Rhineland pact, which would create an economic unit that would threaten the industries of England.

Germany refuses to budge on the question of a revision of the eastern frontiers, while Polish and Czecho-Slovakian delegates vehemently demand that no such revision be considered. Both these small nations seek a declaration from Germany that it will not attempt to alter these borders. If the French and British cannot dissuade the Poles and Czechs from insisting upon these demands then Germany will refuse to discuss the eastern border question at Locarno, which means the end of the conference.

Mussolini Reported Coming

Reports are current that the fascist chief of Italy, Benito Mussolini, has secretly left Rome and is due to arrive in Locarno Wednesday. This hasty journey of the Italian premier follows the tentatives agreement of the Italian delegation for their nation to jointly share with England the guarantee of the western frontiers of Germany. In view of the desperate straits of his government, forced to employ the most vicious terror in order to maintain power, the fascist bandit will probably make a special effort to persuade the powers to reach some sort of agreement.

Report Russian Pact

Sensational reports concerning a secret agreement alleged to have been entered into between Poland and M. Tchitcherin, the Soviet foreign minister, reached here from Paris and have caused apprehension on the part of Briand and the French observers here. The agreement is reported to contain military provisions that will enable Russian forces to march thru Poland and ally themselves with Germans for an assault upon France. The legend (for such it obviously is) concludes with the assertion that Russia has promised Germany the return of Alsace-Lorraine as the fruit of a victorious military campaign against France.

MUSSOLINI INSTRUCTS ITALIAN DEBT MISSION TO DEMAND EASY TERMS

ROME, Oct. 12.—Premier Mussolini met the membes of the Italian debt mission to the United States and gave them final instructions.

Mussolini still stands upon his insistence that Italy's debt can only be settled upon the basis of her capacity to pay, and that the debt settlement must be coupled with her receipt of German reparations.

ATLANTIC CITY WORKERS HEAR RED EDITOR

Engdahl Meeting Rivals That of Green

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ATLANTIC CITY, Oct. 13.—Urging the slogan of "join the unions," J. Louis Engdahl, editor of the DAILY WORKER, spoke to a mass meeting in Grand Fraternity Hall here tonight that nearly rivaled in numbers the gathering called by the central labor union that was addressed by President William Green, Vice President Matthew Woll and heads of the various printing trades unions of the American Federation of Labor attending the Atlantic City convention.

President Green made his usual attack on the militants in the trade unions, but the gathering listened in silence.

Engdahl aroused great enthusiasm thru his explanation of the growing world struggle for trade union unity, the organization of Negro workers, many of whom were in the audience, and other progressive measures.

Second Meeting Success.

The meeting held in Atlantic City, at Moose Hall, at which Engdahl, P. Yuditch, labor editor of the New York Freiheit, and James V. Fitzsimmons, delegate of the Canton, Ohio, Central Labor Union, were the speakers, was also an unexpected success, showing the demand for organization among the workers even of this parasite pleasure resort.

The executive committee of the Chicago Bank Clerks' Union has wired repudiation here of Shafir's resolution on class collaboration basing attack on Chicago Daily News report, which claims flat opposition to labor banks and insurance companies. The resolution attacks only "the establishment of labor banks, workers' insurance companies, etc., which have nothing in common with true co-operative enterprises."

Wheel-Chair Denizens Disgust British Union Delegate to A. F. of L.

ATLANTIC CITY, Oct. 12. — Ben Smith, rugged and ruddy-cheeked British fraternal delegate to the American Federation of Labor convention, was taking the air on the Atlantic City boardwalk when one of the wheel-chairs peculiar to this boulevard came past with two plump specimens of the idle rich inside and a hard working chairpushed behind, straining at his burden.

"The lazy blighters!" snorted Smith. "Imagine an able bodied man pushed around like a baby. I wouldn't ride in one of those things for ten pounds." And he strode along for his constitutional with the motive power nature gave him.

Scientists Leave for Caucasus.

MOSCOW, Oct. 12—A scientific expedition is now exploring the mountains of Ossetia for the purpose of carrying out ethnological, archeological and zoological researches in the inhabited districts on the banks of the rivers Gizeldon, Fingdon and Ardon and their tributaries.

you, it associates itself with the American Federation of Labor in declaring that there shall be no revolution in America, today, to morrow, or any other day," shouted Berry at the top of his voice. The brief applause was thin and scattering.

"I am glad to bring this message to you," concluded Berry. "I wish for you the greatest happiness and success."

Technicalities Clog Debate.

But with the report of the resolutions committee, the delegates got snarled up with technicalities, especially over the question of injunctions and contempt proceedings, with the result that the time for the noon recess arrived and none of the progressive resolutions were reached.

In response to the notification by the British delegates of the sudden death of Fred Bramley, prominent British trade unionist, general secretary of British Trade Union Congress, and secretary of the British trade union delegation to Soviet Russia, the convention rose for a moment in tribute.

Executive Report Criticized.

Delegate John Frey, of the Molders' Union threw the first bomshell when he urged that a statement on in executive council's report.

Delegate John Frey, of the Moulders' Union threw the first bompshell when he urged that statement on wages be inserted in section on wage reductions, to the effect that puchasing power of workers be increased in proportion to the increasing productive power of the working class.

Frey got the floor and gave the delegates a lecture on wages according to the theories of Adam Smith and John Stuart Mill, all of which was Greek to the delegates assembled. In the present era of superabundance the workers are not able to consume all they produce, declared Frey, but he made no mention of the fact that this was a contradiction within the capitalist system itself.

Delegate Lynch, of the Printers' Union, was drawn into the discussion and urged an addition demanding continuous reduction in the work day to meet this problem. When every one interested was firmly tied up in a knot the matter was sent back to the committee for reconsideration and a new report.

Delegate Furuseth led a lone fight in heated discussion of contempt proceedings.

Confused on Courts.

Some of the delegates seemed to rally to the defense of the capitalist courts, demanding that jury trials should be sought in all contempt cases, which some claimed involve a fight for rights of bootleggers and keepers of disorderly houses. Others only wanted to make the fight for jury trial in labor cases. Delegate McCullough, printers, who was for years editor of the capitalist Omaha, Nebr., Bee in defending the former position declared more newspaper writers than labor leaders had been hit by contempt proceedings. He referred especially to the case of Carl Magee in New Mexico. As for the bootleggers and keepers of houses of ill repute they seemed to be able to take care of themselves, he said.

Furuseth and Lynch in Battle.

In spite of efforts of delegates yelling for question, Furuseth again got the floor and said that some one had been smearing fat on the lips of the delegates and they were trying to find an easy way out. He attacked the much-landed Clayton act as a "damned fraud," and said that Delegate Lynch had adopted sane ideas on the question of injunctions because "Big Six," the New York Printers' Union, was beginning to use the injunction against him. Lynch got the floor on point of personal privilege and denied "Big Six" had instituted injunctive proceedings against him. Secretary Woll of the committee also got the floor and said Olander was talking about injunctions. Efforts to refer back the committee repot were defeated and the committee report was adopted.

CHINESE BOYCOTT OF SHANGHAI INQUIRY FULLY SUCCESSFUL

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SHANGHAI, China, Oct. 12.—The inquiry into the riots and shooting of Chinese students by police in the foreign settlement on May 30 last has reconvened here, but every indication points to the futility of the inquiry owing to Chinese refusal to participate. Justice Finley Johnson of Manila presides.

Counsel retained by the municipal council has announced that three Chinese have offered to testify despite the rigid Chinese boycott of the proceedings and the Chinese chamber of commerce order to Chinese to ignore the inquiry. The Chinese chamber is daily running a full page of denunciations against the inquiry in the leading foreign newspapers.

GENERATIONS TO COME WILL FIND CHILD WORKERS

Such Is Green's Dark Prospect for Labor

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Oct. 12.—President William Green of the A. F. of L. told the convention of that organization that the new campaign for the child labor amendment to the U. S. constitution will "go on as long as we live and into succeeding generations," if necessary. From the continued policy of "non-partisan" political action and opposition to a labor party, the succeeding generations will probably find it necessary to keep up the fight.

The principal opposition to the amendment, says Green is the farming population, who think that the amendment would forbid their sons and daughters to do "work around the farm." He pointed out that the amendment does not at all prescribe the age at which a child shall work, but only enables the congress to pass laws that would set a minimum age for child workers.

Green said that "public opinion" was once in favor of the amendment, but that it was changed by "vicious propaganda" of chambers of commerce, manufacturers' associations, hostile textile employers and those who profit by exploitation of child labor. These, he said, were the "enemies," although he did not explain how he finds it possible to collaborate with them in the civic federation and elsewhere.

Commuters Rates to Be Raised on Roads After I. C. C. Award

CHICAGO, Oct. 12—By granting an increase in commuters' rates on the Chicago & Northwestern railroad today, the interstate commerce commission has put the Illinois commerce commission in a position to grant similar increases to other roads.

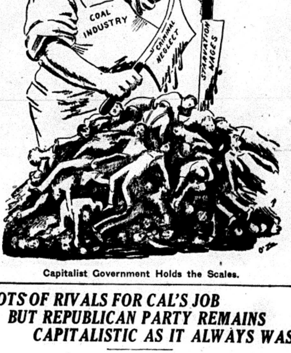
Such action is expected to be taken when the state body again takes up a petition for increases which has been before it. The interstate commerce commission in handing down its ruling ignored a request from the state body that action be deferred until its hearing was ended.

The authority of the interstate commerce commission to regulate rates within the state was established several years ago when the state commission refused to follow an order raising the statutory 2 cents a mile to 3.6 cents, issued by the interstate commerce commission.

Colonization of Siberia.

MOSCOW, Oct. 12.—The people's department of agriculture of the Russian Socialist Federation of Soviet Republics has so many requests from peasants who desire to migrate to Siberia and the Far East, that the department has decided to send a large survey party to this region with the object of getting all particulars about available lands for settling. The first large group of settlers will start early next spring.

The Arbitration Menace



Capitalist Government Holds the Scales.

LOTS OF RIVALS FOR CAL'S JOB BUT REPUBLICAN PARTY REMAINS CAPITALISTIC AS IT ALWAYS WAS

By LAURENCE TODD
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12—Calvin Coolidge's Omaha speech to the American legion, in the view of big republican politicians in the capital, is the opening barrage in his attack on western rivals for the presidential nomination in 1928.

Frank Lowden, former governor of Illinois and repesenting the Pullman Car. company fortune, is already at work, in his own state and elsewhere beyond the Alleghanies, preparing a surprise for the Coolidge organization. Lowden refused any consolation prize after his defeat in the convention of 1920, but now claims that it is his turn to take power. Bosses in Minnesota, Iowa, Kansas and some of the Rocky Mountain states are reported to be pledged to his cause.

Charles Evans Hughes, who was nominated and bungled the campaign in 1916 because he tried to be both for and against the German-Americans, is again consulting with the New York state machine leaders. He hopes to get his own state and port of New England as a starter for his boom.

Hoover Plays Tax.

Herbert Hoover, intrenched in the cabinet but always a source of anxiety to Coolidge, keeps his personal organization alive in California and other states beyond the Rockies. He is playing for the powerful tho silent support of the chambers of commerce and the trade associations of manufacturers.

Senator Borah of Idaho—Well, Borah remains an enigma. He evidently wants to be president, and is sure the republican nomination will be as good as election in 1928 if the nominee comes from the west. But he is not an optimist as to his own future. He has seen the organization discipline other men who had criticized it, and he has no doubt that it would nominate anyone else rather than permit him to get an open road to control of American foreign policy.

Miners' Enemy Wants It.

Gifford Pinchot, governor of Pennsylvania and last remaining Bull Moose stalwart to hold the public eye, is maneuvering toward the presidential field. His friends have assured him that Coolidge is very weak in the middle west and west, and the Wisconsin senatorial vote has been cited to prove that any guaranteed progressive has a good chance.

Of reasons why Lowden, Hoover or Hughes should take the place of Coolidge in the White House there seems to be none. All four men see this nation as the greatest, most prosperous, most sacredly capitalistic and safely anti-radical on the globe. They want, and would equally strive, to keep American labor in its place—which in their view is a subservient and near-the-breadline place. Their methods would differ only slightly. All would probably keep Mellon at the head of the treasury.

Borah, if he were so lucky as to win, would follow Ramsay MacDonald in international affairs, but would resist all but the most cautious steps toward public ownership or other advances in solution of economic problems that underlie all politics.

Pinchot would try, if he became president, to induce congress to create a nationwide hydro-electric system, to break the extortionate rates charged for power and light by the electric power trust. In foreign relations he would probably be less progressive than Borah, but in internal policy he would be more modern. Yet neither Pinchot nor Borah would consciously do anything to disturb the fundamentals of the profit system of industry. The limit of their radicalism would be an attempt to "smash the trusts" by prosecution.

Thus, on the present showing of potential candidates, the republican party in 1928 will be in no essential different from that party in 1912, 1916, 1920 or 1924.

RIFF RIFLEMEN KEEP SPANISH BUSY AT ADJIR

Mountaineer Moors Taking Pot Shots

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, Oct. 12.—Reports from Morocco show that the Spanish dictator Primo de Rivera, is having no happy time. The Riffian troops have reappeared on the hills surrounding Adjir, which was captured recently by the Spanish, and keep dropping Spaniards with pot shots at long range as the soldiery expose themselves while strolling about the streets of Krim's captured capital.

Down on the beach below Adjir where the Spanish soldiers aspire to bathe and wash the inhabitants from their clothing, bullets from Riffian snipers have made the Spanish go dirty "as they were." Even in the night a camp-fire or a light brings a hail of well-aimed lead from the crack shots among the mountains.

Orders have been issued forbidding groups of Spanish troops concentrating in the streets or elsewhere.

It has been found that the Riffians have well fitted dressing stations for their wounded hidden in sheltered caves and ravines among the mountains, and although their wounded must get to the stations without stretcher-bearers, they get fairly good treatment. It seems to the Spanish that Krim has the services of good European surgeons and modern methods of caring for the wounded.

Supreme Court Gets Another Chance to Show Plute Loyalty

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12.—Arizona's minimum wage law for women, fixing $16 a week as the lowest rate to be paid women or girls in factories, stores or hotels, has come to the federal supreme court on a merchant's appeal, based on the decision of two years ago, which nullified the minimum wage law in the district of Columbia.

Cost of Food Higher in 1925.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 12.—The U. S. department of labor, thru the bureau of labor statistics, has completed the compilation showing changes in the retail cost of food in 24 of the 51 cities included in the bureau's report.

For the year period, September 15, 1924, to September 15, 1925, all of the 24 cities showed increases as follows: Atlanta, 13 per cent; Louisville, 12 per cent; Jacksonville, Minneapolis, Norfolk, and St. Louis, 11 per cent; Memphis and Scranton, 10 per cent; Birdgeport and New York, 9 per cent; Baltimore, Charleston, S. C., New Haven, Richmond, and Rochester, 8 per cent; Cleveland, Fall River, Indianapolis, Mobile and Pittsburgh, 7 per cent; Providence, 6 per cent; Dallas, 5 per cent; Manchester, 4 per cent, and Milwaukee, 3 per cent.

STREET FIGHTING AND BLOODSHED OVER HIGH RENTS IN PANAMA CITY

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BALBOA, Panama Oct. 12—Police of this city have instituted a reign of terror against huge masses of workers who engaged in demonstrations against high rents beginning Saturday night.

Maricano Morenes, one of the leaders of the demonstration, was murdered in the rioting Saturday night and today the streets were jammed with indignant workers demonstrating at his funeral. All reserves were called out and the entire police force mobilized in a vicious drive to disperse the crowds. Fighting in the streets is raging thruout the whole city.

WORKERS PARTY OPEN LETTER TO SOCIALIST VOTERS

and supports their corruption and prostitution of the labor movement against the interests of the workers.

Socialist Party Abandons the Class Struggle.

The socialist party has abandoned the class struggle. It has given up even the mention of socialism in its platform this year in its efforts to appear respectable and draw the small businessmen and professionals to its banner.

It has avoided the language and spirit of the class struggle and has actually included in its platform, a plank which calls for more a disciplined police force and for more vigorous enforcement of the criminal law at a time when the workers are suffering from the attacks of the police and the vigorous enforcements of laws against the workers.

Debs and the Socialist Party.

Of all the "big figures" left in the socialist party there is only one that has on him the mark of a fighter for working class interests, and he is Eugene V. Debs. So they are importing him into New York to give a bit of working class color to their campaign of small business and professional men's liberalism. But alas, the one time red color of Deb's record has faded fast.

He is living on a glorious but rapidly receding past and turning it to ignoble uses by sanctioning the present gang of treacherous and unproletarian leaders of the socialist party. He is prostituting his noble past to the unworthy cause of cloaking present-day betrayal of the workers. Thus he has become an ally and support of the present leadership of the socialist party and shares in the guilt that he serves to cover.

The Socialist Party Is Undeserving of the Support of the Working Class.

The socialist party is against world trade union unity. The socialist party and the Second International to which it belongs are deadly enemies of the workers' Soviet republic.

The socialist parties of Europe, the allies of the American socialist party represented by MacDonald and Thomas in England, Renaudel in France, Braun in Germany and the socialist leaders in Bulgaria, Poland, Esthonia and other white terrorist countries, are the supporters of the Dawes plan, suppression of India and China, the war upon Morocco and Syria.

The socialist parties of the world supported the capitalists in the last world war in which millions of workers lost their lives and millions more were wounded. Today the capitalists are preparing once more to cast the workers of the world into the jaws of death and the socialist party utters pacifist phrases but does nothing to organize the workers against it.

The socialist party of America and the socialist parties of the world do not deserve the support of any class conscious worker.

Comrades leave the socialist party. Fellow workers join the Workers (Communist) Party.

Join the only party which is fighting for a united labor ticket and a labor party.

Join the party which is fighting the battles of the workers in the trade unions against the bosses and the reactionary leaders.

TOKIO AGENT ARRIVES HERE FOR BIG LOAN

U. S. Investors to Have Chance to Bite

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—Kenzo Mori, the Japanese financial commissioner, who negotiated the $150,000,000 American loan to Japan following the earthquake in September, 1923, arrived in this city today for the purpose of beginning negotiations for a $50,000,000 loan to the city of Tokio, the Japanese capital.

The loan is to be used in the work of reconstructing the city and is the second large "earthquake loan" to be floated in the United States.

Though hard pressed for funds the Japanese bankers have contended against foreign loans and a number of large loans were floated internally in Japan. Domestic interest rates in Japan are considerably lower than those obtaining in New York, but against this the Japanese bankers point to the exchange rate being in their favor; yen being now in the neighborhood of 40 cents as against a par a fraction under 50 cents.

Wall Street Power Grows

The power of Wall Street in the far East is increasing, as it is elsewhere thruout the world. Japan, last month, for the first time in nine years, started gold shipments to New York for the purpose of supporting its rate of exchange. The initial shipment was $2,000,000 and more is on the way.

The loan to be negotiated is to be divided between England and the United States. England's share being $15,000,000 and that of this country $35,000,000. A large portion of it will be used to purchase industrial products in this country.

Return to Gold Standard

That Japan, like the rest of the world, is going to reckon its indebtedness to the United States in terms of the American standard, is indicated by the announcement that its government is working toward the establishment of a gold standard next winter, after the seasonal pressure on Japanese exchange due to purchases of cotton and other commodities in the United States.

The banks, however, do not expect that such bonds will be very profitable and will place the issue on the market for the small fry to gobble up, figuring on the discount they receive for floating the loan to guarantee them against any losses.

TOKIO, Oct. 12. — Actions of the Chinese representatives on the eve of the customs conference clearly indicate a determination to break the whole affair by refusing to participate unless the powers involved are prepared to grant China subsidies.

Mr. Wang, head of the Chinese delegation intimated as much today and further remarks revealed the purpose of China to demand autonomy in some form.

This is in harmony with the growing nationalist and anti-imperialist sentiment in China that influences its representatives at all conferences in which they become involved with American and European powers.

Powers Express Fears.

Representatives of the great powers, preparing to impose an obnoxious customs agreement upon China, fear that that nation will insist upon regulating its own duty on commerce and will resent any interference from outside.

This fear is accentuated by the hostile reception accorded the court of inquiry that is sitting in Shanghai, which has the audacity to pretend to "investigate" and fix responsibility for the Shanghai riots of last May, when those powers themselves are the identical ones responsible for the corpses in the streets of that embattled city.

The Chinese people, far more than the diplomats representing that nation, are thoroly convinced that nothing favorable to China can be expected from the vultures of imperialism whether they come from the United States, England, France or Japan. The hostility of all these nations has been sufficiently exposed so that even in remote corners of the vast Chinese nation the very names of these nations are despised because they symbolize to them the long hours of unrequited toil endured by men, women and children, and the bestiality of the agents of these governments in protecting the profits of the exploiters.

The Japanese labor movement, like the advanced sections of labor in other countries, is in full sympathy with the aims of the Chinese liberation movement.

BROOKLYN CARPENTERS' UNION PROTESTS UNSEATING OF ROSEN BY NEW YORK DISTRICT COUNCIL

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Oct. 12.—For some time the progressive elements in the Carpenters' Union who supported Morris Rosen against William L. Hutcheson as candidate for president of the brotherhood, have been in conflict with the Hutcheson underlings in the various locals and district councils. Hutcheson is determined to terrorize all opposition to the official machine.

One phase of the conflict arose in recent months when Rosen, president of Local No. 376, was elected as delegate to the New York district council, but was denied a seat there by the Hutcheson tools on the council's executive committee. Another delegate, Brother Kivowitz of Local 2,717, was also not allowed to be seated.

A Hutcheson Frame-Up.

In a letter to the council, the locals and members of the U. B. of C. and J. of A., Local 376, states that the reasons for this autocratic action are that Rosen and Kivowitz are opposed to the present administration and believe all district council officials and business agents should be elected yearly by direct vote of the membership, as well and Rosen's past candidacy against Hutcheson.

Local 376 has taken up the fight. An appeal has been sent to Hutcheson and a request for support issued to the other locals. The resolution of support as passed by Local 376 and sent for endorsement to other locals reads as follows:

Resolution.

"Whereas, Morris Rosen, president of Local Union No. 376, U. B. of C. & J. of A., was duly elected as a delegate to represent Local Union No. 376 at the New York district council of the U. B. of C. & J. of A., and

"Whereas, Brother Rosen was not given recognition and was not seated, and Local Union No. 376 of the U. B. of C. & J. of A. disfranchised in flagrant violation of the constitution of our brotherhood and in direct conflict with the district council by-laws as set forth in section 10-B which reads as follows:

"'Any delegate representing a local union in the district council, before being removed or withdrawn from the district council must first be convicted of a violation of the trade rules or district council by-laws,' and Violates General Constitution.

"Whereas, The non-seating of Brother Rosen and the flimsy frame up perpetrated by the officers of district council is in violent conflict with Section 55 of our general constitution which reads as follows:

"(a) A member must be charged and tried within the jurisdiction of the local union or district council where the offense was committed.

"(b) All charges must be made in writing, and signed by the member or members making such charge.

"(f) All charges must be referred to the trial committee.

"(g) The accused shall have a fair and impartial trial and shall be allowed until the next regular meeting to appear and reply either in person or by counsel.

"(j) It shall require two-thirds (2-3) of the membership present to affix such legal penalty as they deem proper; and

"Whereas, The non-seating of delegates to the New York district council in violation of the constitution of the brotherhood has taken place time and time again, notably Local No. 2,717, thus indicating that the officers of the New York district council have adopted this unconstitutional method of dealing with opposition and therefore by perpetuating themselves in office; and

BARBERS' CLASS COLLABORATION MEETS REBUKE

Organize Workers, Not Bosses, Says Left Wing

A strong stand against class collaboration, too long a policy pursued by the leadership of the Barbers' Union, has been taken by the International Progressive Barbers' Committee, in the following warning to the New York barbers of Local No. 900. It says:

In the recent conflicts between the master barbers and Local 900 of New York we get a clear picture of why the J. B. I. U. of A. is not organized one hundred per cent. In place of the Local Executive Board taking a militant fighting stand with a program of organizing the journeymen for better working conditions, higher wages, short hours, they talk of organizing the bosses.

Is it any wonder that thruout the country less than 25 per cent of the barbers are organized? No soldier would join an army whose generals were recruiting soldiers for the enemies' ranks.

Amicable Relations.

They talk of establishing "amicable relations" between the bosses and journeymen. After the union has helped to organize the bosses do you think they will appreciate it so much that they will do any thing that the journeymen want them to? We should say not. We have concrete examples that prove the contrary. They will use their organized might to fight every move for the betterment of conditions by the workers.

There can be no amicable relations between the masters and the journeymen. With the boss it is simply a business proposition; if he can hire us cheaper, that is good business. With us journeymen it is a bread and butter proposition. Our interests then do not coincide; on the one hand the boss wants to cut down expenses; on the other we want to get more bread and butter, more of the necessities and luxuries of life.

Organize Workers—Not Bosses.

Then it is simply a question of who has the most power to gain their ends. Every thing that aids in organizing the journeymen is giving us more power to gain our ends; and everything that helps to strengthen the bosses defeats our end. Point (b) of the program in the circular issued by the Executive Board of Local 900 says, "Organize the Master Barbers." This is a wrong and dangerous program. Do you know of bosses who try to organize journeymen?

The leadership of Local 900 must realize its mistake and form a new program that will be in the interests of the members. But if the present leadership goes blindly ahead with their policy of organizing the enemy, then the militant rank and file must take a hand in leading their union out of the hole.

Organize yourselves 100 per cent and you need not bow to anyone for petty favors.

Greater power to local 900.

MARINE TRANSPORT WORKERS OF I. W. W. TAKE PROGRESSIVE STEP TOWARD INTERNATIONAL UNITY

NEW YORK CITY, Oct. 12.—Members of the I. W. W. are freely predicting that the Marine Transport Workers' Industrial Union of the I. W. W., which is just closing its annual convention, in session here since October 1, has reached a turning point in its career, from which a new era of growth and power will date, not alone for this important division of the I. W. W., but for the entire I. W. W.

These observers, not all delegates to the convention, say that the convention itself is not altogether conscious of this significance. The forecast is based primarily upon the measures taken by the convention which, logically followed, will lead to a great advance in organizational form and efficency, thru a greater variation allowed to the local, district and national bodies of the industrial unions at the same time that a sharp discipline and co-ordination is introduced among the various industrial unions and in international affairs.

Discuss Policies.

The convention has been one long discussion of these questions. Many changes in these directions in the bylaws and in resolutions will be observed when the documents of the convention are published and the changes put to referendum. The Philadelphia branch and its history and experience thru long years have provided the classic examples around which the convention debates have raged.

The Philadelphia branch of the M. T. W., it will be recalled, figured large in the life of that staid old community a few short years ago. From 1917, on to 1920, it was the autocratic dictator of water front affairs there. During the world war, it was said that the I. W. W. button was the open sesame to the docks and ships of that port and woe be to the stevedore or foreman, who sought to impose upon M. T. W. members.

If a stevedore, he was sharply called or his loading was struck; if a foreman, he was called before the union and fined. The branch there in the heyday of its power numbered a membership of some ten thousand among the longshoremen and its lead was followed with implicit faith by all who were not members. Those were the days of "job control."

Philadelphia an Example.

Well, this job control seemed to develop needs and conditions that were in conflict with the equalizing restrictions and limitations of the I. W. W. general constitution and by-laws. For example, the general constitution said that there should be universal initiation fees in all unions of $2.00, no more; and monthly dues not in excess of fifty cents.

The Philadelphia branch declared that as a matter of practical fact, job control could not be managed on the basis of these and similar limitations. Finally the differences came to an issue. This was in 1920. Eventually the differences were composed, but in the same time control of the water front in Philadelphia was badly reduced, if not lost.

The Philadelphia veteran colored longshoremen, convention delegate Ernest Verlack, is the historian of the convention on these subjects and the convention is trying to the full to benefit by the experience there. Subject to referendum, by-law changes are being made to permit of the departmentalizing of the M. T. W. membership for organizational efficiency into three great divisions of seamen, longshoremen and harbor boatmen, all divisions to be harmonized and correlated within the organization, but given necessary elbow room for effective work.

Raise Initiations and Dues.

The limit on initiation fees is to be raised from $2.00 to $5.00 and the dues from fifty cents to $1.00, if the proposed changes are adopted upon referendum. At the same time the difficulties of transfer from other industrial unions and initial admission to the M. T. W. are increased, the intention being to confine the membership more exclusively to those permanently engaged in the industry.

Candidates for office must undergo a closer scrutiny. Two to three years in the industry is stipulated as a basis for office holding. Then again to promote efficiency, it is proposed that, whereas, the term of office is not to exceed one year as provided by the present constitution, hereafter in contrast with previous limitations, holders of the offices of general secretary-treasurer and general organization committee may be elected to a maximum of three terms in succession.

These and many other changes widely extending industrial union autonomy have been adopted subject to referendum, based upon a general statement addressed to all branches of the M. T. W. by the convention, which statement gives the need for such progressive measures as allowed for practical control of jobs without which the union will perish.

No Decentralization, Only Flexibility.

Some comment was heard on the floor of the convention to the effect that this appeared to reflect a decentralizing tendency which in fact, does not exist in the convention. The predominant tendency is precisely in the opposite direction, toward an efficient, disciplined, tightly-knit national organization in the industry tempered only by the degree of local and industrial autonomy necessary to flexibility, the national organization taking a like position in its relations with the marine transport organizations of other countries.

This predominant tendency really is the foundation for the optimistic prophecies quoted at the outset of this article. Necessity for disciplined action, locally, nationally and internationally has been the slogan, the keynote, the very breath of this convention.

It was expressed by William Drennan, general executive board member, when he proposed with the unanimous consent of the convention that Fellow Worker O'Hagen, publicity representative of the convention, be delegated to draft for the convention a resolution upon co-operation in international relations. This resolution submitted by Fellow Worker O'Hagen a few days later and unanimously adopted by the convention, probably embodies its spirit better than any other document of the convention. The reslution is comparatively brief and reads as follows:

Resolution on International Relations and Action.

"This convention fully realizes that following the world war the pressure upon the trade and industrial unions the world ever steadily increases.

"Capitalist organization against labor is international. Nothing but efficient international organization of labor upon the basis of the class struggle and solidarity will meet the situation. Therefore, this convention declares for international co-operation on the basis of the class struggle and solidarity, both for the M. T. W. I. U. No. 510, and for the I. W. W. as a whole..

"It constitutes its G. O. C. and general secretary-treasurer a committee to set up correspondence at once with the marine transport organizations of all countries, which recognize the class struggle and solidarity with a view to bringing about international co-operation, solidarity, and eventually efficient organization within our industry, reports of progress to be submitted to the branches from time to time.

A Committee of Action.

"It constitutes the G. O. C. and the general secretary-treasurer a committee of action to get in touch at once with the organizations that are directly and actively in charge of the present strikes in our industry in Australia, England, South Africa and elsewhere with a view to further co-operation in the immediate struggle against the international shipping trust, likewise reporting to the branches from time to time.

"Further, let this program be the basis of policy in international relations at the Havana conference, and,

"Finally, let it be determined now that our delegates to the next general convention of the I. W. W. shall stand upon this program both for the M. T. W. I. U. No. 510, and the I. W. W. as a whole."

For World Solidarity.

Delegate O'Hagen voiced the sense of the convention when in introducing the above resolution, he said: "I present a resolution whose acceptance and endorsement by this organization is imperative to meet the conditions which confront us in the marine industry. By its acceptance or rejection you will determine whether we will become a real labor union, having the interests of the workers at heart. We must become international. We cannot stand alone." Following the adoption of the resolution, the convention by unanimous vote instructed the secretary-treasurer and general organization committee to at once begin making it effective.

Declines Affiliation to R. I. L. U.

The convention instructed the resolutions committee to acknowledge a communication from the Red International Affiliation Committee inviting the M. T. W. to take a stand for affiliation to the R. I. L. U., but to say that the M. T. W. refuse, such affiliation "for reasons which have been stated so often that we do not consider it necessary to state them again."

Little remains before the convention but the nomination of candidates for the union's officials.

Left Wing Barbers of Local 548 Repudiate Man Who Joins Bosses

The progressives in the Chicago Barbers' Local 548 are waging a stiff fight against the proposed merging of the union activities with those of the Master Barbers' Association.

The plan proposed by the Master Barbers' Association and the reactionary officials of Local 548 is a scheme whereby the bosses may control the opening of new barber shops in the city. It is proposed that a committee representing the boss and the journeymen be empowered to pass upon all applications for the opening of new shops. The functions of this committee are also "to effect closer cooperation between the journeymen and the bosses."

50-50 Is Hot Stuff

According to agreement between the officials of the union and the master barbers, all expenses of "organization" should be paid on a 50-50 basis. It seems as if the officials of the union have been rather reluctant in coming across with the dough, believing no doubt that the money would find safer repository in their own pockets.

So if they can put thru such a scheme, and all aspiring to barber shop ownership be forced to pay $50 into the coffers of the Master Barbers, then it would be no longer necessary for the union officials to cough up the money which by all divine rights should go into their pockets.

The last meeting of the local witnessed quite a fight, and fearing that the scheme would not be passed the officials delayed the matter over to the next regular meeting.

Progressive Repudiate Katsiolis

Present at this meeting was a committee of leading bosses who made a plea for "cooperation." It might be interesting to note that George Katsiolis, a member of committee, made the principal speech in behalf of the bosses. It will be remembered that Katsiolis is an ex-member of the local and was once the left wing leader who fought most bitterly against the officials he is now supporting. He headed the left wing ticket in several union elections, when failing to get elected he decided to become a boss. The journeymen are asking how it came about that his ideas have suffered such rapid changes.

The progressives wish it be made known to the members of union that they repudiate Katsiolis by no means subscribing to his present stand. He has no present connections with the progressives of Local 548.

TWO BRITISH SEAMEN WRITE OF THEIR IMPRESSIONS ON VISITING THE FIRST WORKERS' REPUBLIC

The publication issued by the Seamen's Union of Soviet Russia has a page devoted to letters of seamen of all lands, printed in the languages of their writers under the head of the "International Post Box." We reprint herewith two letters from British seamen, giving their impressions of life in the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics. The second letter refers to the visit to Soviet Russia of the union delegation from Germany.

The one runs:

Carry On, Russia; Five Hours' Impression of Russia.

"Before seeing the country, I had heard so much about the strictness of the customs house officials regarding new clothes being brot into the country, that I expected to find the people fairly comfortable economically but rather shabbily dressed. And so I was pleasantly surprised to see the smart manner in which the women were dressed, also a large number of the men.

"The number of people who seem to have nothing to do but go to the seaside and enjoy themselves is also surprising.

"Considering what Russia has gone thru this appears to me to be the real triumph of her constructive powers.

"The workers I have seen, work in a leisurely manner, the squeezing of every ounce of energy out of the workers, so common under private enterprise, is conspicuous by its absence.

"The endeavor to educate the workers by interesting lectures as I saw in the International Club should be greatly encouraged, especially for the older people who find it hard to study.

"The picture of 'Lenin' worked in the garden of the theater square is very clever and shows the artistic taste of the people and the reverance the people have for him.

"One thing I do not agree with and that is the sale of 'alcoholic' liquor which has many attendant evils. Alcohol is the greatest drawback to the workers' progress and should be prohibited for that reason. Besides, the government should make all the ports in the union models of Communism, for propaganda purposes, for the benefit of the foreign seamen who visit these ports every year.

"To sum up, the little I have seen of Russia has impressed me very much.

"All I can say is, Carry on, Russia!
—Thomas H. Morris, British Seaman."

The second runs:

Reconstruction in Full Swing. You'll See it Yourselves, as Well as I did.

"This is my second visit to Russia and I am much surprised to see the great work of reconstruction in full swing notwithstanding the everlasting opposition of the capitalist class.

"I have been able to see the position of the children in Russia today—how happy they look compared with the children of the countries where capitalism reigns supreme.

"Comrades, organized workers of Germany, one could continue for unlimited time to give instances of the vast improvement of the workers' life in Soviet country.

"I hope that the delegation will be able to take back to their comrades in Germany and show them—their only hope of salvation from the economic slavery is to do as Russia has done and does nowadays.

"I. G. Adams, British Seaman."

PHARMACIST IN HOT LETTER TO HIS CRAFTSMEN

Urges Union for All Drug Store Workers

NEW YORK CITY, Oct. 12.—Fellow Pharmacists:—The bitter struggle for bread, the strong yearning for economic independence, has brought you into the profession of pharmacy. You came flocking into the colleges in thousands with beautiful visions before you. Long hours, low wages, insecurity of employment, drudgery of the work, the stifling atmosphere of the prescription department, held out no scare for you.

You were going to be a professional man; people were going to call you "doctor"; you were going to get money "somehow" and open up your own drug store and you would be making lots of money and everything would work out beautifully! Fine! While your imagination created beautiful pictures for you.

Petty Bourgeois Dreams Blasted

Then reality came—like a bitter pill for you to swallow. You had difficulty in getting work. You lacked experience and you therefore had to condescend to work for nothing or for something next to it. You had to wash bottles, sweep and clean around, all for the privilege your boss gave you to learn the "game."

How it hurt your pride! You a pharmacist, a college graduate, to do all that! And the long hours, no Sunday off, no opportunity afforded you of having social activity due to night work. You became used to it all. You didn't mind. You looked forward to the happy day when you would open your own drug store and then all would be forgotten.

But fellow pharmacists, there is a situation already created which makes the problem a little more difficult than you imagine prosperity in the drug business has already passed the zenith point and is on its way down the curve. Expansion in the number of drug stores has lost its intensity and their values have risen. The labor market is being oversupplied with more clerks than can be used. That makes a very favorable condition for our bosses for they can pay any price they please to the clerks.

You know quite well that registered men are not averaging what they did in the prosperous period. What is more, the bosses are using licensed juniors in place of registered men and are having them function as such despite the law. Youngsters who never saw the inside of a college are hired in place of college men wherever possible. All this tends to break down the standard of the licensed men thereby affecting all clerks. This works in the favor of the boss and to the detriment of all. All classes of men hired must be unionized.

Must Organize Union

What can you individually do about it? Nothing. You have a right to a living wage. Who is going to recognize that right? You can not stand up like a man and demand your just compensation. A strong organization of pharmacists can demand and get it for you. We can create such an organization if you get rid of the slavish and indifferent attitude which is responsible for your condition.

Organize for a decent living and for control of your job. Communicate with the undersigned and we will arrange for an organization meeting. Let us have your name, address, business and home telephone, your off day, and send as many names as you can procure and we will start the ball a rolling. Yours for a successful organization.

Mass meetings have been arranged and the workers in these cities will get first hand information on how the "fat boys" at Atlantic City took to Purcell's speech in which he forced the issue of solidarity with the Russian workers on the convention floor.

Soviet Russia Biggest Issue

Despite the attempts of the reactionary bureaucracy to keep the issue of Soviet Russia and Communist activities from the floor of the convention, this issue was the biggest that the convention faced during all the sessions.

Soviet Russia, world trade union unity, the Dawes plan and other international and national issues showed the convention that the Communists were a live force in the labor movement and that their role was not the destruction, but the strengthening of the labor movement.

DEEP STUFF!

Such sailors as never went "down to the sea in ships" will man the good ship "Jollity" at the Rescue Party to be given by the North Side branch at Imperial Hall on Sunday, October 18.

The ship will not be a "Schooner." And altho it will remain within the three mile limit until twelve bells (whenever that is!) a good time is promised for everybody as the affair rolls along.

Beginning at eight bells, all who attend will pay their admission at the dock—thru a life preserver—to a handsome purser. They will then be taken in tow by able bodied seamen (and women) for an evening's fun on the high seas that includes dancing—even a "sailor's hornpipe" that was never seen in the navy!

Later in the evening, expert "pearl-divers" in the kitchen will serve home-made life preservers and coffee to satisfy the hunger that sea breezes will give you.

The weather might get rough during the night. But there will be no sea-sickness and none will be allowed at the rail.

All this fun, for which only fifty cents will be charged, is assured every worker who wants to join the big crowd that is going to "go to see" on Sunday at the Rescue Party at Imperial Hall to "Save the Daily Worker."

The Workers Party in Action

How to Bolshevize Our Party

By CHARLES NOVAK

THE decisions of the Fifth Congress and the enlarged session of the Communist International pertaining to the Bolshevisation of the Communist Parties, require some explanations which will enable us to see the aim of our work more clearly.

Before we pass on to the subject itself, it is advisable to briefly examine the forces which have led the Comintern to make these decisions. This is especially necessary in order to eliminate all possible incorrect ideas and interpretations on this significant question for the future.

Now that we are faced with this problem of Bolshevisation it is of utmost importance to know what is meant by the slogan "to Bolshevise our Party." If we do not know this then any talk or action on this subject is not only futile but also harmful. It is therefore necessary to give a clear and regular definition of this slogan.

IF we summarise the whole theory and practice of Leninism then the answer to that question can only be the following: "To Bolshevise a party means to construct it and to change its ideology so that it becomes a real party of revolution, a party of the masses and of action, a united invincible and strongly disciplined force which with wise politics, tactics and strategy succeeeds in enlisting the great mass of the working class in the struggle against capitalism and its allies: the opportunists and social democrats.

Presenting this definition we must, in order to get a clear understanding, point out the factors which led the Commintern to formulate the policy of Bolshevisation.

It is a known fact that the Communist International was organised during a period of keen strife and civil warfare. During the first few days after its establishment and after the victory of the Russian revolution, in all lands and particularly in those of Europe, there existed a strong revolutionary enthusiasm. Great masses of socialist workers and undetermined elements began to join the newly organised Communist Parties. The enthusiasm for Communism was tremendous, but it lacked a real organised structure, a firm discipline, and a still firmer Communist ideology without which effective action is impossible.

The principal error of all newly formed Communist Parties was that they measured their strength by the temporary disposition of the workers and forgot the value of organizational structure and consolidated forces. They underestimated the strength of their opponents and over-estimated their own. At that time we were, more or less, a propagandist sect without any understanding of real Bolshevik tactics and strategy. As a consequence of these mistakes we have experienced a number of defeats in our fight against capitalism. The instances of the Hungarian revolution and the fall of the Soviet power in Bavaria present us with the best evidence.

NOT until the second congress of the Communist International were the roots of this evil struck at and thereby, the coming of the social patriots and centrist elements into our ranks checked in advance. Nevertheless this was not sufficient to safeguard the C. I. against oportunism. It had to continue its warfare against opportunist tendencies, not only in one, but in almost all of the Communist Parties. The instances of Paul Levi in Germany, Frossard in France, the errors of the Communist Party of Bulgaria (June, 1923) and the defeat in Germany (October, 1923) etc., were all noticeable manifestations of opportunism in our ranks.

At almost every congress and primarily at the fourth and fifth congresses the Communist International had to carry on a war on two fronts; against the opportunists and the reformists of the right and against the so-called "Ultra Left" or liquidators of revolutinary Marxism. Even during the life of the great genius Lenin, this strife assumed large proportions. After his death it was the most serious problem of the whole International.

This was due to the fact that there had crept into ranks of the Commintern various elements imbued with a social patriotic and petty bourgeois ideology. Even though there was a distinct differentiation between the C. I. and the social-democrats the C. I. could not save itself from absorbing opportunist elements who had later appeared in various forms. This stifled regular systematic work. This lack of an exact estimate of the economic and political situations and of proper adherence to Communist tactics and principle by these elements was also no small contribution to the cause of our defeats.

After analysing all of these deficiencies and mistakes the Fifth Congress of the Communist International brot forth a decision binding all parties to undertake systematic efforts for the Bolshevising of our ranks.

It should be understood that the realization of the decision on Bolshevisation does not mean that we must mechanically follow in the footsteps of the Bolshevik Party of Russia. It does mean however that we must learn from their experiences and the experiences of the international and adapt these experiences to the conditions prevailing in our country.

We as a unit of the Communist International must find an answer to the question of "How shall we carry out this decision?" Knowing that Bolshevisation does not apply to only one phase of our activities, we have decided to summarize the question under three headings. This is done to help every individual get a clear understanding, which will secure united action on the decisions of the Communist International.

The gruping of these headings can be:

1. IDEOLOGICAL BOLSHEVISATION
2. THE ORGANIZATIONAL AND POLITICAL PROBLEM
3. THE ABILITY TO ACT.

Now we can pass on to the first question:

1. IDEOLOGICAL BOSHEVISATION.

As we said at the outset, Bolshevising a party means to construct it and change its ideology so that it becomes a party of revolution and action. To accomplish this we must in the first place, know the role of a Communist Party during a revolution. The role of our party in this period is to organize and mobilize all its forces for the purpose of overthrowing capitalism and establishing the dictatorship of the proletariat. To succeed in this it is necessary that our whole membership is at least acquainted with the elements of Marxism and Leninism.

From this follows that one of the most important tasks before our party is to train our members in the spirit of Communist ideas and to acquaint them with the most important aims of Marxism. Systematic Marxist discipline is really the essence of Bolshevising. Without it, it is absurd to think that we could ever Bolshevize our party. We can attain a fundamental knowledge of the methods of action, tactics and strategy by all of the experiences of the class struggle and especially that of the Russian Revolution.

Starting from the highest posts of our party down to the individual members we must carry on a determined systematic fight against opportunism, no matter from what source it comes. In this fight we must always keep in mind the great struggle of the Russian workers and the defeats which we have witnessed in Bulgaria, Germany, Hungary, etc., because of the opportunistic politics of certain leaders. And even here in America we have the tendency of the Second-and-a-half International represented by Lore, until recently the editor of the Volkszeitung. We must suppress this tendency with all our might, or else we too will be committing great mistakes.

We shall succeed in this phase of our work only if we study Leninist literature and all of the decisions of the Communist International. For this we must organize classes, lectures, assemblies etc. and at the same time always keeping in mind that it is not sufficient to only study the theory, but that we must intelligently carry this policy out in practice. Many think that it is enough to understand the theory of Marxism and nothing else. This is fundamentally wrong. The real ideological Bolshevisation we shall accomplish only when we study the theory and at the same time put it into practice.

If under the term Bolshevisation we mean that the party must be ideologically, politically and organizationally competent then we know that study alone without any actual work is of no value, forthermore it creates a sectarian tendency which is the liquidation of real Leninism. It is of no value to know Marxist theory and not have the ability to carry it out into practice. Theory without practice or practice without theory is just like a body without a head.

THEN if we briefly summarize on immediate value of ideological Bolshevizing, starting from our leaders down to the individual members of our party, we realize that it will prepare us to correctly estimate various political problems and the economic and political relation between the revolutionary proletariat and the poor (small) farmer.

In this respect, especially, we have been wrong. Many of our revolutionists sincerely think that in the present capitalist society there exists only two antagonistic forces; the capitalist class on one side and the working class on the other. This is the origin of our neglect to work among the small farmers. We must not forget for a minute that without the support of the farmers success in the struggle for power is out of the question.

Comrade Lenin was the first one to discover this fact and to give it due consideration. To his deep insight into politics we owe the success and the final victory of the Russian workers and peasants. Abstractly, in the present capitalist system there exist only two classes; the bourgeois and the proletariat. But in these classes there are various groupings, such as small farmers who because of their economic status, are natural allies of the working class. Knowing this it is our duty to maneuver in such a manner as to rally the masses of exploited farmers around our politics so that we can enlist them into our ranks or at least neutralize them during the periods of decisive battles. If we do not do this, they will at the most critical time become handy tools of the capitalist class against the workers.

With this and the ideological Bolshevization we have a guaranty of a solid Communist discipline, without which no successful Communist action is possible. n all of our Communist Parties there are stil ltraces of lack of discipline. As a result there are individuals who turn a deaf ear to our leading organs when they urge for more activity. Lenin himself realized that lack of discipline is a dangerous error. He says: "To disobey the party and the party's discipline is to disarm the proletariat and subject it to the mercy of the bourgeoisie. This is similar to the petty-bourgeoisie's jealousy, unsteadiness and disability in a party, will eventually bring any for united action, which if tolerated proletarian revolutionary movement to naught."

THIS excellent thought of our great leader Lenin needs no comment because it speaks clearly for itself. But while we are at this point we may add that the important prerequisite to the knowledge of Marxist theory is the confidence between the leaders and the members of a party.

From all of this it is evident that it is necessary to transform ideological Bolshevization into practical Bolshevization. Without this it is impossible to even think that we are revolutionists and still less can we expect to succeed in the fight against capitalism and opportunists of all feathers.

Therefore it is our supreme duty to work in that direction and accomplish that without which we can never become a real Bolshevik Party.

WORKERS' RELIEF DEMANDS A NEW RAKOSKI TRIAL

Protest Torture of Workers

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BERLIN, Oct. 12.—A telegram signed by leading personages was sent from the bureau of the Workers International Aid to the Hungarian government demanding that necessary steps be taken to give Rakoski and other working class prisoners a new trial.

The Workers International Aid also asks that arrangements be made for a delegation of one or two persons to visit Hungary to investigate the condition of Mathias Rakoski.

The following communication was sent to the Hungarian government by leading personages thru the Workers International Aid:

"To the Hungarian Government.

"The undersigned demand in the name of humanity that the mishandlings and the torture of working class prisoners be immediately brought to an end. And that at least all prisoners be guaranteed a normal process before a normal court. New death sentences three years after the end of the struggle would only call forth the greatest indignation in the intellectual world.

W. P. CHALLENGES S. P. AND S. L. P. TO OPEN DEBATE

To Discuss the Election Campaign Issues

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—The Workers Party today sent a letter to the socialist party and the socialist labor party inviting them to a symposium to debate the issues of the election campaign to be held during the week of Oct. 23rd.

The letter of the Workers Party sent to the aforementioned parties is published below.

"Sirs:

"In the present election campaign there are three organizations that represent and claim the support of labor for their candidates. The Workers Party has from the very outset of the campaign urged the necessity for a united labor front against the candidates of the capitalist class. It has called for a united labor ticket as the first step toward the establishing of a labor party. This call has been ignored by your party.

"We, of the Workers Party maintain that the platform and activities of the Workers Party is the only one worthy of the support of the working class. We feel that it is your obligation as a political party to debate before the workers, with the representatives of the Workers Party, the issues effecting the campaign and to demonstrate to the workers why your ticket should be supported as compared with that of the Workers Party.

"The Workers Party calls upon the socialist party to participate in a symposium to discuss the issues effecting the workers. We hope to demonstrate that the socialist party and the socialist labor party, to whom a copy of this letter has also been sent, in their program, platform and activities are not serving the best interests of the working class. That the socialist party thru its utterances, candidates and activities in the labor movement are serving the labor bureaucrats the class collaborationists and are themselves dividing, demoralizing the working class and serving the interest of the capitalist parties. The socialist labor party, likewise, is a reformist organization completely out of touch with the demands of a political party of labor in the present period of war and imperialism and that is keeping back the movement of the workers toward revolution.

"We propose this symposium of the Workers Party, socialist party and socialist labor party be arranged during the week of October 23rd and that it should be under the auspices of a joint committee which will make arrangements for the proper preparation of the respective party viewpoints of the campaign.

"We await your very earliest consideration of this invitation.

"Yours for the united front of labor,

"William W. Weinstone,
"Gen. Sec'y. Dist. No. 2."

MITCHELL STILL DEFIANT; URGES SPEEDY TRIAL

Will Testify Before Court on Shenandoah

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 12.—Col. William Mitchell, stormy petrel of the U. S. army, and publicity agent for airplane manufacturers, whose sensational charges against his superior officers and his severe criticism of the army and navy has brought him face to face with court martial, renewed his attacks today, following testimony of Mrs. Margaret Ross Lansdowne before the Shenandoah court of inquiry.

"I am much impressed with Mrs. Lansdowne's testimony," Col. Mitchell declared. "She testified under oath that the ship in which her husband and crew perished was sent to the midwest against her husband's wish and for political purposes only. Thus far everything in my original charges at San Antonio has been proved in the court proceedings."

Anxious to Testify.

In spite of his refusal last Thursday to testify before the court of inquiry, Mitchell asserted that when the charges against him are aired before a court martial he will insist upon his testimony being heard. He asserts that he will prove that not only was the Shenandoah 50 per cent overweight, but that other disasters were the direct results of "incompetency, criminal negligence and almost treasonable administration of the national defenses by the army and navy departments.

Interviewed by Congressmen.

A number of congressmen and senators arriving in Washington for the opening of the next sessions of congress have interviewed Mitchell, it became known today, preparatory to airing the whole affair before the country. Mitchell has convinced them that the airplane is the best weapon for imperialist warfare.

Administration forces are also lining up floor leaders to try to avert the avalanche of criticism that seems about to fall upon the Coolidge government.

Workers of Northern Caucasus Increase Number of Schools

MOSCOW, Oct. 12—In 1909 the entire expenditure on popular education in the northern Caucasus amounted to 108,324 rubles. There were 3,725 pupils in the elementary schols, 536 in the intermediate school, and 44 in the craft schools.

In 1925 the expenditure on popular education in the northern Caucasus reached the amount of 1,519,738 rubles. There are now being taught 31,915 pupils in the elementary schools and 4,961 in the intermediate schools, which means an increase of 800 per cent as compared with 1909. There are 1,219 pupils in the craft schools, which means an increase of 2,700 per cent. Furthermore, educational facilities are provided for the young Caucasians at the labor colleges and universities.

There are now 351 stations for the elimination of illiteracy. Special literary schools have been organized for the women, which were attended by 6,025 native women during the current year.

PROVES ARBITRATION BY RAILWAY LABOR BOARD KEPT WAGES DOWN AND DISCOURAGED STRIKE ACTION

By LELAND OLDS

(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

The futility of government arbitration to establish just wages is emphasised in interstate commerce commission figures showing changes in wage rates of eight classes of railroad employes since 1921. The wide variation in the treatment accorded shows that, except as moderated by organization among the workers, supply and demand determines railroad wages. The judicial atmosphere of the U. S. rail labor board has been a pretense to discourage strike action.

Variations Mostly Downward.

Changes in average hourly straight time earnings in the last four years, according to the figures, vary all the way from a 6 per cent reduction for freight car repairmen to an increase of 2 per cent for section foremen. The contrast in the southern district is even more striking, the variation in treatment ranging from a reduction of 9½ per cent for carmen to an increase of 4 per cent for section foremen.

In the eastern district every class was receiving higher straight time pay in July, 1925, than in July, 1924, except freight carmen and section labor. Section labor after a slump from 39.9 cents an hour in 1921 to 35.8 cents in 1922 was restored to the 1921 level. Carmen after slumping from 72.2 cents in 1921 to 67.2 cents in 1922 have only partially regained their position, receiving 70.2 cents an hour in July, 1925.

Wages Slump in Sout and West

In the southern district every class shows considerable decline in earnings between 1921 and 1925 except section foremen and telegraphers. The most serious reductions are section labor from 32.9 cents to 30.1 cents, machinists from 77.3 cents to 73.2 cents, blacksmiths from 78.6 cents to 74.2 cents, boilermakers from 78.1 cents to 73.4 cents and carmen from 72.4 cents to 65.6 cents. Telegraphers have advanced from 60.9 cents to 62.5 cents an hour.

In the western district the four shop crafts and section laborers show losses similar to those in the south; clerks and section foremen have just about held their own, and telegraphers have gained less than 1 cent an hour.

The changes from year to year for the United tates as a whole have been:

Average per hour in July	1921	1922	1923	1924	1925
Clerks (class B)	59.9	58.0	58.9	59.7	59.9
Section foremen	56.6	54.4	58.0	57.0	57.5
Section labor	37.3	32.3	35.4	35.5	35.5
Machinists	77.3	74.3	74.3	75.3	75.9
Blacksmiths	78.4	74.3	75.3	76.8	77.3
Boilermakers	78.2	74.6	74.5	75.9	76.6
Carmen	72.2	65.9	66.3	67.3	67.9
Telegraphers, towermen	61.7	61.7	61.2	62.5	62.7

No More Wages Than Unorganized

Average earnings in factories in July, 1925, were 11½ per cent higher than in July, 1921. The contrast with the railroad employes emphasizes that the return to normalcy following 1920 included a letting down of union standards on the railroads to the levels prevailing in unorganized outside industry.

A. F. of L. Discovers That the Army Is Not Friendly to Unionism

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ATLANTIC CITY, Oct. 12.—On complaint of the Trades and Labor Council of Greater New York, the A. F. of L. convention here has instructed the executive council to ask the war department to hold an "unbiased" investigation of the labor policy pursued by the army at the West Point military academy.

It seems that in the construction work at the school for future generals of the U. S. army, the quartermaster, Colonel E. J. Timberlake, is, according to the complaint, paying scab wages and "in order to carry out a non-union policy, he was employing non-citizens."

In a letter to the New York Council, Timberlake is said to "have clearly indicated that he was an opponent of the organized labor movement and is aligned with the open-shoppers."

Zionist Protests Lies Spread About Jewish Colonization in Russia

MOSCOW, Oct. 12—Dr. Shlyapotchnikov, one of the founders of the Zionist govement and a delegate at six Zionist congresses, now living at Kharkov, has sent a message to the 14th Zionist congress now meeting at Vienna, in which he protests against "the malignant lies, venomous calumny, filthy insinuations and senseless hostility with which irresponsible Zionist advocates are struggling against the measures taken by the Soviet government to assist the settlement of Jews upon the land." He demands from the congress "to recognize the need of supporting the colonization of Jews in the Ukraine to the same extent as the Jewish colonization in Palestine."

Land for Industrious Jews.

MOSCOW, Oct. 12.—In order to increase the area of land available for colonization by Jewish agriculturists, there is to be assigned another 350,000 dessiatines in the Ural region, on the Volga, in the Salsk district and on the Black Sea coast, in addition to the land already assigned in the Ukraine and in the Crimea.

had appropriated a total of $1,997,370,000 for military aviation during the war and $434,383,287 more between 1919 and 1924. In the last five years, he added, congressional appropriations for aviation averaged $86,676,657 a year.

Enormous Expenditures.

This sum, Madden declared, was $3,252,000 more than Great Britain spent in 1923 and $75,146,000 more than Japan spent in the present fiscal year. Despite these huge appropriations for the American air service, Madden said "the bungling experimental" work of army and navy officials had resulted in a record of failure so far as the development of aviation was concerned.

The congressman's proposals for a new military air policy included:

1. An air budget of $87,500,000 a year for the purchase of 1,500 new planes annually from private manufacturers and the maintenance of a joint army and navy flying force of 1,500 commissioned officers and 15,000 enlisted men.

2. Use of enlisted men as pilots wherever possible.

3. Abandonment of all aircraft experiments and manufacturing by both army and navy.

Aid Private Graft.

4. Delegation of experimental and manufacturing work to establish commercial aircraft companies in order to build up these concerns as a reserve force for use in time of war.

5. Creation of a civilian "procurement officer," who would purchase all governmental aircraft, supervise its construction and direct experimental work by the private companies, taking these duties away from the army general staff and the navy bureau of navigation.

6. Elimination of some existing government aircraft fields, but maintenance of two on the west coast, two in the Mississippi valley, one on the south coast and two on the east coast.

Opposes Air "Joy Rides."

7. Prohibition of all air stunts, including "joy riding cruises around the world, jumps across the Pacific and attempts to reach the North Pole," so that all military air training will be devoted to war tactics.

Madden cited testimony given by both Major General Mason M. Patrick, chief of the army air service, and by Rear Admiral William Moffett, head of the naval air service, to support his charge that the two services had failed in the efforts to develope military aviation.

Patrick, he said, had told a congressional committee last fall that the army had placed in the "second line of defense" nearly all the pursuit planes purchased in the preceding two years because they were antiquated by later inventions. The army air head, he added, also testified that 262 Thomas Morse planes had been bought by the army which were "deficient in speed and particularly in vision, because it is very difficult for the pilot to see out of them."

Charges Criminal Waste.

"I have heard something of a charge of criminal negligence," said Madden, referring to Colonel Billy Mitchell's charges, "but this borders on criminal waste."

"If credit is to be given to the testimony of many of the witnesses here," Madden added, "the last five years of development and experimenting have been productive of very little, if any, advance toward a permanent aviation plan which might be accepted by congress. You have been told no real steps forward have been made.

"I cannot help but conclude that the technical development of this new art may not be safely left to the armed forces if we are to take our place among the countries of the world in the air. I can but conclude that millions of dollars have been squandered in a purposeless, meaningless, endless experimental orgy. Surely it is not too much to expect that the millions should have purchased more than 19 in evidence in tangible results."

KUZBAS COLONY PROGRAM CALLS FOR INCREASED PRODUCTIVITY DURING NEXT ECONOMIC YEAR

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—Much has been said by various capitalist papers in America of the failure of the American colony in the Kuzbas region in Soviet Russia. The following excerpts from a letter by Simon Hahn, chief of the purchases and sales department of the Kuzbas colony, gives the lie to the yellow sheets of the capitalist class:

"As much as one may hear about the slowness of our progress, no one can deny that we have decidedly moved ahead, and that we moved and expanded at a faster rate than Russian enterprises in the same industry," writes Simon Hahn. "People forget that we are not in America but in Russia and that is impossible for our productive apparatus to do more than meet market requirements.

Maintain Privileges Indefinitely.

"A special committee from the governmental organs have recently visited our region and after a thoro investigation they have recommended that, due to the approval of our work, that our special privileges be maintained indefinitely.

"We are now in a posotion to supply cheap products and good ones. Kemerovo cost price for coal is 9 kopeks per pood F. O. B. ($2.70 per ton). The cost to us of Klochugina coal is about 8 kopeks and Prokopieva is about 10 kopeks. The cost of coal in 1923 was as follows: Kemerovo 18 kopeks, and at Kolchugina in 1924 was 13 kopeks and Prokopieva was 12.9 kopeks.

Industrial Products Cheaper.

"This reduction in costs does not merely apply to coal for our coke costs have been reduced from 32 to 26 kopeks. Our chemical products are selling at cheaper prices than those of any similar plant in the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics. And this in the face of the fact that the wages of the workers have risen from 22 rubles per month to 38 rubles in Kemerovo and 35 rubles in the other districts.

"Our treasury was not boundless and many times we have had to get along without American equipment which we simply did not have the money to buy. I am now gathering together a fairly large order of equipment to be placed in America. Our purchasing capacity is getting greater.

Building Program.

"The programs for our different areas are as follows:

"Kemerovo—Now mines 1,000,000 poods of coal monthly. Beginning with October production will be increased to give an output of 16,000,000 poods for the coming production year. The second battery of coke ovens is near completion and it will probably be January before a move is made to operate. Coke is in great demand and the sooner the new battery is operating the better for our financial position. Our by-products will then naturally be doubled.

"Our building program shows that 45 different types of houses have been built this year. This will continue. A new "Narodny Dom" (People's House) is being built and also an all-concrete bath-house.

To Increase Wages.

"The average wage of the workers is to be increased to 45 rubles a month besides the usual services of housing, light, water and fuel.

Kolchugina, (Leninsk) — Monthly production of coal, 1,300,000 poods. Program for 1925 will be 18,000,000 poods. This can be easily increased in case fo demand for the railroads or the Ural steel organizations, which use this coal for their gas generators.

The building program shows that a new 500 K. W. station will begin to operate in October. A few new houses have been built, but many of the old ones have been repaired. Next year, 25 new houses are to be built upon a model which has proved satisfactory in Kemerovo.

Good Grade of Coal.

South Group (Prokopieva)— The present output of coal is only 600,000 poods per month. The program for next year will be 12,000,000 poods. A new mine has to be designed here, and the work on this has already started. A new electric station and boiler plant will be completed here before winter. Twenty-five workers' houses are near completion. This mine has a great future on account of the high coking and steaming qualities of its coal which satisfies the very high requirements of the Ural blast furnaces and the Baltic war fleet.

Foundry Production.

Guriev—The output of pig-iron at this plant is from 40,000 to 50,000 poods per month. The foundry produces 6,000 poods of castings per month for the market besides meeting local needs and our own mines. The machine shop building is under repair, the machinery is old and must be replaced. Fifteen houses have been built and more will be erected during the winter. Market conditions are very bright and most of our products are already sold in advance.

"The most important developments in Kuzbas are still to come. We are going to bring across many more engineers and expert workers to Kuzbas from America."

A good book on Communism will make you a better Communist.

Kuomintang Party Delegation on World Tour Visit Russia

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, —(By Mail)—The delegation of the Kuomintang party of China, now on a visit to the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, had an interview with Madame Kameneva, the president of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics' Society for Cultural Relations with Foreign Countries.

The members of the delegation expressed their gratitude for the assistance of the society in their getting acquainted with the cultural institutions of Moscow. Among other things the delegates declared that after haying studied the parliamentary system of politics in the civilized countries of western Europe, they came to the conclusion that the Soviet Union was the most progressive country in the world from the political standpoint.

Madame Kameneva, responding, pointed out that the recent events in China should have demonstrated to the Chinese people the real aspect of civilized parliamentarism as applied on Chinese territory. She also drew the attention of the delegates to the need of taking into consideration the great variety of races inhabiting the Soviet Union to be able to judge about the political system existing in the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

Continuing Madame Kameneva advised the delegates to get acquainted with a number of cultural establishments in Moscow, particularly with the cultural and educational activities carried on at factories and workshops.

After visiting a number of cultural institutions, the Kuomintang delegates expressed their wish to become acquainted with the constitution of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

Coolidge Trying to Find Out Why He Was Defied by Ship Board

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 12.—President Coolidge is still much agitated over the affront he received at the hands of the shipping board in removing Admiral Leigh C. Palmer as president of the Emergency Fleet corporation. This afternoon he had a long conference with Mr. Palmer and later caller Attorney General Sargent to confer with him on the question of his legal powers over the board.

Meanwhile from New York comes the assertion of Elmer E. Crowley, appointed by the shipping board to replace Mr. Palmer, that he has no intention of resigning in spite of the fact that President Coolidge was not consulted about his appointment and has indicated displeasure over the appointment.

As usual, "Cautious Cal" is baffled and doesn't know what to do even tho he has been openly and flagrantly defied.

Saratov Exhibition

SARATOV, Oct. 12.—At the exhibition of paintings in Saratov every art tendency has a place. From the "travelling artists" (a name given to a group who had broken away from the academic salons) to the most extreme modern "left" tendencies were given a place at this exhibit.

Correction.

In the issue of the DAILY WORKER for Monday, Oct. 9, a resolution against the barring and for the admittance of Shapurji Saklatvala appears as being passed by Local 429 of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters Chicago.

The envelope which came with the resolution was lost and the comrade who handled the preparation of the news item for the printer took it for granted that the resolution was passed by a Chicago local. It was passed by a carpenters' local in some other city. It is important that all resolutions and news items bear the city from whence they are sent.

The Alignment at Locarno

"Pole and Czech New Hurdle For Security Pact," says the Chicago Tribune's headline over the dispatch from Locarno on October 12.

It can be said with certainty that this hurdle is of a height that not even the agile leaping diplomats of France, England and Germany will be able to surmount it without injury to the robber interests they represent.

All observers at Locarno appear to agree on one point:

That Germany will not concede to a guarantee of the existing Polish and Czecho-Slovakian frontiers and on another point there is also substantial agreement, i. e., that if Foreign Minister Stresemann should make such an agreement his government would not last until his return to Berlin.

The eastern frontiers established by the Versailles treaty and allied conferences since that time are matters of life and death both to Germany and the little countries in the "cordon sanitaire." For France, their revision means the loss of her prestige in eastern and southeastern Europe. Poland's existence depends upon her control of the direct route to Soviet Russia.

Dispatches state that the diplomats are seeking a "formula" that will overcome the objections of the nations affected but no verbal formula can eradicate the underlying national antagonisms which force the question to the fore.

The only formula that will solve this problem is the military formula—cannon, troops, airplanes and poison gas.

At Locarno, in spite of diplomatic verbiage, is seen the fundamental alignment in the world today—the Soviet power against world capitalism, the Communist International and the millions of workers and peasants under its leadership against world imperialism. The intensification of the conflict shows itself all the more clearly since it hurls itself into the discussions without the Soviet Union being represented officially.

An open breach may not show itself at Locarno. The mighty pressure of American finance-capital to which all the nations there are indebted may prevent this, but the weaker powers will be sacrificed to the stronger and the smouldering flames kindled by friction of warring interests will balk any real solution.

Hearst's Political Bankruptcy

The failure of the New York agents of William Randolph Hearst to find a candidate to run in the mayorality campaign under the Hearst banner has national political significance. Hylan, the present mayor, defeated by Tammany in the recent primaries, was the creature of Hearst, but thru a combination of political circumstances had the endorsement of the Tammany in his previous campaigns.

When it was definitely established that Hylan was out of the game, Hearst endeavored to find a suitable candidate that could defend the policies he represents.

Hearst, thru his chain of powerful papers in the east, is the political leader of the petty-bourgeoisie—the small industrialists, shopkeepers, real estate sharks and strata of professionals not bound by economic ties to bank capital. The first choice of this political adventurer was Florio H. LaGuardia, former republican congressman who was re-elected on the LaFollette ticket last year. LaGuardia stands high in the councils of the third party forces in the middle west and had just returned to New York after playing an important role in the campaign that sent young Bob LaFollette to the United States senate to take the seat of his deceased father.

For a number of years Hearst has been endeavoring to bring under his domination someone with sufficient prestige among both the sordid petty-bourgeoisie elements of the east and the farmers and small businessmen of the west to forge the link that will unite these two elements preparatory to a drive to create a third party in whose councils he could play a leading role.

LaGuardia refused to permit himself to be experimented with in this manner as he probably knows full well that the Middle West petty-bourgeoisie, befuddled as they are, at least know enough to keep clear of any alliances with such an unscrupulous scoundrel as Hearst.

The labor elements interested in the third party movement, tho they endorse the most shameless betrayals of the working class, under the guise of collective bargaining, could not accept Hearst, in view of his recent record as a strikebreaker and scab herder.

This political sidelight on the New York elections does not mean merely the elimination of Hearst; it also indicates the improbability of a revival of the third party movement.

1,885,870 People—44 Political Parties

Forty-four parties took part in the recent elections in Latvia. Twenty-six of these parties succeeded in electing candidates to parliament.

Latvia has a population of 1,885,870 and an area of 25,000 square miles.

In Holland, with a population of approximately 7,000,000, some 26 parties took part in the last elections.

What does the mushroom growth of political parties in these little countries mean? Simply that capitalist democracy there has broken down completely—has become a farce.

Latvia exists solely because she offers a convenient battle ground for the contesting forces of the working class and world imperialism—controlling the best trade routes to Soviet Russia. The Latvian government is a creature of British imperialism. It is a dictatorship, the Communist Party is outlawed, and legislative mandates having no meaning, the elections become comic opera affairs with every shade of personal and economic interest having its own party.

The name is true largely of Belgium, Holland and other "neutral zones" set up by the great powers. The fate of Belgium is decided by France and England and its bourgeois and petty-bourgeois parties must orientate themselves towards one or the other. Latvia must choose between Soviet Russia and western imperialism.

class struggle in Latvia is so sharp that the franchise is meaningless—even the issue of wages and hours between the workers and peasants and the rulers can be settled only by armed struggle.

What Saklatvala Symbolizes -

By William F. Dunne

ARTICLE IV.

THE Chicago Tribune with its vicious denunciation of Communists and the left wing of British labor per the quotation with which the third article of this series ended, speaks for the middle western capitalist class. Its sentiments are echoed by the New York Times, however, and the Washington Post and pretty generally by the metropolitan press as a whole. American imperialism naturally is not greatly concerned over the decay of British industry but its interests as a part of world capitalism will not allow it to contemplate the rise of the British working class with anything but fear and hatred.

JUST at present American imperialism is striving at Locarno for an agreement among the foremost European capitalist powers that will further stabilization of industry and credit. The proposed visit of Saklatvala would have injected a jarring note into the, on the surface, amicable relations between America and Great Britain.

The Dawes plan was the first step towards this stabilization but without political guarantees it cannot make for any kind of permanency. It is only now that the workers of Germany, Holland and Switzerland are beginning to understand clearly that the Dawes plan is a slave plan. In Germany already it has lengthened the working week in practice from 48 to 51 hours, in Holland to 50½ hours, in Switzerland to 52. In all these cases the lengthening of hours has been accompanied either by a reduction in money wages, in real wages or both. The workers are rallying again, urged on by bitter need.

SAKLATVALA could and would not have spoken about the oppression of the Indian workers without pointing out the world wide character of imperialism and its ceaseless attacks on the workers of all countries.

He would have told us, for instance, of the statements of N. M. Joshi, representative of Indian labor at Geneva, before the Indian legislature:

> If there is a hell on earth it is in the city of Bombay . . . of the 150,000 mill hands in Bombay 95 per cent live in one room dwellings.
> According to the figures published by the labor office of Bombay the mortality of children under one year of age in these tenements is 828.5 per thousand. Children are born there only to die.

The correspondent of the London Daily Herald who gives this report states that Joshi's statements "were greeted with laughter"—by the representatives of British and Indian capital. He adds:

> Thus the government and the capitalists, both European and Indian, were united against the bill (a bill granting government aid to working mothers—W. F. D.) which was defeated, in spite of Mr. Joshi's moving speech.

THE 150,000 mill hands mentioned are on strike as this is written and British imperialism is delighting in another terroristic orgy with the strikers as the victims.

But Saklatvala would not have spoken of the terrible conditions among his people without speaking of the anti-imperialist spirit—that tremendous new development in Great Britain—among the British working class in spite of their middle class leaders. Saklatvala is a Communist and he would have related the refusal of MacDonald, who, when in the office of premier, wrote to the Indian people the most cold-blooded and threatening letter ever sent by a British government, to form a united front with the Communists against British imperialism and who opposes world trade union unity with the same arguments used by Baldwin.

MACDONALD says that if the British labor party were "to toy with revolution it would rightly forfeit the confidence of all who had heads to think and minds to control action," but Britain faces a revolutionary situation and refusal to prepare the working class for it is support of the imperialists.

Ramsay MacDonald does not like Saklatvala because Saklatvala is for the destruction of the slaveholding British empire and it is noticeable that the American press, in dealing with the Saklatvala controversy and the swing of British labor to the left, is careful to speak kindly of the MacDonaldites in the labor party.

SAKLATVALA might have quoted Lord Parmoor on British war expenditures, a substantial portion of which is for the purpose of equipping the colonial punitive expeditions and armies of occupation which British imperialism maintains in Africa, Egypt, China and India. Said Lord Parmoor on Sept. 25 in an interview to the press:

> For expenditure, on past wars and to provide for future was, Great Britain is staggering under the annual charge of 540,000,000 pounds. How can constancy of industrial prosperity be expected under such a burden? Now comes the threat of war with Turkey, which cannot be disassociated from the general questions that arise between the East and West.

LORD PARMOOR did not but Saklatvala would have pointed out the real basis of "the general questions which arise between the East and West" is the robbery of the workers and peasants of the East by the imperialists of the West.

Britain's attempt to grab the oil deposits of Mosul and enslave the Mohammedan tribesmen there cannot be separated from "the general questions that arise between the East and West." In Mosul is another danger spot for British imperialism and Saklatvala would have said—and truly—that the Mosul question is not entirely a matter of oil. If Turkey gets Mosul she will get Mesopotamia and the British land route to India will be cut in two.

No, in this day and age, when there are revolts of colonial peoples from the Riff to Shanghai and when the beginning of a liberation movement can be discerned even in America's precious Philippines, imperialism, whether it be British or American, wants no Sakitavala running at large.

BUT the closest-knit unity between America and Great Britain is found in their actions towards the Soviet Union. It is so obvious that it seems scarcely necessary to call attention to it. It is fear of working class support of the workers' and peasants' government of Russia that drives the imperialists to such open violations of their bourgeois-democratic legalities as the exclusion of Saklatvala.

This is to be found in the attitude of the American capitalist press towards Purcell. He was treated as any other fraternal delegate to an A. F. of L. convention until he urged world trade union unity with the All-Russian unions as integral part of the trade union international. Then the floodgates of capitalist wrath were opened and beginning with President Green every toady of Wall Street has denounced him as "an enemy of labor and society." American imperialism is never so righteously indignanat as when it finds someone trying to teach its hand-fed labor movement a little class consciousness and if in addition to this the offender speaks a good word for the Soviet Union, he must be cast into the outer darkness.

THIS is, in fact, exactly what the Washington Post proposes to do with Purcell. In a recent issue it has this and more to say of the chairman of the International Federation of Trade Unions:

> Purcell is an advocate of world revolution. He represents the agitators who have led so many British workingmen into the toils of Communism. Whether Purcell is wittingly an agent of Moscow or whether he is merely a tool of the destroyers of organized labor does not appear, but his own writings show that he is working to stir up a world revolution for the overthrow of organized governments. In the August number of Trade Union Unity, of which he is joint deitor, he wrote:
> There is only one solution to the problem of war, just as there is only one way to secure a universal one-hour day, to say nothing of the six-hour day that may be possible when industry is controlled by the workers. Tht way is the positive militant international unity of the organized working class, consciously directed to the overthrow of capitalism. In that way alone can we defeat ourselves against capitalism's present world offensive.

These are the words of Lenin and Trotsky, repeated by Purcell. What is this Communist doing at a meeting of the American Federation of Labor? How did he smuggle himself into the United States in violation of the law excluding Communists and agitators of Communist doctrines? What is the bureau of immigration doing that it permits a Communist to violate the act of June 5, 1920? What about it, Mr. Commissioner General Hull?

GREEN, since his attack on Purcell, has become the angel with the flaming sword guarding the Eden of American capitalism.

Purcell is not a Communist but he is a fighter for "the positive militant international unity of the organized working class consciously directed to the overthrow of capitalism."

He too is a danger to British and American imperialism but he is not a Communist like Saklatvala. Moreover, even British imperialists are not yet desperate enuf to brave the storm his exclusion would have aroused. Had he said no word in favor of the Soviet Republics and the unions which are its foundation, he would have been left to go his way in peace.

WE have said before that Saklatvala and Purcell in America at the same time was more than British and American imperialism could stomach. They want no such exposures from the lips of a colonial subject in America as is contained in Lansbury's Sunday Worker for September 27, while the chairman of the Amsterdam International urges unity with the Russian unions from the platform of an A. F. of L. convention. British imperialism still has work for Ramsay MacDonald to do and it does not want his usefulness in misleading both American and British worker destroyed.

SAKLATVALA would probably have told his audiences of the agreement entered into with Bulgaria against Soviet Russia by MacDonald while occupying, as a representative of the workers, the office that Baldwin now holds. The following quotation from the Sunday Worker, contained in a story vouched for by its correspondent, sheds a glaring light on the efforts to keep out of the United States a friend of the Soviet Union against which every British government, including the MacDonald government, has plotted with American assistance:

> In September, 1924, Mr. J. Ramsay MacDonald, labor prime minister of Great Britain, was the chief British delegate to the league of nations assembly at Geneva. A representative of the Bulgarian government was also present, and he sought the opportunity of a private conversation with Mr. MacDonald. It is now possible to reveal the impressions which Mr. MacDonald gave to that representative.
> At the outset, despite the fact that the Zankov government had come into power by the murder of Stambulisky, and that murders of its political opponents were even then almost a daily occurrence, the labor prime minister was expansive towards Zankov's representative. The British labor government, he said, was disposed to come to an agreement with Bulgaria.
> The Bulgarian delegate had put forward some of Bulgaria's demands, such as an outlet on the Aegean Sea, a settlement of the minorities and reparations questions, and a larger army.
> Then he turned to the "Bolshevik peril," on which subject the Bulgarian delegate had been skillfully insistent. The British labor prime minister assured the representative of the Zankov government of his personal support, and that of his cabinet, in the fight against this "Bolshevik peril." He explained that it was the object of the British government to build a barrier between Soviet Russia and the rest of Europe.
> Therefore, a few weeks afterwards, Kalfoff was able to assure the Bulgarian cabinet of British support, and to urge that it should go confidently forward with its campaign of repression by imprisonment and murder of the Communists and should keep up its demands on the allies for a larger army.
> It was not until after the Sofia bomb affair, last April, that the permission for a larger army was given, temporarily, and it is true that Mr Austen Chamberlain was then at the foreign office. But the encouragement to Zankov to continue on his bloody path, which led to those horrors of the spring and summer, was given directly from the mouth of Mr. Ramsay MacDonald.
> And it was given in order that this butcher Zankov might be used as the tool for preparing "a barrier against the workers' republic of Russia. That was the deed of Britain's first labor prime minister.

THE FINAL DAMNATION - - -

By H. M. Wicks

WAVE after wave of damnation from the official ecclesiastics of the Protestant Episcopal church rolled over the head of the Right Rev. William Montgomery Brown, bishop of Arkansas, during his various trials for heresy. The final, the culminating inundation swept over him last week during the sessions of the house of bishops at New Orleans, which reaffirmed the judgment of two previous church courts, adjudging him an heretic.

The original trial instituted against him because of the publication of his book "Communism and Christianism," which was based upon the slogan: "Bansih gods from the skies and capitalists from the earth!" resulted in a sentence of deposal from the house of bishops on March 31, 1924.

A court of review on Jan. 15 of this year upheld the previous conviction and it was ratified by the house of bishops last Thursday. Today (Monday, Oct. 12) the venerable ecclesiastic is summoned to St. Paul's episcopal church in New Orleans where the presiding bishop, the most Rev. Ethelbert Talbot, will formally excommunicate him from the church.

THO the recipient heretofore of what passes for honors in the church, this act of excommunication is the highest honor that has been bestowed upon Bishop Brown or that can be bestowed by any church upon any human being. To be damned by an aggregation basing its very existence upon a lie, to be excommunicated from a set of creatures in human form who pollute the minds of children with the filthy, obscene and slavish doctrine of the christian religion, to be reviled by these capitalist lackeys who bless with pious words the capitalist butchers of the world for every blood-bath administered to the working class is an honor. To be excluded from association with the bishops of the Protestant Episcopal church, that harbor as one of their leading lights such an intellectual atavism as the cathedral builder, Bishop William T. Manning, of New York, is to be distinguished before all people possessing even a modicum of what passes for intelligence and the fundamentals of modern education.

BUT, in considering the unfrocking of William Montgomery Brown, erstwhile bishop of Arkansas, one question inevitably arises: Why did he continue to associate himself with these vultures of capitalist ecclesiasticism after he became convinced that the whole thing was a hoax and that the doctrine they teach a monstrous lie?

Again: Why did he, at New Orleans, on the very eve of his final excommunication, painfully and with faltering steps bearing his more than three score and ten years, march in the medieval parade of bishops and even in Christ church, participate in the communion services, which every person on earth knows is a survival of cannibalistic ritual, when mankind in its infancy actually ate the body and drank the blood of savage gods? Why did this heretic of the church who claims to embrace Marxism and Darwinism so degrade himself as to grovel before the altar in a church when he knows that that church is merely the survival of the sheltering structure of the tomb and the altar a survival of the tomb itself, of the dead ancestors of savages?

A PERUSAL of the book for which he was tried reveals the reason for these contradictory actions. In this book Bishop Brown heralds a new church and a new religion. But tho in theory he repudiates the motive for the practice of religious mummery, he desires to maintain it in practice. The holy sacrament, of which he partook with the bishops that were about to excommunicate him, symbolized to them the drinking of the blood and eating the body of Jesus; to him it symbolizes an act of reverence to humanity. But to him, as to them it represented symbolism, unreality, the mummery of religion. They worshiped Jehovah, the god of the slave masters, while his god represented humanity.

In a speech before the Labor Defense Council at Cincinnati; Bishop Brown said:

> "I banished the conscious personal gods, not excepting the christian god, from the skies as realities, tho I still retain them there to be used as symbols of the real god."

MANY sentimental revolutionists, in their naivete, imagine his book, with its propaganda of a new symbolism, based upon the ritual of the old christian symbolism, is extremely revolutionary and adopt it as a text book for themselves, or a propaganda tract for prospective "converts."

These comrades do not perceive that the result of accepting such a doctrine as that of Bishop Brown means to perpetuate a clergy, a church and all the trappings of religion, even tho that religion substitutes humanity in place of other gods.

Such an attitude is certainly not worthy of one who calls himself a revolutionist. The revolutionist needs no numbling of litanies, no oblations to any sort of god, no Socratic worship of the "good, the true and the beautiful," no soft, sweet formulas to guide it on its road to emancipation from capitalism.

The one thing required, is, to quote the words of Antonio Labriola, "that accumulation of energy, that concentration of force and continuity of resistance", necessary to sweep the capitalist class from power.

ONE may read Bishop Brown's book in vain for any semblance of that determination to crerte a mighty proletarian party, a revolutionary vanguard of the working class, totally devoid of any abstract sentiments, such as worship of humanity, a party that is determined to take up the struggle for power, not by persuading bishops and other lackeys and scullions of capitalism that our cause is just, but by relentlessly scourging from the earth every vestige of the power upon which that class rests.

The church and the clergy are in dire straits before the rise of the proletarian revolution and it is this revolution that has shed a few rays of its light into the mind of the former bishop of Arkansas. Just as there were princes of the medieval church that gave religious sanction to the rising bourgeoisie in its struggle against feudalism, so we have the spectacle of churchmen trying to reconcile religion with the proletarian revolution. But while every other class in the development of society had need of religion, the victorious working class will find no place for it for the simple reason that, as Marx pointed out, when there is no need for illusions, all forms of religion will disappear.

TO advocate preservation of the ritual of religion without its substance is just as anti-Marxian as to embrace the whole creed of orthodox religion; and the religion of the "son of man" is, as Marx emphasized, in reality the esence of capitalist religion:

> "For a society based upon the production of commodities, in which the producers in general enter into social relations with one another by treating their products as commodities and values, whereby they reduce their individual labor to the standard of homogenous human labor—for such a society christianity with its cultus of abstract man is the most fitting form of religion." (Karl Marx: Capital, Part I, Chapter 1.)

And certainly it is rendering a dubious service to the revolution to try, as does Bishop Brown, to turn Marxism, itself, into a religion of humanity. He does not thereby strike a blow at capitalism, but at the revolution by vitiating the very fountainhead of its theory.

While we do not place Bishop Brown in the category of his enemies—the Mannings and others of that type—who assail with their ignorant vituperation the struggles of the working class, we must not refrain from reminding this nice old gentleman that there is such a thing as killing one with kindness and we will not permit him, even with the best of intentions, to entice the revolution into the stagnant swamp of a religion of abstract man or befog the minds of the workers with any kind of superstitious nonsense.

A Review

"Desire Under the Elms" Pictures New England

By H. M. WICKS.

The long heralded Eugene O'Neill play, "Desire Under the Elms," reached Chicago last night and was displayed at the Princess Theater. It is not a play that will be enthusiastically acclaimed by the ku klux klan, and other halfwit advocates of the supremacy of white, nordic, protestant, native-born 100% Americans, for it shows one of the units of this tribe vegetating on a New England farm, worshiping Jehovah with puritanic fervor and incidentally stealing, committing adultery and butchering a baby.

A delightful family.

When old Ephriam Cabot returns home after a "whoring" expedition (to use the terminology of one of his sons), the two eldest of his three sons hot-foot it for the gold fields of "Cal-i-for-nia" leaving the youngest, Eben, to inhabit the family homestead with the bride and groom.

The new wife and stepmother is young and as vivacious as a puritan can be. Her first husband was a drunkard and loafer and her second is an old, hell-howling, bible-fumbling despot whose best days have been spent digging rocks out of the soil and converting them into fences surrounding his property so that he could raise crops on the cleared land. Certainly not a romantic mate for a young widow.

But there is young Eben, the son of old Ephriam. The new wife seduces him. When the child comes the old man thinks it is his. A hilarious New England hoe-down is arranged to celebrate the new arrival. The whole neighborhood attends and enjoys itself at the expense of the old buzzard who struts with pride, considering it an achievement, at his age, to become a father. But everyone knows of the "affair" between the wife and her step-son.

The dizzy aftermath of the party causes young Eben to question the love of the woman for him. To prove her devotion she kills the infant. When she first relates the butchery the son mistakes her frightened story and thinks it is the old man she has murdered, and is overjoyed.

When he learns the facts he rushes for the sheriff. Then, returning he repents his rash act and wants the woman to run away with him when the sheriff arrives.

The old man returns from the barn where he has been holding communion with the cows "who are more human," and blames the whole affair on his god in the skies.

While the play bears the customary O'Neill crudities, reminiscent of the melodramas of the past generation, it has moments of character delineation that are impressive and the setting, the plot and the acting give one glimpses of the real New England—the Down East of Calvin Coolidge, of Cotton Mather, of Professor Elliott, and a host of other luminaries.

The acting of Mr. Walter Huston, who plays old Ephriam magnificently, saves the play from becoming at times ludicrous because of the O'Neill technique (or lack of technique). Mary Morris, the only woman in the cast, plays the difficult role of the wife with a sustained emotionalism that places her among the best on the American stage.

By all means if you want a good, hearty laugh at down-east Yankees as they are, see "Desire Under the Elms," before the meddlesome creatures who censor plays in Chicago and in general interfere with other people's morals—because they themselves have none to bother about—start their crusade to stop its performance.

U. S. TROOPS TERRORIZE PANAMA WORKERS

Fight Wall Street's Imperialist Rule!

(Statement by the Central Executive Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party.)

AMERICAN soldiers are fighting striking workers of Panama, who are protesting against exorbitant rents.

The imperialist American government is giving the workers a lesson in why it maintains a big army and navy. It needs soldiers and warships in order to put down the uprisings of the workers whom it is oppressing and robbing in the West Indies, Mexico, Central and South America.

THE workers of Panama could not bear the burden of low wages, high living costs, including extortionate rents for the squalid living quarters. They organized to fight against these conditions. Their protest meeting was attacked and two of their number were killed. When they organized a demonstration in memory of the victims of the murderous attacks of the government, the American soldiers were called in to suppress their protest by force.

WHAT has happened in Panama is happening in all of the countries to the South of the United States. The American capitalists are investing the profits they wring from the labor of the workers of this country to exploit the people of the West Indies, Central and South America. When the workers of this country protest against the exploitation thru which Wall Street grinds them to the earth, the American soldiers are called in to protect the investments and profits of our capitalists. The American government steps in to shoot down the workers who dare rebel against their Wall Street masters, as it has in Haiti, Santa Domingo, Mexico and now in Panama.

WORKERS of the United States! The fight of the exploited workers of Latin-America against the Wall Street exploiters and its agent, the American government is your fight. You must join them in the struggle they are carrying on against American imperialism.

DECLARE your solidarity with the Panama workers.

Adopt resolutions in your trade union, hold mass meetings.

Demand the withdrawal of American soldiers from Panama.

Support the Panama workers in their fight for better working and living conditions.

Demand that the American government stop wasting the wealth the workers produce to maintain armies and build a big navy to protect Wall Street investment.

Down with the American imperialism!

Forward to the Workers' and Farmers' Government of the United States.

Central Executive Committee, Workers (Communist) Party of America,

AMALGAMATED THUGS BEAT UP WOMAN FOR LEFT WING ACTIVITIES

Gangsters at the headquarters of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, 409 Halsted street, on Monday, beat up a young woman member of the organization who was distributing leaflets advertising a public meeting to be addressed by one of the active left wingers in New York on the latest developments in the needle trades situation there.

The victim, Tille Reznick, asserted that one Charles Rudnik organized the gang in the headquarters when she entered with the leaflets and after insulting remarks and threats to the effect that unless she left the place, she would be lynched, she was seized and violently thrown from the office into the library. Upon emerging the thugs again attacked her, one of them admonishing the others "Don't hit her in the face; you know how to handle her," beating her until her body was black and blue and then forcibly ejecting her from the premises.

This is evidence that the reactionaries and their sluggers in the needle trades unions have a united bloc against the left wing and that one and all they unite to suppress criticism of their betrayal of the rank and file.

State Publishing House to Print Many Books for Peasants

MOSCOW Oct. 13.—The peasant literature department of the state publishing house intends to place upon the market in the autumn 30,000,000 books, and by the autumn of 1926 to bring the output to 100,000,000 books, covering all questions of interest to the village.

The state publishing house has received over 3,000 letters from peasant readers pointing out the merits and defects of the books read by them. These letters serve as basic material for the study of the interests of the readers.

Russ Professor Finds Re-agent to Assist in Spring Seed Selection

MOSCOW, Oct. 13.—Dr. Manoilov has invented a chemical re-agent for the selection of spring and winter seeds. The simplicity of the method renders it accessible to every peasant. The seeds are subjected to the action of a few drops of the reagent, when a violet hue indicates the spring seeds, and a greenish-yellow hue indicates the winter seeds.

ELECTRIC POWER TRUST CONTROLS NEW YORK STATE

ALBANY, N. Y., Oct. 13—That this is the era of great combinations of capital is exemplified again by the filing of certificates of merger with the secretary of state of New York of power companies that complete the control under one head of electric power throughout New York state from Buffalo to Schenectady.

The four companies involved are the Ontario Power Securities corporation, the Niagara Power Securities corporation, the Adirondack Securities corporation and the Wanita Holding corporation.

The Niagara Power Securities corporation controls the Niagara Lockport and Ontario Power company, while the Adirondack Securities and the Wanita Holding corporation controls the stock of the Utica Gas and Electric, the Citizen Light and Power, the Municipal Gas company of Albany and the Adirondack Power and Light company of Schenectady.

These corporations are merged into an "administrative" corporation under the name of the Mohawk-Hudson Power corporation with a combined capitalization of $200,000,000. It controls power lines that stretch across the State of New York from Hudson River to Niagara Falls. Charles S. Reffner is president and Charles E. Peck is secretary.

PARIS STRIKE NO JOKE; FACTORY STRIKER DEAD, SCORES OF POLICE INJURED, 300 WORKERS ARRESTED

PARIS, Oct. 13.—The French authorities are trying to make light of yesterday's twenty-four hour strike against the continuance of the Moroccan and Syrian wars, but the government is still taking no chances by withdrawing the 10,000 troops and the thousands of sailors from the navy yards which poured into Paris to suppress the strike called by the Communist Party, during which one Communist striker was killed by a boss.

Nothing Funny About It.

Nor are the scores of police who today are nursing their wounds in Paris hospitals convinced that the propaganda of their superiors that it was all a joke is applicable to crowds of striking workers they clashed with in the factory districts.

In all there were 300 arrests and about 150 injured enuf to need medical attention, as a result of the police and troops who were ordered to attack any gathering of workers and disperse all crowds.

New Demonstration Over Dead Striker.

When a factor owner at Suresnes murdered one of the Communist workers, crowds of workers surrounded the establishment threatening reprisal. The murderer was rescued by the police only after a serious riot.

The funeral of the dead worker will be the occasion for a new demonstration against the open savagery of the government and the Communist Party considers calling a new strike of six hours on the day of the funeral.

PRIMO DE RIVERA TO RESIGN AS HEAD OF MOROCCOAN POST

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MADRID, Oct. 13.—General Sanjurjo, at present in command of the Melilla sector, will succeed General Primo De Rivera, as high commissioner of Morocco.

Primo will give up the Moroccoan post when Muley Hassan, the Spanish puppet, is proclaimed caliph of Morocco.

BRAZIL BECOMES SUBJECT NATION OF U. S. CAPITAL

35,000,000 People Pay for Bankers' Banquet

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Oct. 13—That imperialism knows the art of combining business with pleasure is seen by the recent banquet at the Pittsburgh Bankers' Club given by the officers of the General Electric company to Dr. Jose M. Sampaio Correa, chairman of the finance committee of the Brazilian senate and head of the Brazilian delegation to the interparliamentary conference held at Washington.

Many figures of note in the realm of financial imperialism broke bread and bottle with the Brazilian delegation. There were Owen Young made famous by the Dawes plan, A. S. Durant of the General Electric, Sidney C. Mitchell of the Electric Bond and Share company, and many New York bankers dealing in Brazilian finance, including Dillon, Read and company, Lee Higginson and company, Blair and company, White, Weld and company, Ladenburg, Thalman and company, and Halsey Stuart and company.

Dr. Correa held out lucious bait for bankers in his address, pointing out the importance of Brazil as a great reservoir of natural resources for the industry of the world.

He "pointed with pride" to the economic development of Brazil, the population of which had increased from the 4,000,000 it had in 1822 when Brazil became independent, to the present population of 35,000,000 comprising large groups of immigrants.

"Our industrial output," he said, "principally along the line of textiles, woolen and silk fabrics, hats, boots and shoes and iron, is already great. Our agricultural development has been remarkable, and the position of our products in the world's trade is the best, not only by the quality of the products, but their variety."

It is understood among financial circles that the New York bankers are placing a big loan with the Brazilian government, on the strength of which news the Brazilian unit of exchange, the milreis, recently skyrocketed to unprecedented heights on the New York exchange.

JAP WORKERS GREET SOVIET UNION MISSION

Defy Police Attempts at Persecution

TOKIO.—(By Mail.)—The journey of the delegation of the Soviet Union on Japanese territory to Tokio became a literal procession of triumph, a powerful demonstratoin of international proletarian solidarity such as Japan has never before experienced. Tens of thousands of workers awaited the delegaton at all railway stations. Peasants, men and women, members of parliament, members of various unions, came to the delegates with speeches of welcome and requests for advice.

The storminess of the greetings unnerved the Japanese government who took all possible measures to isolate the delegation.

On the evening before the arrival of the delegatoion in Tokio all the prominent leaders of the left wing of the trade unions were arrested.

In Tokio the police forbade the demonstration of welcome and allowed only 30 delegates to greet the Russian delegation on the platform. Despite the prohibition, however, an immense mass of workers assembled before the station.

As the leader of the miners' union, Kato, commenced his speech of welcome, he was arrested and carried off by the police in the presence of the Russians. The same was also done with the whole delegation of the Japanese trade unions which was to accompany the Russians upon their journey. Then a regular street fight commenced between the police and the demonstrators. Banners were confiscated and mass arrests carried out. Despite everything however, the police could not prevent the demonstration and only after many hours of hard work and the combined efforts of over a thousand police were they able to clear the square.

The police took all measures to prevent any contact being established between the Russian delegation and the Japanese trade unions.

Communists support the Canadian labor party candidates in accordance with their united front policy.

PURCELL AGAIN TELLS A. F. OF L. NEED OF UNITY

Jurisdictional Dispute Rages After He Speaks

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Oct. 13—Another plea for world trade union unity was hurled into the A. F. of L. convention here today by Arthur A. Purcell the British fraternal delegate. Purcell got the floor again when President Green presented him with a gold watch as the gift of the delegates. Other gifts were presented to the other fraternal representatives but Purcell came first and he was the only one who spoke at any length or had anything worth while to say.

All Headed for Emancipation.

"I accept this gift not for myself but as an expression of the solidarity of the workers of America and of England" declared Purcell. "We may have our differences but we will manage to work together because we are all headed in the same direction, the unity of all labor, the emancipation of the workers of the world in every part of the world."

But within a few moments the delegates showed how far the American Federation of Labor would have to go to catch up with workers of other countries by plunging into a bitter jurisdictional dispute between the Teamsters' Union and the Railway Clerks' organization.

American Sort of Unity.

President E. H. Fitzgerald led the fight for the Railway Clerks, claiming that whatever teamsters, chauffeurs, helpers and workers in garages that the Teamsters' Union is seeking, are so tied up with other work over which the Railway Clerks have jurisdiction that they cannot be segregated.

He was supported by Delegate G. H. Nicholson. President Tobin of the Teamsters, who is also treasurer of the federation, replied, claiming that the jurisdictional laws of the A. F. of L. gave the teamsters and chauffeurs in question to his organization. He stressed the fact that his union had been chartered in 1899 and claimed the Railway Clerks was a "war baby" union anyway and even at that the teamsters would only take one-fifth or one-seventh of the membership away from the Railway Clerks.

The executive council's report favors Tobin's position and demands that the Railway Clerks carry it out within 90 days or suffer the loss of their affiliation with the A. F. of L. No decision had been reached at adjournment.

Votes Rap at Secession.

The convention voted condemnation of secession movement of American Federation of Express Workers, taking the occasion to condemn any tendency toward the establishment or fostering of a seceding organization in any industry.

With no discussion the convention unanimously adopted the report of the committee on shorter workday demanding that eight hours of work be the maximum and citing instances where the workday had been cut down much more. The resolution cited the revolutionary changes that had taken place in industry increasing production.

Support was also voted the striking textile workers in the Willimantic, Conn., plant of the American Thread company. President Thomas

SOLDIERS SHOOT STRIKERS; WRECK LABOR HEADQUARTERS; MARTIAL LAW IS DECLARED

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BALBOA, Panama, Oct. 13.—The protest of the laboring masses of this city against exhorbitant rents has called forth most terrible reprisals. Panama City since yesterday has been an armed camp with the invading United States forces swarming the street in full war regalia and brutally dispersing even the most casual gatherings of workers.

In the wake of pillage and destruction inaugurated by troops dispatched there under Brigadier General C. H. Martin, on Sixteenth street, Panama City, have been sacked and one man is known to have been murdered, while scores of others suffering from bayonet wounds and ferocious beatings are being cared for in improvised hospitals established by the workers, who are denied access to regular hospitals to care for their wounded.

Thruout the city occasional groups of women and children clamor for word of their husbands and fathers missing since yesterday, only to be bestially handled to troops who have evidently been given a free hand by the commanding officers.

Heroic Resistance

The workers at labor headquarters, called "Bolshevik" headquarters, by the army commanders, heroically defended themselves with any weapons at their disposal. Chains, flat-irons, spades, stove lids and other missiles were hurled at the uniformed invaders as they mounted the stairs. These, however, were the only weapons possessed by the workers and when they were exhausted the troops entered and began the butchery.

One of the defenders was murdered and his body hurled to the street below, many were bleeding from bayonet wounds, others clubbed into insensibility by the butts of rifles, while the premises were wrecked and the furniture demolished into splinters.

Raid Arms Stores

Simultaneous with this outbreak of terrorism, hardware stores and other shops selling arms and munitions were looted so that the city would be at the complete mercy of the invaders.

Stores were closed and barricaded and this morning Brig. Gen. Martin reports to General Lassiter, in command of the Panama Canal department of the United States army that "peace reigns" in the city. But it is the peace of death, the peace of the desert, where the only sound is the tramp of the iron heel and the muffled groans of the victims of this savage outrage.

Follow Murder of Worker

The new struggle in Panama broke out yesterday as an outgrowth of the riots of Saturday night, when the police killed a worker during a demonstration against high rents. Several thousands Panama workers followed the body of Marciano Mirones, the victim of Saturday's riots, from Santa Ana Plaza to the cemetery, the leaders carrying red flags. Mirones' brother, speaking at the grave, promised revenge and urged all to assist him.

ENGDAHL DRAWS CROWD EVEN IN ATLANTIC CITY

Speaks in New York on Friday, Oct. 16

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ATLANTIC CITY, Oct. 13.—The "fat boys" in their zealous attempt to prove to big business that they wer not "reds" nor "radicals" refused give J. Louis Engdahl, editor of DAILY WORKER, one of the press badges that were hande right and left to a lot of the " Check" press reporters.

At this convention every a was made by all of the moss-co fossils to show their dissociati the radical movement. "Majah" a stench in the nostrils of the men and pressfeeders in this c for his strikebreaker activities, vered a harangue on the Comm and the reds.

Workers Come to Listen

In spite of this tirade within convention and the publicity whic the reactionary mass meeting at Atlantic City, which was called in an attempt to draw the delegates and visitors away from the meeting arranged at Moose Hall for J. Louis Engdahl, a meeting where a Communist interpretation of the American Federation of Labor convention was to be given, Engdahl's meeting drew over 200 (which even The New York Times grants) of the visitors and delegates.

J. Louis Engdahl is now touring the Eastern part of the country telling of the attempt to hand American labor tied hand and foot to big business by these "fat boys" who were so zealous to become "good boys" in the eyes of the bosses.

In addition to the meeting in Atlantic City, last Sunday night he addressed large and enthusiastic meeting of workers in Philadelphia.

MINERS DEFEND UNION WITH SQUIRREL GUNS IN COMPANY OWNED SOUTHERN VILLAGES

By ART SHIELDS.

(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

ATLANTIC CITY, Oct. 13.—Company towns where the owner demands the homage of a god; child labor laws that die at the gates of the cotton mills; miners, unorganized, but armed with squirrel rifles and a spirit that keeps mine guards away—those were some of the things related to the Federated Press correspondent by two southern delegates to the American Federation of Labor convention, Paul J. Aymon of the Chattanooga Trades and Labor Council and W. L. Funderburk, representative of the Stove Mounters' Union.

Company-Owned Towns.

"If you want to see what company towns are like," Aymon says, "just go a few miles out of Chattanooga on the Central Georgia railroad. You will find about 15 cotton mill towns, owned, some by northern and some by southern capital, where the mill owners and managers rule like gods. All child labor laws are ignored and all liberties are taken from the workers. The mill owns the police; it owns the church, the schools and the stores. Every cent paid in wages comes back into the company stores—every cent and more. The workers are kept in debt."

WARS ARE WON BY 'DOUGH BOYS', SAYS OFFICIAL

Bloodhounds of War Game in Conflict

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 13.—The mass of conflicting testimony before Coolidge's air board investigating commission became still more involved today when the war department, represented by an array of general staff officers introduced its testimony challenging the claims of defenders of a separate air department that aircraft are of sufficient importance in military strife to warrant placing aviation in a separate department.

The army chiefs were to base their defense of the present aviation situation on the strategical value to the national defense of a unified command of all war activities. Their testimony was expected to carry the board into a study of the military value of the various plans for a separate air corps, a new department of aviation and an independent aviation command.

The witnesses called included Brig. Gen. Fox Connor, assistant chief of staff in charge of training, and Maj. Gen. Robert C. Davis, adjutant general. The board also recalled Maj. Gen. Mason M. Patrick, chief of the army air service.

The recall of Patrick was believed due to the sensational testimony of Martin B. Madden, republican congressman of Illinois, chairman of the house appropriations committee, who charged the two air services with squandering millions of dollars in an orgy of aerial experiments. The board also desired to question Patrick concerning the effects of anti-aircraft fire on moving planes.

Can Stop Aircraft

Testimony given by Maj. Gen. F. W. Coe, chief of the coast artillery, was to the effect that four three-inch batteries of anti-aircraft guns could defend any objective against an enemy bombing squadron. In tests, Coe testified, the anti-aircraft batter[illegible] made 4.67 percent of direct hits, [illegible]cient to break up any bombing [illegible].

Purcell Tells Need of Unity

F. McMahon of the Textile Workers spoke for the resolution, pointing out that this corporation was controlled by the English Sewing Cotton Thread company of Manchester, England so that its American name didn't mean anything. The 2,500 strikers are opposing a wage reduction.

President John L. Lewis of the Coal Miners' Union has arrived in the city. Altho he has not appeared in the convention, he has already given a banquet to some of the German labor delegates, who again seized upon this opportunity to attack the Communists.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Oct. 13.—It remained for the Gompers' memorial services, held at the A. F. of L. convention here, to bring out in bold relief the servile role played by the red baiting "socialists," who still cling to their positions in some of the international unions, especially in the needle trades organization.

Silent during the discussion on immigration, on child labor, on the organization of the unorganized; uttering not a word of protest during the fascisti speech of "Major" George L. Berry, of the Printing Pressmen's Union, fresh from the American legion convention, although their own international conventions had gone on record against the fascisti movement, these "socialists" rose sublimely to the occasion and presented the convention with a marble bust of the late Gompers, with whom they co-operated during his closing years in his attacks on the progressives in the trade unions.

This toe-licking role of the "socialists" found its exponent in Max Zaritsky, head of the Cap Makers' Union, who made the presentations speech, offering the bust of Gompers to the delegates.

He did this not only on behalf of the anti-progressive regime in his own union, but also on behalf of the Kaufmann regime in the Furriers' Union, and the Sigman administration in the International Ladies Garment Workers Union. For this Zaritsky, Kaufmann and Sigman, all delegates in this convention, received the hearty applause and commendation of all the stand pat delegates.

Socialist Fakers Doomed

This in spite of the fact that power is slipping from under both Kaufmann and Sigman in their own organizations, presaging the time when Zaritsky will go the self-same way in his union, in which he now carries on a red-baiting drive more vicious than anything that has yet developed in this A. F. of L. convention.

This is the role that the "socialists" have played during the years since the war. It was last year that Sigman at the El Paso Texas convention unable to restrain himself until Gompers death, presented a bust to the late A. F. of L. head while he was still alive.

Immigration Heads Refuse to Deport Minister's "Guest"

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13.—"After careful consideration," it was announced at the department of labor, immigration authorities will "take no action"' in the complaint filed with them that Senorita Gloria Faure, Mexico City actress, accompanied Alberto J. Pani, Mexican minister of finance, into the United States.

Comes to See Bankers.

The Mexican finance minister is now in New York on a mission for his government with American bankers. He arrived there two weeks ago on his private car Hidalgo, which also, according to the complaint, carried Senorita Faure.

The present immigration law, providing for deportation of those illegally entering the United States, also provides that "nothing in this act shall be construed to apply to accredited officers of foreign governments, nor to their suites, families or guests."

"Guests" Can Stay.

The departments decision to take no action apparently was based on the assumption that Senorita Faure came into the United States on the Mexican minister's private car as a guest.

Roumanian Boyar Debt Mission Will Come to Washington

LONDON, Oct. 13.—The Roumanian boyar debt commission will sail for the United States this month to negotiate a settlement of the Roumanian debt to the American bankers' government.

M. Titulesco, the Roumanian minister to Great Britain will head the mission to arrange terms between the bankers' and the boyars' governments.

Roumania at present is carrying on a mass trial against 500 peasants in Kishenev, Bessarabia, for their participation in the Tatarbounar mass uprising against Roumania boyar domination.

Big Fund Granted to Improve Housing of Leningrad Workers

LENINGRAD, Oct. 13.—The textile trust of Leningrad has assigned one million gold rubles to improve living conditions of workmen.

COMMUTERS WAGE FIGHT AGAINST FARE INCREASE

Demand I. C. C. Rescind Raise

Suburban commuters are expected to wage a last ditch fight against the Chicago & Northwestern railway before the Illinois commerce commission at the hearing of the proposed 20% increase in passenger fare rates.

Permission to increase the rates was granted by the interstate commerce commission Monday, the change to be effective on Nov. 23.

Findings contrary to the justification of the increase as sanctioned by the interstate commerce commission may result in the overruling of the permit by the Illinois commerce commission, Col. Smith indicated.

Hear Only Railroad Plea

Protesting commuters have, as yet, been given no opportunity of stating their side of the case.

The permit was granted Monday on the railrod's plea that it was in great need of money.

Jurisdiction Dispute

Justification for the reviewing of the interstate body's findings is manifested in the belief that the interstate commerce commission can decide only in cases where commerce between two states is involved, and that the state commission has sole power over commerce conducted solely within its respective state. This gives the state commission power to regulate the suburban fare between Chicago and other Illinois cities.

Would Hurt Pocketbooks

Commuters contend that the effect of the proposed increase would be felt more or less severely by thousands of pocketbooks. They point out that it is possible to ride from the loop to Ravenswood, Rogers Park, Irving Park, Jefferson Park and Austin by street car or elevated for seven or ten cents, whereas the railroad intends boosting the price of twenty-five ride tickets to Ravenswood to $2.51; Rogers Park to $3.77; Irving Park to $2.78; Jfferson Park to $5.64, and Austin to $2.70.

Other proposed prices for 25-ride tickets are:

Evanston $4.83; Wilmette $5.68; Winnetka $6.28; Glencoe $7.40; Highland Park $8.72; Lake Forest $10.70; Des Plaines $6.28; Palatine $9.71; Niles Center $4.96; River Forest, $3.90; Elmhurst, $6.08; Lombard, $7.40; Wheaton $9.38.

Greek Dictatorship Meets Greek Dislike and New Revolt Looms

VIENNA, Austria, Oct. 13.—Reports from Athens tell of a new attempt on the part of the Venizelos adherents led by General Plastiras to overthrow the present government of Premier Pangalos. The premier has ordered Plastiras arrested, but he disappeared promptly, altho some of his collaborators, including former minister Papanadrea, are under arrest.

Considerable feeling has arisen against the decree dissolving parliament without calling for elections, many political parties being practically outlawed by the present dictatorship, wishing to replace it with their own. Pangalos says the army and fleet are with him and relies on the armed forces to prevent a coup by his enemies. British diplomacy is reported to have a finger in the tangled skein of Greek affairs.

PROMISE OF ALLIES TO SUPPORT GERMANY IN LEAGUE COUNCILS PROLONGS LOCARNO CONFERENCE

LOCARNO, Oct. 13.—Agents of the allied governments assembled in this place to create a bloc against Soviet Russia under the guise of a "security" pact, express confidence in the favorable (for them) outcome of the conference.

The reasons for this optimism are first, that a promise has been made to Germany that the allies will sign a document to the effect that they will use their influence and votes in the council of the League of Nations to modify the objectionable article 16 of the covenant. The allied spokesmen, Briand and Chamberlain, have already verbally agreed to this, but have now gone a step further and promised to embody it in a supplemental agreement between the governments they represent and Germany. It is understood that M. Vandervelde, the socialist minister of the king of the Belgians, will also sign for his government.

Eastern Problem Up.

The second reason for optimism is that discussions between the German delegates and the representatives of the Czecho-Slovakian and Polish governments have begun an effort to reach a compromise on the question of the eastern boundaries of Germany. The Germans insist upon the dissolution of the Franco-Polish military alliances, declaring that if Germany neters the league and signs a security pact such an alliance will be incongruous.

May Last Week Longer.

These new efforts at compromise will have the effect of prolonging the conference at least another week. It is not thought here that the outcome can posibly be favorable for the powers assembled because of the conflicting interests that are insurmountable.

Russia Plays Part.

Altho not present officially at the conference, Russia plays an important part. The signing in Moscow yesterday of the economic treaty with Germany, which means in practise the definite breaking of the blockade against Russia, unquestionably impelled the allies to agree to signing a document promising to strive to realize Germany's demands if that nation consents to enter the league in the immediate future.

In the discussions preceding the signing of the Russo-German treaty and the actual signing, moving picture cameras clicked and the motion pictures of the momentous event will be shown thruout the Soviet Union.

M. Litvinov, acting commissar of foreign affairs, and M. Ganetzky, chairman of the trade delegation, signed on behalf of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, and Count Brockdorf-Rantzau on behalf of Germany.

The main stipulations are:

1. Recognition of the Soviet government trade monopoly so far as trade inside of Germany is concerned, but no interference with the rights of individual Germans to trade in Russia.
2. A railroad convention governing the transit trade across either country for other countries.
3. Commercial navigation giving the ships of either country the rights of home ships in the ports of the other country.
4. Extraterritorial rights of the respective trade delegations in Berlin and in Moscow. This includes buildings as well as individuals.

YOUNG POLISH WORKERS GIVEN SAVAGE PRISON TERMS BY GOVERNMENT

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, Oct. 13.—The International Red Aid learns from Poland that the district court in Radom has sentenced nine young workers to heavy terms of imprisonment for alleged membership of the Young Communist League. Domogalski and Katshmarski each received 19 years and seven other young workers each received a ten-year sentence. The trial was conducted without any defence as the accused had rejected the services of the official counsel for the defense.

Coal Mine Operators' Yellow Rags Attack Foreign-born Workers

By LOUIS F. BUDENZ,
Federated Press.

FAIRMONT, W. Va., Oct. 13.—In order to divert attention in West Virginia from their violation of the contract with the United Mine Workers, the coal operators are resorting to the time-honored camouflage of "Americanism." Foreigners are being denounced by the Fairmont Times, the operator paper, and thru the other channels of gossip and social pressure used in these outlying communities.

Stirs Up Prejudice.

The Times says for instance, "The many Americans who are working under the American plan are very bitter with the union because of the many foreigners in it and because of the predominance of foreigners among the strikers and picketers."

"No one can claim that I am not an American," said Mayor Harry Bennett, the fighting labor executive of Monongah, who faces jail thru his defiance of Judge W. S. Meredith's injunction. "What's more, the union is fighting for an American standard and for the sanctity of contract. If the workers had broken their agreement instead of the operators they would have been crucified in the public press long before this."

U. S. SOLDIERS SHOOT STRIKERS IN PANAMA

tery, while passing the railway station the workers stopped while speakers urged all to stop paying rent until the landlords made reductions.

Workers Defend Red Flag

Two trucks filled with Panama police arrived on the scene and the officers charged the mob with fixe bayonets, wounding many. The police captured one of the red flags. A worker recaptured one. He appeared later at the American hotel waving the flag and urging all workers to rally round it.

The police charged the workers, but the latter stood firm, baring their chests and urging the officers to shoot. One group of workers passed thru a police cordon, many being wounded in the melee, and attempted to march toward the president's palace. A strong police cordon at the Santa Ana Plaza charged the group and finally dispersed them.

Firemen Quit

Later the workers held a meeting behind closed doors, where the street car workers, bakers, butchers, chauffeurs and coach drivers decided to stop work in protest against the high rents. Panama's volunteer firemen, refusing to fight against the workers, turned in their uniforms at the central station and quit work, while the workers cheered.

President Calls for Aid

President Rodalfo Chiari, vassal of American capital, appealed to General Lassiter to rush troops to Panama City. In a short time Martin, in command of three batallions of the 33rd infantry stationed at Fort Clayton, five miles from the city arrived and proceeded immediately to the most frightful excesses.

All business is closed and the announcement is made that the troops will leave the city within a few days, after firmly establishing "order." The workers, though crushed, are still rebellious and unquestionably the stores closed by the military will remain closed by the workers thru a city-wide strike, even after the troops have left, until their greivances are adjusted.

Boston Banker Quits as War Dept. Chief; Stock Gambler in Job

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13.—John W. Weeks, Boston banker, stepped out of the cabinet and Dwight F. Davis, stepped in as the new secretary of war.

Formal announcement of the resignation because of ill health and the appointment of Davis as his successor was made at the White House confirming a cabinet shift that had long been expected in the capital.

Weeks plans to depart soon in a trip to South America.

The retirement of Secretary Weeks leaves only three members of the original Harding cabinet still in office —Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, Secretary of Commerce Hoover, and Secretary of Labor Davis.

Soviet Reaching Backward Peoples.

MOSCOW, Oct. 13.—It is reported from Habarovsk that the first congress of representatives of tribes inhabiting the Russian Far East took place in Habarovsk. Some of the delegates, natives of the taiga (dense forests still covering most part of Siberia), saw town for the first time in their life.

HOOD MILK COMPANY MAKES DRIVERS WORK LONG HOURS FOR SMALL WAGES IN BOSTON

By WORKER CORRESPONDENT.

BOSTON, Oct. 13.—The workers working for the H. P. Hood Milk Co. are among the most exploited in the city. The company employs but 25 men. Thirteen are drivers who deliver milk to the homes of the Bostonians. It is about these that I am writing.

The "family" drivers, as they are called, work on a commission basis. They receive 10% on all the cash they collect. In order to make a wage of about $35 per week, they must be in the barns and harness their horses at 12:30 a. m. and finish delivering milk at 7 a. m. Then they must collect money owed for the milk from 7:45 to about 12 noon. He then goes to the loading platform with his team and turns in the unsold milk and the cash. If the milk trucks from Charlestown are there ahead of him he must wait until they are away from the platform before he can get to it. He hardly ever is able to leave the platform before 2 p. m.

Driver Docked For Stolen Milk.

If the driver has a quart of milk stolen from his wagon or the customers' doorstep he has to make good out of his own pocket. All bills must be made out on the man's own time either in the barns or at his home. All pencils, rubber bands, etc., must be furnished by the men. If the driver after a hard day's work and due to lack of sleep makes an error in his figuring of the bills, it is up to him to make good the difference between what the company has charged up against him and the amount he has collected. Sometimes it amounts to $10 or $20 per month.

A "Benefit" Order.

The company maintains an insurance order, known as the H. P. Wood Mutual Benefit Association. The driver must pay $1.50 to join and 50 cents per month. If one of the members dies, the drivers are assessed $1. The benefit association guarantees to pay the men a certain sum if the men are sick, but the driver must be sick 10 days before he receives any benefit and in that time the company has hired another driver and thus the sick driver is no longer considered as an employe.

Vacations.

When each man is hired he is led to believe that he will receive 3 days off each month and 15 days vacation with pay. This is nothing but a way of bluffing the new drivers for when he starts working he finds that he cannot get any days off in June, July, August and September. Thus the fifteen days vacation has been paid for by the driver as he had to lose fifteen days rest during the months mentioned.

The manager of the company is now making every driver work harder than ever as the company demands more customers. The pittance called a commission will be little affected by the increase in customers as far the drivers are concerned, but the manager will receive $200 or $300 a month for his slave-driving if the base laid down by the company officials is made by Nov. 28.

Fear To Join Union.

The men working for this company all talk about how good it would be if they were unionized, but so far not a one dares to join a union fearing to lose his job.

Pittsburgh Tailors Affiliate to Labor Defense Organization

PITTSBBURGH, Oct. 13.—At the last meeting of the Journeymen Tailors' Union No. 131, a decision was adopted to affiliate with the International Labor Defense and to pay $10.00 as the dues per year. The local has in the past contributed considerable sums for the defense of political prisoners and will continue to do so in the future. At the same meeting it was decided to contribute $25.00 to help defray the expenses of the delegates from Pittsburgh to the American Negro Labor Congress which will be held in Chicago, October 25.

To those who work hard for their money, I will save 50 per cent on all their dental work.

PURCELL SPEAKS TO BALTIMORE FED. OF LABOR

Must Unite with Russ Unions, He Says

BALTIMORE, Oct. 13—Alfred Purcell and Ben Smith, British fraternal delegates to the Atlantic City convention of the American Federation of Labor, were guests of the Baltimore Federation of Labor on the night following their speeches at Atlantic City. When Purcell declared "If the capitalist classes want another war, let them do their own fighting in future," he was loudly applauded.

Purcell said that chaos exists in the labor movement in Europe because of the large number of central organizations, each trying to carry out a plan counter to that of the others. It was for the sake of common program and a common front against their common opponents that he favored bringing the 6,500,000 members of the Russian trade unions into the International Federation of Trade Unions. Unless the workers establish harmony in their own ranks thru broad tolerance they will suffer terribly in the struggles that now face them as a consequence of the economic breakdown of the nations.

Smith denounced the Versailles treaty as the cause of present unemployment in Britain, and predicted that in spite of present misery forced upon the workers by the greed and stupidity of the employing and land owing class, the British workers would within a few years control the national government and begin to enact measures leading toward industrial emancipation for their class.

Omaha Stone Cutters Back Anthracite Mine Strike; Pledge Help

OMAHA, Nebr.—The stone cutters of Omaha and vicinity have not failed in their duty to take a stand with other progressive unionists in defense of the anthracite miners strike. At their last regular meeting they passed the following resolution:

"Whereas, more than one hundred and fifty thousand members of the United Mine Workers of America are on strike in the anthracite fields, and

"Whereas, the federal and state governments have in the past strikes intervened to use the governmental power in the interest of the coal operators, notably President Wilson thru securing an injunction against the miners' union in 1919, President Harding thru calling upon the governors to fill the mines with soldiers in 1922, and both federal and state governments in the anthracite strike in 1923, now, therefore

"Be it Resolved: That we pledge our support both morally and financially to the anthracite miners in their strike, and be it further

"Resolved: That we demand that both federal and state governments do not intervene in the anthracite strike, and that neither in any way use the governmental power against the struggling workers in the anthracite field, and be it further

"Resolved: That we pledge our support to a campaign of publicity thru public meetings, resolutions, etc., in support of the demands of the anthracite miners and to assist in mobilizing the workers generally for resistance against the attacks of the employers upon the standard of living of the workers.

"Adopted at a regular meeting of Omaha Local, Journeymen Stone Cutters of North America, Friday, October 2, 1925.

"Signed, R. J. Fidler, President,
"David Coutts, Secretary."

Louis Engdahl, editor of the DAILY WORKER, who has attended all the sessions of the American Federation of Labor convention, will make a report. Admission is free and everybody is welcome. Forcing Union Card to Mean Something in Santa Barbara

SANTA BARBARA, Cal. Oct. 13—Out of 16 restaurants on State St., between the California and Arlington hotel, nine are displaying union cards in the windows thus leading one to believe they are operating under closed shop conditions. Of the seven without cards one is Japanese, one Chinese and a third is the Brown Mug, 430, managed by Bob Phillips, a membe of the Culinary Workers' Union of Los Angeles and a resident of this city for ten months. The card was removed from his place of business recently.

Union Card Misleading.

At a regular meetnig of the Culinary Workers' Union held Oct. 1 in a house owned by the Labor Temple association at Figueroa and Santa Barbara Sts. and to which members of other crafts and committees from the Central Labor Union and the Building Trades Council were invited and in attendance, the true conditions in the restaurants were laid bare.

The union rules call for a nine-hour day and six-hour week. The wages called for in no case reaches $40 per week. California has an eight-hour law for women, but even this is violated in the Santa Barbara restaurants. So says the president of the local and girls who work in these places. It is claimed the worst offenders are to be found among the Greek restaurants. They hire relatives and their own country folks and it is said they want to work 23 hours out of the 24. Unsanitary conditions have also been reported.

A member of the committee from the Building Trades Council asked the president if he was to understand that the union card in the restaurant windows was being used only for the purpose of drawing trade. The answer was an unqualified "yes." The proprietors had signed contracts with the union without every making any attempt to live up to them. Not a single restaurant was strictly union.

Embryo Capitalist and His Brown Mug.

Bob Phillips, manager, and claiming to be one of two partners owning the Brown Mug restaurant and himself a member for 12 years of the Hotel and Restaurant Employes' Union, but having refused to transfer into the Santa Barbara local on coming here from Los Angeles, was very much in evidence and monopolized much of the time.

He is a man in the thirties with an appearance as deceiving as the cards in the windows. His true nature becomes plain when you listen to him talk. This embryo labor skinner assuming the air of one who has "arrived" wanted to know why the card had been removed from his place of business and not from his competitors. He was "fairer than any of them." To this he received the answer that they had not got around to the others yet. He would make obviously false statements and then say: "There is a sister who worked for me. She will tell you what I say is true." Three times he tried this. Each time he was substantially contradicted by the very ones he hoped would help him.

It was finally decided to appoint a committee to look into his case. He was handed a contract and told the card would be replaced if the committee found it advisable and he and his partner signed the agreement, which he agreed to do.

Then, despite the fact that he had repeatedly stated he maintained union conditions he asked what was to be done with thee non-union girls working under him. On being questioned he said four or five girls all told worked for him. One cannot help but wonder how contracts signed by men of his type can ever become anything but "scraps of paper."

Another restaurant owner and also a member of the union got up twice and each time stated: "I am on both sides of the fence, but I am with you."

The committees from the Central Labor Union and the Building Trades Council promised their support by "pulling the trade" of union men away from scab restaurants, provided the culinary workers organized and showed they meant business.

FAGAN WRECKING DISTRICT 5 OF MINERS' UNION

Out for New Betrayal of 1,000 Strikers

By TOM RAY

MC DONALD, Pa., Oct. 13.—The strike of a thousand miners at the Jamison and Star Junction mines in Fayette county, Pennsylvania, against the attempt of the operators to enforce the 1917 scale will be lost by the policies of the district officialdom led by Pat Fagan, who is without doubt the most unscrupulous traitor that ever served as district president.

The strike was progressing nicely until Fagan appeared on the scene two miles below, at the Banning mine, where the Mellon interests—which is the Pittsburgh Coal company— is attempting to operate under the 1917 scale. Led by E. S. McCoullough and Mike Halapy, two arch traitors that formerly professed to be progressives.

Desertion of the Coke Miners

When Fagan entered that field some of the active miners leading the strikers of Star Junction, visited Banning No. 2, where a demonstration was in progress against scabs going to work under the 1917 scale. This was, of course, all right, but what must be made clear to all miners, is that the dirty work in the way of betrayals was the result of the Cleveland peanut settlement of 1922, when the miners of Fayette county received no consideration whatever.

Bad as the Cleveland settlement was, if Fagan had been a man worth mentioning, he at least should have considered the coke region miners, where the operators owned mines in what they called "the old and new union territory."

The settlement in District 5 resulted in a split in the district executive board. International Board Members O'Leary and Bill Hines, pulled away from Fagan for a short time, on account of the miners of the coke region being left out of the settlement.

A Fake Opposition

However this split lasted only till the progressive miners made their program public at a meeting called by the fakers in Pittsburgh, while the fakers were at one another's throats, including O'Leary, Hines and Bill Feeney, who intended to lead a rebel movement against Fagan and Hargest, which movement had the endorsement of the king faker, John L. Lewis.

A little later two yellow socialists, Bob Norman and Peggy Delbare, were very anxious to have a conference with Tom Myerscough and myself, so that we would be brought into the "rebel" movement that sailed under the leadership of O'Leary, Hines, and Feeney—quite a trio of fakers.

Real Progressives Fight Fakers

But the two Toms refused to betray the interests of the miners to get jobs in a bankrupt union—as explained so well by William Z. Foster in his pamphlet The Bankruptcy of the American Labor Movement. Myerscough was selected to lead the fight of the progressives against the thieves who stole the election, but we would not change place with them, or play politics against our fellow miners, in as much as we knew other evils that were committed by the fakers, such as Fagan and other relative to the Cliftonville march of the Avella miners in the 1922 strike.

Six miners are still in prison, while the fakers not only have not served a day, but have deserted these victims of capitalist dictatorship. How long are the coal miners going to tolerate Lewisism, with its Farringtons and Fagans and the murders it is responsible for at Zeigler?

Protective Union of Shoe Workers Frames Demands Upon Bosses

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Oct. 13—At the meeting last Thursday, of the American Shoe Workers' Protective Union, a resolution embodying the demands of the union on the bosses was passed unanimously in spite of the opposition of President Grady, who at first refused to entertain the resolution and who wished to propose no demands at all upon the bosses altho the agreement is about to expire.

The resolution lays down seven points as basic in the negotiations and instructs the officers to use them as such in the conversations over the new agreement. Summarized they are:

1. At least a 15 per cent increase of pay for all workers.
2. Full pay for legal holiday, piece workers to get average of eight hours' pay.
3. Double pay for overtime.
4. Disputes over prices to be adjusted within seven days.
5. Abolition of present arbitration machinery.
6. No interference of bosses in union affairs; right to organize unorganized shops; freedom to establish new locals; union discipline over members; jurisdictional and organization matters to be solely in hands of the union; and hiring of new employes to be controlled by the union.
7. The union declares its intention to build up one powerful union for all workers in the shoe industry.

J. LOUIS ENGDAHL, EDITOR OF THE DAILY WORKER, SPEAKS IN NEW YORK FRIDAY NITE ON A. F. OF L. CONVENTION

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—A chance to attend the A. F. of L. convention, to watch the fat boys turn pale while Purcell talks to them on world trade union unity, and the land where the workers rule, to see Green eating Bolsheviks and then getting an attack of acute indigestion while they make revolutions in his tummy, a chance to see a prize-fight between the shade of Sammy Gompers and the specter of Communism—all this is offered for next Friday night, October 16, at the Manhattan Lyceum where J. Louis Engdahl, editor of the DAILY WORKER, will talk on: What I Saw at The A. F. of L. Convention.

Engdahl has reported a dozen A. F. of L. conventions and "sees" all there is to see in those annual circus shows where the principal thing exhibited is the backwardness of the structure and activities of Americas organized labor movement.

He reported the convention at Atlantic City for the DAILY WORKER and those who read his reports know that he has heard and seen some interesting things. His gift of seeing things made Vice President Morrison of the Federation deny him a press card but he attended and reported just the same.

Admission is free to the Hanhattan Lyceum but the workers of New York and vicinity are advised to come early if they wish to get in. The meeting is scheduled for 8 p. m. sharp, Friday October 16th.

Organization Department Plans Mobilization for the Daily Worker Drive

THE biggest thing before the party now is the mobilization of our comrades, sympathizers, and other workers for a successful DAILY WORKER drive. Towards this end the entire party apparatus is being brought into action.

The organization department of the C. E. C. has just issued a detailed plan to all district organizers, indicating lines of activity and the program of action in this drive to save the DAILY WORKER. The danger confronting the DAILY WORKER is not an ordinary one. The difficulties we are now experiencing are much more serious than the ordinary hardships we have been face to face with for some time. Unless prompt and sufficient relief is given to the DAILY WORKER, we will be forced to discontinue publication. This is not an empty warning. This is an absolute fact.

The following is a copy of the appeal and the instructions sent out by the organization department, on the DAILY WORKER campaign, to all the district organizers of the Workers Party. Every comrade should give the most energetic and whole hearted support to this campaign.

DEAR Comrades:

The threat to the life of the DAILY WORKER is a reality. We are anxiously appealing to you to get on the job and SAVE THE DAILY WORKER.

We must raise a minimum of $15,000 during the remaining days of October, or else there will be no more DAILY WORKER.

We must especially raise a fund of $40,000 in order to insure the continuation of the DAILY WORKER.

We have the fullest confidence in our party members. We feel certain that our comrades can realize these goals.

Of course, the life of the DAILY WORKER is more than a party problem; we are sure that in this campaign to save the DAILY WORKER our comrades can and must appeal to a much wider mass than the ranks of our party membership. The DAILY WORKER is not only an organ of our party. The DAILY WORKER is also the spokesman of the whole working class.

In order to insure the success of [illegible]r party in this campaign to raise [illegible] minimum necessary funds speci[illegible] above, the organization depart[illegible] submits the following instruc[illegible] for mobilizing our party and [illegible]pathizers:

[illegible]ry branch, city and district of [illegible] party must immediately set [illegible]ial SAVE THE DAILY WORK[illegible]OMMITTEES. These commit[illegible]ust consist of the most ener[illegible]ard working, and most capable [illegible]s that the respective party [illegible]n find for this work.

[illegible]erever at all possible and ad[illegible]able, there should be added non[illegible] individuals, members of labor [illegible]ns, and other working class or[illegible]nizations to these SAVE THE [illegible]AILY WORKER COMMITTEES. To the extent that we succeed in thus broadening the composition of our SAVE THE DAILY WORKER COMMITTEES, to that extent will we succeed in our efforts to appeal to a much broader mass than our party members.

3. Special shop collections and drives to sell the HELP THE DAILY WORKER stamps should be organized in the shops, mines, and factories. You should make particular efforts to mobilize for this task the comrades already organized in the existing shop nuclei of our party. THE SHOP NUCLEI MUST SET THE PACE IN THIS MOST IMPORTANT PARTY ACTIVITY.

4. These SAVE THE DAILY WORKER COMMITTEES should make every effort to approach individual sympathizers who can afford to contribute fair-sized sums to the DAILY WORKER. In every city and district there can be found such radical sympathizers.

5. Arrange affairs and take other necessary steps to insure the payment of the money due from your district, or various sub-units of your district, to the DAILY WORKER. If necessary, make loans in your district to pay promptly the debt long overdue to the DAILY WORKER.

6. You should arrange, thru the various SAVE THE DAILY WORKER COMMITTEES to visit personally all subscribers of the DAILY WORKER in your territory in order to solicit contributions from them.

7 The various SAVE THE DAILY WORKER COMMITTEES should arrange to send speakers to labor unions and other working class organizations in their territory to appeal for the necessary funds.

8. Immediately make an accurate survey of the branches in your territory and find out which of them have not yet responded to the assessment levied on them for the DAILY WORKER. Do not delay in taking steps to see to it that such assessments are immediately collected and rushed to the DAILY WORKER.

9. This SAVE THE DAILY WORKER CAMPAIGN is now the major party activity. All of our energy and resources must be mobilized for this campaign in order to conclude it successfully and quickly. The harder you work, the quicker we get the necessary results.

10. Make it your business to draw into this campaign as nearly as possible the entire party membership. The greater the number of members participating in this campaign, the bigger will be the results.

11. Please keep the organization department fully and regularly informed as to all the organizational steps you are taking. Send us your suggestions and recommendations for improving our efforts and getting results in this campaign. Your recommendations may prove very helpful to other districts. Besides, there can be no real national campaign of the party for the DAILY WORKER unless we have good publicity. The best publicity for it is the broadest spreading of information about the actual experiences of and the concrete results attained by our comrades in the various sections of the party.

TO WORK, COMRADES! MAKE THIS A REAL CAMPAIGN! NO MORE THAN YOUR SHARE! SAVE THE DAILY WORKER! SAVE THE ONLY ENGLISH COMMUNIST DAILY IN THE WORLD! THE ONLY ENGLISH DAILY ORGAN OF THE COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL!

Fraternally yours,
JAY LOVESTONE.

More Questions Answered

By JAY LOVESTONE.

AT the membership meetings in New York, Philadelphia, and Boston which I addressed on party Bolshevization and reorganization, there was manifested a vigorous interest in the functioning of the party on the basis of shop nuclei. Many questions were asked of the speaker about the party's reorganization program and its application.

We herewith submit to the general party membership the most important questions asked and answers to these questions so that the comrades of every district may be helped in the reorganization of their own districts.

QUESTION 1:—What will the party do, after its reorganization on the basis of shop nuclei, with those comrades who are professionals? How will we organize those comrades in our party who are not working in a shop?

ANSWER.—First of all, it must be emphasized and clearly understood that one of the primary objectives of the reorganization of our party on the basis of shop nuclei is to proletarianize our party more and more. The more our party consists of the proletariat employed in the basic industries of the country, the nearer will our party be to becoming a mass, working class revolutionary political party. The Workers (Communist) Party appeals to the proletariat and to no other class or social group in society. In cases where certain individual professionals indicate their acceptance of the full Communist program in all its implications, they are, upon special consideration of each specific case to be admitted into our party.

Those professionals who are already in our party and who seek to remain in our party after its reorganization will, in the main be attached to street nuclei. Special care will be taken to diffuse these elements into as great a number of street nuclei as possible in order to avoid their concentration in any particular street nucleus. In some special instances such comrades, if they have considerable party experience may be attached even to a shop nucleus, so that these more experienced comrades will be able to help the less experienced proletarian comrades organized in the shop nucleus. Of course, such direct contact with the proletariat and his immediate and other problems will also broaden the viewpoint of the professional elements in our party and make them better party members.

In general, the same procedure will be followed with other party members not working in the shops, such as housewives, domestic help, and others.

QUESTION 2. — How will party members who are carpenters or who are employed in the building trades be attached to party units after the reorganization of the party?

Such comrades may be attached to party units in any of the three following ways:

(a) If three or more of these comrades are employed in one place or on one job for any length of time, they will be organized into a shop nucleus. In cases where three or more of these comrades are employed by one contractor, they may be organized into a special shop nucleus.

(b) In other instances party members who are carpenters or who are employed in the building trades will be attached to other shop nuclei in the industrial section in which they work or sometimes in which they live.

(c) Such comrades may also be attached to street nuclei.

QUESTION 3.—In cases where there are party members and Y. W. L. members employed in the same shop, will we organize party or Y. W. L. shop nuclei?

ANSWER.—If, let us assume, that in a certain shoe factory there are employed two party members and one Young Workers' League member, then we will proceed to draw the young Communist into the party and organize a party shop nucleus without delay. The Young Workers League member can then very well utilize his membership in the party nucleus in his shop to strive to win over some non-Communist young workers to the Communist point of view. As soon as there are three more youth workers in this shop following the Communist program, steps will be taken to organize a Young Workers' League shop nucleus in the particular plant.

After some time the party shop nucleus will undoubtedly increase its membership. There will then be a party and a Young Workers' League shop nucleus functioning side by side and in the closest co-operation, to the advantage of both, in the same factory. Needless to emphasize, the exchange of help to organize a shop nucleus or to help it function after it is organized, is to be reciprocal for the party and the league.

QUESTION 4.—Will comrades belonging to shop nuclei have anything to do with the street nuclei?

ANSWER.—Most assuredly, comrades belonging to shop nuclei will have lots to do with the street nuclei. A street nucleus is also a basic unit of the party. Our party is to be closely knit and firmly welded. In the general political campaigns of the party all comrades, whether they belong to shop or street nuclei, will work together more closely than ever before. We must not forget that with greater democratic centralization of our party, the membership of our party will work more uniformly and unitedly.

Besides, on certain occasions, as the need arises, comrades belonging to some shop nuclei will be assigned special work in particular residential areas. In such instances, the co-operation between the party members of shop nuclei and the comrades belonging to the street nuclei of the specific residential section will be especially noticeable.

QUESTION 5.—Will the C. E. C. permit the organization of building shop nuclei?

ANSWER.—It is necessary, first of all, to define this term "building shop nuclei." The constitution of our party provides that, under certain conditions, where less than three comrades are employed in a factory, shop nuclei may be organized to consist of comrades working in different factories in the same industrial section. These nuclei are organized in order to help the comrades working in separate plants pool their organizational resources to the end of hastening their success in winning adherents to the Communist program among the workers in their respective places of employment. Such a shop nucleus serves to speed the organization of other shop nuclei in the plants hitherto not having enough party members for such organization.

Sometimes, we will find that several shops are located in one building. In each of these shops, or in some of these shops two or less party members are employed at a certain time. Under these conditions, all of these comrades working in different shops in the same building may be brot together and organized into one shop nucleus. This is what the term "building shop nucleus" means. Such a shop nucleus can prove of tremendous help to the comrades working in the various shops in the same building in their Communist activities among the workers in the different plants. Thus the organization of such a shop nucleus in the building is only the forerunner of and the stimulant to the organization of a shop nucleus in the other shops located in this building.

QUESTION 6.—How will we organize our party members in cases where there is more than one shift in their place of employment?

ANSWER.—Our party members organize themselves into shop nuclei in order to mobilize for effective action against the bourgeoisie and their government, in order to win over to the Communist Party the proletariat. It follows, that if there are three or more party members working, let us say on the first shift, in a particular factory, they should organize themselves into a shop nucleus to carry on their daily party activities among the workers with whom they are employed together, with whom they work side by side. If enough party members are found to be working on either of the other shifts, they should without delay proceed to organize a shop nucleus for each of the shifts to enable these comrades to win over to the party the workers employed side by side with them on the particular shift.

Where the numbers allow, it is permissible to organize a shop nucleus for each shift in the factory in question. This enables the comrades to work more effectively among the proletarians who are not yet Communists. If, however, the number of party members working during a shift in a factory is less than three, then, steps should be taken to organize all of the party members working on the different shifts in the plant into one shop nucleus. In such a situation extra care will have to be taken to arrange the shop nucleus meeting so as to enable the comrades working on the various shifts to attend and participate. Experience will surely show that as the comrades, combined into one shop nucleus, tho working on different shifts, go ahead with their party activities amongst the non-Communists with whom they are working, it will be possible to organize special shop nuclei for each shift. We should strive for this.

Armour Pleased at Jardine Whitewash of Packer Merger

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13.—Secretary of Agriculture Jardine, entrusted with enforcement of the packers and stockyards control law, is now warrantor of the commercial and legal purity of the Chicago meat packing combine, as evidenced by a circular entitled, "What the Secretary of Agriculture Found About Competition in the Packing Industry," issued to Washington press correspondents by F. Edson White, president of Armour & Co.

It starts off with the astonishing claim: "The most complete investigation ever made of competitive conditions in the packing industry has just been brought to a close by the secretary of agriculture." This investigation dealth primarily with the swallowing of Morris & Co. by the Armour concern. Jardine's official opinion, in which he approved the merger as being legal and beneficial to the public, is then quoted.

"Naturally," White concludes, "Armour & Co. are pleased with the outcome of this investigation."

Armour & Co. were not pleased with the investigation conducted by the federal trade commission some years ago, which led to a recommendation that the heads of the five big packing firms be indicted for criminal conspiracy.

Metal Worker Finds Way to Convert Soft Iron to Hardest Steel

MOSCOW, Oct. 13.—Nikolai Tolmatchev, a metal worker, has invented a cementing powder which he called "berezol." It takes 15 lbs of berezol to convert 1 pood of soft iron into the hardest steel.

The invention has been purchased by the war industries board, who have established a little plant for the manufacture of berezol. The powder is derived from tar refuse of gas-works, which used to be dumped on the dust-heap.

Expedition Leaves to Study Unknown Tungaz Tribesmer

MOSCOW, Oct. 13.—An ethnographical expedition is leaving for the Far East to study the unknown Tungaz tribes inhabiting the left bank of the lower stream of the Amur and of the rivers Gorin and Kiru.

The basins of the rivers were never ethnographically explored since the occupation of the region by the Russian authorities. There exists only meager and casual information gathered some 70 years ago.

Teachers' Delegation in Russia Impressed by Soviet Progress

LENINGRAD, Oct. 13.—The delegation of foreign teachers now touring Soviet Russia applauded the remark of Madame Lilina, superintendent of the Leningrad schools, that children are not punished in the schools of the Soviet Union and that the teacher who scolds her pupils is prosecuted by the people's court. The delegates were also impressed by the schools for national minorities.

The chairman of the teachers' delegation in thanking the superintendent of the Leningrad schools for the opportunity and assistance given the delegation in studying the school system of Leningrad, said that when they return to their respective lands they will blast the tissue of lies spread in the press about the backwardness of the Russian Soviet schools.

Members of the reorganization commission of the district are to attend the meetings of the branches and explain in detail the work of the reorganization.

These meetings will be followed by section membership meetings beginning with November 9. The facts and the time of meeting will be announced later.

During the period of reorganization all executive committees of branches, sections and all officers are to remain as before and are to continue functioning in all the work that is assigned to them. New elections of officers will be held after the reorganization is carried thru in accordance with the specific instructions of the district executive committee.

Tho the reorganization is beginning in the month in which the election campaign is to be held all branches, sections and members must arrange that the campaign committees function and that all members perform their work in the election campaign. No one must fail in the election campaign work while the reorganization is going on.

The task of reorganization will consist in getting out the entire membership so that every member becomes a member of a shop nucleus or an international branch. In order to accomplish this the branches must succeed in getting every member to attend the meetings. Not a single member must be lost to the party in the reorganization and this can be done if the branches co-operate with the district committee to the fullest extent in drawing the entire membership into this task.

All branches are to meet every week hereafter in order to keep up with every stage of the reorganization.

Prof. George D. Herron Former U. S. Socialist Dies in Germany

MUNICH, Germany, Oct. 13—Prof. George D. Herron, former socialist leader of the United States, and later rabid defender of the policies enunciated by the imperialist lackey of Morgan, President Woodrow Wilson, died here Saturday of heart disease.

George D. Herron gained notoriety some years ago when he left a position as pastor of a congregational church at Grinnell, Iowa, and deserting his wife and children, eloped with an heiress, Carrie Rand, whom he afterward married in New York City. The ceremony was performed by another "socialist" who entered the ranks of that party from the pulpit, William Thurston Bown, and was stigmatized by the capitalist press as a "socialist wedding."

Herron was one of the first of that freaks that entered the socialist party and played a leading role, including the Rev. J. Stitt Wilson, the Rev. Carl D. Thompson, the Rev. Fred Guy Strickland and others of that calibre.

For a time Herron was the leading public orator of that party, his twaddle inevitably hinging around the reconciliation of socialism and religion. He finally left for Italy where he lived in luxury as the kept man of his wife.

Before leaving for Italy his wife established the Rand school in New York. She died a few years ago in Florence, Italy.

When the war broke out Herron became a violent Anglophile and wound up his career, as so many of that stripe do, as the flunkey of imperialism.

Armenian Workers Make Great Progress Since Revolution

MOSCOW, Oct. 13.—Since the establishment of Soviet rule in Armenia there were great achievements made in the domain of popular education not only among the predominant Armenian population, but also among the national minorities.

For the Kurds were opened seven schools for children and one for illiterate adults; for the Turkomen, 105 schools and 42 for illiterate adults. There were also organized training courses for teachers, a kindergarten, an infants' home, and a Turkomen labor college. Schools for children and adults have been opened also for the Asyrian inhabitants of five villages. There are also four schools for Greeks and 25 schools for Russians.

The Armenian Institute of Science and Art has been opened this year.

CHINESE TOOLS OF IMPERIALISM TRY TO KILL UNIONISM

Shanghai Unions Hit by Chang Tso-Lin

MOSCOW, Sept. 22.—(By Mail) — The Chinese Railwaymen's Federation telegraphed the following appeal to the R. I. L. U., to the Central Council of Soviet Unions, to the Congress of the British Unions, to the International Transport Workers' Federation and to Robert Williams:

Another Bloodbath

"After the bloodbath carried out by the British police in Shanghai on the 7th September, and after the attempts of Chang-Tso-Lin and Kain-Lain to smash the working class and strangle the strike movement in Tientsin and in the mining districts' the militarists are now attempting to strike at the heart of the Chinese working class movement.

"They are attempting to disband the Shanghai Trade Union Council which represents 200,000 workers and 16 trade unions under the pretense that it is an illegal organization preventing the continuation of work in the striking shops.

"The strikes are exclusively in the British shops and are continued because the British imperialists refuse to make compensation for the shootings.

Protests Suppressed by Force

"The action of the imperialists has caused the greatest indignation not only in working class circles, but also amongst the students and in the widest circles of the democratic movement, including the chamber of commerce.

"All demonstrations of protest are suppressed by force.

"The Chinese trade unions have already succeeded in bettering the generally known bad conditions of the Chinese workers. The Chinese trade unions are the basis of the movement for national freedom.

"The aim of the present attack is to rob the workers of their achievements in favor of the foreign exploiters and to make preparation for crushing out the movement for national freedom.

"In the name of the organised workers of China we appeal to you to take measures to prevent the crushing of the Chinese working class movement in the interests of British and the other imperialisms."

Siberian Tribesmen Freed from Taxpaying Because of Hard Times

MOSCOW, Oct. 13—In view of the hard economic conditions of the native tribes of the northern regions of European Russia and Siberia and of the Far East, the council of people's commissaries has decided to absolve the natives from all direct taxes and imposts. The exemption does not apply to persons engaged in buying and selling the products of the local industries.

SURVEY OF FIGURES KNOCKS BOTTOM OUT OF BOAST OF INCREASE IN JOBS FOR ILLINOIS WORKERS THIS FALL

By LELAND OLDS.

(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

A gain of 2.4 per cent in Illinois factory employment between August and September is hailed by chief statistician Cahn of the Illinois labor department as a turn for the better. Cahn says, "Expansion runs with such unanimity thru the list of industries that the reality of betterment is unquestioned.

"It appears that about 18,000 more people were at work in the factories of Illinois in September than were employed in August. It is the largest growth the industries of Illinois have experienced since early 1923."

Compares Badly With Last Year.

But comparison with figures for the preceding years does not support such optimism. It shows that factory employment in Illinois in September was less than 1-3 of 1 per cent above September, 1924, which was the worst September on record even if the depression year 1921 is included. Only about 2,000 more workers were on the payrolls than a year ago in factories normally employing more than three-quarters of a million.

Employment in September, 1925, according to Cahn's figures, was 10½ per cent below September, 1923, and nearly 5 per cent below September, 1922. It was actually 3 per cent below September, 1921, the year of deepest depression.

These figures show that we cannot look to factory employment for the drop in the ratio of applicants to jobs available at the free employment offices thruout the state. In September there were 120 such applicants for every 100 positions compared with 139 in August and 143 a year ago. The workers who did not find jobs in factories must have drifted away from Illinois or have found temporary work in building, road construction, outdoor railway work or the mines which show more workers on their payrolls than a year ago.

Employment increased in 38 of the 55 industries but these gains were largely seasonal. The report notes especially gains in the steel plants, farm implements, car building, furniture factories and canneries. As a whole it shows that the small gain does not represent any progress out of the slump which followed 1923, but rather some regularisation of employment in Illinois factories at a lower level.

COLORFUL COSTUMES OF EVERY NATION WILL BE BIG FEATURE AT MASS INT. COSTUME BALL IN N. Y. SATURDAY NITE

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—Following a very successful demonstration in New York City against the white terror in Hungary and other countries, comes the arrangement of a mass international costume ball which will be held Saturday evening, Oct. 17 at the Lyceum, 86th and Third Ave., held under the auspices of the New York Section of the International Labor Defense.

The work of defending class-war prisoners has become a task of international scope and of great importance. From Bulgaria, Hungary, Germany, Ireland, Poland and every country in Europe as well as from every section of the United States, comes the cry: "Open the prison doors of the class war prisoners!"

Added to the great number of requests for help, comes the latest from the camp of the long suffering miners of the anthracite region, where Pat Toohey, outstanding leader of the progressive miners was arrested on some frame-up for his union activities. In Bulgaria where 100 workers were arrested and their leader, Matias Rakoski threatened with execution, ocmes the call for help.

The international costume ball must help raise funds to answer those appeals. We cannot let them go unanswered and every effort must be made to rush help to them.

Buy your tickets at once and see that your friends and fellow workers come to the ball. Get your tickets at the defense headquarters, 799 Broadway, Room 422.

To those wearing the best costumes, prizes will be given. Dancing to the best music. An international gathering full of color and music and syncopation to the small hours of the morning.

LABOR DEFENSE GROWING FAST IN ALL FIELDS

Chicago Developing Intense Activity

In preparation for broader defense activities among the Czech and Slovak workers of Chicago, an International Labor Defense conference of delegates from Czecho-Slovak unions and workers' societies was held last Sunday at C. S. P. S. hall.

More than 1,300 workers of this language were represented by 18 delegates. A special propaganda committee including members from various organizations was elected.

The conference unanimously endorsed the I. L. D. and pledged its whole-hearted help in defending workers prosecuted or imprisoned for their class activity on belief, and in building the labor defense.

Women Begin Aid to Zeigler.

The Czech women's branch of Cicero, recently organized, brot in $35 collected for the Zeigler miners' defense. Machinists' Union No. 84, there represented, handed in a Zeigler contribution, and the delegates also made up a collection for the Zeigler defense.

Recent contributions for the Zeigler miners' defense from Chicago unions: I. L. D. branches, etc., include Painters No. 275, $10.00; Woodcarvers, Association, $15.00; Machinists No. 337, $20.00; Machinists No. 84, $5.00; S. R. S. No. 16, $1.00; W. S. B. & E. F. No. 11, $5.42; Czech Women's I. L. D. branch, $35.00; Ford & Suhr, I. L. D. branch, $10.87; Finnish branch I. L. D., $15.00; and so on, to a total of $203.65.

Branches Growing.

The last city central meeting of I. L. D. delegates showed sure growth, rapid in a number of cases. A loop branch, made of workers in the loop district shops will have its initial meeting Wednesday, Oct. 14, 5:15 p. m. at room 200, 180 W. Washington Blvd.

"Tom Mooney" branch, of young workers, has started out with 25 members and has a live committee on the job. Ford & Suhr branch, in the Douglas Park neighborhood has 70 members already. Mid-City branch reports 10 new members since its formation. Irving Park branch increased its membership by six at their last meeting.

South Slavic branch of 70 members held a mass protest meeting against the Zeigler "frame-up." A special Chicago conference of workers' organizations of this language is being called.

Everybody Busy.

"White Russian" branch is recruiting members everywhere, workers in church attendance included. It already has 35 members. Bulgarian branch started with 10 members. At a recent meeting attended by a large percentage of the Bulgarian workers of Chicago, over a hundred, a scathing indictment of the white terror in Bulgaria was delivered by an active I. W. W. who joined I. L. D. a short time ago. As a result of this meeting, ten new members joined, bringing the total to 20.

The Ukrainian and Russian branches, held an entertainment Sunday for the benefit of the defense. The Russian branch started with 35 members, now has 44. The Ukrainian has 15 new members since its formation.

Note City Central Meeting.

The I. L. D. city central meets Wednesday, Oct. 14, 8 p. m., at room 200, 180 W. Washington St. All delegates from branches, affiliated unions or societies or any workers' organization endorsing the defense, please attend.

ORIGINAL WORKERS' ART DISPLAY FEATURES DAILY WORKER RESCUE PARTY AND DANCE ON SUNDAY NITE

A rare opportunity will be presented to Chicago workers this coming Sunday to view the work of practically every artist in the revolutionary labor movement.

The display of original cartoons and drawings, to be a feature of the "Rescue Party" to save the DAILY WORKER, given by the North Side branch of the Workers Party, includes the work of such outstanding artists as Bob Minor, Fred Ellis, Maurice Becker, Lydia Gibson, Hay Bales and many others.

These cartoons, some mounted and framed, will be sold at set prices, while others will be auctioned in a novel manner.

The "art angle" will be extended even further. Each admission ticket will be numbered and a winner among these will be awarded a prize of an original character drawing to be made of the winner by Lydia Gibson right at the hall.

Fred Ellis, a branch member, whose cartoons have proved such outstanding features of the recent issues of the DAILY WORKER, will do his share at the Rescue Party by making a cartoon (so your own mother won't recognize you!) of a lucky winner in a contest which promises a world of good cheer—and but little expense.

The "art angle" to the party is to be only one of the features of the evening's entertainment. Other stunts promise an evening of real pleasure, and, as the advertising for this affair to be held at 2409 N. Halsted street, gently assures us, the admission will be "only" fifty cents. Which is really "fair enough."

Home-made life preservers and coffee will be served without charge and will help you to fill your evening.

The fifty cents you will sink into this affair will rescue you from the dullness of life, while it will help to "Save the DAILY WORKER."

MUNICIPAL CAMPAIGN PUBLICITY BUREAU IS ORGANIZED IN NEW YORK

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—Bertram D. Wolfe, agitprop director of local New York, organized a campaign publicity bureau. Solen de Leon was elected secretary; the other members of the bureau are Comrades Marguerite Tucker, Belle Robbins, Rebecca Grecht, Paul Wander, Morris Holtman of the Freiheit; Edward Royce and several others among whom are newspaper men. The purpose of this publicity bureau is to advertize our party and its purpose more extensively, so that our propaganda may reach workers who are not yet awakened politically. With that in view, it is concentrating on getting into the capitalist press effective announcements of our important meetings, interviews with our leading candidates on the salient features of our party platform, and feature stories of all kinds about the campaign and candidates.

Publicity for our party press will be the most important phase of the work, therefore, every comrade who can contribute articles of interest should do so. Every outdoor meeting should be written up either by the chairman or one of the speakers. Write briefly, mention names of all speakers, issues discussed and reactions of crowd. Don't pad the story. Send story direct to DAILY WORKER as Worker Correspondent article, and a copy to Solen de Leon, 108 E. 14 St.

18,160 ILLINOIS MINERS JOBLESS DURING THE YEAR

Average Tonnage Rises with Speed-up

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Oct. 13—There were 81,605 men employed by Illinois coal mines during the year ended June 30, 1925, according to director A. D. Lewis, of the state department of mines. This means a decrease of 18,160 from the previous year when there were 99,765 miners on the pay rolls. The total output this year was 66,144,361 tons or 811 tons per men employed. In the year ended June 30, 1924, the total was 72,408,665 tons or 725 tons per man.

His report contains figures on the fatality rate in Illinois mines which should silence operator propaganda against the Illinois law permitting only those to be hired as miners who have qualified for state certificates. The operators claim that this keeps the state in the union column by preventing them from hiring nonunion strikebreakers when they want to break away from union conditions.

The miners, however, contend that such a law, by keeping inexperienced men from dangerous work for which they are not qualified, renders mining more safe. The figures support this contention. They show 117 fatalities in Illinois mines in the year ended June 30, or less than 2 per million tons of coal mined, while the average for the entire United States is approximately four fatalities per million tons. During the year only one Illinois miner was killed by a gas explosion which is a record both for state and nation.

Red Cross Assists.

MOSCOW, Oct. 13.—The Russian Red Cross Society is organising eight medical squads to conduct a vigorous campaign against social diseases among the inhabitants of the northern polar regions.

DEEP STUFF!

Such sailors as never went "down to the sea in ships" will man the good ship "Jollity" at the Rescue Party to be given by the North Side branch at Imperial Hall on Sunday, October 18.

The ship will not be a "Schooner." And altho it will remain within the three mile limit until twelve bell (whenever that is!) a good time is promised for everybody as the affair rolls along.

Beginning at eight bells, all who attend will pay their admission at the dock—thru a life preserver—to a handsome purser. They will then be taken in tow by able bodied seamen (and women) for an evening's fun on the high seas that includes dancing—even a "sailor's hornpipe" that was never seen in the navy!

Later in the evening, expert "pearl-divers" in the kitchen will serve home-made life preservers and coffee to satisfy the hunger that sea breezes will give you.

The weather might get rough during the night. But there will be no sea-sickness and none will be allowed at the rail.

All this fun, for which only fifty cents will be charged, is assured every worker who wants to join the big crowd that is going to "go to see" on Sunday at the Rescue Party at Imperial Hall to "Save the Daily Worker."

The Bloody Fist in Panama

Yesterday's invasion by American troops of Panama City, adds another chapter to the long series of crimes against weaker peoples perpetrated by the international banditry comprising the United States armed forces.

The rape by the Roosevelt administration of the nations of the Canal Zone; the bombarding of Vera Cruz, Mexico; the armed invasion of Haiti and Santo Domingo under Woodrow Wilson—not to mention the expedition into Siberia; the odious role of the government of this country—under republican and democratic administrations alike—as international strikebreaker and ravager of small, helpless nations; the whole history of this nation since it entered the arena of world imperialism makes the exploits of Atilla, Alarec and other barbarian pillagers of the ancient world pale into insignificance.

The Panama invasion is purely for strikebreaking purposes. The working class of Panama City organized peaceful mass protests against the extortionate rents imposed by the landlords. The Panama governmental police murdered in cold blood one of the participants in the demonstration of last Saturday night. This so aroused the workers that they showed their indignation by turning out by the thousands at the funeral Monday. The police tried violently to disperse the mourners returning from the funeral. The workers stood firm while speakers urged them to refuse to pay rents until they are reduced.

Later in the day the bakers, tailors, butchers, street car and other transportaion workers went on strike in protest against the actions of the Panama police. Then came the call of the Panama authorities to the United States troops. Gen. Lassiter, in command of the Canal Zone troops, ordered three batallions rushed into the city. Then began the slaughter of defenseless workers. The headquarters of the labor forces was pillaged and at least one of the workers murdered in cold blood.

Against this savage invasion the unarmed workers are fighting with every weapon at their command. The invasion of the hall was resisted with chairs, clubs and other improvised weapons. In the streets the strikers sprinkled tacks to puncture the tires of the autos [illegible]earing the armed banditti and in general resisted as best they could.

As is usual in such cases there is no declaration of war against [illegible] people of Panama by the American government. And it is not [illegible] It is plain butchery—the customary strike-breaking tactics of [illegible] nited States army. Machine guns menace the populace from [illegible] buildings, the plazas are armed camps, reminiscent of the [illegible] invasion of Gary, Indiana, by the notorious strike-breaker [illegible] ab-herder, Major General Leonard Wood, now directing Ameri[illegible] ppression of the natives in th ePhillippines.

[illegible] e workers of the United States have a duty to perform in this [illegible] on. We should make the struggle of the Panama workers [illegible] truggle. The masses thruout the nation must be aroused [illegible] e vicious character of this latest assault exposed until the pro[illegible] will rock the Coolidge administration at Washington.

Furthermore, energetic action must be taken beyond mere mass protest. Every class conscious worker, every militant in the labor movement should immediately start an agitation to tie up transportation of munitions and supplies from this country to the troops in the Canal Zone, thereby bringing the utmost pressure to bear upon those responsible for the ferocious throttling of a helpless people.

American imperialism must be made to know that its vandalism will be challenged not merely by the bleeding colonial victims of its lust, but by the American workers at home.

The Struggle in Vera Cruz

While Haberman, yellow socialist, hanger-on of the Morones machine in the Mexican Federation of Labor, Calles supporter and fraternal delegate to the American Federation of Labor convention, was giving a rosy report of the progress of Mexican labor under the Calles regime, the militant workers in the Vera Cruz district were at grips with the native capitalists and American imperialists.

The bosses have locked out the workers.

Senor "Gompers" Morones issues statements to the press promising that these "red" elements will be curbed and Haberman explains to the trade union bureaucrats that the Communists are responsible for the "outbreak."

But dispatches from Mexico City inform us that the governor of the province, not yet absorbed into the Wall Street machine that rules Mexico, has issued a statement accompanied by a request to the legislature that he be given a mandate to seize the stocks and other property of capitalists as an answer to their demand for "more governmental guarantees for business."

The class nature of the struggle is shown clearly by the fact that all the chambers of commerce and big industrial concerns are lined up against the workers and are urging Calles to adopt the most drastic measures against the "reds."

The governor's statement is as follows:

> "The capitalists in the state of Vera Cruz use illegal arms and unfair means, made possible by their privileged social position, to oppose collective action by the workmen and the efforts of the state thru laws to make effective conquests for the rights of the community over the antiquated and discarded right of the individual. The action of the foreign merchants and capitalists in closing their stores and preventing the sale of the necessities to life as a means of fighting the workmen is unfair, inhuman, and absolutely selfish.
> "The action threatens to disturb the public peace and completely submerge the masses. The merchants of the port of Vera Cruz have created a condition of intense excitement and uneasiness, inimical to public peace, and I, therefore, propose that the state seize grains, vegetables, eatables, flour, peppers, butter, lard, oil, salt, coffee, tea, sugar, milk, eggs, meat, fish, forrage, and medicines."

The role of Haberman, like that of the German delegates who praised the Dawes plan, is that of an international scab. He comes to America to lie about his fellow countrymen of the working class who have the backbone to fight the slaveholders whose badge of shame he is proud to wear.

This is the role of the socialists the world over.

Some Pages of Bessarabian "Happiness"

In connection with the trial of five hundred peasants in Kishinev, the Roumanian governmental press announces that protests abroad against the terror in Bessarabia "are the work of Moscow."

The newspaper Lupta proposes that foreign representatives visit Bessarabia with the aim of "studying the Bessarabian problem and thus destroy the slanders spread by Moscow."—(From the latest telegrams.)

By U. STEKHOVITCH

LUPTA is absolutely right. Moscow is slandering as usual. Lupta's anger is noble, its gestures are elegant. Can anything be more simple? Study the 'Bessarabian problem,' collect supplementary material and documents and smash to atoms the "slanders spread by Moscow."

And so we will present the first document for the information of foreign "representatives."

"Rapid and Heroic" Ordinances.

This is the kind of ordinance that was issued during the period of seven years' passionate love of the Roumanian Czara-Muma (motherland) for the beloved "daughter Bessarabia." They are the noble ordinances of the good king of Roumania, Karl Von Hohenzollern.

FIRST Ordinance: Issued by the commandant of the Edinetz garrison, his excellency Captain Dimitriu, in 1918:

"Roumanian officers," declares the commandant to the all-obedient Bessarabian people, "should be welcomed by the population of the Edinets locality in the following manner: All those who welcome the officers must stand to attention with their face to the officer and quickly, heroically and with a smile on their face, must take off their hats and bow to the ground." And further on: "In order to train the population for this and so that my ordinance be correctly carried out, at one o'clock I will send my commandant's cap round the streets on a stick and everyone must greet it."

THE reader of course, will be sceptical about this and shrug his shoulders. But it is a real document which the "Moscow slanderers" happen to have in their hands. As is customary, the ordinance bears the remark "certified true copy" signed by the vice-president of the Edinetz rural district council, Mr. Vulpa.

But perhaps this is just an isolated case of arbitrariness on the part of crazy hangmen. We will, therefore, reproduce another ordinance published only a few months later:

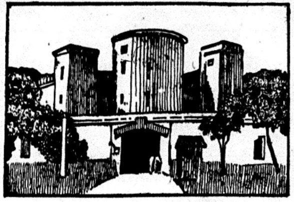
"I order all inhabitants, both of the male and female sex, on meeting me or my officers, to step off the pavement and taking three paces backward into the roadway to greet us with a happy and heroic look on their faces, and by putting their hands to their hats." Signed personally by the commandant of the town Beltsy and posted up in prominent places thruout the town.

"Standing With One Foot in the Grave."

Alexandri is the name of one of the deputies of the famous Bessarabian "parliament"—the treacherous "sfatul tseri." Alexandri was president of the bourgeois "people's league" and one of the most arid annexationists of Bessarabia in 1918. Only six months after the "annexation," during the days of the bloody suppression of the Khotinsky rising in Northern Bessarabia, Alexandru speaks once more.

"STANDING with one foot in the grave," he declared on October 12, 1918, at a meeting of the league in Kishinev, "I had the courage to speak the truth, the bitter truth. Fifty thousand troops are living like outlaws and are plundering everything they can lay their hands upon. Roumania during the last half year has 'Russified' this border land to an immeasurably larger degree than the czarist regime did during 106 years' occupation . . . If the kind of order that is being rapidly put into force in our country will continue in this way, we will be taking a step backward of a whole hundred years." This is what even a bourgeois politician was compelled to admit; one who frankly stated he was "standing with one foot in the grave."

Kishinev Jail



500 Peasants Are in Its Dungeons.

HOW was the Khotinsky rising suppressed? Let us look at the documents and facts. The peasants' representatives from four rural districts of the Khotinsky uyezd (50,000 inhabitants) on January 29, 1919, published a "report" in Odessa. Having wriggled out of the clutches of the Roumanian sigurantza (secret police) these representatives included in their "report" only a hundredth part of what was really happening in the uyezd. For instance, in the village of Ukshino, over 200 peasants were shot; 300 houses were burnt, while in the village of Nedoboutzy not more than 50 houses were left standing out of 600 and more than 200 peasants were shot.

The eighty-year old man Feodosia Temkuliaka, had his arms cut off with a sword . . .

THE villages Attaki, Stavchany, Doliany, Kaplevka, Prigorodok, Choponossy, Zarojany, and many others were subjected to partial or complete destruction. The daughter of a peasant from the village of Urukshina was violated by soldiers. She afterwards gave the names of other girls who had been violated before her eyes. On January 21, the "report" announces further that by order of the commandant of the town of Khotin, more than 500 people were driven into a square for a supposed publication of some ordinance or other. All those present were surrounded and fired on from machine guns.

Further: Sixty women and children who had fled from the neighboring villages had hidden themselves in a wood near the village of Sherouts. In the night the women, with trembling hearts, pressing their palpitating breasts, looked forth into the distant darkness. Would they come . . . The night dragged on like a long torture. They arrived. The little house was surrounded, was barred and bolted and set light to, high columns of red flame lit the sky above the woods, and the inhuman howls of those who were being burnt alive, could be heard far away in the village.

This is exactly what was announced in a governmental decree after the suppression of the Khotinsky rising, and which was posted up in all houses and at all cross roads in Kishinev. And in this same decree there was a little "note": Seven villages had been raised to the ground, five hundred people had been killed." The Bratianu government confessed murdering five hundred, so how many must have been done to death in reality.? Let the facts of the "Bessarabian problem" speak once more against the "Moscow slanders."

AFTER the blood bath, railwaymen's delegates from the Okintsy station arrived in Odessa from Khotina. Trembling, with extreme emotion in their voices, they prayed that urgent measures be taken to save their women folk and children who had remained behind in the "Bessarabian hell." These delegates were really shuddering and seemed to look strangely from side to side; the nightmare of the previous days haunted them still for many weeks. The delegates stated: One hour before the Roumanian army advanced, Khotin, which was occupied by the insurgents, the chief of the insurrectionary detachments allowed the railwaymen to load their belongings into a wagon. At the last moment the only locomotive to be found in the station was required by the insurrectionaries for military activities.

The detachment of insurrectionaries retreated. . . .

Khotin was taken by the army of occupation. . . .

AHA, so you were preparing to flee. . . ." And with a whip in his hand the Roumanian officer, at the head of a detachment of gendarmes, began "continuing the vengeance." They hounded down these railwaymen for several days. Several hundred were arrested. In the district of Okintsky alone more than 166 railwaymen were shot without trial, the remainder were "reprieved" and were made to swear an oath of allegiance to the "Tsara Muma" (motherland).

Public Executions.

In the Tsara Muma—this land of noble discontent—public executions have already a considerable past. We will cite yet further facts and documents by way of "studying the Bessarabian problem."

In the Akkerman uyezd there is a small peasant hut, on the way from Tatarbunar to Kaushany. It is a muddy autumn night. A patrol of 25 men with the gendarme in command—one of the close assistants of the well-known hangman of the Kishinev secret police Myzu—breaks into the hut.

"Well, you swine, where's your husband?"

The old mother and wife with downcast eyes, remain silent.

THE barbatul (husband) disappeared three days ago somewhere. He went in hiding from repression. All his family is arrested; the wife, the two-months' old child at the breast, the mother, father, brother and 12-year old lad. All are subjected to horse whipping at the police station. At the same time, peasants in the neighboring villages are clapped into irons, as hostages. They are taken out on to a square near a church. The entire population—about 300 are driven out on to the square. Machine guns are placed at the entry and exit of the square. The center remains empty. Seven victims are led here. . . . The whipping commences with blows and lashes. Several lose consciousness; these have water thrown over them and the whipping continues until death. . . .

OR let us recall a case in the villages of Dinoutsy and Dankoutsy. It resembles a most fantastic fairy-tale with which foolish mothers generally frighten their disobedient children. This district secret police had decided to send a punitive expedition into the village of Dinoutsy: "The Bessarabian louts have revolted. . ." The officer sent at the head of the detachment, confused the village Dinoutsy with Damkoutsy. On arrival at Damkoutsy the officer gave orders that within 30 minutes the entire population be driven out into the streets—women, children and old men included. Eighty-five men were seized on the spot and were whipped before the eyes of the public. The officer gave order with whip in hand.

"Well, will you agree to carry out orders now?" asked the officer.

The people kept silent. No one understood what orders were intended for Damkoutsy. The officers, realising that he had come to Damkoutsy by mistake, left with his detachment for Dinoutsy.

"This is where the guilty ones really are. These Bolshevik swines are in Dinoutsy."

AND the whole population of Dinoutsy was driven out into the street and 285 of them subjected to public whipping and torture. Several peasants were beaten to death. The people standing around remained silent.

Let us cite yet one more fact. On the way to the town of Ismail in the village of Brusk, three arrested peasants were killed by the convoy. For five days three bloody and disfigured corpses floated about in a canal among the weeds. It was forbidden to bury them under threat of severe punishment. Such was the order of the authorities, "by way of a public example."

THE FRENCH "DEFENSE OF CIVILIZATION IN MOROCCO

By BERNARD HERMAN

THE robber war now being waged in Morocco was started by the French bankers with the active aid and cooperation of the socialists. The reactionaries and socialists voted as one man in the French chamber of deputies against the Communists, who alone opposed the imperialist war, who alone rallied the French workers against this monstrous slave expedition. As Jean Longuet, one of the leading French socialists said, aghast: the Bolsheviks were actually favoring the liberation of "African savages!" These flunkeys of imperialism raised the cry: "The war in Morocco is a war in defense of civilization! A war in defense of humanity!" Well, here is how the correspondent of the London Daily Express describes the campaign in Morocco against "African savages":

"The last village we occupied had previously been bombed by airplanes, and the efficiency of the air-worker is only too evident. Smoking ruins are all that is left of most of the flimsy native houses. The streets are impassable. Great piles of debris are thrown here and there, and everything is in a state of confusion.

"The natives headed by their chiefs, carrying white flags, came out to meet us at each village. They are always met by the commander of the column with the same formula: 'If you do not bring out all your arms and ammunition, all your flocks and herds, to me here within half an hour, I will burn the village to the ground and kill ten leading men.'

"Pillage under such conditions is temptingly easy, and the commander has considerable difficulty in restraining his soldiers. After each village was taken, the men appeared carrying sacks, pails, and other receptacles ful of booty, to the intense annoyance of the native officers, and to the great amusement of the commander and myself."

THIS pretty description gives us some indication of the blessing-bearing role of the white races and the bankers toward the darker and "inferior peoples." From this description of the Moroccan campaign, we can see that the French bourgeoisie and their socialist lackeys bring the following blessings of civilization and humanity (of both of them) to the "savages" of Morocco:

1. Bombs, dropped on the fragile villages, much to the grafitication of the women and children inhabiting the villages, the survivors of whom no doubt give thanks to heaven for the blessings dropped therefrom.

2. The imperialists relieve the Moroccan herdsmen of the unpleasant necessity of caring for their flocks and herds. This is indispensable in the process of bringing civilization to savage peoples. Having no flocks to take care of, the Moroccans now have plenty of leisure, which they can devote to reading The Milwaukee Leader or Karl Kautsky's latest book.

3. The imperialists relieve the Moroccans of their arms and ammunition. This is bringing christianity and a higher moral culture to the lowly Riffs. No longer will they be able to break the sixth commandment.

4. One of the great advances in civilization has already been wrought in Morocco. The commander of the troops and the Daily Express correspondent were "greatly amused" at the sight of the troops pillaging the helpless villages. This is an example of the development of the comic spirit in even backwar countries like Morocco.

HOWEVER, there is one remark in this "amused" lackey's report which is very significant. The native officers showed, "intense annoyance." A little more of this "civilizing" process, and the native officers and the majority of the natives still serving their French commanders will soon turn about and begin "civilizing" their French commanders, and the working class of France, and of Spain, will begin "civilizing" the commanders of the commanders, at home.

WARS ARE WON BY 'DOUGHBOYS', SAYS OFFICIAL

bring a crushing defeat to America in her next war.

Drum spoke for the war department, as his statement was prepared in advance by the general staff as a rebuttal to the two weeks testimony given the board by army and navy fliers. He flayed the proposals both of Colonnel Billy Mitchell, stormy petrel of the army air service, and of General Mason M. Patrick, as unsound in strategical value, worthless to the national defense and intended only to give aviators more special privileges, higher pay and quicker promotion than go to Americas other fighting units.

Drum "settled" one great controversy of the recent world struggle while testifying. He declared it was the war department's firm opinion that the "dough-boy" won the war.

Assails Coolidge Economy

As for the "lack of funds," blamed by many witnesses for the army's failure to develop aviation, Drum laid the responsibility directly at the door of the White House. He said the economy policy of President Coolidge forced the general staff to underman the air service along with all other branches of the national defense.

An $80,000,000 program for new air equipment, planned by the war department, Drum said, had to be abandoned because of this economy.

Dangerous Policies

Taking up each recommendation for a new air policy, Drum characterized them as dangerous to the national defense.

"The establishment of a separate air force independent of the army cannot be justified on any grounds whatever," Drum continued.

"The idea behind all these plans is the same. It means separation instead of union. It means aggravating out present difficulties instead of applying a remedy. It will mean aid and assistance for our enemies instead of their destruction and downfall."

Drum declared the war department was completely satisfied that "wars will be won in the future as they have been won in the past by seizing and holding or exercising control over land and sea areas," the place for aviation, he added, is to aid the army or navy in getting this control.

"Dough-Boy" Wins Wars

To give the air services responsibility for defending areas along the coasts, as proposed by General Patrick in his plan for a separate air force, Drum said, would confuse the operation of the national defense and lead to disaster. Such a proposition, he added, "violates the lessons of all war."

In the last war and in the next war, Drum declared, the "decisive force" will be the "dough-boy."

RUBBER MONOPOLY PUTS ON THE SCREWS; CAUSES MANUFACTURERS GRIEF

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Oct. 13.—The rubber monopoly restrictions under the Stevenson scheme of withholding the supply and releasing only as prices rise has been responsible for the rise in both rubber and rubber shares on the market.

Raw rubber has gone up to four shillings and share holders are cleaning up all arrears in dividends. Ceylon advices say stock supply of rubber on October 5, is 400 tons lower than on Sept. 13.

But the rise in price, while good for rubber share holders has caused a group of rubber manufacturers and consumers to send a delegation to the under-secretary of state for the colonies, demanding an ending of the restrictions. All they accomplished was to get a promise that Colonial Secretary Amery would consider the matter.

SAME OLD REACTION STILL PREVA"S IN THE A. F. OF L.; PRO RESSIVE TALK IS BUNK

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

STEEPLECHASE PIER, ATLANTIC CITY, Oct. 14.—If it were not so tragic a situation for the whole American working class, it could be considered good comedy, the frantic manner in which the Green regime in the American Federation of Labor is trying to put on a mask of progress at the convention here.

When the resolutions committee, with all the profundity it could muster, came back with its amended report on wages, President Green solemnly declared that this "places the American labor movement in a most advanced position on wage theories." This so-called epoch-making statement contained merely the following:

"Social inequality, industrial instability, and injustice must increase unless the workers' real wages, the purchasing power of their wages, coupled with a continuing reduction in the number of hours making up the working day are progressed in proportion to man's increasing power of production."

Same Old Bunk.

This is merely a statement of the basis of the trade union movement, upon which it has been struggling these many years, although president Green suddenly discovered that it is "the enunciation of a new idea establishing a position far in advance of any position we have ever taken before. We stand on the threshold of a giant industrial era. New conditions are here. This is our way of meeting them."

The way, of course, is the adoption of a general declaration, hoary with age, while all definite programs for class struggle actions are denounced as Communist doctrine.

Still "Reward Friends."

It was Delegate Andy Furuseth, of the Seamen's Union, who hailed the convention statement declaring for nonpartisan political action as a return to sanity. This statement declared that "the nonpartisan campaign policy not only opens up a vista of hope and promise to American labor and American democracy; it is imperative as a measure of defense against the deadly menace of the present assault on representative government."

So the convention approved of the executive council's declaration for boring within the two old parties of Wall Street with not a single voice or vote raised against it.

Political Optimism.

Altho congress is being stripped of its so-called "progressives," the report declares that "a thoroly and permanently progressive congress is almost within our grasp."

The labor party is applauded in Great Britain and Mexico, but in the United States republicans and democrats get the federation's support.

The Railway Clerks were turned down in their jurisdictional fight with the Teamsters' Union by a vote of 23,845 to 3,895. According to a statement issued by the delegates of the Railway Clerks, this union will quit the federation. The statement follows:

"It is the opinion of the representatives of the Railway Clerks that our grand executive council will give up its charter in the American Federation of Labor permanently rather than to give up its jurisdiction over their employes involved." This union has about 80,000 members.

The union label campaign was given considerable discussion, President Green rising to the occasion with a speech in the late Gompers' best style. He declared it would dissipate the so-called "apathy and indifference" that he claimed had seized the workers since the war.

Navy Wage Board in Secret Session Goes Over Labor "Requests"

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 14.—Committees representing 26 crafts of the employes of the navy yard are appearing before the navy wage board and presenting their "requests" for wage increases, supported by evidence—which is somehow required by law—compiled from a survey fo wage scales in the locality.

The attitude of the U. S. government toward labor which it employs is shown in the fact that all hearings are secret and the "requests" of the workers are concealed by the government navy board until after the board makes its decisions on them. It has leaked out that all crafts are making "requests" for increases, however.

VON HINDENBURG FIRM AGAINST LOCARNO PACT

Allied Proposals Not Acceptable

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BERLIN, Oct. 14.—In face of and as a direct reply to the statement at Locarno this morning of Austen Chamberlain, the British foreign minister, that "no nation can afford to take the responsibility for wrecking the security pact," President Hindenberg, after a meeting of the German cabinet, announced that his government was determined to stand pat on the original demands. The president, backed by the cabinet, is said to have found the allied proposals unsatisfactory and impossible of acceptance.

Last night the cabinet went into session ond heard the lengthy report of Dr. Kempner, secretary to Chancellor Luther, on the proceedings in the little Swiss town where the representatives of the principal powers of Europe are trying to devise a "security pact" guaranteeing their own frontiers so that their hands will be free to prosecute an assault upon Soviet Russia and continue their own colonial wars to subdue the natives of Africa and Asia.

May Mean the End.

Last night the action of the cabinet was considered of decisive moment, determining the final decision of the German delegation.

The tentative agreement reached yesterday was scheduled to go to final reading today, but in view of the decision of the cabinet it is doubtful if ministers at Locarno will proceed further until the full details of the action of the German cabinet are known.

Chamberlain's Locarno Threat.

LOCARNO, Switzerland, Oct. 14.—No nation can afford to take the responsibility for wrecking the "security pact" conference here—this statement made today by Austen Chamberlain, British foreign minister, was interpreted as being a direct threat to the German delegation, and the German nation.

"Negotiations here have already progressed so far and so favorably, that no delegation can afford to take the responsibility for wrecking these negotiations," Chamberlain said in a statement to the British press.

Chamberlain's statement was particularly significant in view of the fact that the German delegation since yesterday has presented a number of "incidental" demands as conditions to its entrance into the "security pact". These demands include evacuation of the Rhineland and control of the Saar Valley and the mandate for some of German's former colonies. These demands have greatly irritated the Allies statemen.

It was stated that France is still insistent upon having a free hand in guaranteeing the pact between Germany and Poland.

COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL EXPECTS CLOSER COOPERATION FROM U. S. SECTION, SAYS CABLE REPORT

EDITORIAL NOTE:—The following cable report has been received by the DAILY WORKER thru the commercial news service for which it subscribes.

MOSCOW, Oct. 14.—The Communist International, in consequence of promises embodied in a report just received here from the American Communist Party, is hopeful of closer cooperation from the United States in the future than has been the case up to this time.

The American Communists, their latest pledge declares, will devote their best energies from now on to an attempt to bore deeper into the trade unions, as the best method of gaining control of the American working class. In the local Moscow comment upon this clause of the American program it is remarked that "the American trade unions are the most reactionary in the world."

Among the accomplishments of the party, which the report itself admits are modest, the executive lists the organization of the "Hands Off China" committees; the organization of a league of young workers; and persistent work among "the Negroes and farmers of America."

SHANGHAI LABOR UNION SUPPRESSED BY TROOPS; WOMEN STRIKERS SHOT

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SHANGHAI, China., Sept. 25 (By Mail)—Chinese soldiery of Chang Tso-Lin, tool of foreign imperialists, are savagely suppressing the labor unions, dissolving the organizations by force and arresting union leaders. Nine union workers were shot to death yesterday without trial, three of these were women who were picketing a Japanese mill. The General Labor Union has been closed by troops, tho the Seamen's Union is still operating. Li Lisan, president of the General Labor Union who led the anti-British boycott, has escaped the military assassins by disappearing. Strict censorship of the cables prevails.

Poland Anxious to Pawn Her Industries

(Special to The Daily Worker)

RIGA, Latvia, Oct. 14.—The larger Polish banks are unable to pay their obligations to Latvian creditors, and those doing business with Poland have lost large sums of money. Money transfers made to Polish banks have not been paid. The total claims on losses of this nature are well over a million dollars in American money. As a result the director of the Latvian state bank reports that it is impossible to do business with Poland.

As Poland is already in financial difficulties, owing to insisting upon maintaining one of the largest standing armies in Europe and due to the pressure of the German customs war against her, a similar war threatened by Latvia will be ruinous, it is stated here.

To overcome this condition, Poland is trying to "pawn" her industries to any country that will grant her a loan to overcome her financial difficulties.

New Railway Ready Nov. 7.

NOVO-NIKOLAEVSK, Oct. 14.—(Tass)—The construction of the new railway between Achinsk and Minusink is near the end. The new line will be ready for exploitation on the anniversary of the Soviet revolution, November 7th.

UNITY DEMANDED BY BRITISH AND RUSSIAN UNIONS

Dawes Plan Denounced as a Menace

LONDON—(FP)—Representing 11,000,000 British and Russian trade unionists, and addressing its appeal to the workers of every country, the joint advisory council of British and Russian labor, which convened in London, declares that "the establishment of an all-inclusive, world-wide trade union international has become more necessary than ever."

The joint advisory council, whose report is signed by Tomsky, on behalf of the Russian trade unions, and by the late Fred Bramley, on behalf of the British Trades Union congress, notes the ratification of the agreement for joint action, decided upon at the London conference on April 7. The Russians ratified April 30, and the British at the recent Scarborough Trades Union congress.

The report summarizes the world situation as it affects labor, noting the increasing attacks of the employers and the evil effects of the Dawes plan. The danger of war is drawn attention to and the increasing revolts of colonial peoples against capitalist imperialism and exploitation. The object of the guarantee pact to include Germany in a military alliance directed against Soviet Russia is also exposed.

"The removal of all obstacles and difficulties in the way of national and international working-class unity" is called for.

Invite Pacific Labor

SYDNEY, Australia—(FP)—The Labor Council of New South Wales at Sydney is sending out invitations for a Pan-Pacific Conference of political and industrial organisations to all countries bordering on the Pacific, to be held at Sydney May 1, 1926. The conference is to harmonise the relationships of the workers around the Pacific.

A. F. OF L. CONVENTION PROTESTS U. S. TROOPS INVASION OF PANAMA

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Oct. 14.—A resolution was introduced today at the A. F. of L. convention, asking an investigation into the reason, American troops are being used in breaking the strikes of union workers and in "quelling disorders" arising from the strike of tenants against high rents at Panama City, republic of Panama. William Green, president of the A. F. of L. was authorized to protest the use of American troops in a message to President Coolidge.

GITLOW BARRED BY N. Y. BOARD FROM BALLOT

Protest Meeting for Friday Evening

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, October 14.—For the third time within four years the New York City board of elections has deprived Benjamin Gitlow of the right to run for political office in this city on the grounds that he is an ex-convict.

Yesterday this board, a creature of that odious combination of graft and corruption known as Tammany Hall, threw out the petitions of the Workers Party on the grounds that Gitlow being an ex-convict is not entitled to run on the pure and undefiled ballot that will be used by voters in the election of Nov. 3.

Protest Meetings Spring Up.

No sooner had the announcement been made than a wave of indignation swept the left wing of the labor movement in this city. The Workers Party has called a protest meeting to take place in Union Square at 5 p. m. on Friday, just as the workers in the shops in that part of the city pour out of their slave pens. Gitlow and others will address the meeting and will expose the real motive behind his exclusion from the ballot.

Engdahl Meeting at Night.

In the evening at 8 o'clock Gitlow will also speak at the Manhattan Lyceum meeting, 66 East 4th St., where J. Louis Engdahl, editor of The DAILY WORKER, will relate the story of the farce just closing at Atlantic City, the annual pow-wow of the American Federation of Labor.

Shyster Candidate Runs.

It is noteworthy that the board of elections made no effort to remove the name of the socialist candidate, the Rev. Norman Thomas, petty bourgeois dilletante and defender of the reaction in the labor movement in New York.

And, of course, the fact that "Little Jimmy Walker" the Tammany candidate, has been proved to be a mere tool of the poison meat trust and other polluters of the food supply of the state even while he was on a committee of the state senate supposed to deal with such violations of law, does not prevent his name going on the ballot.

Neither does the record of the fountain pen manufacturers, Mr. Waterman, whose factory is scab from top to bottom, prevent his name appearing.

It is only the true champion of the working class, a man who has for years stood staunchly in the forefront of labor's struggle, who is barred from the ballot.

Other Meetings Arranged.

The needle trades workers have rallied to the struggle against this exclusion of Gitlow from the ballot and have arranged a monster mass meeting to be held in Hunt's Point Palace, 163rd street and Southern Blvd., on Wednesday, Oct. 21.

Four unions have already passed resolutions against this act of the board of elections. They are Locals 2, 9 and 22 of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, and the joint board of the furriers.

This act has already intensified the campaign for Gitlow and as the peak of the campaign is reached thousands upon thousands of workers will be rallied to the support of the Communist candidate when they learn of the real working of that monumental fraud known as American democracy.

ARMY STOPS VICTIM'S FUNERAL; STRIKERS AGAIN IN ACTION; TENANT LEADERS IN JAIL

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BALBOA, Canal Zone, Oct. 14.—Panama City is still besieged by hordes of United States troops, brought there to assist the loathsome vassal of Wall Street, who sits in the presidential chair of Panama, to crush the mass demonstrations of the workers against the exhorbitant rents imposed upon them.

Business men subservient to the government and taking their stand with the avowed enemies of the working class have been permitted to open their stores, but clubs and saloons are tightly closed, except those permitted stealthily to supply the privates and quench the inordinate thirst of certain officers of the army.

Workers Still Defiant.

In defiance of the regime of pillage and murder that was instituted by the Panama police Saturday night and carried to the utmost excesses by the intervention of the United States army on Monday, the strikers are again stirring to action. The city, at first stunned by the ferocity of the blows that fell upon the workers, including the pillaging of the labor headquarters, the murdering of one striker and the wounding of many others, is rising again.

Transportation still remains at a standstill while tailors, bakers and many other craftsmen are still on strike with the movement spreading.

Strikers Denounce Murder.

The savage butchery of Damion Babrera at labor headquarters by United States troops did not go unchallenged and in spite of the reign of terror established by Brig. Gen. C. H. Martin and his soldiers, the strikers sympathising with the movement against high rents last night posted printed signs throughout the working quarters of the city, bearing the following announcement:

GENERAL SOCIETY OF WORKERS

Comrades:—We must assist at the funeral of Domion Babrera, who last night was the victim of foreign bayonets here, with the consent of our government.

Meet at 20 West Seventh St. at 3 p. m.

Martin, the United States commander, flew into a rage when informed of the appearance of the posters and ordered his soldiers to tear them down. He also ordered an investigaton to determine the source of the posters.

Interfere at Funeral.

Determined that the funeral of the victim of their own bloody fists shall not be the occasion for another demonstration, Col. John W. Heavey, in command of the 33rd infantry, is to be present with soldiers for the purpose of forcibly preventing the strikers paying their last respects to the martyrdom of this worker. This bestial act has inflamed the whole working population and new outbreaks are momentarily expected.

Tenant Leaders in Jail.

Early this morning the leaders of the tenant's movement against high rents were rounded up by Panama police, under protection of United States army bayonets and herded in the vile jails of this city, known throughout the world as dungeons unfit for habitation.

At the same time President Chiari, of Panama, is professing to be anxious to effect a compromise between the tenants and landlords.

The tenants and the strikers sympathising with them refuse to consider negotiations until their leaders are released and they further demand the removal of the governor, the mayor and the inspector of police, whom they charge with responsibility for the murders of Saturday night.

FRENCH FRANC FALLS BELOW BELGIAN FRANC ON LONDON EXCHANGE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Oct. 14.—For the first time since the war the Belgian franc was worth more than the French franc on the stock market here. The Belgian franc was quoted at 106.55 to the pound sterling, while the French franc was quoted at 106.75. The fall in the French currency is due to the unsatisfactory outcome of the recent conference in Washington. Depressing reports from Paris indicate a further fall and it is not unlikely that it may definitely hit the tabboggan, sinking to new low levels sufficient to produce an alarming crisis. The prolonging of the Locarno conference is also having an adverse effect upon French currency and Belgian currency also is likely to suffer.

PANAMA'S "FREEDOM" IS A MYTH

Bayonets Rip Veil of "Independence"

By MANUEL GOMEZ, Sec'y, All-American Anti-Imperialist League

ARTICLE I.

If there was ever an act of international politics that tore the cover from a carefully nurtured fiction of international relationships, it is the incursion of American troops into the "Republic of Panama." Panama is supposed to be a free country. Actually, its only freedom consists in that its minister plenipotentiary at Washington has the privilege of importing all the brandy, wine and beer that he wants. The real status of Panama, and of the other little "republics" of Central America and the Caribbean, has now been exposed so plainly that even the readers of capitalist newspapers can see it.

Coolie Conditions in Panama.

The workers of Panama labor under conditions which approach in wretchedness those of the oppressed colonial countries of Asia. Wages are pitifully low, while living costs have been mounting steadily. The great majority live in little one-room hovels, for which the landlords have been charging more and more extortionate rents. Rent profiteering became so flagrant that a month ago the worker-tenants in the city of Panama went on strike, refusing to pay rent until an agreement should be reached limiting the earnings of landlords to 12 per cent annually. The strike spread rapidly; it became a mass movement of aroused worker-tenants. Whereupon, General Lassiter, in command of the Canal Zone department of the United States army, sent three battalions of the 33rd infantry into the city "to put down the rioting."

Appropriate Time Picked

The moment selected for the invasion was a fitting one. It was in the midst of a funeral procession which the strikers had arranged for two of their comrades who had been brutally murdered by the police. The American soldiers broke up the demonstration, occupied the strikers headquarters and proceeded to restore "law and order" for the Panaman landlords. It was a nice, quiet "domestic" affair. Senor Rodolfo Chiari, the dummy president of the republic, called for and obtained the service of U. S. government troops, just as a governor of the state of Pennsylvania or Kansas might request and receive federal troops to put down a strike there. It is a recognized business of the U. S. army to break strikes. American trade unionists know this from bitter experience.

Panaman workers know it too. This is not the first time that American soldiers have invaded their territory. It has happened time and again. The United States government has intervened in the affairs of every country in Central America, and never once on the side of the workers.

A Spanish Proverb

It was "como Pedro por su casa," as the Spanish say, that the infantrymen of the 33rd regiment entered the city of Panama ("like Pedro going into his home").

And this is the country that boasts itself the defender of the rights of small nations, and talks about "moral claims!"

Ah, but there is a treaty giving us the right to intervene! say the resourceful apologists of American imperialism. Article 7 of the treaty provides that the military forces of the United States may take over the

Delegates Read British Unions' Report

By LOUIS ENGDAHL

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Oct. 14.—Official war was once more declared against the Communists by the American Federation of Labor in the approval by the convention here of the executive council's report on this question.

Aside from the request of delegate Jere Sullivan of the Hotel and Restaurant Workers' Union that the recommendation be read a second time, because of its importance the listless delegates offered one slight ripple of discussion.

Delegate J. Doyle, of the Painters' Union, told of some experience with Communists in a free speech fight in Buffalo, New York. Robert Dunn, of the Civil Liberties Union, who was present in the convention hall, and who helped fight this case, declared Commuuists were not involved and that Doyle had his facts all wrong.

Delegate Ernest Bohn, of the New York Stenographers' Union a "socialists" joined in the red baiting narrating how the Communists had been expelled thru a reorganization of this union but that was all.

President Green and Delegate Matthew Woll reporting for the resolutions committee had nothing to say. The committee recommendation declared that the widest possible publicity should be given the activities of the Communist in the unions, that the A. F. of L. was the center for the dissemination of this publicity. It was declared that the same action should be taken against the Communists, who were charged with "boring from within," that the surgeon takes toward some malignant growth thru the removal of all affected tissues.

"To temporize is to court danger," declared Delegate Woll, reading the report.

Attack Follows Lewis' Speech

The attack on the Communists came immediately following consideration of the anthracite strike that consisted merely of an address by John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, and the adoption of resolutions of sympathy. No program of action for the promotion of the least solidarity between the 158,000 striking hard coal miners and the rest of America's organized workers was offered.

President Lewis painted a black picture of conditions in the hard coal fields where one third of the men were day workers at $4.62 per day with two thirds of the miners getting under $6 per day while the remaining one third averaged less than $2,000 per year. He then told of the huge casualty lists in the hard coal industry stating that 1,210,000 miners have been butchered since 1870.

The total of injured last year being 30,241 deaths in the industry—average 500 killed annually—while this year the total killed during the first five months indicated a death list of 600 for the twelve-month period.

If the strike had not taken place Lewis said the policy of the mine owners was to take all and give nothing and that they were the only ones responsible for the industrial war fare waging in the hard coal industry. He told of the big profits being reaped by the mine owners and declared that even if the miners went back tomorrow, the industry could not be restored to normal until next spring. He predicted much suffering this winter, stating that it was impossible to use oil, bituminous coal or other substitutes in spite of the contentions of John Hays Hammond, the multi-millionaire mine owner, who seems to be directing the fight on the side of the coal profiteers.

The convention voted for a resolution hitting Vice-President Dawes' plan to curtail debate in United States senate, extending sympathy to Representative Isaac Sherwood of Ohio, said to be on his death bed and joined with New York labor leaders in support of building of the Cathedral of St. John the Devine, in New York City, with little attention being given it.

The report of thte A. F. of L. delegates to the British Trade Union Congress, Adamski, and Edward J. Evans, was slipped into the record.

Aside from its general prejudiced statements the report leaned as far as it could towards the position advocated in the congress by the labor conservatives, Ramsay MacDonald and J. H. Thomas.

Three hundred copies of the report of the British Trade Union congress delegation to the Union of Soviet Republics published under the title Russia Today, have been distributed among the delegates here and eagerly accepted. "Don't know who is passing them out, but will read it just the same," was the remark heard everywhere. At least one hundred delegates sought out fraternal Delegate Purcell to have him autograph their copies.

JAPAN AND AMERICA VIE WITH EACH OTHER IN MAD RACE FOR CHINESE TRADE

PEKING, Oct. 14.—(Tass.)—There exists not the least doubt that the Chinese revolution which has aroused the masses of Chinese people and which has filled the Chinese troops with a new spirit, is decidedly changing the relations of power in the East.

Japan on Crossroads.

Japan must decide with China or against China. Should Japan decide to go hand in hand with the European miperialists against China, then, of course, the endeavors of China would mean a great danger for Japan. But to go hand in hand with the imperialist powers of Europe and America against China means not only to risk the danger of a war with a great and awakening people, to lose popularity thruout all Asia, but to incur the decided danger of being on the losing side.

America Big Factor.

Among the robbers who are preparing to plunder China, Japan would not be the strongest. American capital would stake all its cards upon the uniting of China, upon the economic exploitation of the whole of this enormous country, and the Japanese policy of dividing up China could lead in the future to a conflict with America.

China is still less suited for the settlement of Japanese than Korea and Manchuria, as it is very thickly populated. Japanese emigration is tending towards the islands of the Pacific Ocean and not to China.

China Vast Market.

It is true that Japan needs China as a market for her manufactures. Should Japan, however, take part in the fight against China, she will only render more difficult her situation in this country, owing to the lack of any possibility of a new division of China. Japan would be very severely hit by a Chinese boycott. On the other hand, she has everything to gain by co-operation with the Chinese bourgeois, as she is best acquainted with the Chinese market and Chinese habits, and can in many respects promote the industrial organization of China.

Japs Back Policy.

There is no doubt that the Japanese government has not yet decided upon a sensible policy towards China. It has not yet quite realized that the time of the twenty-one demands is already passed, it is still under the influence of those Japanese cliques which are immediately interested in the plundering of China. The further development will enlighten the Japanese bourgeoisie as to the growing strength of the Chinese revolution and will compel it to abandon its present policy. The Japanese franchise reform, which is bringing wide circles of the commercial bourgeoisie into contact with state power, will also contribute to this end.

At present, Japanese policy is vacillating, but the English will hardly succeed in completely harnessing Japan to their chariot in their attempt to bring China under British domination.

U. S. Out For Moneybags.

With regard to the policy of America, it would be a great mistake to believe that the Americans would renounce the special foreign courts which secure a privileged position to the foreign capitalists. The majority of the American capitalists think just as the English capitalists and are of the opinion that the holy work of the capitalists cannot be under the jurisdiction of a court of "Chinese barbarians." The Americans, however, are less keen upon the outward form of foreign prestige in China and are ready to grant a number of concessions regarding small and minor questions which do not affect the American money bags, but which, to some extent, pacify Chinese public opinion.

The Americans are making a great fuss over the fact that they are studying the question of extra-territorial rights, in order to show the Chinese the prospects of a way out of the present situation. "Introduce proper laws and then we will gladly meet your demands for the abolition of capitalist privileges in China."

U. S. Holds Few Trumps.

As a matter of fact, however, the Americans are endeavoring to get two trumps in their hands; the first trump will consist in allowing the Chinese customs duties to be raised.

The question is exceedingly important for the Chinese bourgeoisie and for the Chinese government.

For the Chinese bourgeoisie, because the present low and uniform tariff has permitted the foreign bourgeoisie to over-flood China with its goods. The raising of the customs duties however, will render it possible for the Chinese bourgeoisie to build up its own industry. This, however, is not dangerous for America.

Develop Industry.

By means of free competition America will be able to beat the capitalists of other countries. As regards the growth of Chinese industry, the American bourgeoisie, which has sufficient capital for export at its disposal, is beginning to set up, at a rapid rate industrial undertakings under the protection of the new Chinese customs duties.

FORM UNITED FRONT OF COMMUNISTS AND LEFT SOCIALISTS IN BERLIN

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BERLIN, Germany, Oct. 14.—A solid proletarian front has been created in Berlin by joint agreement of the Communist Party and the socialists for the purpose of contesting the bourgeois parties in the municipal elections to be held Sunday, October 25.

A swing to the left in the socialist party in Berlin has forced them into a united front.

Even tho all the avowedly bourgeois parties unite against the Communists and socialists it is doubtful if they can defeat them. With the present alignments remaining intact a unanimous victory is assured for the proletarian elements.

A pronounced drift of former socialists to the Communist standard also forced action on the part of the local socialists to save their organization from assimilation by the Communists.

FRISCO PAINTERS' UNION DEMANDS STATE KEEP ITS NOSE OUT OF COAL STRIKE

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 14.—At its last meeting the Painters' Union, Local No. 19, passed a resolution pledging moral and financial aid to the striking anthracite miners of Pennsylvania.

Not only did the local express its sympathy with the miners, but demanded that both federal and state governments shall not intervene, either by supplying the mine operators with men and money or by using the forces at the disposal of the government to intimidate the striking coal miners.

The resolution was passed unanimously without debate and copies were immediately sent to Washington, D. C.

CAILLAUX NOW FACES CHARGE OF PARTY TREASON ON POLICY

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, Oct. 14.—Finance Minister Caillaux faces a far more difficult situation in the chamber of deputies than he faced in Washington, if his experience with the finance committee is any indication of coming events. He gave a resume of the financial situation for the cabinet this morning and then became the object of attack by the finance committee of the chamber of deputies, which has just examined the budget for 1926 and wants to know where the money is coming from. The extremists among the deputies are demanding a capital levy and a reduction of direct taxes.

At the close of the committee hearings, Caillaux will go to Nice, where his party is in convention and will be charged with treason to that party for his financial policy.

The fall of the franc below that of the Belgian franc raises doubts as to whether Caillaux can weather the impending storm.

SIMS SAYS NEXT WORLD WAR MUST BE WON IN AIR

Contradicts Army Men Testifying Yesterday

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 14.—The next great world war will be won thru "command of the air," Rear Admiral William S. Sims, retired, at one time a storm center of naval controversies, told the president's board today.

Sims warned that America's national defense was suffering because of the loss of morale in the air service.

The navy, Sims charged, has no "air policy." He also declared the recent inquiry held by the navy department to determine the value of aviation was an "investigation in a circle."

Assails Wilbur.

"The secretary of the navy came back from a speaking tour in the west and appointed a board to make the investigation," Sims said.

"On that same day he announced that battleships constitute the backbone of the fleet. The general board met and reported that the battleship is the backbone of the fleet. That investigation could get nowhere and it did not."

"All fundamentally new weapons, without exception, have been resisted by military authorities down thru the ages," Sims added. "Those of my own experience include sails on men of war, armor protection, rifled cannon, turret guns, the torpedo, the submarine, and most serious of all, the training of high command provided by the naval war college.

Navy Officers Uneducated.

"As a result the navy has for many years been controlled by uneducated and untrained officers who have been appointed to the most important offices. The same class of men now hold these positions as the department has just appointed one of them to command of the fleet.

"This is at the root of our present troubles," Sims continued, "and of the pesent low morale in aviation, due to lack of confidence in the leaders."

"O. M. S." IS NEW NAME OF FASCISTI IN GREAT BRITAIN

To Take "Government Instructions"

LONDON—(FP)—O. M. S. is one of the weapons British capitalists are forging in preparation for the next big labor struggle. O. M. S. (Organization for the Maintenance of Supplies), whose council is composed of a bevy of unemployed generals, admirals and assorted lords, claims to have a scheme which is already in operation for enrolling potential scabs, whom it describes as "citizens of all classes and of either sex who are prepared to render voluntary assistance in maintaining the supply of food, water and fuel" in the event of a general strike.

Both capital and labor are preparing for the ending of the 9 month truce in the mining industry. In spite of the subsidy to the owners the situation remains critical, for the government is attempting to wriggle out of the guarantees it gave to the miners on July 31 that wages should not be reduced during the period of the truce. The miners' union is not going to permit the deduction of a cent from the men's pay, and a crsis threatens.

Such tricky dealings are leaving no doubt as to the alignment of the government with the employers in the impending struggle. While O. M. S. is an unofficial organization, it is prepared to place itself under government instructions in a crisis, and the government itself is making its own preparations to fight labor, if next spring brings a strike. The disclosures in parliament not long ago as to the navy's secret order in relation to the use of the navy for strike-breaking purposes are a case in point.

San Francisco Strike of Waiters Off; Craft Unionism Aids Bosses

By JOSEPH W. SMITH,
(Worker Correspondent.)

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 14—The San Francisco waiters who have been on strike have returned to work, beaten by craft unionism in the uneven battle. They decided it a lost cause when they had not only their own bosses to fight, but the industrial association and their fellow craftsmen, the cooks, who were union-scabbing on the job.

In such circumstances it is like the poor serf trying to conquer the Roman empire with a wooden sword. But the fight was not in vain. At least two-thirds of the waiters have found out that craft unionism belongs to the dark ages.

When that argument begins at lunch time in your shop tomorrow—show them what the DAILY WORKER says about it.

Y. W. L. MEMBERS ATTENTION!

The class for new members of the Y. W. L. will be resumed tonight at 2613 Hirsch Blvd., at 8 p. m. Max Salzman, member of the National Executive Committee of the League will lecture on "The Tasks of the Young Workers' League." All new members must attend this class. All sympathizers are welcome.

KEY OPERATORS START DRIVE TO UNIONIZE TRADE

To Organize Postal and Western Union

(Special to The Daily Worker)

A dive for $100,000 launched by the Commercial Telegraphers' Union of America is under way in an effort to organize the Western Union and the Postal Telegraph, in accordance with instructions of the 13th regular convention recently held in Chicago.

The president of the union states that attempts to organize the Western Union made since 1902 culminated in a 90% organization in 1907. After the 1919 strike, which lasted 9 months, company unions were introduced. The Western Union employs baout 100,000 men.

The Commercial Telegraphers' Union now has a membership of about 3,500. Corporations having contracts with the union include the United Press, the International News Service and the Universal Press in the United States, the Canadian Press, the Canadian Pacific railroad, the Canadian National Telegraph and the Marconi Wireless in Canada.

The automatic printer, enabling operators to reproduce characters at the other end of the line by mere touch of key displaced many men in the Western Union and the Postal Telegraph. About 90% of their business is now automatic.

That worker next door to you may not have anything to do tonight. Hand him this copy of the DAILY WORKER.

WE HAVE A CHANCE IF THIS KEEPS UP—IF NOT, CALAMITY IMPENDS

During the last two days new signs of life have been given to the campaign to save the DAILY WORKER. Lead by militant and generous action of the comrades of the English and German branches in Detroit and closely followed by the shop nucleus of Zeigler, Ill., and a member of the Hungarian Sick, Benevolent and Educational Federation in New York, the total for Monday and Tuesday of this week closely approximates all of last week's receipts.

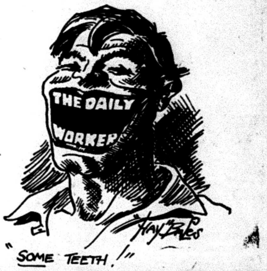
OUTLOOK BRIGHTER.

If this work keeps up the DAILY WORKER will stand a good chance to survive during this crisis and to emerge from the campaign much stronger than ever before. But if there is another slackening of effort, unless the vanguard of the proletariat all over the country maintains the pace, the DAILY WORKER cannot continue.

On November 7, in every part of the country, militants will assemble in meetings to celebrate the eighth anniversary of the Russian revolution, to register the opposition of the working class to the attacks being made against Soviet Russia and to bring the campaign to save the DAILY WORKER to a climax. If the work that now seems to take on increased acceleration, continues the DAILY WORKER will be alive and strong to greet November 7.

OUR SLOGAN.

SAVE THE DAILY WORKER must be a slogan of every militant wage worker if this is to be possible.



GOOD TEETH FOR A HEALTHY BODY

Keep the DAILY WORKER strong for the development of a healthy, militant working class.

BAR BRANNIN FROM ANTIOCH COLLEGE CAMPUS

Soviet Russia Makes Eunuch Profs Pale

YELLOW SPRINGS, Ohio, Oct. 14.—The great progress of industry, agriculture, education and social welfare in Russia was outlined by Carl Brannin before a meeting of students and instructors of Antioch college and town people in the opera house at Yellow Springs. The speaker spent the summer in Russia as a correspondent for The Federated Press.

"In every field of activity," said Brannin, "one sees that the people are learning to run their own affairs. The fact that capitalist exploitation has been largely done away with and production is for the benefit of all and not for private profit strikes one with tremendous force wherever you go. The people are getting the benefits of the revolution."

An effort to have Brannin speak before the regular student assembly failed after it was disclosed that he was friendly to Russia. Recent addresses by Scott Nearing and Paul Blanshard had provoked protests by employers and others who are the mainstay of Antioch college financial support. Recently the application of a qualified colored student for admittance was refused.

Australian Plutes Demand Deportation of Seamen's Officials

SYDNEY, Australia—(FP)—Arising out of the strike of British seamen in Australia, Tom Walsh, president Australian Seamen's union, and Jacob Johnson, assistant secretary, are being tried by a special board appointed by the Australian government to determine whether they shall be deported because of their support of the strikers. The board consists of 3 individuals chosen mainly because of their hatred of trade unionism. Many of the large unions threaten a strike if the men are deported. The Labor party announces that if the men are deported they will be compensated and brought back to Australia when Labor is elected to the federal government. The prime minister was howled down at a big meeting at Melbourne Sept. 7.

The seamen say they will not resume until the reduction of $5 per month is cancelled. They say there was no talk of the reduction when they signed on at British ports and they consider it unfair that the reduction should be enforced while they are away. The rates are 45 to 47½ per cent below those paid to Australian seamen.

IN HEAT OF NEW YORK CAMPAIGN ENGDAHL WILL EXPOSE SOCIALIST INFAMY IN A. F. OF L. CONVENTION

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Oct. 14.—The wokers of New York, in the midst of the city mayoralty campaign, will have an opportunity of hearing first hand information on the events of the American Federation of Labor convention, when J. Louis Engdahl, editor of the DAILY WORKER, speaks on Friday evening, October 16, at Manhattan Lyceum, 66 East 4th street.

Particularly timely will be the exposure of the infamous role played by the yellow socialists at that convention, when they even outdid the bureaucracy in reactionary performances.

Communists Only Fight.

The fight of the left wing at the convention reveals that it is only the Communists who are capable of putting up a real fight for the elementary demands of the masses of labor in this country.

The yellow socialists exposed at Atlantic City more than ever the fact that they defend more viciously than any others the interests of the capitalist class by fighting in the most vile manner the left wing of the labor movement.

Drive to Win Unions.

Facts revealed by Engdahl at the Manhattan Lyceum will furnish the basis for a tremendous drive to reach every trade unionist in Greater New York in order to expose the treachery of the socialist party and win support for the only party sincerely fighting the battles of the working class—the Workers Party.

He will show why it is necessary for the workers to support the Communist candidates in the coming election in November.

The full story of the convention will be told, from the day the gavel fell until the close, revealing the antics of those assembled at this annual pow-pow of the labor fakirs.

Engdahl has for years observed these conventions and knows the detailed history of most of the actors, so any worker desiring a fuller knowledge of the American labor movement should not fail to attend this meeting.

Company Skins Scabs.

EVERETTVILLE, W. Va.—(FP)—That the coal operators mean to fleece the scabs doubly by controlling their purchases as well as their wages is evidenced by the experience of Dewey Miller, a farmer living 2½ miles from Everettville. Miller complains to W. French Hunt, prosecuting attorney, that he has been ordered off the property and roads of the New England Fuel and Navigation Co. for selling apples and beans to the local mining community.

Miller charges that his low prices—in the case of apples, his offering was $1 a bushel in contrast to $6 per bushel charged by the company—were the cause. H. Clay Miller, a neighbor of Dewey Miller, made a similar complaint. The prosecuting attorney stated he was powerless.

Important to All Members of the Workers Party of Pittsburgh, Pa.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Oct. 14.—On October 18 a general membership meeting will be held for the purpose of reorganizing the party in Pittsburgh on the new basis provided for in the constitution—shop and street nuclei.

This means that every party member belonging to any branch in the city of Pittsburgh must drop everything else and come to this reorganization meeting on Sunday, Oct. 18.

The meeting will be held at the Labor Lyceum, 35 Miller St., Pittsburgh, Pa., at 2 p. m.

All members must be present.

ENGDAHL SPEAKS TO CLEVELAND WORKERS COMING SUNDAY NIGHT

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CLEVELAND, Oct. 14.—A report on the proceedings of the recent convention of the American Federation of Labor will be given by J. Louis Engdahl, editor of The DAILY WORKER, Sunday, Oct. 18, in the Insurance Center Bldg., 1783 E. 11th St.

This report will no doubt interest all workers who realize the important role that the American Federation of Labor plays in the American labor movement.

Those who have heard Engdahl before, will be particularly interested in this meeting, as Comrade Engdahl is regarded as one of the best speakers as well as editors in America.

All readers of this paper and their friends are invited to be present. The meeting is held under the auspices of the local Trade Union Educational League group.

Society for Technical Aid to Soviet Union Needs Laundry Help

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—Some time ago a wet wash laundry co-operative was organised thru the initiative of the central bureau of the Society for Technical Aid of the Union of Soviet Socialit Republics. This co-operative has been organised for the purpose of going to Russia and establishing a finely equipped wet wash laundry.

It has already sixteen members, but a few more men competent in the laundry industry are needed. This co-operative requires also one fireman, one plumber, and one steamfitter.

All information about the co-operative can be obtained from the Central Bureau Society for Technical Aid, 799 Broadway, Room 402, New York City; or from the secretary of the co-operative, M. Rohinsky, 55 East Ave., West Haven, Connecticut.

Riffs Prepare New Offensive Against French Mercenaries

FEZ, French Morocco, Oct. 14.—Riff tribesmen, undiscouraged by the repulse of their attack yesterday in the vicinity of Adjir, are preparing for a new offensive.

Aeroplane scouts reported that the Riffians are concentrating near Abou-Rekba, about twenty miles form Adjir.

Moscow Fleet Visits Italy

MOSCOW, Oct. 14.—(Tass)—Destroyers of the Black Sea fleet, the Petrowsky and Nezamojnik, left from Sebastopol to Italy for the return call to the recent visit of the Italian destroyers to Leningrad.

NASH MOTORS CO., KENOSHA PLANT, IS ANTI-UNION

Long Hours, Low Rates and Blacklist Rule

MILWAUKEE, Oct. 14.—Anti-union policies of the Nash Motors Co. at its main plant at Kenosha are reflected in its Milwaukee plant. Conditions of employment that caused national protest when discovered in the mills of the steel trust are reproduced by Nash.

Slave Driving Firm

The Nash plant in Milwaukee, observers told the Milwaukee Federated Trades Council, runs 24 hours a day but has only two shifts of men. This means a 12-hour day or longer, tho the company pretends to demand only 9 hours of its men.

The extra time is exacted in two ways, first by keeping wages so low that more than 9 hours work is necessary to get a living wage, and second by discharging men who do not volunteer for overtime. The discharges are always made on other grounds.

Low Rates Force Long Hours

"A man has to work a day and a half for Nash to get a day's pay," says Sec'y. J. J. Handley, Wisconsin State Federation of Labor. Two men were seen to start work at 6 a. m. and did not quit until 7 p. m., a machinist official stated. The labor turnover, always a sign of bad working conditions, exceeds any in Milwaukee.

The Trades Council adopted a resolution that "vigorously protests the un-American, inhuman and unnecessarily long work-day imposed by the Nash Motors Co. upon its Milwaukee employes in its greedy and ruthless pursuit of profit." A number of delegates promised that their union would assist in the drive to shorten hours, raise wages and unionize the plant.

Blacklist Aids Stock.

At Kenosha last spring an experienced diemaker was given a job by the Nash employment department but was fired without explanation two days later. He was an active unionist in other cities but did not mention organization during his stay in Kenosha and worked under an assumed name. The company's blacklist department identified him within 48 hours and out he went.

Nash Motors common stock, which sold on the New York stock exchange a year ago for $150 a share, sold this week for $480 a share.

Prison Favoritism.

SAN QUENTIN, Cal.—(FP)—Once there was a wobbly convicted of criminal syndicalism in Los Angeles and sent to San Quentin. The warden immediately made him his personal chauffeur, let him drive all around the state, and sleep in a comfortable room over the garage outside the prison walls. No, that was a mistake; it wasn't an I. W. W. criminal syndicalism prisoner, but Harry New, convicted murderer, sentenced for life, who claims to be the illegitimate son of Postmaster-General Harry New. "Political pull has absolutely nothing to do with it," warden Smith announces.

DETROIT—Employment in member factories was 64,400 more men than for the corresponding week a year ago, according to the Employers' Association of Detroit. The men now employed total 230,316. The association members employ three fourths of the Detroit workers.

SOVIET UNION DELEGATES TO SCARBOROUGH TELL WORKERS OF MOSCOW ABOUT CONFERENCE

MOSCOW, Oct. 14.—The delegation of the Soviet unions to England has arived in Moscow from Scarborough. The secretary of the Building Workers' Union and member of the general council of the Trade Union Congress in Great Britain, George Hicks, arrived at the same time for the purpose of studying the trade union movement in the Soviet Union. He was accompanied by the vice-secretary of the general council, Walter Citrine.

The chairman of the Soviet delegation at Scarborough, Tomsky, declared that the ratification of the policy of the general council on the question of trade union unity and the adoption of the anti-imperialist resolution, proved the leftward swing in the British working class movement. One of the causes for this movement was the visit of the British trade union leaders to the Soviet Union and the spread of truth concerning the work of the Russian working class.

The reports of the French, Belgian, German and Swedish workers delegations support the conclusions of the British workers' delegation. The decisions of Scarborough have an historic significance as far as the British trade union movement recognises its tasks, the struggle against political reaction in the various capitalist countries and the creation of a united trade union international. The reformist hopes for the break down of the Anglo-Russian Unity Committee have collapsed. The committee representing the firm will of eleven million organized British and Russian workers for unity has become one of the most powerful factors making for the unity of the international trade union movement. It will use all its influence upon the working class in order to gain its ends.

The question of unity is nothing but the question: Will the workers retain their rights and achievements won so bloodily by them?

GERMAN UNIONS ARE SMASHED BY DAWES PLAN

By SCOTT NEARING

COLOGNE, Germany — (FP) — I spoke with a railway car cleaner at Cologne. He was a young man, without a family.

For a nine-hour day, six days a week he receives 8.3 marks per day ($1.98). His fellow workers who do the heavy track labor are paid 6.5 marks per day ($1.55). Thus their weekly full-time earnings are about $12 and $9.

"Is work easy to get here in Cologne?" I asked them.—"Very difficult," they replied.

"There are many men out of work?—"Indeed, we are lucky to have a job."

"But can men care for families on 40 and 50 marks a week?"—"Make it 100 and a fellow would begin to have a chance."

"Do all the railroad workers work 9-hours? Where is the 8-hour day?"—"Flown away, we work 8-hours for the railroad and one hour for Dawes."

"But where are your unions," I asked them. "Cannot they defend you?"—"Not a bit of it. Many have dropped out. Those who remain have lost hope. Our unions do nothing for us now. The bosses do with us as they will. Dawes? Yes, that is what the Dawes plan has done to us."

Publish Anthracite Miner.

HAZLETON, Pa.—(FP)—Recognizing the need for a laborowned press in their local community, the miners of Dist. 7 have launched the Anthracite Miner, which is owned by the district and will be its official organ. Thomas Kennedy, secretary of the United Mine Workers of America and formerly president of this district, is president of the corporation publishing the paper and Llewellyn Richards, a local newspaper man, is editor. The paper begins in the heat of the anthracite miners' fight for the checkoff and improved conditions.

1,500 Lumbermen Strike.

ABERDEEN, Wash.—(FP)—The growth of the rebellion of unorganized sawmill workers against low wages is alarming Grays Harbor lumber lords. The strike which began Sept. 28 in a Donovan unit has spread until it includes entire day and night crews of the two Donovan mills, the Wilson mill and the Aberdeen Lumber & Shingle mill. Other little groups are joining the strikers which number approximately 1,500 men. Both A. F. of L. and company union agents are on the scene, studying the situation. The Loyal Legion of Loggers & Lumbermen (the 4-L) is a flourishing company union established by some employers who compel membership of all in their plants.

Take this copy of the DAILY WORKER with you to the shop tomorrow.

For Industrial Union

SYDNEY, Australia—(FP)—A conference of the Building Trades Workers group held at Sydney, unanimously agreed upon one union in the building trades industry. Delegates attended from the Carpenters, Building Laborers, Painters, Quarrymen, Slaters and Bricklayers.

No Mine Strike in Australia.

SYDNEY, Australia—(FP)—A coal strike which was threatening in New South Wales, because of the Sullivan air-turbine type of coal cutting machine was settled for the time when the coal tribunal decided to investigate. The miners contend that the machines are bad, and pending the inquiry they will not work them.

Raise Unskilled Minimum Pay.

SYDNEY, Australia—(FP)—The minimum wage for unskilled male adult workers in New South Wales has been increased 48c to $20.16 per week, and for female adult unskilled workers by 24c to $10.20 per week. The increase was granted because of the increase in house rents. The cost of living remained practically unchanged during the year.

Not Three Days—Only Two!

The special editions of Oct. 20 and 21 (next Tuesday and Wednesday) will be the only ones containing the Ford exposure. Limiting this to two days is acting in accordance with the original plans made and later on the advice of comrades in different cities who are arranging for the distribution of many thousands of copies.

DID YOU ORDER A BUNDLE FOR EACH DAY?

PANAMA'S "FREEDOM" IS A MYTH

Bayonets Rip Veil of "Independence"

By MANUEL GOMEZ, Sec'y.,
All-American Anti-Imperialist League

ARTICLE I.

police power in any portion of the republic of Panama whenever public order is endangered. But how did such a treaty come about? Out of the pure generosity of the Panaman people? Do nations make such treaties of their own free will? No. There is more than a treaty behind United States intervention in Panama.

Look at the supplementary volumes of the Encyclopedia Britannica issued in 1924 and you will find the following:

> Panama, the youngest of the Latin-American republics, is in reality a protectorate of the United States. Its constitution, which dates from February, 1904, states that in return for the guarantee of Panama's sovereignty and independence the United States shall have power to intervene "to re-establish public peace and constitutional order." A close fiscal supervision is at the present time being maintained, and more than once, when domestic disturbances began to threaten, the United States has landed marines, has supervised elections, and has assumed police power in the cities of Panama and Colon.

Thus, not only a special treaty, but the very constitution of the "Republic of Panama," puts it directly under foreign imperialist rule. Panama is a protectorate of the United States, just as Egypt is a protectorate of Great Britain. But ninety-nine out of a hundred Americans are ignorant of this fact. They have been led to believe that Panama, Costa Rica and the other little nations to the south of us are free countries, living symbols, in fact, of American magnanimity and forbearance. They have been taught in school that the United States has no protectorates, that American capitalism is innocent and virtuous and quite different from its wicked cousins in Europe. The United States has not one protectorate but many of them. The example of Panama is illustrative of the whole method of American imperialism in Latin-America.

Tailors in St. Louis Winning Strike; 15 Firms Signed Up.

ST. LOUIS—(FP)—The strike of St. Louis union tailors is progressing with 15 firms signing the agreement for the 44-hour week and the present pay, $40.80 a week. The settlements send 400 strikers back to work, while 100 still are on strike. The working members assess themselves for their striking brothers. Strike benefits are being paid by the Journeymen Tailors Intl. union.

GITLOW REFUTES GREEN'S SLANDER OF UNION LABOR

Says Rank and File for Unity

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—Ben Gitlow, candidate for mayor on the Workers Party ticket, issued an absolute refutation of the statement made by William Green before the American Federation of Labor to the effect that the rank and file of labor were opposed absolutely to the proposal of unity with the Russian workers, in a statement made at the party headquarters today.

"Green does not speak for the rank and file of American labor," said Gitlow, "if he cared to put the question to a referendum of the 150,000 organized needle trade workers of New York, he would discover that fully 90 per cent of them would vote in favor. If he would even go to his own organization, the United Mine Workers of America, he would discover that there, where the candidate in favor of recognition of Russia recently received 66,000 votes against the Lewis machine, that 90 per cent of the members were for international trade union unity and recognition of Russia.

Cites Reinstatements.

"Only yesterday the needle workers in the International Ladies' Garment Workers reinstated the officials expelled for expression of these views.

"We have offered, before the campaign began and since, to unite with all other labor tickets in forming a single, labor ticket. The socialist party refused. We offer them one more chance. A conference is called for Sunday afternoon at the Manhattan Lyceum, 66 E. 4th street, to form such a labor ticket."

Gitlow has offered to withdraw his candidacy if such a united labor ticket can be formed.

The Workers Party in Action

THE CENTRAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE ISSUES STATEMENT ON DISCIPLINING OF A. CAPRARO AND LEO PRUSEKA

The Central Executive Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party has issued the following statements regarding the disciplining of A. Capraro and Leo Pruseka whose cases were carefully and thoroly gone into:

A. Capraro Expelled

This decision to expel A. Capraro from the party is based upon the following circumstances:

1. At the time of the presidential elections of 1924, Capraro wrote an article in the Italian organ of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers stating his position in relation to the election campaign. Altho the Workers Party had nominated candidates and was carrying on a campaign in support of these candidates, Capraro declared himself as a neutral and that he was withdrawing for the political field for the time being because he was unable to choose between La Follette and the Workers Party candidate.

2. In the Bridgeport strike of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, which took place in May of this year, Capraro acted contrary to Communist policy. The district executive committee of the party in the Connecticut district establishes the following facts in reference to Capraro's activities:

(a) He urged the discontinuance of a strike to regain a previous wage cut, and forced the workers back.

(b) He told the strikers that they were going back on a 100% victory, whereas it was a demoralizing defeat.

(c) He was a party to fooling the strikers, since the scabs returned to work, 3 days after the settlement, whereas the agreement called for the firing of the scabs.

(d) He preached schemes of class collaboration, promising the workers that he would see that Hillman would meet with the bankers and creditors of Wolf and Abrahams, and see that they reorganized their shop, and then the workers would be able to get a wage increase.

(e) He made himself personally responsible to the strikers for the carrying out of the terms of the agreement.

(f) He supported at a meeting of the executive board of the Bridgeport local union, the proposition of Levine, the scab, that he, Levine, select his own investigating committee from the executive board to try him for scabbing. This charge is made by Comrade Feldman after reports from members of the executive board.

These charges were brought to the attention of Capraro by the C. E. C. of the party and he was invited to make a reply thereto but has refused up to this date to make any statement to the Central Executive Committee in defense of himself.

The Central Executive Committee, on the basis of these charges, expels him from the party and decides he is unworthy to be a member of a Communist Party.

Fraternally yours,
C. E. Ruthenberg, Gen. Sec'y.

Decision of C. E. C. Regarding Duties of Party Members who Are Editors of Non-Party Papers.

Leo Pruseka:—The Central Executive Committee of the party has considered your letter of Sept. 24, in reference to the statement of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers against the left wing which appeared in the Darbas of which you are editor. In connection therewith, it has also considered the statement of the bureau of the Lithuanian section of the party to the effect that they had taken action on the publication of this article in the Darbas.

After considering all the facts in regard to the matter, the Central executive Committee has come to the following conclusions:

1. To endorse the action of the Lithuanian bureau in censuring you for publication of the article without at the same time writing an editorial or article in defense of the left wing and criticizing the statement against the left wing.

2. That it is the duty of all editors of non-party to make use of these papers in the interests of the party.

3. Where such party members who are editors of non-party papers are compelled to print material inimical to the interests of the Communists, they must at the same time state their own views in separate articles and editorials, and attack such material.

A copy of this letter is being sent to the Lithuanian bureau.

Fraternally yours,
C. E. Ruthenberg, Gen. Sec'y.

RESOLUTION ON LIQUIDATION OF LOREISM ADOPTED BY THE BUREAU OF LETTISH SECTION

BOSTON, Mass., Oct. 14.—The bureau of the Lettish section of the Workers Communist Party, after consideration of the recent development since the expulsion of Lore by the Fourth National Convention, declares:

1. That we approve and endorse the action of our last convention in expelling Lore from the party and in removing Comrade Askeli from the editorial board of the Tyomies as an evidence of the determination of our party to no longer tolerate within our ranks the opponents of the principles and policies of the Communist International. We endorse the action of the convention as an indication of the development of our party on the road toward its complete Bolshevization.

2. The Lettish bureau considers it especially necessary at this time to call upon the Lettish members to be on their guard against all tendencies which work toward undermining the prestige of the Communist International, particularly now when the social-democrat Lore openly works to discredit the Comintern and its decisions, with the aim to destroy the possibility of building up a powerful section of the Comintern in America.

3. We declare that the Comintern is the only reliable guide for the Communist revolutionary organization of the entire world and that the process of Bolshevization and the elimination of Loreism includes among other things, the elimination of all tendencies to question the judgment and responsibility of the decisions of the Communist International.

4. We declare that the present propaganda of Lore and its supporters to the effect that the Comintern acts upon misinformation regarding American conditions, is a direct blow struck against the idea of a single world party of Communism, and is an anti-Bolshevik tendency, and an expression of Loreism which must be relentlessly rooted out of the Workers (Communist) Party of America.

Bureau of the Lettish Section,
Robert Zelms, Secretary.

Two More Shop Nuclei in Needle Industry Organized in Chicago

Shop nuclei 8 and 9 have recently been organized in Chicago. A clothing workers' shop nucleus of four members, all of whom are members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union, make up the membership of Nucleus No. 8. This has been in the process of organization for sometime and the comrades have finally come together. There is every prospect of successful development.

Nucleus No. 9, which at present has three members, is located in a millinery shop. The members belong to Cap and Millinery Workers' Union. Other members of the party are said to be working here and they will be found in the coming reorganization of the party and united with the other members in this nucleus.

Organization of Party Fractions.

The organization of party fractions in the trade unions has become a major task of the party. To push this work, District 8 is organizing a series of membership meetings to be addressed by Comrades Arne Swabeck, Jack Johnstone, Martin Abern and others.

In this drive to get party members to join the unions and then to organize Communist fractions in each local union, central body, etc., every party unit in the district will be covered.

Special letters on this question have been sent and dates of meetings outlined which will be published later.

Max Bedacht Speaks on Loreism Friday Night at Cleveland

This is a subject of great importance for the party. It is not the fact that Lore has begun the organization of the so-called "International Workmen's Association," which gives the meeting such importance, but the fact that Comrade Bedacht will go into the whole matter of Loreism and its relationship to the Party.

Comrade Bedacht will speak in German.

Every member and worker of Cleveland who can understand German should not fail to attend the meeting.

Get all friends and sympathizers to attend.

COURSES FOR COMING TERM OF WORKERS' SCHOOL ARE OUTLINED BY N. Y. AGITPROP HEAD, WOLFE

By KARL REEVE
(Staff Correspondent, DAILY WORKER)

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—The courses prepared for the opening of the new term of the Workers' School have been arranged so as to aid in the reorganization of the Workers (Communist) Party on the basis of the shop nuclei and at the same time to instruct active party members how to carry on their work most effectively, especially in the trade unions, and to raise the general theoretical level of the party, Comrade Bert Wolfe, director of the agitprop department of the New York district of the Workers (Communist) Party and head of the Workers School stated in outlining the most important present activities of the agitprop department.

Bertram D. Wolfe, Director, New York Workers' School.

Courses will be given in every shop nucleus on the elements of Leninism, and the duties of members of a Communist Party. These courses will be directed by one comrade in each nucleus to be elected by his fellow nucleus members.

The directors of the courses in the shop nuclei will attend a central training course.

The second group of courses soon to be started by the school will instruct leading comrades, including party functionaries and active members of trade unions, in the carrying on of their Communist activities.

Main Course In Nucleus.

Other activities of the agitprop department in this district are to consist of classes in the English language to aid in the reorganization of the party, a group of elective courses which include the "History of the American Workingclass," "Economic and Political History," and a group of more "popular" courses designed to attract non-party members.

"We feel that the principal course, and the principal educational aim in view of the fact that we are reorganizing our party is to have every member of every shop nucleus go thru a course in the A. B. C. of Leninism," said Comrade Wolfe, "A course so constructed that it might have as a title, 'How to be a Member of a Communist Party.' We plan to give this course simultaneously in every shop nucleus. It should include such elementary topics as: What Is A Party; The Role of the Communist Party; Its Structure and Organization; Class Division; Class Differences and Class Struggle; Bolshevization; Work in the Trade Unions; Communist Electoral Campaign and Parliamentarism; Theory and Practice of the United Front; Loreism, and other pressing party problems. This is of course, not an outline but a series of topics which suggest the general nature of the courses to be given. The courses will be outlined shortly."

Will Insure Political Development.

The courses given in the shop nuclei will insure the immediate functioning of the shop nuclei along political lines and not merely as centers for discussion of shop conditions, Comrade Wolfe stated.

The comrades who attend the central course will receive an outline of instruction on how to conduct the nucleus class, and will be given material for the next lesson of the class. Two such centrol courses will be given beginning on alternating weeks, so that all shop nucleus instructors may attend. Every shop nucleus must have its discussion every other week, the trained discussion director taking up the same subject that he heard at the central course the preceding week.

Course For Active Members.

"Next in importance to the shop nucleus training course will be a training course for leading comrades in the unions, party functionaries, and leading members generally," Comrade Wolfe continued. "I have outlined a program of three courses of which each comrade should take two."

These courses will be given one night each week for six months. They will consist of a course in Marxism and Leninism, and of either "Party History, Structure and Problems," or a course in "Communist Work in the Trade Unions," to be given during a three months period.

The instructor in "Marxism and Leninism" will be Comrade Wolfe, in "Party History, Structure and Problems," Comrade William Weinstone, district organizer of the New York district, and in "Communist Work in the Trade Unions," Comrades Miller, Gitlow and Zack, with Comrade Miller responsible.

Course For Needle Trades Workers.

One of the courses in the third, "elective," group will be "The History and Problems of the Needle Trades Industry." Comrade Wolfe says of this course, "It is of vital importance to the party. Our deserved victory in the International Ladies Garment Workers fight has brot us face to face with the question of the assumption of leadership in the needle trades industry. Our comrades in that industry must be worthy of such responsibilities and must have a thoro knowledge, statistically, politically, and historically, of the industry and its problems. We plan to select twenty five of the most active needle trade workers to take this course."

The agitprop department of District Two further plans to develop research work as an aid to those taking the courses, and a special committee has been appointed to co-ordinate the various research groups that are now at work on special problems.

Take this copy of the DAILY WORKER with you to the shop tomorrow.

ENGDAHL SPEAKS SATURDAY NIGHT AT PITTSBURGH

Great Treat in Store for Workers

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Oct. 14.—The workers of Pittsburgh will certainly get a treat when they turn out to the Labor Lyceum, Miller street, Saturday night, Oct. 17th at 8 o'clock and hear the analysis that J. Louis Engdahl, editor of the DAILY WORKER, will make of the American Federation of Labor convention at Atlantic City.

The sham scrap put up by the overgrown president of the Typographical Union, James M. Lynch, and the arch-reactionary Matthew Woll of the Photo-Engravers' Union against Green on a "safe and sane" issue does not fool the workers of Pittsburgh.

NOTED AUCTIONEER SECURED FOR ART SALE AT NORTHSIDE ENGLISH BRANCH "RESCUE PARTY"

To secure the best prices for the drawings of the leading artists to be sold at auction at the Rescue Party on Sunday at Imperial Hall, the North Side branch has been fortunate in securing the services of a man whose ready wit, deep appreciation of art and keen knowledge of the values in life has become famous—if not notorious.

Here's Your Chance.

This auctioneer has really never before placed his real capabilities at the services of the party. He will give a professional's criticism of each cartoon or drawing to be sold. He will tell choice tid-bits of the personal (and inner) life of the artists. He will expose the virtues of the artists and leave them naked to the public (the virtues, not the artists). He will describe all angles of art and artists in a manner of the true auctioneer who best serves the interests of the American God of Blah.

Preparations are being made for this "stupenjous" feature. The Finnish orchestra is arranging a special introductory musical number. The stage has been swept. Sawdust has been sprinkled—the final touches to the debut of this great "shpeeler" are being completed.

How lucky the North Side branch was to secure the services of the noted auctioneer you will be able to judge for yourself on Sunday at the Rescue Party—where it will cost you only fifty cents to get in.

Labor Defense Asks Sympathetic Bodies to Avoid These Dates

The International Labor Defense asks that all sympathetic organizations do not arrange affairs on the following dates in Chicago:

Saturday evening, Oct. 24, as there will be a Labor Defense Dance at the Temple Hall, Van Buren and Marshfield Ave.

The week of December 10 to the 13 (inclusive) as the Labor Defense Bazaar will take place at Northwest Hall, North and Western Aves.

A CALL TO ACTION!

Every member of the Workers Party, every lover and supporter of the first workers' republic, Soviet Rusia, has been appealed to to join in the the big drive for the defense of the Soviet Union and to arouse the American workers to the new dangers confronting the Soviet Union and make them understand that the fight for the Soviet Union is a fight for themselves.

A leaflet, "DEFEND THE WORKERS' AND PEASANTS' GOVERNMENT OF RUSSIA" will do that. This leaflet must be distributed, a million at least. So far we have received orders for 255,500. That is not enough. Less than 1,000,000 will not do.

Has your branch ordered their quota? Have you, reader of the DAILY WORKER, ordered your supply? RHODES FUND SCHOLARSHIPS TORY SCHEME

British Imperialism Controls Education

The $10,000,000 fund for international education, known as the Rhodes scholarships and administered in England, is tightly under tory control, it became known when Pres. Frank Aydelotte of Swarthmore college, American agent of the fund, announced the newly elected trustees.

Baldwin in Control.

Chief of them is Stanley Baldwin, conservative premier of Britain, who almost provoked a labor revolt before he surrendered his contention that the miners should take a wage cut. Another is Douglas Hogg, his attorney general.

A third is a powerful banker, another is editor of The London Times, reactionary newspaper, and the last is an educator who was a member of the British coalition government during the imperialist war.

Supremacy Over Whom?

The scholarships pay $2,000 a year for three years and go to 32 college youths in the United States each year as well as to British colonials for study at Oxford. Their founder hoped that they would help insure "Anglo-Saxon supremacy" in the world.

The tory control of this great fund recalls the successful protest by the Wisconsin State Federatoion of Labor against acceptance by the state university of money from the Rockefeller and other foundatons that are aiming at the control of education in the United States.

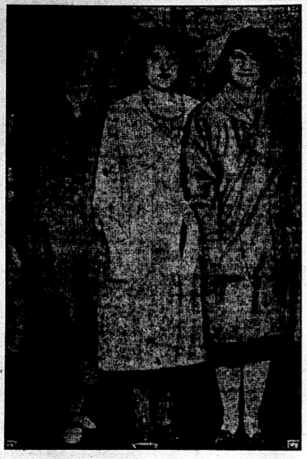
McAndrew Employes in Uniform



McANDREW DRESSES HIS OFFICE STAFF IN PINK, GREEN AND MAUVE SMOCKS TO MAKE CONVERTS FOR HIS UNIFORM IDEA

Upon Superintendent William McAndrew's request the office force in his department picked up the uniform idea turned down by the Chicago teachers and donned pink, green and lavender artist smocks to show the teachers how nice they really are.

The teachers thru their organization, the Chicago Teachers' Federation, have expersses themselves unconditionally opposed to the uniform. They claim they recognize in it only another indication of his scheme to strike at their organization and break its strength.

In line with the idea of dressing up the teachers is his former recommendation of a few weeks ago to install lavender brackboards. and the use of peach colored chalk to brighten up the teachers' job. These coming immediately upon the heels of his installation of the "clock punching" system, his new-salary schedule which aims to burden the teachers with still larger classrooms, his death blow to the teachers councils, his denial to them of the right to receive notices of federation meetings, etc., etc. have made the teachers wary of his "gifts." Judging from the statement issued by the Chicago Teachers Federation thru its head, Miss Margaret Haley, the teachers are on to his drive for open shop rule in the schools.

If you want to thoroughly understand Communism—study it.
